3 1430 02937394 3
a31430029373943b
UNIV. OF MD. COLLEGE PARK

LSC
3·36·17·1

PRESENTED BY
Colorado W. C. T. U.

From the library of

Mrs Ursula D Herrick

Presented by the executor of her estate

PRESENTED BY
Colorado W. C. T. U.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XX.—No. 52.] CHICAGO, January 4, 1894. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

McK
HV
5285
.U71
vol. 20
Fl.D

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

No recent advance on either side has been made in the Brazilian insurrection.

Dr. Louis Pasteur's seventy-first birthday was celebrated at Paris, December 28.

A review of the trade of Great Britain for 1893 shows a discouraging decrease in every class of imports and exports.

The total bonded debt of American railroads now in receivers' hands, according to the New York Post, is $1,301,000,000.

News from Capetown, South Africa, states that the British force under Captain Wilson has been massacred by the Matabeles.

The president of the Hecker Milling Company of New York has given twenty-five thousand bags of flour as a New Year's gift to the poor.

Mr. Gladstone celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday last Friday, receiving a large number of gifts, letters and telegrams of congratulation.

Reports of the British grain crop issued last week show a total falling off in the barley, oat and wheat yield of twenty-five million bushels for the year.

The Very Rev. Charles Merivale, Dean of Ely, a noted English preacher and author, died in London, December 28, at the advanced age of eighty-five years.

The final order for the beautiful Columbian stamps, amounting to three million dollars, was filled by the United States post-office department, December 27, after which the issue will go out of circulation.

The Institute of France has been left 100,000 francs by a lady who designates the bequest as a prize for the first person who, within ten years, communicates with a celestial body and receives an answer.

The French abolitionist, Senator Victor Schoelscher, aged ninety years, well known as a writer and traveler, is dead. During his early life he visited the United States, and afterward wrote several works demanding the abolition of slavery.

Lansing, Mich., was the scene of the forty-third meeting of the state teachers' association last week; that of Wisconsin held its forty-first annual gathering at Madison. Illinois teachers met at Springfield; Iowa at Des Moines, and Nebraska's teacher's association convened at Lincoln.

After a twenty days' trial and an hour's deliberation on the part of the jury, Patrick Prendergast has been found guilty of the murder of Carter Harrison, Chicago's late mayor, the general impression being in favor of the verdict, and that the murderer was a "responsible crank," actuated by malice.

WE are expectantly awaiting the first issue of the Woman's Signal, the new organ of the British Women's Temperance Association, which appeared in London, January 1. It will be edited by Lady Henry Somerset, and one of the contributing editors is our own Miss Willard. The Woman's Signal is a union of the Woman's Herald and the Journal, and will be to our British sisters what THE UNION SIGNAL is to our American constituency.

A RECENT first page item concerning Mother Thompson's history stated that she was a member of the Presbyterian church. Let her own words correct it: "Since I was twelve years of age I have been a member of the Methodist church. I love the Presbyterians and because the Crusade was cradled in the Presbyterian church of Hillsboro, and Dr. McSurely from the first has been the staunch friend of the cause, you might easily make the mistake. Stability in the faith of the Wesleys is my record, however."

"YOUR most sensible treatment of the great lack of courtesy in public speakers," writes a brother friend, "discussed in a recent editorial, closes with the request that the brethren offer a remedy. Do as those brethren would do if a woman should show the same impertinence,—call them to order. By all means rap them down, by mild means if they heed, but bring them down." This is sound sense, doubtless, but would not be condoned in a woman's meeting.

A SUBSTITUTE (?) for the present prohibitory law of Iowa is to be offered to the new Legislature, which convenes this week in the state capitol. It is for each town to own its own saloons, under a governing board of twenty-five citizens, appointed by the town council. After specifying numerous restrictions, the bill proceeds to name the fortunate (?) almoners of its bounty, which are the city government, the school district and the local Young Men's Christian Association! We mistrust the makeup of the Young Men's Christian Association if it does not issue a decided protest against such coalition with Satan's agency, and we know, too, that there are loyal citizens on the school boards of Iowa who will not tolerate such a division of the nefarious spoils as this bill contemplates. Christian citizens of the great Commonwealth of Iowa, see to it that this bill meets its deserved Waterloo!

THE members of the Women's Home Missionary Societies of the various Protestant denominations are strongly opposed to the admission of Utah as a state. They claim that polygamy is only awaiting an opportunity to spring into full activity again, and this opportunity will be afforded by the privileges of statehood. When the subject of admission was first broached, THE UNION SIGNAL called attention to it as a dangerous project. It is beyond belief that polygamy as a principle is yet dead. People are not so quickly and easily converted from the error of their ways. Polygamy had become firmly established, and had a powerful organization back of it. That the leaders of that organization are waiting, watching and hoping for an opportunity to reëstablish the old iniquitous system does not admit of doubt. We pointed out before that the political power of these people will be multiplied ten thousand times when Utah becomes a state. Corrupt politicians will bid for their votes, and consider that success is cheaply bought at the price of winking at the practical if not the open reëstablishment of polygamy in the name of religion. We sincerely hope that the bill for admission will be lost in the Senate.

WE learn from the daily papers that the philanthropic saloonkeepers of Milwaukee propose to do away with their free lunches and pay 25 per cent of the cost of these lunches into a fund for establishing a bureau of employment for the starving unemployed of that city. Another "public-spirited" saloonkeeper has given $2,000 toward the relief of the poor and says he will give $1,000 more if necessary. All this would be laughable if it were not so infinitely pitiful. Aside from the fact that only 25 per cent of the cost of the lunches is to be thus devoted to the poor and the further fact that said lunches are now so much patronized by hungry people from whom the saloonkeepers receive nothing in trade that they have ceased to be profitable, we cannot imagine a more pitiful travesty upon charity than gifts from the saloonkeeper's ill gotten gains. Every dollar that comes from his business represents desolated homes, beggared wives, and worse than orphaned children. Whatever man may do, God accepts no gifts from such a source. If the saloonkeepers really desire to relieve the poor, they have it in their power to do more for them than all of the millionaires of the nation. Let them just close up their business and enter into some legitimate pursuit and the starving, freezing multitudes will have cause to bless them forever.

MRS. YUNG JU, wife of the Chinese minister, and her three daughters were introduced into Washington society at the New Year's reception at the White House. These are the first Chinese women who have ever appeared in the society of the notables at Washington. It is entirely contrary to Chinese customs and traditions, but the Chinese minister is a man of advanced ideas and proposes to place the women of his household on the same standing socially with the women of the Western nations. This minister is said to be a "seven-button mandarin." Just what that is we confess we do not know; but it is doubtless something very imposing and we are properly impressed. In proportion to the number of his "buttons" we infer he carries influence, so this act of his not only indicates an advance already attained, but prophesies greater things for the future.

AN insult which is scarcely worth attention, considering the nature and source, was offered the Rev. O. E. Murray, of Morgan Park, Ill., last week. Morgan Park is a prohibition suburb of Chicago and Mr. Murray is the well-known prohibition pastor of its Methodist church. At the request of the local W. C. T. U. Mr. Murray preached the Crusade sermon, December 23, and spoke of the saloon business which the drug stores of the town are carrying on. Exceptions were taken to this by the so-called druggists and an effigy of Mr. Murray was prepared and hung on a public corner. Stories are afloat that the church is not well pleased with its pastor. To disprove this we have only to refer to the action of the quarterly conference the day after the insult was offered, which raised the minister's salary and passed the most unqualified endorsement of his action, also sympathy and support of his attitude towards the liquor traffic. Mr. Murray has often contributed to our columns and is known all over the West as an able and fearless advocate of prohibition. We trust he will be successful in the prosecution of the perpetrators of this outrage.

IT has long been a source of wonder to us that the farming communities of our country submit so silently to the assessments of the nefarious liquor traffic. The city licenses the saloon and receives all the fees. The county erects the jails and almshouses and pays the bills. Occasionally we notice an expression of righteous objection on the part of some agricultural organization, but it is not often that we have seen resolutions as strong and clear as those passed by the annual meeting of the Illinois State Grange recently in session at Springfield. We give these resolutions in full, and recommend them not only to other Grange societies but to every lover of fair play. If the saloon must be, let the "spoils" be divided!

"WHEREAS, The legalized liquor traffic has assumed gigantic proportions in this land, and seeks by every device known, to control this free government in all its departments, thereby preventing much needed legislation and reform, and

"WHEREAS, It is the chief source of crime, insanity, pauperism and corruption, and

"WHEREAS, The farmers are made to pay seven-eighths of all the taxes that go to support our courts, jails, asylums and all other benevolent and penal institutions, and

"WHEREAS, These taxes are collected from the farmers without their consent, they having no voice in saying whether the saloon shall exist or not, therefore

"Resolved, by the Illinois State Grange, that the licensing of any place for the sale of liquors in any town, village or city, is contrary to the principles and Constitution of these United States, being 'taxation without representation.'

"Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to use all honorable means to secure the passage of such laws as will permit all legal voters in any and every county of this state to express their wishes at the ballot-box whether the saloon shall exist or not."

176986

"WHAT TIME I AM AFRAID."

BY D. HUBBARD CARLOCK.

Crying, dear? Well, we are children, and the tears are quick to start;
But the dear Lord knows this language of a sore and sorrowing heart.
In the dark? Afraid and lonely? Blessed Saviour, Thou art here;
Hold this weak hand in Thy strong one, keep Thy child from dread and fear.
"There's no place where earthly sorrows are more felt than up in Heaven.
There's no place where earthly failings have such tender judgment given."

Homesick? Yes, we are but strangers, and where'er our feet shall roam,
To our Father's house we journey, we are always going Home.
Weary, child? The world's wild tossings have your life too rudely pressed?
Hear His voice, the Master speaketh: "Come to me, I'll give you rest."
"There's a wideness in His mercy like the wideness of the sea;
There's a kindness in His justice which is more than liberty."

Chicago, Ill.

THE DEACON'S WIFE'S PROPHECY.

BY JESSIE HARRIET MUNRO.

Deacon Dudley, who figures conspicuously herein, is drawn from real life. He was born in a beautiful valley in Central New York, and was brought up on the same farm on which his father was born, and which was in possession of the family for two generations. He was considered a good man in the town where he lived and had few enemies. His neighbors that knew him best regarded him as a man of integrity, and placed unbounded confidence in him. As a business man in the management of a large farm he had few equals, whether in his dealings at home or transactions with the merchants of Syracuse.

Mr. Dudley was moderately intelligent on the great questions of the day, but was apt to be set in his opinions and one-sided, and often rushed to conclusions before he had heard all the evidence. When he had reached an opinion he became as immovable as a stone wall. Argument had no effect upon him. Occasionally he would apologize when expressing an opinion on some of the great questions of the day by calling himself an old-fashioned whig or conservative, but instead of being either a whig or conservative his opinions showed that he was narrow and intolerant.

And this was especially true of him in regard to the temperance question. As none of his own family had ever given him any trouble along this line, he seemed never to have felt for others who were afflicted directly or indirectly by the dramshops. He would not even let his wife mingle with the women folks of the W. C. T. U. who made so many noble efforts to save the young men of the town, and he characterized the few Prohibitionists of the place as fanatics; not only that, but he assumed to know all that was worth knowing and thought everybody should regard his opinions as correct whether they believed them or not.

Of course, we must not be understood here as saying that this deacon lived only for himself and his family and his produce that he raised from his farm; he took a deep interest in whatever affected his neighbors. He was also a member of the Church at The Corners, and when old Deacon Starrs died he was made his successor in office. With all his partisan and egotistical qualities, little could be said against him, as he kept aloof to his own family and attended strictly to his own business. He took a deep interest in the county fair, and had a voice in its management, but outside of this organization and the church, he manifested no particular enthusiasm, except during a presidential campaign, when he made a personal canvass of the town in the interest of his own party.

But the deacon was no politician. That is, no scheming politician, such as the term denotes to-day, and did not care a fig how things were managed, as long as his own party succeeded in getting the spoils of victory. Even when votes had to be purchased and deals made so as to secure the election of certain persons he remained silent when he should have protested. It is true he belonged to the "Grand Old Party" that was organized in 1856, with General Fremont as standard-bearer, and the deacon's father, Moses Dudley, gave one hundred dollars for campaign expenses that year. For this generous contribution the county politicians never forgot him. A few years afterward he was made judge, and for several terms sat as one of the honored ones in the county court.

Nor was this distinction confined to the father. At the time we write his son, the deacon, was a side judge also, and had nearly finished his first term. To a man of the deacon's calibre, possessing a good deal of egotism, all this honor was not only pleasing, but it fed his vanity, and his neighbors looked up to him as a man of influence. Whenever he went to the village to do any trading the storekeeper and those who congregated thither, like the Athenians of old "to tell or hear something new," it always pleased him to be addressed as "Judge."

The deacon's family consisted of his wife, Miranda, a very intelligent and far-seeing woman, a married daughter living in the far west, and his only son George, a lad about fifteen years old. George was the pride of the family, and was intended for a professional life. His father was blind to his many boyish faults. It grieved his mother when she knew that George frequented the cellar, and drank old cider with his father. She protested, but it was of no use. Mr. Dudley claimed that a little cider would not harm anybody; his father drank it before him, and had kept a barrel in the cellar all his life. Many hot words were sometimes passed on both sides on this subject. When one of these conversations had subsided, Mrs. Dudley turned to her husband, and, looking him straight in the eyes, said: "Phelps Dudley, mark my words, your example toward this boy in offering him cider, and your continual enmity to every kind of temperance reform will some day bring sorrow to your own soul. I can see now what it will come to. 'God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

The deacon had nothing more to say. As he passed out of the side door toward the barn, he turned to his boy and muttered: "We'll see if Miranda's prophecy comes true or not."

Next morning the deacon and his son George went to the village to do some trading. Dick Perry drove the colts, and attended to some other errands around the village. Many persons considered Dick below mediocrity, but Dick was no fool. He had well defined views on some things. The villagers would sometimes tease Dick to express himself on public topics, and, when he did so, everybody knew what he meant. Once in awhile he would speak out his mind to the deacon on what he was pleased to call the great increase of "drunk making" in the county, and the apathy of the church and county officials in regard to it; but the replies of the deacon on such occasions were always evasive and unsatisfactory.

Some months before this Dick met the deacon in the lot soon after his return from the spring term of the county court. His mind had been full of the subject for several days. He had heard the deacon pray that morning for the heathen in far-off lands, who were in the gall of bitterness and bond of iniquity. It occurred to him then that there were people in his own town who were in worse bondage, married to an appetite from which they could not easily break away. He had seen with his own eyes many persons, old and young, stagger home drunk from the village at night and what grieved him most was, the church of God, like Gallio of old, "cared for none of these things."

"Judge," said Dick Perry, "why don't you churchfolks and all you politicians who have been elected to enforce the law, vote down this liquor curse? I tell you it's doing heaps of harm all over town. You know 'Squire Monson's boys and many others like 'em are going to the devil as fast as they can go. They commenced on cider but now they drink rum like a fish. It's true, Judge! Something should be done or else we'll lose all the boys in town."

After a brief pause the deacon replied: "Dick, you have asked me a hard question; but bless you, I cannot answer you just now. I don't know what we may do about it in the future, but we shall not tackle it just yet. It's too big for us to handle, Dick." Then he continued, warming up, "I belong to the only party that has ever done anything for the temperance cause—in fact, given us all our temperance laws. I think they will give us high license, Dick. This has worked like a charm in the West. Maybe we shall have it in York state. I believe we shall have to tax it, so as to make it pay some of the town expenses. Our county papers seem to think this is the best thing to do, and I guess they ought to know. Dick, you know the Prohibitionists are around these days trying to kill our party, but the people are not ready for their newfangled notions just yet. The best thing that preachers can do these days is to preach temperance and moral suasion till public opinion is roused up on the subject. We must keep this question out of politics. Dick, 'taint right to mix up politics and religion. I am as good a temperance man as any of these cranks, but I ain't a fool. Every vote you give the Prohibs you help the rumsellers into power, and don't you forget it."

"That's strange," muttered Dick. "The rumsellers all over the state who belong to the old parties hate these temperance people whom you are pleased to call fanatics; in fact all the politicians, on both sides, are down upon them, and the papers, too, are down upon them; but it's a wonder to me the churches don't get up on their side and help them. The churches ain't right in what they do."

After a moment's pause the deacon responded, apologetically, "I know, Dick, the churches ain't in their right place on the liquor traffic; but what are you going to do about it?"

The conversation stopped here, and as the deacon went toward the house Dick muttered silently to himself, "Deacon Dudley may pray a lifetime for the heathen, but as long as he lets his own son, George, go to the cider barrel at will, and sit around the village tavern with other boys he is going to go to ruin, see if he don't."

After Deacon Dudley had finished his trading in the store, he waited for Dick Perry to come with the team. Dick had gone to the dress-maker's at Mrs. Dudley's request for some patterns. After he had paid his bills the deacon sat upon a chair feeling somewhat tired. Indeed, he felt worn out, for he had not yet fully recovered from the fatigue of the past three weeks which he had spent as a side judge in the county of Syracuse. Many cases had come up during those days which set him thinking. One case in particular had affected him very much. Perhaps this was because it was from his own town and he had been familiar with all its details for months before. He was on the most friendly terms with Job Matteson and his family whom it had affected most—in fact he was distantly related to them. Job's son had been killed in a drunken melée some months previous, and strenuous efforts had been made while the county court was in session, to have the tavern-keeper indicted. But Martin, the rumseller, seems to have had a strong "pull" among the politicians of the county and they rallied to his rescue, so that all efforts failed. The deacon knew all about this and the efforts put forth to shield the criminals who had murdered young Matteson, and he could have expressed himself and exposed the villainy had he so desired, but his moral vertebra was weak, so he preferred to straddle the fence rather than make enemies. Job Matteson sat in a corner of the store for half an hour while the deacon was doing his trading. And while the deacon was speaking in low tones to store-keeper Hudson defending his course, Job's lips were quivering with rage. As members of the same church with those two men to him it seemed they had both played the hypocrite, and their inconsistencies were so conspicuous that they looked to be as ignorant of the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth, which He had left for His people to follow, as they were of Buddha.

Job walked over near the counter where the two men were standing, his eyes filled with tears. He was much affected when he remembered the tragic death of his boy whose grave was still fresh in the village cemetery. It was a sad ending of a brilliant young life, and everybody knew, even the outsiders, that had the Christian people of the town stood for the principles of the gospel, by protesting with their voice and votes at the town meeting against rum selling, Job Matteson's boy never would have died as he did.

Some years before these two men had been elected excise commissioners at the town meeting. Then they gave Martin, the tavern-keeper, a license to sell rum. Since then several young men of the town had died in drunken brawls and two were serving short terms in the county jail. But aside from all that many homes in the community had been made desolate by intoxicating liquor and were then suffering keenly the disgrace which the saloon had brought upon them. But the climax to all was the murder of young Matteson. When the people thought the matter over, they laid the responsibility where it belonged, not with the hotel keeper, but at the door of the Christian voters of the town. By their unchristian example they put a stumbling block in the way of their brothers. Nay, they even caused to perish those for whom Christ died.

As soon as Job Matteson had found his tongue he stammered out in broken accents pointing a finger of the right hand at the two men on each side of the counter: "Say, if you two church-members had only done a Christ-like act and refused the tavern keeper a license when he asked it—and you had the power in your hands at that time, my boy Tommy would have been living to-day! You gave Martin the privilege of ruining my boy and then sending him to perdition for the sum of twenty-five dollars. You know you did it, and you are accountable for all the disgrace that has fallen upon us. When we tried to prosecute the villains that had helped to do th deed you both stood in the background, too cowardly le you should have made enemies. But remember, as sure a God is in heaven all who have had a share in it will have to bear the burden in the Lord's time. He does not settle all his accounts on the first of October."

N. Troy, N. Y.

(To be continued.)

THE PRESENT STATUS.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

Concerning the temperance movement in our land and throughout the world to-day, the pessimist says—and says truly—"There was never so much liquor manufactured in any one year since time began as in the year 1893,* and as a consequence never did so much liquor flow down the people's throats as in this same year of grace." "But," says the optimist, "there is each year a larger acreage from which the brewer and distiller may gather the golden grain and luscious fruits, there are more people to imbibe the exhilarating poison; but, per contra, there was never so much intelligent thinking in any one year as to the drink delusion, there never were so many children studying in the schools the laws written in their members, there were never such gatherings together of temperance people to consult on the two great questions what to do and what not to do as in this year; there was never such a volume of experience and expert testimony and knowledge so varied, so complete, as we have had this year at the International Congress; there were never so many total abstainers in proportion to the population, never so many intelligent people who could render a reason scientific, ethical, æsthetic, for their total abstinence faith as now; there were never so many pulpits from which to bombard the liquor traffic and the drink habit; there were never so many journalists who had a friendly word to say for the temperance reform; there was never such a stirring up of temperance politics; for the foremost historic nation of the world, Great Britain, has this year for the first time adopted as a plank in the platform of the dominant party, the principle that the people shall themselves decide whether or not they want the public house; and as a natural consequence of this political action there was never a public sentiment so respectful toward the temperance reform. The great world-brain is becoming saturated with the idea that it is reasonable and kind to let strong drink alone. The vastness of these changes can only be measured by the remembrance that a few generations ago these same drinks were the accredited emblems, in cot and palace alike, of hospitality, kindness and good-will.

So far as the white-ribbon movement is concerned, this has been its best and brightest year from the outlook of the World's W. C. T. U., and that is the only point of view that is adequate. How little did they dream, those devoted women of the praying bands, who with their patient footsteps bridged the distance between home and saloon, and in their little despised groups poured out their souls to God, and their pitiful plea into the ears of men, that the "movement" would be systematized twenty years later into an organization known and loved by the best men and women in every civilized nation on the earth; and that its heroic missionaries would be obliged to circumnavigate the globe in order to visit the outposts of the society. How little did they dream that in the year of the World's Columbian Exposition well nigh half a million of children would send their autographs on the triple pledge cards of our Loyal Temperance Legions, and Sunday-school department; that we should have a publishing house, owned and conducted by the society itself, from which more than a hundred million pages of the literature of light and leading should go forth this year; how little could they have conceived of the significance that is wrapt up in the lengthening folds of the Polyglot Petition, signed and circulated in fifty languages, and containing the signatures and attestations of between three and four million of the best people that live, praying for the abolition of the alcohol traffic, the opium traffic and the licensed traffic in degraded women. How little they dreamed of that great movement by which the study of physiology and hygiene were to bring the arrest of thought to millions of young minds concerning the true inwardness of all narcotic poisons in their effects on the body and the brain. How "far beyond their thought" the enfranchisement of women in New Zealand and Wyoming, Kansas and "Michigan, my Michigan!" How inconceivable to them the vision of our House Beautiful reared in the heart of the world's most electric city, and sending forth its influence to the furthest corner of the globe. How little did they dream that the echo of their hymns should yet be heard and heeded by a woman whose lineage and the prowess of whose historic name may be traced through centuries—and that not alone from the cottage and the homestead, but from the emblazoned walls of splendid castles, should be driven the cup that seems to cheer, but at the last inebriates.

The momentum of the centuries is in the widening, deepening current of nineteenth century reform; the twentieth century's dawn shall witness our compensations and reprisals, and as these increase humanity shall pay back into the mother-heart of woman its unmeasured penitence and unfathomed regret for all that she has missed (and through her every son and daughter that she has brought into the world) by reason of the awful mistake by which, in the age of force, man substituted his "thus far and no farther" in place of the "thus far and no farther" of God, one founded in a selfish and ignorant view of woman's powers, the other giving her what every sentient being ought to have—a fair field and a free course to run and be glorified.

The prohibition agitation in America has not been as great in the past year as formerly, and the reasons are not far to seek. A presidential campaign always lowers the moral atmosphere for a year before it begins and a year after it is over. Legislators become timid, politicians proceed to "hedge," journalists, with an eye to the loaves and fishes, furl their sails concerning issues that have at best only a fighting chance; the world, the flesh and the devil get their innings, and the time is not yet. In the past year the attention of the nation has been focused on the World's Fair and the endless difficulties to which that has given birth. There has been an incalculable amount of ill-will set in motion as the result of personal financial interest and ignoble ambition. All this savors not the things of God or of humanity. The re-adjustment of political parties is still inchoate; men's hearts are failing them for fear; leaders in the traditional party of moral ideas have thrown off all disguises and grounded any weapons of rebellion they may once have lifted against the liquor traffic. The financial panic has riveted the attention of the public on their own dangers and disasters, and the spirit of money-making has lamentably invaded the ranks of the temperance army itself; but prohibition is as lively an issue to-day as emancipation was in 1856; an issue that stirs such deadly hatred is by no means dead. It is still quick with fighting blood, and its enemies know this even better than its friends.

The temperance cause started out well nigh alone, but mighty forces have joined us in the long march. We are now in the midst of the Waterloo battle, and in the providence of God the temperance army will not have to fight that out all by itself, for science has come up with its glittering contingent, political economy deploys its legions, the woman question brings an Amazonian army upon the field, and the stout ranks of labor stretch away far as the eye can reach. As in the old Waterloo against Napoleon, so now against the Napoleon of the liquor traffic, no force is adequate except the "allied forces."

Reigate, Eng.

*One hundred and fifty millions of dollars is the sum of money which the Hon. David A. Wells sets down as the total received by the United States from the liquor traffic this year.

SARAH GRAND, THE LATEST BRITISH WOMAN AUTHOR.

BY H. D.

Sarah Grand is of English parentage. Through her father's family she has a trace of French blood. On her mother's side she is altogether of north-country stock. She is of Quaker descent on both sides. Her maternal grandfather was turned out of the Society of Friends because he would hunt. She was born in Ireland where her father happened to be quartered in command of a naval station. He died when she was seven years old; and from that time she lived amongst her mother's people in Yorkshire until well into her teens. Her brothers followed the family tradition and went into the Royal Navy.

Sarah Grand inherits her literary and artistic tastes from both parents. Her mother was a highly cultivated woman, and Sarah Grand's own early taste for books was undoubtedly due to her mother's influence. During her childhood Sarah Grand seems to have had no very regular instruction; but was allowed to run pretty wild, living an outdoor, breezy life in the sea-coast town or poring over books in her mother's library. Her reading was entirely unrestricted. She says herself that she was brought up principally on Punch and The Saturday Review.

Not only had she this early love of literature, but when quite a child she felt the impulse to express her own ideas. The probability is that her early efforts met with scant encouragement, or even more probably the tendency was looked on with small favor, or at most with amused contempt by those about her; for the writing child is as often as not driven back upon herself for lack of other outlet to record her ideas. Or it may be that her natural shyness in speech drove her to write down her thoughts. At any rate we find the child falling back upon herself at an early period and noting her impressions. According to family tradition there was no time, once she had learned to write, when she did not keep a notebook, in which she scribbled down her observations on men and women and passed judgments upon the sentiments and ideas she heard and the books she read.

At sixteen she left school and almost immediately afterwards she married. Her husband was an officer in the army, and soon after their marriage she accompanied him to the East, through Malta, Egypt and Ceylon to China and Japan. In those days of travel she wrote much verse; for to write verse was always a delight to her, lifting, as no other form of expression could lift it, the sense of dumbness from her soul. Amongst whatever people she went she discovered for herself the same human nature only clad in a different manner.

It is often asserted that an artist has had no particular "schooling" in his craft. But generally this very artist has had the severest schooling—the training which leads to what the French call "making school"—the long and tedious toil of self-instruction. This was Sarah Grand's case. No sooner was she married than she set to work alone to repair the defects of her education. Her notebooks testify to the extent of her reading and the thoroughness of her apprenticeship to letters.

Almost before she was out of her teens she had written novels on customary lines, which she wisely never attempted to publish, and most of which she destroyed. She first endeavored to publish articles and short stories, but everything was rejected, until at last, thoroughly disheartened, she appealed to Annie Keary, who read some of her efforts and strongly advised her to persevere and to try Aunt Judy's Magazine with one of her stories; but before doing so, doubtless impelled by the mystic strain which is a perceptible trait in her nature, Sarah Grand put the matter to the ordeal. She took down a Bible and opening it at hazard she read: "The stone which the builders refused is become the headstone of the corner." She accepted the token. In due time the story appeared anonymously. It was a modest start for one destined to hold a distinguished place among the writers of her day. She felt that life had said so much to her that would interest other women; she felt she had a message to deliver, and putting aside, as I have said, her early attempts along the beaten paths of fiction, she set to work to give form to a series of books to be treated on lines of her own planning. And thus it was that she came to create the first of her studies from life, "Ideala."

"Ideala" was finished in 1883. It was sent the round of the publishers, by all of whom it was rejected. The tone of superiority affected by some of them, as I flip through those grim letters of refusal, read in the light of to-day like the lines of a farce. Sarah Grand finally sent it to Mr. George Allen, of Orpington, Mr. Ruskin's publisher, and asked him if he would kindly give her his opinion of the book and tell her if he thought it worth publishing at all. He replied that he not only thought it worth publishing, but was ready to publish it himself if Mr. Ruskin approved. He explained, however, that his agreement with Mr. Ruskin was such that he could bring out no book of which the latter disapproved. I can well remember Sarah Grand's delight on receipt of that appreciative letter, but it was not destined to live long. Ruskin did not approve, and shortly afterward the manuscript was returned, with expressions of regret from Mr. Allen. Mr. Ruskin, it is to be presumed, in practicing that chivalry toward women which he, together with the old school of believers in the subordination of women, held to be the proper practice of man to woman, used his giant strength after reading only a few pages of the manuscript which has since borne its writer to fame, and pettishly scribbling on it that he "didn't like the title" and "couldn't bear queer people, however nice," he returned it to the publisher. But Sarah Grand was unconvinced. She locked the book up for five years, however. But in the summer of 1888 she took it out again, read it carefully through, and, finding her confidence in it unshaken, she determined to publish it at her own risk. It appeared in a yellow paper back, was an instant success, was taken up by Bentley at his own request after it became famous—he having before refused it—and was published by him in a more ambitious form. The original yellow-back edition is now sought after keenly by the collectors. A pretty strange and rare career for a first novel.

In "Ideala," as one of her critics has truly said: "Sarah Grand struck the keynote of her genius." It is the life story of a deeply sensitive, highly bred, delicately nurtured woman, married to a man of loose morals. Born with a light-hearted nature, she, a pure-souled woman, governed by a mistaken sense of duty, tries to live cheerfully beside the noisome being to whom she is tied; and from whom our revolting man-made social laws give her no means of escape except in disgrace. The anguish and degradation of the position are poignantly and powerfully suggested, yet suggested with rare delicacy of touch. It requires a highly disciplined nature to live through such a partnership unsullied. "Ideala" is much more than a novel, it is the voice of a great-hearted woman speaking to her fellow women out of the innermost depths of her soul. The author herself calls it a study from life; it might well have been called "The Tragedy of Womanhood."

This book should be given to every girl out of her teens, as a text-book for her enlightenment. Sarah Grand is ambitious for her sex. She cries to women to arise from the apathy which the slothful attitude of surrender has bred in them. But she is intensely feminine in her point of view, and in the methods which she advocates. She wishes to see every woman making herself a power in the land; but always, when possible, a quiet power and never a blatant one. Women should work together to create a new spiritual atmosphere, the vitalizing force of which nothing could resist. Once women are agreed amongst themselves what evil they wish to put down, whether in their homes, in society, in their intimate friendship, and "they will use their influence unvaryingly in that direction, the thing will be done."

After the publication of "Ideala" Sarah Grand set to work on "The Heavenly Twins." During the two years that she was engaged in writing this book, and the subsequent three years that she spent in finding a publisher for it, she produced some short stories in the same series of "Studies from Life," which are perfect little works of art. "Kane," the disreputable, lovable old soldier-servant; "Nancy," the Lancashire cripple girl; "Boomellen" the ineffectual; "Ah Man," the Chinaman; "The Yellow Leaf," and "Eugenia." These short studies are chiseled with cameo-like sharpness. Besides these she also published one of her early efforts in ordinary fiction called "Singularly Deluded," written when scarcely out of her teens. In each of the shorter "studies" we find heroism shown in the outwardly sordid or weak—it is never the cheap heroism of the sentimental young man or the yearning female, but the real heroism of human endurance.

The spring of this year, 1893, saw the publication of her largest work, "The Heavenly Twins," which has carried Sarah Grand into the foremost rank amongst the writers of her time. It took her two years to write it, as we have seen, and another three years to find a publisher. Again she had to print at her own risk; but fortunately for the reputation of the publishers' calling, there was one among them, Mr. Heinemann, who, when it was shown to him, had the literary acumen to take the whole risk upon himself and publish it at the eleventh hour.

In "The Heavenly Twins" the vital question of the license allowed to men before marriage is treated boldly and fearlessly, and yet with a suppressed strength that makes it all the more powerful. Sarah Grand shows that men must and can be made to bring to the marriage altar as unspotted a record as they demand from the bride. She has struck a crushing blow at the hypocrisy that had woven itself about the man's view of the subject, and will probably be found to have killed it as effectually as "Don Quixote" killed the follies of feudalism, of knight-errantry and of so-called chivalry; as brilliantly as Mark Twain's "Yankee at the Court of King Arthur," exposed the cant and humbug of the "good old times."

I cannot do better than conclude with the words of one of her most capable critics: "An immense sympathy with the weak is the dominant note of Sarah Grand's work. She is like a woman haunted with the idea of the world's pain. The passionate sincerity of her nature makes her as interesting a figure in herself as any of the figures she has drawn. She is her own most striking creation."

London, Eng.

THE EFFECT OF THE OPIUM TRAFFIC ON MISSIONARY WORK.

BY REV. S. L. BALDWIN, D. D.

The Bishop of Victoria testifies that again and again, while preaching, he has been stopped with the question, "Are you an Englishman? Is not that the country the opium comes from? Go back and stop it, and then we will talk about Christianity."

The native Christians of Canton, in their address to the Anti-opium Society, speak in emphatic terms of the opium traffic as a hindrance to the propagation of truth. They testify that they constantly hear the heathen Chinese saying:

"The foreigners who preach the doctrine of Jesus affirm that He taught men to love others as themselves, and always to bear in mind the Golden Rule, but every year they import opium into China and injure thereby millions of their fellow-creatures. Lately the quantity imported has increased, and the injury it produces has increased in proportion, as if they meant to carry off all the wealth of China and to drain away the life-blood of the people before they stop. When men only think of what profits themselves, and are regardless of the injury done to others to such an extent as this, how can they be said to love others as themselves? How can we believe their doctrine and follow their religion?"

The heathen Anti-opium Society of Canton says to the Anti-opium Society of England:

"Suppose the case reversed, and that some other nation had a poisonous article which was injurious to Great Britain. We know well Great Britain would not suffer it to be brought to her own detriment. And if you would object to its being brought, you ought equally object to its being sent to hurt others. The New Testament says again: 'Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them.' Is it possible that the instruction of the Saviour has never yet reached the ear of your honored country?"

There can be no question that there is a very deep and genuine feeling among the Chinese people that this awful traffic is a great wrong, utterly indefensible on any moral ground. The above extracts indicate how this feeling constantly arises up in objection to a religion which is brought to them by the same people who bring the opium. It is not easy for them to make the distinction between nominal and real Christians, and when missionaries endeavor to teach such distinction, in answer to the objections to Christianity growing out of this traffic, the ever-recurring reply is, "Why don't you get your own people to be real Christians then?" The calm judgment of the men best fitted to formulate an opinion was expressed by the General Conference at Shanghai when it said of the opium trade, that "both from its past history and its present enormous extent, producing suspicion and dislike in the minds of the Chinese, it is a most formidable obstacle to the cause of Christianity."

It may be well just here to have the opinion of leading Chinese on the subject. One of the most remarkable expressions of Chinese opinion is the letter of the Commissioner Lin, who destroyed the opium in Canton harbor, to Queen Victoria. A few extracts will give an idea of its style and of its reasoning:

"But there is a tribe of depraved and barbarous people who, having manufactured opium for smoking, bring it hither for sale and seduce and lead astray the simple folk to the destruction of their persons and the draining of their resources. Formerly the smokers thereof were few, but of late from each to other the practice has spread its contagion, and daily do its baneful effects more deeply pervade the central source, its rich, fruitful and flourishing population. . . . How can it be borne that the living souls that dwell within these seas should be left wilfully to take a deadly poison! Hence it is that those who deal in opium, or who inhale its fumes within this land, are all now to be subjected to severest punishment, and that a perpetual interdict is to be placed on the practice so extensively prevailing. We have reflected that this poisonous article is the clandestine manufacture of artful schemers and of depraved people of various tribes under the dominion of your honorable nation. Doubtless you, the honorable sovereign of that nation, have not commanded the manufacture and sale of it. . . . Though not making use of it one's self, to venture, nevertheless, on the manufacture and sale of it, and with it to seduce the simple folk of this land, is to seek one's own livelihood by the exposure of others to death, to seek one's own advantage by other men's injury. And such acts are bitterly abhorrent to the nature of man, are utterly opposed to the ways of heaven. . . . We would now, then, concert with your honorable sovereignty means to bring to a perpetual end this opium, so hurtful to mankind; we in this land forbidding the use of it, and you in the nations under your dominion forbidding its manufacture. As regards what has been already made, we would have your honorable nation issue mandates for the collection thereof, that the whole may be cast into the depths of the sea. We would thus prevent the longer existence between these heavens and this earth of any portion of the hurtful thing."

One of the most recent and most emphatic expressions of high Chinese opinion is to be found in the letter of Li Hung Chang, the leading statesman of China, to the Anglo-Oriental Society for the suppression of the opium trade. It is dated at Tien-Tsin, May 24, 1881. He says:

"Opium is a subject in the discussion of which England and China can never meet on common ground. China views the whole question from a moral standpoint; England from a fiscal. England would sustain a source of revenue in India, while China contends for the lives and prosperity of her people. The ruling motive with China is to repress opium by heavy taxation everywhere, whereas with England the manifest object is to make opium cheaper, and thus increase and stimulate the demand in China. . . . If it be thought that China countenances the import for the revenue it brings, it should be known that my government will gladly cut off all such revenue in order to stop the import of opium. My sovereign has never desired his empire to thrive upon the lives or infirmities of his subjects. . . . The present import duty on opium was established, not from choice, but because China submitted to the adverse decision of arms. The war must be considered as China's standing protest against legalizing such a revenue."

New York City.

CONQUER thyself. Till thou hast done that, thou art a slave; for it is almost as well for thee to be in subjection to another's appetite as thy own.—Burton.

IT IS no more wonderful that we should live again than that we should live at all. It is less wonderful, and even the most superficial skeptic knows that we have begun to live. I see that on the faces of this great polyglot audience are written the hundred names of God. I care not what name you give to God if you mean a perfect spiritual being. A religion of delight in God is known scientifically to be necessary to the peace of the soul.—Joseph Cook in Parliament of Religions.

AN ANTEDILUVIAN ACTUAL LETTER.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—An elderly correspondent has sent us a letter from another elderly gentleman, a person of wealth, education, talent and good health, who has spent his life without a single altruistic pursuit, aimlessly indulging in many lands his aesthetic and literary tastes.

November 14, 1893. H— says that you seem to be rather lonely. Of course with such very, such extremely energetic women folks (and all women folks are tending toward excessive energy nowadays) a man does feel rather "left." Give me the old-fashioned woman who knows how to love, how to rule a house, how to make her children sweet and true, without the latest "agonies" of culture, temperance, voting and other female fads of the present day. I have no use for the feminine politician. Let her go her ways in peace—such peace as her restless energy may leave her. What I want in woman is a Ruth, a Rebecca, the old type. Remove from me, oh, Lord, the lady senator, the lady hustings-orator, et hoc omne genus. If men can't do the politics and the soldiering without bringing the ladies into the field, they had better remove bodily to some other and happier planet. . . . Miss Conybeare has been lecturing on woman's rights and woman's wrongs. She puts a very fair case, but I say the women "boss" us now so much as they like. Man and wife are one and the wife is that one. Such is the case in nine-tenths of the couples. In the remaining tenth the man is either a brute or the woman a fool. Alas, how few fools are left among women, and how few grand men among the men! Gynecocracy (woman's rule) is the coming condition—'tis the men's fault—can we be comfortable under it?" and so on—and on.

Those who have read this manly cry of despair may be amused to see the reply to it which was sent.

MY DEAR WRETCHED RICHARD:—Yours of the 14th inst. causes me much anxiety. I fear that your health is very poor as you are so worried about things past, present, and to come—such as these "agonies of female culture"—"all women tending to excessive energy"—while you and I are in a condition of contentment or laziness—which do you call it? Can you draw the line between them? Where is this invisible line at which contentment merges into indolence? Is contentment near to sloth allied? Do sloth and criticism of the activities of others belong together, like say, salad and vinegar? You are so alarmed that you long for a home on another planet because the women are (by contrast with us) too useful and will cause "retrogression," and you think that your fellow countrymen are becoming demoralized. You find that man and wife being "one," in nine-tenths of the cases the wife is that "one." You seem to think that it was not a rib but his backbone which Adam lost to make the woman, and she has got it all—the backbone of Paradise. It is sad that your experience should lead you to the exclamation as to the few women fools and the now extinct grand men.

Now, my friend, you evidently need medical advice. It is a case of what old-time doctors called "humors" in your body. Your liver doesn't work well—it "biles" over. And the terror of coming under woman's rule appalls you. Well, well, it will be better to fall into their hands—or arms,—than into the clutches of such old lazy fellows as myself and yourself, so don't be anxious. Better things are in store for you, and you will find that you "can be comfortable in the new queendom. The British nation congratulates itself on being under the rule of a queen, and not a few are hoping to have another (Miss Fife) rather than the Prince of Wales, or his son bearing the name of the four Georges of unhappy memory, of which quartette the nation cannot be said to be proud.

But seriously, my dear fellow, for myself I rejoice that, since I am laid aside by age and ill-health, the women of my family are earnestly fighting the demons of our civilization; and since you permit yourself so slashing a criticism of "such very, such extremely energetic women folks," causing "a man to feel rather 'left,'" you must not get mad if I "would God" that you and H— and myself equalled them in useful work instead of "holding back" (as we say when one of a team of horses won't pull) and sulking and growling that we've got "left." So, my good cousin, take my criticism of the men of our family as sweetly as I take your tirade on the women of my household, and be good ever after, singing contentedly with Lowell:

"She sings to the wide world
He sings to the nest!"

You must really be ill in your specially favored lot of pecuniary ease, leisure, unusual abilities, and large intellectual resources, when you take such an atra-bilious view of your blessings. It is not essential, as you intimate, that men should "be comfortable under" the progressive emancipation of their mothers, wives and daughters—more than half the race—after cycles of a systematic oppression of them of a sort not defended even by yourself. The question is whether "t'other half of us" are to be relieved of a despotism which whether cruel, or more kindly administered, is after all a despotism which has made them either rebels or slaves. You may gibe at the woman who offered the resolution, "that men be deprived of their votes and that women alone should have the ballot"; or at that other "emancipated" woman who complained to her friend: "the trouble with you is that you don't hate men as a class"; but quite as big fools are to be found among men who laugh at them, and who have not the excuse that they have been made desperate by tyranny. Even advanced women are imperfect. The only perfect thing in nature is a perfect fool.

If in closing I might venture a prescription, it would be for you to go to work yourself and rival the objectionable women of my family in promoting Temperance, Charity, Reform, the elevation of the poor, the relief of the overwhelming disabilities of women. If you cannot do this take some liver pills—I recommend Carter's.

London, Eng. SYDNEY.

THE "SOCIAL EVIL" IN CLEVELAND.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The question of the "social evil" is at present engaging the attention of more people in this city than ever before. A series of murders under criminal medical practice has recently brought to light some of the mass of corruption which is seething beneath the surface. The daily journals published and illustrated shocking details. The public conscience woke to the fact that some features of the worn-out European scheme of registration of vice have recently been put in practical operation in our midst. The practice of debauchery seems to be limited by hard times and by little else. Street solicitation has been practically unchecked. Laws concerning houses of ill-fame have been nullified through the delay and uncertainty of police jury trials. Former city administrations contented themselves by raiding these houses at intervals, for revenue, their fines resulting in profitable advertisement.

The present director of police, Mr. William C. Pollner, is unquestionably desirous of doing something practical to limit this monstrous iniquity. Neither his birthplace, Germany, nor his business, brewing, has led him to adopt current conclusions held by American temperance and social reformers. He is, however, in sympathy with purity, and is not desirous of playing into the hands of debauchees. Nor is he venial, as have been some of his predecessors. His close friends say that he is more concerned to be right than to be consistent. He is not a hide-bound politician. These facts should be borne in mind by those who are inclined to anathematize the man while criticising his methods. It would seem wiser to work with him while the ways are parallel and to endeavor to win him over where they diverge.

There are physicians in this city, some of them even reputable, who so far degrade their profession as to give health certificates for the promotion of vicious callings. These documents, costing from fifty cents to one dollar per week, are no longer required to be brought to police headquarters, but are kept by the women themselves, and exhibited to their clients. The system is nominally non-compulsory, but the moral—or rather immoral—effect is the same.

A test case was recently made by the Rev. William Knight, associate pastor of the First Presbyterian church, which is situated near many vicious places. Two women were arrested for street-walking, having accosted that gentleman on his way to prayer-meeting. Much comment, favorable and unfavorable, ensued. The prisoners are entitled to a jury trial, and this they demand. His design is best expressed in his own words to a Leader reporter. In an interview he says:

"As to the women under arrest, let us be just in dealing with them. The one point to be kept in mind is just this, Are they guilty as charged? The verdict must determine. No man's heart aches more than mine for them and such as they. . . It may seem a matter of small importance that two guilty women should be convicted. It is a great matter that the community should know whether its officials are enabled by law to cope with this terrible factor in feeding our monster vice. Is there a way in law by which they can proceed, or shall we have to make one?"

I have found a statute under the head of "Sanitary-Regulations" which we had altogether overlooked, and which gives our Board of Health and its successor, the Director of Police, the power to cause examination and registration of common prostitutes, thus officially recognizing the evil. This law ought to be repealed. The system of inspection is probably insensibly fading, there being no penalty attached to non-compliance.

The situation is interesting and by no means hopeless, and further developments are sure to follow, perhaps soon. OBSERVER.

Cleveland, O.

HOW IT LOOKS IN COLORADO.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The final act to emancipate Colorado women is over. Governor Waite, whatever his deficiencies in other directions, performed his duty in sending out his proclamation declaring women citizens as soon as the official canvass was completed.

Already women are registering through the state, giving residence, occupation, age, every provision being identical with our fellow citizens—the men. The first woman to do this was Mrs. Routt, of Denver, president of one of the suffrage leagues and a white-ribboner. It was her husband, then governor of our commonwealth, who gave the unique welcome for the state to the Denver National Convention, adding to Miss Willard sotto voce that he was ready to vote for her for president.

Much credit is due Judge Bromley, of the constitutional convention of 1877 (who lives to see his desires fulfilled), for the simple provisions made at the adoption of the constitution whereby a simple majority of any succeeding legislature might submit the question to the electors of the state, a simple majority of whom might decide it.

A very general interest is shown as to the exact text of the measure which has become law. This is its first act: "That every female person shall be entitled to vote at all elections, in the same manner in all respects as male persons are or shall be entitled to vote by the constitution and laws of this state, and the same qualifications as to age, citizenship and time of residence in the state, county, city, ward and precinct—and all other qualifications required by law to entitle male persons to vote, shall be required to entitle female persons to vote."

It will be seen that women may vote for all elective federal offices which men have voted for or may vote for, as well as municipal, county and state offices.

"How many women will exercise their prerogative?" A majority, at least, there is reason to believe. All through the state there is a busy preparation of study, and city, town, mining-camp and lonely ranche home are active with the questions opened up through practical and theoretical politics, political economy, parliamentary usages, mock trials, national and state constitutions, Colorado laws concerning women, children and schools, etc.

Politicians are already suggesting certain women for certain offices; but the desire of the women themselves seems to be first to be fitted for them. The universal feeling is one of calm happiness. Our national emblem has managed to stay off the ground sometimes by the use of one wing; hereafter the "bird o' freedom soarin'" in Wyoming and Colorado will have two equal wings to sustain itself in even, well-balanced flight.

In a personal talk with our president, Miss Willard, in her "den" three years ago, I was struck with her judgment as to the wisest thing to do next. It was to push the equal suffrage question with all the force and "gumption" at our command. In her enforced quiet across the sea she is giving thanks for Colorado women's opportunities, not more for us than in the confident hope that it is the beginning of the end.

Most earnestly, anxiously, hopefully, we look down into neighboring Kansas and across to New York. Will they suffer a word of advice from victorious Colorado? Carry the campaign purely upon the merits of the question itself. What women do with the ballot after getting it is not germane to the real issue—the justice of political equality. By a private letter I learn that less than half of the W. C. T. U. women of Rochester, N. Y. (Miss Anthony's home and Miss Willard's native county), last month voted for school commissioner. Stir up women! Few of their male friends will then vote "no."

In grateful recognition of the handsome majority the men of this state gave for our emancipation, let me close with these prophetic words from Miss Anthony: "Never under the sun was there given by the superior class a popular vote for the ballot to go to an inferior class. If the majority does thus vote, Colorado will be the first state that has had so many noble and just men."

MARY JEWETT TELFORD.

Grand Junction, Col.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE IN THE CHURCH.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The Fifteenth Congress of the Protestant Episcopal Church held in New York City not long ago was most successful in full attendance and in good and able "papers and talks." It covered a wide field of thought and the "pros and cons" were well put. This congress has many advantages. It gives an opportunity for presenting both sides of a question, and can but leave one broader in thought—even if still adhering to individual views—more charitable towards each other in the struggle to accomplish certain results.

But when the discussion on "What shall be done with the saloon?" was ended, to many came a great disappointment that one very important phase of the subject was not more definitely argued—the attitude of the church itself—this term is used in its universal sense—on the liquor question. If it is possible to get at the saloon and either prohibit or curtail it, why cannot the church purge itself of this evil? If legally the selling can be controlled, why cannot the drinking within the church be prohibited?

The liquor-seller's position is a more honest one, because he makes no claim to righteousness, than that of the church dignitaries and members who use liquors socially, as a beverage or as a stimulant.

If the church were to assert its authority, as it claims the law can, we should not be pained, as we often are, by the use of wines within its pale. If all church-members accepted the teaching, "Deny thyself that thy brother may not offend," what a step forward there would be in the good work of temperance—total abstinence. Instead of talking it would be doing, and the church could look the saloon "squarely in the face" and denounce it. As it is, the present position of a church which does not prohibit social drinking is absurd. For it is only the man or woman who does not use it that has the right to censure a saloon or advise control over it. For a church-member to use wines socially, even in moderation, and then tell some other man that he shall not use it, even immoderately, is, to say the least, shockingly inconsistent. He perhaps, craves "the little," the other "the more," but if within it lurks the germ of evil, has he, under his church vows, the right to use it?

It seems to me that the church's work and duty is, first to set itself right. The immense influence and results from a united total abstinence church would be far beyond any possible legal control over the saloon. With the assumed authority that belongs to the Roman church, and the continual protesting of the Protestant church, what might not be accomplished? M. G. L.

New York City.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

And the apostles said unto the Lord, Increase our faith. And the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye might say unto this sycamine tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you.—Luke 17: 5, 6.

A Happy New Year to all the readers of the Temple Item column. We must go forth, dear friends, and leave our past behind us with its mistakes and shortcomings. Let us not waste our time in vain regrets, but nobly enter the untried days of the new year with a determination to make them grander, better, more unselfish than any that the past year has known. Above all, let this be a year of increased faith, walking as seeing Him who is invisible. Who knows but before its close our feet may press the streets of the new Jerusalem, and we may see the glory of the shining of His face? My text for 1894 is: "Lord, increase our faith." It would be a joy to me to know that all friends of the Temple had adopted this text for the coming year. We would then march as a great and triumphant army from victory to victory. Entrenched behind such a faith we need fear no assault of the enemy; every such attempt will but sweep us farther on to success. All the attacks the Temple enterprise has had but pave the way to secure the needed money within the next two years, with which to pay every dollar of indebtedness that rests on the enterprise. Give no credence to any report or document circulated to the contrary, for all such are false. Only hold fast to your faith, nothing wavering. And add to your faith works. Do all you can for the Temple in the next two years, even if it seems to you but a trifle. Fifty cents or fifty thousand dollars, according to ability, will be judged in God's sight equally worthy.

***

The history of "the littles" that come to the Temple is one that touches the deep places in our hearts. Mrs. G. M. Adams, Sechlerville, Wis., writes: "I send twenty-five cents, the amount found in a poor woman's mite-box after her death. When taking the box she said: 'I want an interest in the Temple, but it is very little I can do'; soon after she went to her reward." This in the Master's eyes may count a priceless sum. An aged veteran, Mrs. M. E. Dubridge, Morrison, Ill., sends a dollar and writes: "Does this entitle me to the Columbian souvenir? If so, all right, but you should have it all the same if it did not. I wish I could give a hundred, but I am a poor woman; it took a great many steps to earn this dollar." Among those who have lately sent their dollar to the Temple in answer to the appeal sent out is that venerable saint who has done so much for humanity, Mrs. Laura S. Haviland, now over eighty years old. It was accompanied by a beautiful letter in her own handwriting. She termed the dollar "the widow's mite." Think of a union in a frontier town in Kansas that for the past year, with but few exceptions, has had but two members present, "although," writes Mrs. S. P. Buck (one of the two) "as an organization we do not count much in numbers, yet as a moral force we are mighty in all this region." The president, Mrs. T. Ganett, Hill City, earned at an ice cream social $5 which she has sent to the Temple. Here is the story of how a good Quaker sister, Mary Jane Nichols, Presque Isle, Me., earned some money for the Temple. She says: "As I had read in THE UNION SIGNAL of the Temple built by the women, I so longed to do something, but being a poor woman could see no way. While knitting mittens by moonlight for the Christmas tree, the thought occurred to me that I might knit and sell a pair or two and send the proceeds to the Temple. Oh, the satisfaction of knowing that I had an interest in that wonderful Temple, Perhaps my little story may encourage some one else to go and do likewise."

***

A dear white-ribboner from Iola, Wis., stricken with a lingering disease and very poor, sends twenty-five cents. She says: "If you knew what a sacrifice it is to send this you would appreciate it, but I feel that I must have one brick in the Temple if no more." Another dear shut-in one, very poor, unable to walk, and deaf, sends for a mite-box. She says: "I thought through faith I might get $2.50, and I would love to own one of those Columbian souvenirs." A little girl, Jane Ordell, Orkland, Minn., sends five cents; she saved it by going without shoe strings. She says: "I hope it will buy a brick in our grand Temple." Mrs. Phebe Clark, Toledo, O., sends nine cents, a penny collection taken up in a mothers' meeting at one of their missions. This sum was the voluntary gift for the Temple of the poor women present.

***

There is such a great demand for the beautiful Columbian souvenir that we have decided until the entire cast is disposed of to offer them this year as a prize to all who send a gift of one dollar to the Temple. All who receive them are delighted with their beauty. Mrs. Sarah E. Steele, Lockport, N. Y., writes: "The souvenir has arrived, and it is perfectly exquisite. I shall send for two more just as soon as I can spare the money, as they are something to be greatly desired by those who favor the glorious Temple."

***

We are going to make a most tempting offer to all who fill a mite-box from January, 1894, until January 1, 1895, viz., collecting in it $3.65—a penny a day—during the year we will give a solid silver Temple souvenir spoon. Persons who desire to help the Temple and secure the spoon must send their names to be entered on our books with a two cent stamp for a mite-box. All money orders should be made out in the name of the treasurer, William D. Preston, and sent to our financial secretary, Miss Sara G. Johnson, The Temple, Chicago, Ill. All other matters pertaining to the Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Carse.

JOB'S SYMPATHY.

BY WARNER WILLIS FRIES.

Now what's th' use uv scowlin'
Et things ez can't be cured?
Er etarnally a-growlin',
When they must be indured?
Dew set down an' rest a minute,
An' don't be in sech a whew;
Arter we air dead an' buried
Thar'll be work enough tur dew.

Here ye go an' tell th' neighburs
Thet ye git no time tur read,
Though we hev more books an' papers
Then a pa'cel like us need,
Till ye seem tur folks a martyr;
An' I don't know but ye air,
With yur everlastin' clatter
Over what ye eat an' wear.

Oh, ov course ye'll go tur workin'
On some pesky crazy-quilt;
Er a-sewin' rags fur carpits
Ontil yur like tur wilt;
Er crochetin' some new rinktum,
Thet hain't worth a cud o' gum,
But ye git no time fur readin',—
An' ye won't till kingdom come!

Waitsfield, Vt.

BIG BOYS

BY MARY C. GLASS.

Some one has wisely said: "Most boys go through a period when they have great need of patient love at home. They are awkward and clumsy, sometimes strongly wilful and perverse, and they are desperately conscious of themselves, and very sensitive to the least word of censure, or effort at restraint. Authority frets them. They are leaving childhood, but have not yet reached the sober, good sense of manhood. They are an easy prey to the tempter and the sophist."

Now is the mother's opportunity, for at this time, strange as it may seem, the boy's father generally seems to be unusually impatient with him, probably because the same stage of his own development recurs a little too vividly. The boy needs his mother now more than when he wore long dresses. Well for him if she is a wise, tactful, patient, clear-headed mother, for she will need to be all this, and besides to have a serene trust in God to be able to help him over this most restless period of his life.

Let him have a cheerful home, no matter how poor it may be, and let him depend on a kind, pleasant word whenever he comes into it, and he will come in earlier and spend more of his spare time there. Make his own room pleasant and pretty as possible. Don't say before him that anything is good enough for a boy.

If he is of a mechanical turn let him try to "invent" something without being ridiculed; it will not hurt him and will keep him at home on rainy days. Don't disturb his bolts and screws and files and pieces of steel. How can he ever get the wonderful "flying machine" to work right if you keep clearing up his tools and materials? Did you like to have your mother go in and "rid up" your bed when you were trying to make one new dress out of three old ones, and the bed was full of patterns and linings and facings and "contrivances"?

If your boy's taste is for music encourage him to learn to play on some instrument, for possibly he may get as far as the boy whose little sister said: "Johnnie is a-gettin' on fine; we can tell now when he is a-tunin' up and when he is a-playin.'" I verily believe that a violin played by a beginner is easier on a nervous woman than a ruined boy would be. When some lecturer comes whom you are particularly anxious for your boy to hear, tell him that you want to go badly, but have no one to take you, and manage in some way to get him to invite you to go with him. Thank him and tell him you are so glad he thought to ask you. When the evening comes give him a good supper and dress yourself as prettily as possible and be as nice and polite to him as you used to be to his father in his young days. Let him buy the tickets even if you furnish the money. See that he carries an extra wrap for you.

Arouse his manliness by calling on him for favors at home; politely always and invariably thank him for them, and above all things don't laugh at him. No matter if he does appear to be all hands and feet and stumbles over himself a dozen times a day; it is likely his father did just so at his age. In short, if you want him to be a gentleman you must treat him as one. Don't do as an English gentleman did who ordered his son to "take his meals in the kitchen with the servants until he learned to behave properly at his father's table."

Speak to visitors of your boy as "my son," introduce him as though you were proud of him—that is, if you can get him into the room where they are. Ask his advice occasionally and try to follow it if it is good. Make a fine cake for his birthday. If he has arrived at the stage where "he must and he will have a gun," don't buy one for him, but help him to earn the money for it, and by the time he has earned and saved twenty-five or thirty dollars the "gun craze" period may have passed and he will be wanting a "safety"—or an "unsafety" as it seems to be when my boy comes in asking for "warm water, arnica and ointment."

My sisters, let me tell you a secret. Some time when you are baking, make your great overgrown boy a little cake in the top of a baking powder can, and give it to him privately and he will be as pleased as he was at three years of age. I know it is possible to so win your boy's confidence at this most trying age that he will ask some day, "What kind of a girl do you like, anyway." Don't laugh, but tell him. If his father is a Christian gentleman, thank God and take courage, for some one has said: "The father's kindness finds its echo in the nobility and courtesy of his sons."

I beg of you, do not on any account, except sickness, get up and build the fires and call your big boy to breakfast, for by so doing you are ruining your future daughter-in-law's husband. During this time of his life you must be kind and patient with him even if he tries to make you think he is very wild. So enwrap him in your mother-love that it will be almost impossible for him to go very far astray, and you can always pray for him. Remember, in order to lead your boy to Christ you must not only seem to be good, you must be good, for our children read us through and through. Margaret Bottome says: "To rob a child of the memory of a mother that loved God, that cared more for principle than for pleasure, is to rob the child of the greatest wealth."

Post yourself fully about what is going on in the world, and when your husband and guests are discussing the living questions of the day, be prepared to express your opinions as well, and be sure that you always champion the cause of right no matter how unpopular it may be, and in time it will have its effect on your son. Tell him privately of the traps and pitfalls which are waiting for him on every side. Don't imagine that you will put "thoughts" into his head; remember that what you have been too cowardly or too modest to tell him, he has learned long ago from others. Tell him you want him to be as pure and good and wholesome as the girl he will some day want to marry. Teach him that a "fallen man" is as bad in the sight of a just God as a "fallen woman." If you have not the courage to talk to him, get some of the good books which have been so carefully prepared on these subjects, and leave them in his room; he will read them.

Some bright day he will refuse to attend church, and will deliberately make up his mind to be a "skeptic." He does not know just what that means; no matter, he will risk it, and be one. If you are particularly anxious for him to be a Prohibitionist he will calmly decide to be a Democrat. Never mind, keep sweet, and go on preaching and living prohibition doctrine. Gain and keep your boy's confidence at all hazards, and remember that it is more than probable your husband's mother had just such an experience with him in his young, awkward, overgrown, foolish days.

Remember that you are moulding a soul for life and eternity, and to have the right influence your own life must be true to the center. Children seem to see through all shams by intuition. To lead your boy upward you must be filled with the spirit of Christ yourself. You cannot lead your boy into a pure, true, upright life if your mind and heart are full of selfishness, unkindness and low aims. You cannot possibly raise your boy higher spiritually than you are yourself. I do not say that a boy cannot be better than his mother, but I do say that if he rises higher than your true level that it is from some other influence than your own.

Pasadena, Cal.

A MAN'S OPINION.

BY ZENAS DANE.

Even in the days of my ignorance and selfishness I believed in the rights of the wife and mother regarding the family income and it is of this that I am minded to write at this time because it is such a common and prolific source of unhappiness in so many homes. Indeed, I believe that it is often the beginning of a gradual deadening of respect and affection between husbands and wives, and that it often ends in the divorce courts. It is surprising to know how unjust and ungenerous men of otherwise kindly traits can be in this respect. They will concede anything and everything to their wives excepting an equal right to the family income.

I saw a case of this ungenerous spirit in a city dry goods store one day very recently. A small, tired-looking woman with a big, fretful baby in her arms, was looking at cheap dress goods. Her husband, a tall, robust man with an irritable manner, was by her side, on guard as it seemed to me, lest his wife fall into some feminine extravagance.

"I think I'd like this piece," said the woman, laying her hand on a bolt of goods of a pretty brown shade.

"How much is it a yard?" asked the man.

"Sixty cents," replied his wife.

"Ain't this fifty cent piece just as good?" asked the husband pointing out a roll of dark ugly brown.

"It may be as good, but I hardly think so, and I don't like the shade."

"Nonsense! one color is as good as another. I'm sure I like this color as well as the other, you'd better take this piece."

"Well, if you think so I guess it will do," she replied meekly.

"How many yards will you need?" he asked.

"I ought to have nine yards, anyhow."

"Of this wide goods?" he asked in marked surprise.

"Well, I suppose I could get along with eight and a half yards, but —"

"Then there's no use wasting money for the other half yard," he interrupted, and promptly ordered the clerk to cut off eight and a half yards.

When she looked at some velvet ribbon for trimming he said something about women's minds "running to frippery," but he ungraciously permitted her to buy a single yard of the ribbon. He chose the buttons for the dress himself, rejecting those she preferred. And you may be very sure that she did not have the privilege of paying for her purchases out of her own purse. I doubt if she had one. He paid for the things and the change from the twenty dollar bill went back into his own pocket.

It is pretty certain that there was no "allowance" to the wife and mother in that home, and that she had nothing to say about her husband's income. She was not supposed to have any discretion or intelligence regarding the expenditure of money, and her husband would doubtless have scoffed at any claim she might have made of being a wage-earner herself by attending faithfully to the duties of her household. A man must put a high estimate on his wife's intelligence and common sense if he dare not trust her with a few dollars of her own.

I remember hearing a half-comical, half-pathetic story of an old lady who was praising the noble and generous qualities of her son-in-law. "He's always been a real good husband to Araminty," she said. "Once he give her five dollars to do just exactly as she'd a mind to with."

"And what did she do with her five dollars?" some one asked.

"Well, there was so many things she wanted she couldn't never make up her mind what to git; and then she was so afeerd she'd git something her husband wouldn't be pleased with that she finally give him back the money and told him to git her something himself and he got her a churn. But it was real good of him to give her the money in the first place with the privilege of doing jest as she'd a mind to with it."

It would be sorrowful to know how many wives there are who never have any money to do "jest as they've a mind to with," how many wives there are who are mere pensioners on the uncertain bounty of their husbands; how many wives there are to whom money is doled out grudgingly and complainingly, how many wives there are who degrade and humiliate themselves by having to resort almost to trickery or must beg to get money enough for their actual needs.

I believe that the economic instinct is stronger in most women than in men, and that the average wife and mother will disburse money as wisely and frugally as it is possible for her husband to disburse it. This being true the wife should have the right to make her own expenditures without any interference on the part of her husband. She should not be limited to any fixed allowance because household expenses vary, but her wisdom and common-sense should be honored by trusting her to be her own judge of what her needs are. To deny her this privilege is sure to dwarf instead of develop her character.

Dorchester, Mass.

TYPICAL LESSONS FOR LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION TEACHERS.

IV.

Water Fowls.

BY MARY E. RUDD.

Opening Exercises, 15 minutes:—Quiet music and prayer followed by hymn, then by temperance songs. Finger plays; another song. Repeat the two Scripture texts with a few words of application or give children an opportunity to tell their meaning. Question as to the whatsoever of the past week, thus carrying out the thought of the previous lesson. Rhythmical Exercises. Vary by adding other motions with feet or head.

Lesson, 25 minutes:—Recall the incident of the bird coming down to bathe. How many have watched to see the canary in the cage bathe since then? Let children tell their experiences. Tell how Dot and Trot went out every morning to feed the chickens. Let children make motions to represent throwing out corn. How they put the white chicken into the brook one morning thinking it ought to have a bath. Result. Explanation by the mother that chickens are not made to like to go into the water and they will get out as soon as they can, or, if the water is deep, they drown.

That night when their father came he had a basket, and they heard something inside say, "Squawk, squawk." When the cover was taken off the two little creatures inside were very still and the boys thought at first they were chickens; but they saw that the beaks were broad and flat instead of sharp, like a chicken's. The next morning their papa went to the brook and set the little creatures on the bank, while Dot and Trot said: "Oh, don't, papa, they'll surely fall in and be drowned." But just in a minute the ducks had waddled into the brook and were swimming about as happy as could be. You may be sure the little boys laughed and clapped their hands and danced about; and what do you suppose the little creatures were? (Of course, you have just told them, but let them guess. It will help you to detect the observing child.) This will serve as an introduction to a very interesting talk about ducks, geese and swans, showing pictures of each, speaking of the skin between the toes which enables them to swim, telling of the geese feathers which make our soft pillows, the down which is softer still, and the duck's eggs which are so large and rich. Incidentally bring in the thought of the cruelty involved in keeping such creatures where they have only mud to wade in, and no sweet, clean water to swim about in.

Games, 10 minutes:—Imitate chickens and ducks both in walk and the sound they produce.

Occupation, 25 minutes:—Sew duck outlined on cardboard. Try to have work finished if possible.

Chicago, Ill.

A LITTLE BROWN PENNY.

A little brown penny, worn and old,
Dropped in the box by a dimpled hand,
A little brown penny, a childish prayer,
Sent far away to a heathen land.

A little brown penny, a generous thought,
A little less candy just for one day,
A young heart awakened for life, mayhap,
To the needs of the heathen far away.

The penny flew off with the prayer's swift wings;
It carried the message by Jesus sent,
And the gloom was pierced by a radiant light
Wherever the prayer and the message went.

And who can tell of the joy it brought
To the souls of the heathen far away,
When the darkness fled like wavering mists
From the beautiful dawn of the Gospel day?

And who can tell of the blessings that came
To the little child when Christ looked down;
Or how the penny, worn and old,
In heaven will change to a golden crown.

—Selected.

A CHILD'S CRY FROM CHINA.

The following letter to the happy boys and girls of America in the Northwestern Christian Advocate tells its own touching story:

TSUNHUA, CHINA.

My Honorable Friends:—I give you my best bow. I am a stupid little Chinese girl. Some days I am so naughty my grandma says I shall probably be a monkey after I die! This scares me and gives me a big pain in my heart. They tell me my mother cried a great many tears because I was a girl, and my grandma and father were very cross and angry. They named me Ling Te, which means "Lead along a brother," but when another baby came she was a girl, too. I heard my father say, "We are too poor to keep another girl." Mother said, "I have had such a hard time I wish I had died when I was a baby; the poor little thing had better die." She cried a great many tears. Father took the baby away, and I never saw her.

After a few years a little brother did come, and that was indeed a joyful day! I stood by and watched them tie the clothes around his little arms and legs. Day after day he laid upon the brick bed, looking toward heaven, making the back of his head so flat and nice. I brushed away the flies, and thought how proud we should all be to have him grow up and be a mandarin and wear a button on his hat, and ride a big, black, shiny mule! Of course, we shall find a wife for him, and then we shall have a slave, at last, of our own. I say, however, in my heart's center, "I will be real good to her."

When he was a month old we gave a big feast, and a barber shaved off every bit of his hair. Oh, how pretty his little white head was! His black eyes looked as bright as buttons. They untied his body, and it was so funny to see his little hands and feet fly around! Our guests brought money in big red envelopes, and gave him many presents, too. Grandma gave him a red cap all covered with brass images and looking-glasses, because the devils get scared and run away when they see themselves in a glass. They put a chain around his neck and bracelets on his arms to keep the bad spirits away.

When I said, "Grandma, why do you put a cat's head on his shoes?" she said, "Why, don't you know cats walk safely and never stumble or fall, and I wish the boy may go safely through life and always have a smooth road."

Soon after this grandma bought bandages nine feet long, and she began to turn my toes under and wind the long bandages around my feet. Tighter and tighter she drew them, and when I could not bear it and began to struggle and scream and kick, she called my father and mother to hold me. I could not sleep that night for the pain. I can never tell how my feet ached; after a few days they were so sore and lame I could not walk. Once my mother said, real soft and sweet, "poor child," and that seemed to make me feel a little better.

Now my feet are dead and do not ache so bad, and I can walk on my heels pretty well. During the sixth moon, Wen Shan, one of our neighbor's girls, came back from the Peking school. She looked so queer to us! They had taken the bandages from her feet and she walked like a boy, and her feet were nearly as big as a boy's. At first we all made sport of Wen Shan because she had been off to the mission school, but she was so gentle and kind we got ashamed to make her feel bad. One day I said, "Why don't you get angry and revile, like you used to do?"

"Because Jesus said, 'Love your enemies.'"

"Jesus? Who is Jesus? Is He your teacher?"

Then she told me a beautiful story about her Jesus. I did not believe it, but I liked to hear it all the same. We all liked to look at her doll and the pretty things that came from America, in a box, for the school. No one in our village ever saw such pretty things. Everybody went to see her home after she trimmed it up with the bright picture cards. She called them "Christmas cards." She says Christmas is Jesus' birthday, and the nicest day in all the year. We girls wish we could have Christmas in our village! She says the verses on the cards are Bible verses, and the Bible, she says, is the book the true God has given us to help us to be good and please him, so we can go to heaven when we die.

When I told grandma, she said, "Ask Wen Shan to bring her Bible book over here and read to me, and I want to hear about her Jesus God, too."

When Wen Shan came I could see that grandma loved to hear her talk about Jesus. Wen Shan seems to love her Jesus, but we are afraid of our gods, and sometimes I think her God must be nicer than ours.

No woman in our village can read. It is a wonderful thing to hear her read as well as the mandarins! One day she read where Jesus said he was going away to prepare a great many mansions, and He promised to come again.

Grandma said: "That's very nice for the foreigners."

But Wen Shan said: "He is heaven's Lord—our heavenly Father; we are all His children. He loves Chinese just as well as He does Americans."

"Do you think there is a heaven for me, too?" said grandma, and her voice shook so it made me feel very queer in my heart.

"Yes, surely there is."

After this I noticed that grandma did not burn any more incense to the gods, and sometimes it seemed to me she was talking with some one I could not see.

When the cold weather came she began to cough and grow weak, and one day I heard them say: "She cannot live long." My mother bathed her and put on her fine clothes, and the priests came from the temple and beat their drums and gongs to scare away the devils that watch for the dying. Poor old grandma opened her eyes and looked so scared I could not look at her!

All at once she said: "Send Ling Te to that Jesus school." Then she went off to sleep. About midnight she opened her eyes and smiled so glad! But she did not see us.

After the funeral mother talked a great deal to me about going to the Jesus school. One day, when my father could not hear, she said: "I want to know more about Jesus. I can never read His Bible book, but you can go, my daughter, and learn, and then you can tell me."

I was very anxious to go, for the cold weather made my feet sore, and I cried every time I changed the bandages. At last my father said: "Oh, well; she is nothing but a girl—let her go. I shall save rice by it." So one day I started out on the little white donkey for the Jesus school. My heart felt big and shaky, but I was glad to go.

It was a long ride to Tsunhua. When we reached there the gate-keeper led us to Miss Hale. She took us into her beautiful room and let us see the iron tailor sew, and we heard the organ make its beautiful noise, and then she showed us the girls' school.

I began to see that I had reached heaven and looked around for grandma. The girls looked very happy, skipping around on their big feet, and I was so glad to be there, too. But when my father talked to Miss Hale about leaving me her face grew very sad and she said, "I cannot take her; my school is full! I have already turned away seven girls to-day."

"Why," said I, "you must be mistaken. Grandma said there was room for all of us."

She put her arms around me and said, "Poor child, I am so sorry, but there is truly no room for you. I have asked the kind friends in America to send money to put up more rooms, for it costs one hundred dollars to build a room and thirty dollars a year to support a girl. If they will send it, then I can take you."

My happy heart was turned to iron, and my words and tears were all frozen up together. My father led me away out through the gate. I did not think the keeper would really shut it in my face, but he did.

Now I am thinking all the time about those happy girls inside, while I am shut outside. I often see a hungry look on my mother's face, and she says to me, "Oh, my daughter, I did hope I was going to know about Jesus."

I don't know how to pray to Jesus—I wish I did—but every night I say, "Please, Jesus, ask your friends in America that have money to send some over here to China—enough to make a place for this stupid child, for, oh, dear Jesus, it makes me feel so bad to be shut out."

From the small, stupid child,

WANG LING TE.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—A little temperance cousin in Jamaica, N. Y., wants to join the Cozy Corner and sends this little story as her membership fee.

ELSIE'S GOLDEN RULE.

Elsie is only a little girl but she has learned to love Jesus, and what is much harder, to serve Him.

One day, as she was walking near her home she saw a young boy staggering toward her. She was just turning to go in another direction, when a thought struck her: "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you."

At the sight of her the boy gave a low cry, saying: "Elsie, Elsie, oh, Elsie!"

Elsie, surprised, asked: "How did you know my name?"

"Oh, Elsie, don't you know me? No, you don't, you were so small when I went away. I am your brother Howard, who ran away."

Elsie was so glad to hear him say this that she forgot his poor clothes, the smell of liquor about him and everything else except that he was her lost brother.

She looked more closely at him and saw that, although he had been drinking, his pallor was caused more by sickness or lack of sleep than by liquor.

He told what a hard time he had had to get enough to eat and wear, and how he had at last decided to come home.

He had stayed in a hotel in a neighboring town the night before. In the night he had fallen sick, and the landlord, in spite of all he could say, had given him a large dose of brandy and another the next morning.

When he had finished his story the two went home.

I will not try to describe the meeting between the parents and son. It is enough to say that all was forgiven.

Thus, Elsie, by a humble effort to keep the Golden Rule, helped her own brother. DAISY DIMPLETON.

Shall we accept this fee? Yes?

Have you written an account of your favorite game for Cozy Corner? Please do so at once.

Affectionately,

Aunt Jane

NEPHEWS AND NIECES.

I have an Aunt Jennie. Whenever I get her UNION SIGNAL I look for the Cozy Corner and love to read it. I belong to the L. T. L. We had a state convention last July. They had a nice time. We sent a delegate. If the L. T. L's would all write you would be like "The old woman that lived in the shoe." LULA MITCHELL.

Indiana, Pa.

That's exactly Aunt Jane's desire, Lula; send the letters flying this way, dear L. T. L's and temperance children, Aunt Jane welcomes you.

As we do not know that you have heard from our Loyal Temperance Legion, Company G, of Harlem Avenue Christian Church, I will write you a letter of introduction. Our Legion was organized in January, 1892, and we will celebrate our anniversary next month. We are studying books number 4, subject, "Alcohol and the Nation." After completing the study of each book, we have an examination. Altogether we are progressing.

ELLA WELFORD TALIAFERRO, Cor. Sec. L. T. L.

Baltimore, Md.

Congratulations for the anniversary of Baltimore's Company G! We shall look for your account of the celebration, dear corresponding secretary.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

258.

BEHEADMENT.

An honest, upright man was he,
Far-famed for love and charity;
He went down town one wintry night,
By a saloon where all was bright.
But sad to tell they saw him pass,
And cried, "Come in and take a glass."
He thought to himself, "I'll just go in,
For a glass of whole can be no sin."
He took one glass nor stopped at two,
And so was drunk ere he got through.
On his way home he dropped my two,
So lie in the street was all he could do.
If that was all that he had lost,
He ne'er would need to count the cost;
But, oh, dear children, that glass of whole,
Took second to heaven from his soul.

SOLON.

259.

TEMPERANCE PI.

Couht tno, sttea nto, dnlhae ton.

JOSEPH Q. GANNON.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED DECEMBER 14.

251. Crusade.

252. 1, Lady Henry Somerset. Frances Willard. 2, Woe unto him that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips. 3, Dare to be a Daniel.

Correct answers: H. R. Hanson; Abby M. Collester.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
MANAGING EDITOR—MARGARET A. SUDDUTH.
OFFICE EDITOR—MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—JENNIE A. STEWART.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS { LADY HENRY SOMERSET. MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Secretary.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.
President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
CONTRIBUTED:
"What Time I am Afraid." By D. Hubbard Carlock... 2
The Deacon's Wife's Prophecy. By Jessie Harriet Munro... 2
The Present Status. By Frances E. Willard... 3
Sarah Grand, the Latest British Woman Author. By H. D... 3
The Effect of the Opium Traffic on Missionary Work. By Rev. S. L. Baldwin, D. D... 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
An Antediluvian Actual Letter... 4
The "Social Evil" in Cleveland... 5
How ii Looks in Colorado... 9
Total Abstinence in the Church... 5
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS... 5
THE HOUSEHOLD:
Poem, Job's Sympathy. By Warner Willis Fries... 6
Big Boys. By Mary C. Glass... 6
A Man's Opinion. By Zenas Dane... 6
Typical Lessons for Loyal Temperance Legion Teachers. IV. By Mary E. Rudd... 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, A Little Brown Penny... 7
A Child's Cry from China... 7
AUNT JANE'S COZY CORNER:
Soft-Shelled Nuts... 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Opportunities in Colorado... 8
Individual Rights... 8
Parliamentary Usages—Their Use and their Abuse... 9
THE WATCH TOWER... 9
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
Toronto's Loss—Miss Ackermann in England... 10
World's Wave Crests... 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Missouri—Michigan... 11, 12
News in a Nutshell... 12
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES... 12
ORGANIZERS' CORNER... 12
TREASURER'S CORNER... 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Co-Operation in the Purity Department... 13
OUR LIBRARY TABLE... 13
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT... 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES... 16

God is my strength and power; and me maketh my way perfect.—II Sam. 22:33.

OPPORTUNITIES IN COLORADO.

Now that women have been fitted out with the weapon of power in Colorado, the world will wait to see what they are going to do with it for the protection of their homes,

The saloon, the gambling house, the haunt of infamy are a leagued trio against the purity of woman, the perpetuity of home's material interests, the safety of children. and the keeping of the social compact. If at the end of five years there are as many of these abominations (in proportion to the number of inhabitants) in the centennial state, as there are now, the men and women who believe in equal suffrage will do well to hide their diminished heads, and declare that they have "reckoned without their host." But we have no fears of that kind. We do not know the exact ratio of women to men in Colorado, but as it is a mining state we judge that the latter hold a large majority, and one not favorable to the outlawing of the three institutions that are considered especially essential to the happiness of mining towns in general! But other things being equal we have no misgivings as to the outcome of this act of justice on the part of the men who have opened a door of opportunity for women. However, it is now and always true that disembodied spirits and disembodied principles fare about equally well in this work-a-day world; we must embody the love and loyalty of womankind in Colorado into the W. C. T. U. with its orderly, steady-going efforts to inform and convince and convict the whole community, both men and women, if we are to reform so as to witness a success commensurate with the expectations of reformers.

It seems to us that in Colorado is the crucial test of woman's ballot, and if this is true that state isthe strategic point toward which the plans of our National officers should be directed in the effort to coöperate with the energetic and capable leaders of the W. C. T. U. among the Rockies. We urge upon our National superintendents, organizers, evangelists and lecturers that they have a patriotic duty just now in connection with the work of the white ribbon women in Colorado; and we ask each one of those good and true leaders to lift up her heart in prayer to know what is her individual duty and opportunity. The vigorous working of our departments will wonderfully strengthen the movement for women's active participation in all the beneficent public work of the state; the efforts of our organizers will increase the number of local societies and "strengthen the things that remain," while a gospel temperance revival in any town or village will bring to white heat the aroused perceptions and convictions of all good people that the kingdom of God must come, in the customs of society and the laws of the land, as truly as we desire its coming in the individual heart and life.

We send affectionate and enthusiastic greetings to Mrs. Higgins, the faithful leader of our forces in Colorado; and to every one of the state and local officiary, and to loyal white-ribboners of the rank and file. Remember, beloved comrades, that success never "happens," but is organized, preëmpted, captured, by consecrated common sense; and that to get ahead of the liquor traffic you must get up early and stay up late.

INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS AND DUTIES.

"Among the reasons why there are so few great men among us, why national morality is so low, I believe the greatest to be the existing inequality in the rights of men and women. Therefore the first thing to impress upon the minds of the young girls in our classes is the fact that they have individual rights and duties, that we may thus enlist their interest in the cause of religion. I have seen many girls who, after four or five years of study at the expense of much money and sacrifice on the part of their parents, enter married life to conduct themselves as if they had had no education. They do nothing for society. They are under the rule of their husbands. They have no opportunity to show their ability, but are condemned to things in which they have had no schooling,—the kitchen and the care of children. This is deplorable. It is sad that their husbands, in the treadmill of petty conveniences, do not realize it. It may be the result of custom, but it is a hindrance to the progress of civilization. In matters of social reform woman's influence is greater than man's. Her power is indeed great. But in our country we still find conservative and obstinate-minded men who cling to the old order of things."

The above contains many points that might serve as texts to as many articles. At the start, to allay the sensitiveness of those who have taken up with the new fad—extreme disgust for "women's excitement over woman," as Helen Watterson terms it, let us say that the foregoing quotation is not from a woman but from a man whose history is worthy of more space than we can give it. The author was Joseph Hardy Neesima, a Japanese who, at the risk of his life, ran away from his native land to America in order that he might learn English and read the Bible, some portions of which in the Chinese language had fallen into his hands. He arrived in this country in 1865 when he was twenty-two years of age. Through the benevolence of Mr. Alpheus Hardy, he took his preparatory course at Phillips Academy, his college course at Amherst and his theological at Andover. Returning to his own country in 1874, he refused the most flattering offers for high official position made to him by the leaders of the revolution in Japan, established a Christian university and after a life full of the miracles of faith died in 1890, the greatest private citizen of Japan.

People of every rank and of all faiths united in doing honor to his memory, and his death was regarded a national sorrow. That such a man should have seen in the inequality in the rights of man and woman the greatest cause for the low moral tone of his nation, and for the scarcity of great men, is a very significant fact. It confirms the judgment of those who have anywhere in the world sought to solve some of the problems of human ills by reinstating woman in her rightful position, and it vindicates the motives of those who all the time have claimed that "women's excitement over woman" was never a tithe so much for the sake of "woman" as for the sake of the interests which every true woman holds dearer than any personal rights—the interests of home and children.

The inequality in the rights of man and woman in Japan are, doubtless, much greater than in America; nevertheless, the picture which Mr. Neesima draws of the wedded life of the educated Japanese girls finds many a counterpart in our own land. It is too often true here that the educated girl lays her attainments a needless sacrifice upon the altar of matrimony. We do not forget that no culture of heart or brain is wasted that makes a woman a more competent mother, a better companion to her husband. But we do consider it a fatal mistake when a girl drops at the threshold of matrimony the pursuits of literature or art which are her delight, and for which she has been specially fitted by natural endowment and education.

Many cases of the kind come under the notice of every one. We will mention two only of those which have come to our own personal notice. One is of a girl who stood in the front rank of her classes in one of the leading universities of this country; whatever the department, languages, literature, mathematics, science, she stood second to none. She was several times elected to represent her class in literary contests, and along all lines was recognized as one of the leading spirits of her class. She married immediately after graduation and, though many years have elapsed, is still "doing her own work," sewing, mending and caring for children. We do not say that this woman's life is wasted, we do say that much of her power is wasted, that it is an infinite pity that, doing so much well, she should be forced to spend her time in the endless, thankless routine of fighting dust and cobwebs, sewing on buttons, etc., while her intellect is starving and the faculties which in her girlhood promised so much have lost their cunning through long disuse.

The other case is similar, of a young woman of remarkable natural ability as an artist, who dropped her brush when she entered the matrimonial estate, and long exclusive wielding of the broom and dishcloth have rendered clumsy the once skillful fingers.

It is idle to say that such cases argue simply lack of force in the women themselves. Men as well as women are victims to the customs and prejudices of society. It is over man that Carlyle mourns as "drowning in the despicablest of puddles; the priceless gift of life slowly strangled out of him by the innumerable packthreads of social forms." The thousands of women of whom the two given above are representative, are simply being strangled by these "packthreads" or, to use Mrs. Mary A. Livermore's striking figure, "they are lying in the trough of the sea."

True, it would not be a difficult thing to seize the rudder strongly and steer straight out into the calm depths beyond the chopped up seas of the shore. The difficulty lies in seeing the possibility. The despicable "packthreads" which bind them to their doom are the spider webs of custom. To "do her own work" and do it so that it shall be beyond criticism is the generally conceded duty of the young wife in moderate circumstances. But in the due course of nature this soon makes it utterly impossible for her to do anything else. However kind, generous and well intentioned her husband may be, nine times out of ten she does not feel at liberty to so much as suggest that she desires anything different. He may give her freely, without question, whatever money she asks for but she must always ask for it and she feels that it is his, not hers. She accepts unquestioningly the old status and, though she never explicitly states the case to herself (its mere statement would show its absurdity) tacitly assumes that as wife, mother, cook, housekeeper, etc., she is barely earning her board and clothes.

Nine times out of ten the husband is unconscious of all this. He accepts her sacrifices without so much as knowing that she is making sacrifices; he never dreams of the galling sense of dependence in which she constantly lives. Other women do the same thing; it is the usual way; it simply never occurs to him that there is a better way. He does not know that his wife is ruthlessly sacrificing the best interests not only of herself but of him and of their children, and of society around her for which she, too, in this nineteenth century is responsible. A little consultation, a little coöperation, a wiser expenditure of time and money, which in the majority of cases would come if the wife were to mention the matter, would settle the problem. The packthreads of social forms and customs are not so hard to cut when one really sets out to do it; invariably he finds more help than he had dreamed would be given; the difficulty lies in realizing the true character of our bonds and in seeing that they may be broken.

The solution of the difficulty is given by the far-seeing Japanese—"impress upon the minds of the young girls the fact that they have individual rights and duties." When women are thoroughly aroused to this fact the end is reached. True men are ready to give to women every opportunity for the development and free use of their powers. They are not to be blamed when they do not perceive the bondage under which women are living, if the women themselves do not complain. It is women chiefly who need to learn the lesson that > "Every creature—female as the male

> Stands single in responsible act and thought,
> As also in birth and death."

That rights are important, because bound up with every right is a duty, and duty to the world around us demands that we have every facility to do our work for humanity

Self-immolation has been supposed to be the chief duty of woman, but the expanding spirit of Christianity has shown that self-immolation in the convent or the home contradicts the purpose of God for His responsible creatures. The buried talent will bring to woman as to man the loss of even that which she hath.

PARLIAMENTARY USAGES: THEIR USE AND THEIR ABUSE.

Wendell Phillips once said that if you set an American baby six months old on its feet, it would immediately say, "Mr. President," and call the next cradle to order.

The familiarity of our people with parliamentary usages which Mr. Phillips thus emphasized in this characteristic witticism is one of the traits which has attracted the most attention from foreigners. Does a company of Americans, called together under any circumstances whatever, wish to pass a resolution or ascertain the prevailing sentiment upon any subject, instantly, almost mechanically, the company resolves itself into a deliberative assembly, adopts by tacit consent recognized parliamentary rules, and transacts the business of the hour. Be the matter small or great, one requiring only a loose organization with a self-constituted chairman who merely calls the meeting to order and puts the question to vote, or a more complete organization which elects a president and secretary, and appoints a committee to draw up resolutions, it is done with the unconscious ease of life-long, habitual practice. All this is very astonishing to foreigners. In us it excites no surprise, for we do not know how to do differently.

An officer in the late war was conducting a small force of veterans across a pontoon bridge which, as our readers may know, consists simply of rafts tied together. Immediately on stepping upon such a bridge the command is given to break step, as half a dozen persons keeping step together would set the bridge to swaying with constantly increasing force. The advance line had reached the center of the bridge when suddenly the enemy opened fire. Instantly the men closed ranks and caught step, and in a moment the bridge was swaying so violently that the officer was obliged to call a halt and give the command to break step.

Those veterans knew better than to keep step on a pontoon bridge, but so strong was the force of habit and discipline that under the fire of the enemy, it was next to impossible for them to do other than they did. So our people, trained from boyhood and girlhood in the debating societies of the public schools and colleges in the parliamentary usages of their Anglo-Saxon ancestors, when a question comes before them which requires discussion and settlement by vote, like the veterans on the bridge, close ranks and catch step, and present themselves not as a straggling, disorderly mob, but as an organized, deliberative assembly.

The convenience of these rules is recognized at a glance, but few, even of those to whom their use has become almost second nature, appreciate the importance of parliamentary usages or dream of the vital part they have played in the growth of the civil liberty which as a race we have developed. Yet it is a historical fact that these same usages have made Parliament, and hence Anglican liberty possible, and that the chief cause of the failure of other nations to achieve the freedom for which they have striven has been their failure to develop a system of parliamentary usages. Further, in so far as representative legislative bodies are a success to-day, they have adopted Anglo-Saxon parliamentary usages.

Parliamentary usages are to the deliberative assembly precisely what military tactics are to an army. Without these, their respective systems of discipline, the deliberative assembly and the army alike degenerate into mere mobs, with the characteristics of mobs; now carrying terror to every heart by their lawless violence, again exciting profound contempt by their weakness and inefficiency. On the streets of our cities a mob is a thing of horror; on the battlefield—the chaff of a summer threshing floor. No mob ever held sway in the legislative halls of any Anglo-Saxon nation, but in those of other nations they have proved themselves there as everywhere, in the moment of power, an object of direst dread, but in the hour of need, in the presence of danger, the weakest, most cowardly thing on earth.

The parliamentary usages of the English Parliament made all the difference between that majestic body, which conducted the nation through one of the greatest revolutions of history and, without shedding one drop of blood, won a signal triumph for the principles of freedom, and the French legislative assembly, which urged the nation on in the mad excesses of the French revolution, and for the fearful carnival of fire and blood had nothing to show but—ashes.

The delay caused by little details and preliminaries which resulted in the fatal inaction of the French assembly, was averted in the English Parliament by the methods of procedure which secure the rapid transaction of business. On the other hand the mad legislation carried by acclamation after inflammatory speeches which rushed the French nation into anarchy, was absolutely impossible in the English Parliament, where the checks, designed for this very purpose, insured free debate and careful consideration of every measure before it could become law. The facts fully sustain Jeremy Bentham's strong statement concerning parliamentary usages: "In this bye-corner, an observing eye may trace the original seed-plot of English liberty. It is in this hitherto neglected spot where the seeds of that invaluable production have germinated and grown up to their present maturity, scarce noticed by the husbandman and unsuspected by the destroyer."

But the very instruments and safeguards of liberty may become the tools of oppression, and parliamentary usages are no exception. The perversion of these rules is one of the inventions of modern times and one of the most rapidly growing evils. "Filibustering" has taken its place in modern legislative assemblies as an accredited department of parliamentary tactics. Under this false and pernicious system, the checks designed to give the minority opportunity to present their views to prevent hasty, ill-considered legislation are wrested from their legitimate purpose to the wholly illegitimate and mischievous one of blocking legislation and delaying action even after the subject under consideration has had full and free discussion.

Indeed, the influence of a member and his ability as a parliamentarian are frequently gauged by his ability to filibuster and thus outwit and defeat his opponents, even though those opponents are clearly in the majority. Such blocking of legislation in a more or less serious form plays a conspicuous part in the proceedings of legislative bodies in both this country and England. The most recent and striking instance of it in this country is the action of the Senate minority in "talking against time," with the avowed purpose of defeating the acknowledged will of the majority.

Whenever any organization of men thus abuses the prerogatives bestowed to protect it against the encroachments of some other co-related power it, by so much, works to destroy itself. The excesses of anarchy lead by a straight path back to despotism, and this unwarrantable abuse of power by the minority must result in the end in corresponding undue assumption of power by the majority. As in the early development of parliamentary free government neither friend nor foe suspected the significance of the system of tactics by which alone a deliberative assembly can be a thing of power, and parliamentary usages were allowed to develop unmolested, "scarce noticed by the husbandman and unsuspected by the destroyer," so every one seems blind to the true character of this modern growth. Under the guise of a development of parliamentary usages filibustering has been accepted as a legitimate method of combat in deliberative bodies, but it is a parasite upon the incomparable system of laws which have made all deliberative assemblies possible, and, like all parasites, its growth is at the cost of the lifeblood of that upon which it feeds.

Such resorts are, as we have said, utterly subversive of the purposes for which parliamentary usages exist, and are, therefore, dishonorable. It makes the case no better that honorable and even Christian men employ them. On the contrary, that is the gravest feature of the situation, for when moral laxness invades the very best element of society it is proof positive of a vitiated moral atmosphere, and society is in danger of moral asphyxiation. We believe that the peculiar sin of this age consists in a blunted moral sense, which fails to recognize that a moral obligation is binding upon a conscientious man whether or not it is binding in the eye of the law. "It is not so nominated in the bond" is the catch-word of the times.

To evade any obligation by a legal quibble or technicality is too generally considered a perfectly legitimate proceeding. This spirit manifests itself along all lines of life and in various ways. Once the intent of the law was honestly accepted; more and more it has become the main business of an ever-increasing host of lawyers to ferret out some insignificant defect which renders the law void. Once the wish of a testator was faithfully carried out; now, not even an expert lawyer who has studied the matter for years, can be sure of drawing up his own will so that it may not be successfully contested. Once the main object of a written contract was to preserve for the benefit of both parties the terms of a mutual agreement. Now it seems to be considered that the purpose of the instrument is to bind the parties to duties which each will break if he can, and consequently if either can discover a legal loop-hole through which he can crawl and evade his part of the agreement, it is generally conceded that he is honorably discharged therefrom even though the other party has faithfully performed his part of the contract.

We do not of course mean to say that nothing of all this was ever known before; but we do mean that this obtuseness to the moral force of an obligation which is not sustained by the strict letter of the law has assumed proportions unknown before and is the distinctive sin of this age.

I have learned that Lady Henry Somerset especially requests that Mrs. Katharine Lente Stevenson's white ribbon hymn, "We all belong," be sung either just before or just after all her public addresses, and that the effort be made to secure new members then and there. The "Chieftain" calls it "our membership hymn."

***

"There's never a rose in all the world
But makes some green spray sweeter;
There's never a wind in all the sky
But makes some bird's wing fleeter;
There's never a star but brings to heaven
Some silver radiance tender,
And never a rosy cloud but helps
To crown the sunset splendor;
No robin but may thrill some heart,
His dawn-like gladness voicing.
God gives us all some small sweet way
To set the world rejoicing."

***

On Duty has fallen heir to parts of several unprinted manuscripts, which she will bestow upon her readers from time to time. Here is a delightfully pictured scene, as it fell from the lips of Mrs. Andrew, at the recent World's Convention: "There are a few scenes that come before my mind particularly, and one is a South African, after a meeting that we held with a great company of Kaffirs, the native Kaffir men and women in a church. I shall never forget the singing of those people, how glorious it was and how it lifted our very hearts to heaven as they sang. We talked with them—that was my first experience of talking through an interpreter and I remember my nervousness, but the pastor who interpreted for us did it with such sympathy and quickness of comprehension that we were very much set at rest in a little while and talked freely. Toward the close of the meeting we asked that the women linger to be formed into a W. C. T. U., if they should be so disposed, and I can now see that little company of women, after the great audience had dispersed, gathered on the front seats all around us. They were dressed in calico gowns, they had old shabby shawls around them, their heads were bare except for the small turbans. Several of the women had their babies strapped at their backs in this blanket or shawl that was about their shoulders, but, oh, their serious faces! It didn't matter that this was an entirely new scene to them, their whole souls were in what was being done and they had a native dignity that would put to shame the affectations of polite society. Then after we had talked to them and had obtained their names, for they said they were desirous to join our great band and the Fort Elizabeth W. C. T. U. was willing to take them under its maternal wing, the pastor took their names—such strange sounding ones, and at the close he said one of these women wished to say something. Now this was an unheard of thing among these people, because even among the Christian people it was thought by the men that the women should have nothing to say at all and the pastor was evidently embarrassed but we said we were delighted to have her speak. So she rose with much natural dignity and with a sweet voice said to us: 'We women have been greatly troubled for we have seen that our race was dying off the face of the earth because of drink, and we have been saying to ourselves, what can we do, what are we women to do, and so we gathered ourselves into a little woman's temperance prayer-meeting and we have been crying to God and asking what we can do. Now we are sure He sent you and Dr. Bushnell to tell us what we can do.' Then a woman on the other side wanted to say a word and she said: 'I wish to ask that whenever Dr. Bushnell addresses our native people, when she has an opportunity to talk to the native men, that she will ask them not to sell our daughters for cattle, that she will ask them to remember that we are not our own as she has been teaching us to-night, that we are bought with a price, and that it is a shame that since Christ has bought us, that a price should be put upon our heads.' That woman spoke from the standard of a Kaffir woman; she did not know this great world, she did not know of such a company as this, of women who had every opportunity for education, she could not possibly have conceived of the advance that women were making in various parts of the world, but she did know the needs of her people and her heart rang true to the needs of the womanhood of her race. So we bade them good-bye, but our hearts have gone back and our prayers have ascended for that band of ignorant women who could scarcely any one of them read or write, but agreed to belong to this great world sisterhood."

ON DUTY.

World's W. C. T. U.

MOTTO: "For God and Home and Every Land."

OBJECT: To unify the methods of woman's temperance work the world over.

BADGE: A knot of white ribbon.

HOUR OF PRAYER: Noon.

METHODS: Agitate, educate, organize.

DEPARTMENTS: Preventive, educa tional, evangelistic, social and legal.

THE POLYGLOT PETITION has been circulated throughout the world and signed by representatives of over forty countries. It asks for the outlawing of the alcohol and opium trade and the system of legalized vice. The chief auxiliaries of the W. W. C. T. U. are the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Australia, South Africa, India, Japan and the Sandwich Islands.

TORONTO'S LOSS.

Knowing the interest that our white-ribbon sisters on your side of the line take in our welfare, I write to inform you of our great bereavement. Flags have been floating at half-mast over the Queen City. One of the noblest of Toronto's citizens has passed away. This afternoon he was laid in his last resting place; the funeral procession, one of the largest that Toronto ever witnessed, was headed by the city council. No man in Canada had more friends, nor was any one more worthy of such friendship than the deceased ex-mayor.

For two successive years he was our chief magistrate. During that time he was the means of instituting many important civic reforms. Among these was a large reduction of liquor licenses. He caused the sideboard to be removed from the mayor's office, and the motto to be suspended, "Except the Lord keep the city the watchman watcheth in vain." His chief delight was visiting the poor and needy and collecting them together for religious instruction and administering to their wants, temporal and spiritual. His charity knew no sectarian boundaries. He was frequently found in the pulpits of different denominations, and always drew large audiences. The call came suddenly; he was ready, and surrounded by mourning relatives, passed away to the skies.

We are now engaged in a vigorous contest. The plebiscite is to be taken January 1, and all who desire prohibition for the Province of Ontario have the privilege of voting at the municipal election, women as well as men who are entitled to vote at that time. This is the first time that the women of Canada have been allowed to enter their protest against the liquor traffic at the ballot-box. The privilege is altogether too limited, as only unmarried women with certain property qualifications have the franchise, but we are thankful for small favors, and trust that this is but the entering wedge to woman's full emancipation.

Lord and Lady Aberdeen are winning all hearts by the reforms they are inaugurating.

LETITIA YOUMANS.

MISS ACKERMANN IN ENGLAND.

Miss Jessie Ackermann who left England for Australia in November, received a hearty and enthusiastic welcome at a public reception in Memorial Hall, London, given in her honor by the president and members of the British Women's Temperance Association. She was supported on the platform by the president, Lady Henry Somerset, Mrs. Massingberd, of Gunby, Dr. Kate Bushnell and Mrs. Elizabeth Andrew, the Hon. and Rev. Canon Leigh, Walter McLaren, Esq., M. P., and others. Before Miss Ackermann addressed the meeting a large bouquet of chrysanthemums in the shape of a world encircled by streamers of white ribbon symbolical of the tour of the world Miss Ackermann has just completed, was presented to her by Lady Henry Somerset with a copy of Tennyson's poems; she also received a beautiful white bouquet from a young girl who represented the Somerset Club of Somers Town, which Miss Alys Pearsall Smith so ably superintends.

Miss Ackermann charmed her audience by the cheering hope and faith she expressed at the outset of her address, that what had surprised her most in the world was the amount of good in it. During her arduous and varied travels she had come to the conclusion that there was more good in humanity than most people think. As president of the Australasia W. C. T. U. she represented thousands of women across the water in that great continent all pledged to the white-ribbon cause. Frequent laughter greeted Miss Ackermann's words as she narrated her experiences in conservative colonies where a woman had never spoken before; now and then she would be told that in certain localities she was not wanted; to those places she said, amid the merriment of her audience, she always made a point of going. Her apt remark that her work was to help federate the moral forces of the colonies was heartily cheered. She described her work in the East where opium has crushed out the lives of thousands of victims in China.

Among those who regretted inability to be present were the Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, Mrs. Bramwell Booth, Madam Antoinette Stirling, Dr. Norman Kerr, and W. S. Caine, Esq., M. P., who said in his letter of regret, referring to Miss Ackermann: "Her work in India has been beyond all praise, and I have had letter after letter from the secretaries of the various branches of the Anglo-Indian Temperance Association, speaking in the warmest terms of her eloquence and devotion to the cause. It is a great disappointment to me that I am not able to come and say all this and much more to the meeting. Our cause in India and throughout the world is greatly stimulated by the visits of such ladies as those who represent the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union." The meeting terminated with a vote of thanks to Miss Ackermann proposed by Walter McLaren, Esq., M. P., and carried by acclamation.

MRS. WARD POOLE,
London, Eng. Supt. Press Work, B. W. T. A.

MISS JESSIE ACKERMANN sailed from Brindisi for her distant field of labor in Australia going directly to Sydney to hold the second convention of the W. C. T. U., after which she will work in South Africa, Sierra Leone, Madagascar and other oriental stations that she may choose.

WORLD'S WAVE CRESTS.

A GREAT children's temperance demonstration is to form part of the W. C. T. U. triennial conclave at Sydney, Australia, in March.

MRS. EDGAR B. HARRIS, Sherwood Road, Toowong, Brisbane, has been appointed UNION SIGNAL correspondent for Queensland W. C. T. U.

MISS MARY GORHAM, superintendent of evangelistic work in the British Women's Temperance Association, is holding missions in various parts of England, and is most successful and beloved wherever her ministry is known. She has a large corps of assistants. Miss Gorham is a member of the Church of England, and for years has been engaged in missions under its auspices.

AT the annual convention of the Christian Mission, Bilaspur, C. P., India, on November 2, 1893, a resolution of sympathy with the social purity, anti-opium and temperance work in India was passed, expressing "gratitude to the World's W. C. T. U. for having sent Mrs. Andrew and Dr. Bushnell to advance the cause of social purity in India and in praise to the God of Righteousness for the victory gained."

THE "Willing Y" of Halifax, N. S., is enjoying a series of intensely interesting "talks" based on the "Hillsboro Crusade" papers by "Mother" Thompson, lately published in THE UNION SIGNAL. The anniversary of "Crusade Day" will be intelligently celebrated by the members of this union as copious notes, taken during these talks, will probably develop into "papers" more interesting than the pages of fiction.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA'S second annual convention, a program of which has reached THE UNION SIGNAL office, comprised a well planned series of day meetings at Perth, from October 24–26, 1893, with a public meeting each evening. A union evangelistic service on Sunday evening was followed by the welcome meeting. The temperance meeting was held on Tuesday, a suffrage gathering on Wednesday, and the closing assembly considered the topic, "What has been gained by this convention?"

ONE of the white ribbon workers recently had the following experience while on an organizing trip in India. She writes: "I had a compartment to myself for some distance but on reaching the Ganges, a great crowd of pilgrims was waiting to take the train. One door of the compartment was opened and in poured the women all shouting and screaming to one another at the top of their shrill voices. At last I was obliged to tell the guard he must shut the door and not admit another. I then counted forty women and children in that compartment of eight by ten feet, and still the women put up their hands and begged me to let in some more." This lady, Mrs. Hauser, president of the W. C. T. U. of India, organized in Aligarh a Christian Temperance Union of forty-five members auxiliary to the W. C. T. U., composed of men and women. Pundita Ramabai has a similar society in Poona.

THE National W. C. T. U. gathering of Norway, recently held in Trondhjem, was a great success, so writes an eyewitness. "Everything went on nicely; the hall was crowded with men and women who followed the discussions with the greatest interest. It was the first annual meeting ever held by women, only, in Norway, and it has made total abstinence more popular, and also advanced the woman's cause." Previous to holding this convention the Countess Wedel-Jarlsberg, president, and Miss Esmark, secretary, traveled for five weeks to the towns on the Norwegian coast and held meetings almost every night. They found a kind response everywhere, from both men and women. Many men were looking forward with great expectancy to the work of women, and with this nucleus there is everything to hope for the future of organized and systematic efforts among the women of that brave, progressive land.

"JUST a word in regard to the bravery of the New Zealand president who dared to stand in a gap, and she may stand as an example of what I believe most any other of that brave band of New Zealand presidents would do under similar circumstances. This New Zealand president, Mrs. Schnackenburg, was a missionary for twenty years among the native people and her heart is closely knit to them. About three years ago it came to her knowledge that in a small island of the Polynesian group the prohibitory law was about to be broken because the queen had had it urged so strongly upon her that commerce would be greatly quickened and trade in many directions would be much helped if she would allow the liquor traffic to be brought into the island. So when she finally yielded, Mrs. Schnackenburg lost no time in forwarding a letter to her, claiming the glory that has rested on that island in having protected the people from drink, and also brought to her the knowledge of various native peoples that were dwindling off the face of the earth because of this terrible curse, and appealed to her to not permit the traffic to be brought into the island. She also addressed a letter to the British High Commissioner and pleaded with him to stand by the queen in resisting this terrible innovation. She had the great pleasure a few months afterwards in receiving a letter from the queen in which she thanked her for her sisterliness and for the W. C. T. U., in whose name Mrs. Schnackenburg had written, and said she had realized the danger her people were in and had prohibited the coming of the drink. She also received a letter from the high commissioner of the island signed with his seal and thanking Mrs. Schnackenburg also for her efforts in behalf of the people and stating to her that the traffic had been prohibited and was not allowed to be brought in, although it had been already loaded on vessels which the traders were just about to take out to that island. These things read like romances, but they are true." The foregoing is an extract from the address of Mrs. E. W. Andrew, delivered at the World's W. C. T. U. Convention in Chicago last fall.

Royal Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.

Royal Baking Powder Co.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

IT has been said that Miss Jessie Ackermann should not have agreed to raise the money to support one hundred or more poor little Hindu women in missionary schools on the occasion of her visit to that country. To that criticism it is but just to make this answer: When Miss Ackermann raised the money she was in America on furlough and had a perfect right to employ her time as she thought best; she could hardly be better employed, perhaps, than in helping the most helpless of human beings. It should also be remembered that she has never received a penny from the treasury of the white ribbon army, but has made her own way in every sense of the word since she was sent out in 1888. It is expected that Miss Ackermann will return to America in one year, after having visited South Africa, Madagascar and Sierra Leone. Her work in her own country will be of priceless value in spreading information and stirring up new recruits for the W. C. T. U. work in foreign nations.

A HINDOO gentleman has written his opinion of W. C. T. U. work in India to Miss Willard. After expressing his desire to be of service in the great cause, he makes the following wise suggestion:

"If you want to do good in India you should strengthen the educational part of your noble scheme. Just consider for a moment what it is to be able to appreciate Tennyson or Shakespeare, Wordsworth or Scott, Emerson or Carlyle. Your sisters in India—daughters of the same Heavenly Father—are shut out from all these intellectual pleasures. Their mental horizon is extremely limited—their ideals are extremely poor. All the wealth of imagination and reason which you possess is unknown to them, they have not even a conception of its existence. It was different in the old days—for we read of Maitreyi and Gaiyi and other learned ladies joining in philosophical debates and we can boast of women who have written good poetry and even good law books. Providence has brought the English here to join closer together the bonds between the East and the West and to enable us all to share one another's heritage. India has a great deal to teach but she has also a great deal to learn, and in order to learn she must have the means of mastering the great medium of ownership in these days—the English language. The government is doing something for our young men, but very little is being done for the women, and yet, unless the women are enlightened, there is no hope for India. . . . . I feel convinced it is in the power of noble English and American ladies to be privileged to do what no government has yet been able to do—to influence our homes—and to alter the whole domestic atmosphere of India, and therefore its whole political and natural atmosphere. You will be able to reach the very springs of life and while conserving all that is best in our women, you will be able to impart your own virtues—virtues of which at present they have hardly an idea. I do trust that you will do your best to give shape and consistency to this noble scheme and earn the everlasting blessings of millions of women by restoring to them the light which through disuse and through varying circumstances they have lost the light not merely of knowledge, but of wisdom and true holiness."

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

MOST PERFECT MADE.

A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

News from the Field.

MISSOURI'S MOVEMENTS.

"All idlers clog the world
There is no place before its wheels for sloth;
And they alone who work with might and will
To roll it Godward, they alone fulfill
The highest law of growth."

Only three times within the last ten years has it been my lot to sit in our National Conventions; and at the last one, as the faces and voices that stirred me at Minneapolis for the first time asserted their old power, I wondered if the average woman had any conception of the growth that is possible to the soul that faces God and says, "Here am I, Lord, send me."

Yet the thoughtful observer must have noted even in the briefest speeches of our leaders not only what the women have done for the work in the last decade, but what the work has done for the women.

Like Holmes' "Chambered Nautilus" that,

"Still as the spiral grew
But left the last year's dwelling for the new,
Stole with soft step the shining archway through,
Built up its idle door
Stretched in its last found home
And knew the old no more,"

so these brave spirits, building continually upward and outward have indeed made "Each new temple nobler than the last."

To me it is an inspiration to think that what is true of them is true, in large measure, of the rank and file behind them, and that thought gives to the "News from the Field" deeper meaning and fresher interest.

Away down in the southeast corner of Missouri lies the district of which the new National organizer for the Y's, Miss Carrie Lee Carter, is president. No one ever did anything in that region till she undertook it, and yet here is the record of its first convention at Dexter.

Work is reported in eight departments, and though, in some parts of the district there is a large French element difficult to reach with temperance truth, yet such was the earnestness and enthusiasm of the little convention that the five counties of the thirtieth district pledged one hundred dollars to state work and the same amount to the district for the ensuing year.

With more years and more unions to boast of, the fourth district, from its nook in the northwest, sends out a cheery account of its convention at Gallatin, bright with banners and flowers and helpful as only the presence of dear Mrs. Hoffman could make it.

Mrs. De Haven, a "chalk-talker" of our own, filled one of the evenings and was highly appreciated by young and old, while a gold medal contest satisfactorily rounded up the list of entertainments, the medal being awarded to Miss Gower.

Mrs. Maud Allen, the president, writes that "considering the inroads the World's Fair has made on the time and pocket-books of the members, the attendance was good," but they wisely decided to spread the convention out by publishing the minutes for distribution, and they can be procured from the secretary, Mrs. Lura H. Boleyon, Stanberry.

Warrensburg in the thirteenth district has just received a pretty thorough shaking up on the temperance question, through a series of gospel meetings held by Colonel C. J. Holt, and it is hoped much permanent good has been accomplished. Eight hundred and six have signed the pledge and thirty-six have joined the union there, many having at once paid dues.

If every union in the state could inaugurate that kind of a campaign Missouri would take the banner for increase of membership at the next National Convention. The trouble is, little groups of women sit down here and there under their respective juniper trees, and "request for themselves that they may die," and presently they do. Whereas, as John McNeill said in Willard Hall not long ago, "Faith will turn to courage if you will only let it," and that is precisely what happened to a small union of five women in Thayer, recently.

They had reached the juniper tree stage, and were about to disband when one of them resolved to call a meeting and remonstrate. Straightway they began to look on the bright side; became enthused; found out that the reason they were weak was because they were not nourishing themselves with state and national papers, and so knew but little of the work, and the methods that conduce to growth. Taking new courage (and THE DAILY UNION SIGNAL) they speedily doubled their membership, took up five departments, visitors were attracted to their meetings, and they send out this note of cheer to stimulate others to do likewise.

Humansville union is bestirring itself to secure the adoption of temperance text-books by the school board, and though not yet successful it is aiming through its column in the local paper to create such strong sentiment in its favor as will lead to final victory.

The Voice of Stanberry is the suggestive title of a prohibition paper published by the wide-awake union of that place, but it must be the female Voice or it would not deplore the existence of a saloon that gleefully pays a license of two thousand dollars for its awful monopoly of infamy. This protesting Voice goes, however, into every home in the city and adjacent country, and is backed up by a gospel temperance mass-meeting and a mothers' meeting every month.

The franchise superintendent has created sentiment for equal suffrage by forcible speeches at political picnics and other places. Frequent parlor meetings and medal contests are held which are successful financially as well as socially.

Effective work is done for scientific temperance through the normal school of the place, and yet, in such an atmosphere the voters are willing for two thousand dollars to sell one man the right to ruin their boys, body and soul! Is it not almost incredible? and yet it shows plainly that as temperance women, the gift we ought to covet most earnestly is the ballot.

I cannot forbear quoting the last sentence of my Stanberry correspondent, because I believe it holds the key to their efficient work.

"With the increase of membership," she says, "we find material for superintendents, and have just secured one for our L. T. L." Moral: Get new members.

The Coleman union, of Kansas City, has recently made a praiseworthy effort in that direction by holding an evening session, to which husbands and friends were invited. They prepared an attractive program, including music, a review of the year's work, recitations, etc., closing with remarks by the district president and an appeal for members, followed by cake and coffee. It proved a very pleasant affair.

Under the auspices of the Central W. C. T. U., of Kansas City, Prof. A. C. Moss and S. C. Bennett have presented for six consecutive nights, in one of the largest halls in the city, a charming temperance opera, entitled, "The Old Oaken Bucket."

It was not only a bold move, but one that required courage and conviction to attempt to focus the attention of the amusement-going public upon a great reform, but as the story was wrought out before the deeply interested audiences, no one could doubt that it had been successfully done.

Beautiful music, strong dramatic situations, humor, pathos—all these were effectively combined to reveal the infamous character of the liquor traffic in contrast with the refinements of a home, whose foundation stones were Christian charity and total abstinence. Outspoken for prohibition, chaste and consistent from beginning to end, I believe that only good can result from the presentation of this delightful opera anywhere, and recommend it, therefore, to our unions as a means of educating public sentiment and filling their treasuries. It is a new departure, but it is in the right direction.

ANTOINETTE A. HAWLEY,
State Reporter, Kansas City.

MICHIGAN ETCHINGS.

The honest worker in this organization must be often reminded of the wonderful picture in the art gallery at Chicago, "Between Doubt and Faith" and yet we come up to the New Year in Michigan with a hallelujah that we have kept in line and helped in all branches of our work.

First District has held its annual meeting at Northville. Sixteen unions were represented by thirty-six voting delegates. Reports from twenty-two superintendents were heard. Among the telling things Mrs. La Tour, of the press, gave a drink exhibit. A strip of paper fifty-two feet long, five columns wide—one year's clippings for crime and casualty caused by strong drink. The evenings were well filled by addresses from our state president and Mrs. Mc Clurkin. Thirty children of the L. T. L. gave a very pleasing half hour entertainment of song, recitation and dumb bell exercise. Mrs. Voorheis was reëlected president and presented with an elegant writing desk.

Third District held its convention at Union City. Wednesday evening Mrs. Lathrap gave a powerful address. There were several fine papers, an evening address by Mrs. Hoffman and a gold medal contest in which Miss Viola Smith, of Eaton Rapids, was the successful contestant.

At Diamondale in this district was held a very good county convention. Six papers were presented, four on franchise, one on woman's work, and one on social purity. A gold medal contest was also held. Albion W. C. T. U. secured thirty-four new members by house-to-house visiting. They then gave a harvest home reunion in honor of new members, at which Mrs. Prof. Dickie gave a bird's-eye view of the World's W. C. T. U. Convention.

Fifth District.—Kent county convention was held at Byron Center, and reports were full and interesting. Papers were heard upon Y work, "The Knot of White Ribbon," "Woman's Work," "What can Local Unions Do?" The treasurer's report showed good financial standing. The annual picnic is to be held at North Park, Grand Rapids, August, 1894.

In the same district, Allegan county, a convention was held at Plainwell, and reports were received from ten unions. The highest number of members reported was sixty-five, lowest, twelve, yet in this last, the amount of work done is marvelous, with "no saloons in the midst," as an incentive. Subjects of papers: "The Age of Deeds Rather than Creeds or Words"; "The Relation of Women in the Rural Districts to the Temperance Question." A very interesting discussion followed this last paper in which Mrs. Waldo, Mrs. Harwood and Mrs. Benjamin took part.

In the address of welcome, Mrs. Harwood, of Plainwell, gave this as her closing thought: "Comrades, if we will hold fast this threefold bond of earnest thought, of kind but open speech, of true-hearted devotion to the right, the outcome of our work will be some worthy contribution to the redemption movements of the time." Mrs. Benjamin gave one of her earnest, logical addresses, also a daily parliamentary drill. Conversation on mothers' meetings, and a profitable discussion of the paper on scientific temperance instruction, were additional features of this good convention.

Sixth District.—Lansing is indeed wide awake though working in the midst of the "powers that be" that did and then didn't give us municipal suffrage. They have recently had a grand lecture from Mrs. Clara Holbrook, "The Home Side of Progress." Their Sunday afternoon gospel temperance meetings are still held, and the superintendent of literature gives out at the door carefully selected reading matter. The two unions in Flint have had a report of the World's and National Conventions from Mrs. Johnson who was a delegate to both.

Flint North Side made it a "tea meeting"; They also held a Lucy Stone meeting which was instructive, and an incentive to "keep the faith."

The Genesee county convention was held at Clio, and the report given by the secretary, Mrs. Jennings, is so good I wish I could give you all of it. There are nine unions doing aggressive work. The largest number of members in any is forty-two; smallest, fifteen. This being the home of our state treasurer, Mrs. May, she was helpful all through. The new county president, Mrs. Aldrich, emphasized her thought of more system in all our work. They had for the evening address the district president, Mrs. Shephard, whose address was both interesting and instructive. The question-box was conducted by Mrs. Patton and general discussion followed upon county fairs, political economy and franchise.

Seventh District.—The annual meeting at Lapeer was held at the home of its president. Three new unions reported and the treasurer's books show an increase in dues and membership. Romeo union has raised $100 for a memorial tablet in Willard Hall. The kindergarten teacher, Mrs. Du Bois, came with twenty of her pupils and gave illustrations of kindergarten teaching. A pleasing event was the introduction of three honorary members, aged five and one years, on whom with fitting words our state secretary, Mrs. Parish, tied the white ribbon. The first evening was filled with a fine illustrated lecture by Rev. Dr. Barlow, the second by Mrs. Parish who spoke on municipal suffrage, and Miss Minnie Warren gave the recitation which won her the diamond medal at Cincinnati. A very telling paper, subject, industrial training as a moral factor, by the corresponding secretary, Mrs. King, and a fine exhibition of club swinging by Mrs. Hathaway, of Lapeer, closed the services of the evening.

Eighth District convention was held at Chesaning, also the home of the president, Mrs. Adams, thirty delegates being in attendance. Twelve of the departments are taken up. Among the successful novelties reported was a temperance Fourth of July celebration in this same place. Mrs. Parish gave a very fine address on second evening, subject "The Limit of National Life."

Miss Shannafelt read a forcible paper, Y hour, upon "Entertainment, a Help." God has so planned it that we should be helps, not hindrances to each other. The student, the clerk, the day laborer, all need something that will recreate them. The mind is to be engaged, the heart warmed, the social nature satisfied and the whole man from sense to soul revived, cheered, strengthened. It is only that which will help ourselves and others that will truly satisfy.

In the ninth district for October alone, one union, Luther, distributed eight hunhealthy flesh — nature never burdens the body with too much sound flesh. Loss of flesh usually indicates poor assimilation, which causes the loss of the best that's in food, the fat-forming element.

WE CANNOT SPARE

Scott's Emulsion

of pure cod liver oil with hypophosphites contains the very essence of all foods. In no other form can so much nutrition be taken and assimilated. Its range of usefulness has no limitation where weakness exists.

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, Chemists, New York. Sold by all druggists.

Happy As a Clam

is the person who for years has been suffering from indigestion, dyspepsia and general debility, when he discovers the curative properties of

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON.

In all gastric troubles it effects a permanent cure. It is a natural food, easily digested. Stop taking drugs and try it.

Never buy Clam Bouillon for the sick, except in Glass Bottles.

Grocers and Druggists.

Six ½ pint bottles expressed for $1.50. Send stamps for book, "Household Hints."

E. S. Burnham Co., 120 Ganesvoort St., N. Y.

Knox's Sparkling Calves' Foot Gelatine

THE PUREST MADE

Received the only Medal and Diploma at the World's Fair, Chicago, on Package Gelatine for table use, for STRENGTH, PURITY and GOOD FLAVOR.

The only Gelatine positively free from odor or taste. Our new package has Rose Gelatine in top of each package to make fancy desserts. Your grocer has it if he keeps the best.

CHARLES B. KNOX, Johnstown, N. Y.

Send a 2-cent stamp for little book. "DAINTY DESSERTS FOR DAINTY PEOPLE."

Price | "Worth a Guinea a Box." | 25c.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Dislodge Bile,
Stir up the Liver,
Cure Sick-Headache,
Female Ailments,
Remove Disease and Promote Good Health.

Covered with a Tasteless & Soluble Coating.

Famous the world over.

Ask for Beecham's and take no others. Of all druggists. Price 25 cents a box. New York Depot, 365 Canal St.

DON'T BE CHEATED!
ALL GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS
Have Clamp Buckle at hip for Hose Supporters

WE HAVE NO AGENTS,

But save you money on everything you eat, wear or use. Send 8 cts. for full catalogue.
H. R. EAGLE &Co., 68 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

SEND TO GOOD & REESE, SPRINGFIELD, OHIO for their beautiful catalogue of roses and shrubs

dred pages of literature. Mrs. Hopkins, on whose shoulders Mrs. Morehouse's mantle has fallen, brings to the work much ability and great loyalty.

Tenth District has also held annual meeting at West Bay City with thirty-two voting delegates present. Two papers were read. An instructive talk upon franchise and the present outlook in Michigan was given by Mrs. Knaggs. The report in department work showed earnest effort on the part of those who have this in charge.

The Y hour, in charge of Miss Bradley, who presided with grace and dignity, proved that the daughters are following on in the path of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Jennie Mc Clurkin gave a fine address the last evening, "Links in the Temperance Chain," which are moderation, total abstinence, prohibition, work of the W. C. T. U., prohibition by woman's ballot. Two new unions added this month.

Eleventh district.—The tenth annual meeting was held at Traverse City. This president is an artist, so among the decorations was the handsome banner she gave her district last year. Wednesday's sessions were taken up with encouraging reports from all parts of the district. Fifty-four delegates were in attendance representing twenty-six unions with a membership of three hundred and forty-nine. Mrs. R. A. Campbell, the former president, was present, and we all said "glad" when we heard she was back for good among us, a worker valiant and true. The speaker of the evening was Rev. F. L. Thompson, Petoskey, who spoke on the subject, "Who Killed Them?" Mrs. E. F. Empey, superintendent of franchise, gave a very lucid explanation of the Australian ballot system. Mrs. Howard was reëlected and presented with an elegant silver water set, from the loyal women of her district. Our state superintendent of L. T. L., Mrs. Greene, should be christened "alert." She reports a Legion in Stambaugh, in twelfth district, which has just had graduating exercises, when twenty diplomas were awarded, many having seals upon them. A very fine program was given. In the state within the month, seven new L. T. L's were formed. In our state paper, Michigan Union, she has the plan of Miss Gordon for L. T. L. room in hospital all outlined and Michigan's duty mapped out. So let us come up to our New Year with Mrs. Harris' refrain ringing in our ears, and believed in our hearts:

"It's coming! It's coming,
We'll take the world for Christ's own kingdom
Some glad day."

MRS. C. H. JOHNSON,
State Reporter, Flint.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MR. JOHN G. WOOLLEY'S Chicago address is 5748 Kimbark avenue, where all communications may be addressed to him.

MRS. JOSEPHINE R. NICHOLS, president of the Indianapolis Council of Women, will address the newly formed local council at Portland, Me., at its annual meeting this month.

ON Thanksgiving day, the president of Muskogee, I. T., W. C. T. U. laid to rest the earthly remains of her beloved daughter who was taken from her just in the bloom of young womanhood. Mrs. Harsha, who has been so aggressive and fearless a worker in the untried territorial field, has the warm sympathy of sister workers everywhere in her bereavement.

THROUGH the personal efforts of Mrs. H. E. Williams, a white-ribboner of Boulder, Colorado, the law of that state concerning the age of consent has become definite and operative, the age being sixteen. A man was recently sent to the penitentiary from her own town for violation of it, his victim being only fourteen years old. Heretofore such rascals have found the statutes simply a blind to the unprotected, and have escaped.

MRS. FRANCES H. BENTLEY, for the past seven years president of Fulton county, N. Y., W C. T. U., passed away at her home in Gloversville, November 11. Hers was the true spirit of the temperance worker. Her energy and faith were boundless and she will be greatly missed in the Christian temperance circles where she shed a radiant light. Mrs. Mary J. Weaver, state evangelist, officiated at the funeral, and the regular memorial service of the W. C. T. U. was followed.

OWING to the stringency of the times the appropriation committee of the National W. C. T. U. found it impossible to continue the work at Ellis Island. This is greatly to the regret of the superintendent and all who know the value of the work done there by our missionary, Miss Lindahl. Mrs. Grubb is making a great effort to continue the work by private contributions until the National can again assume it. Many will be glad to aid in this. Mrs. Grubb has secured sufficient to continue the salary of the missionary for two months.

MRS. SARAH A. MCCLEES, National superintendent of work among soldiers and sailors, will make her headquarters this winter at the home of her son, E. D. McClees, 225 S. Grand Ave., Los Angeles, Cal., at which place she may be addressed in the interests of her department work.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

CRUSADE THOUGHTS.

The Crusade anniversary has passed. Reports of large and small meetings held, some on Saturday, mostly on Sunday, are already coming in. Original Crusaders were tender of heart and moist of eye as memories of the holy season were aroused. Some years ago a friend teaching among the Freedmen told me of an old colored woman whom she noticed sometimes laughing and sometimes weeping as she held her Bible to her heart. Asking her reason for this, she replied, pointing to the name of Christ which some friend had underscored for her, "That's my Jesus, He makes me happy and I laugh, then I look again and think I made Him die, and I cry." Remembering the goodness of the Lord in calling His handmaidens into His service, with all it meant then, and has since meant to them, brought joy; but the thought that it has not been possible for Him to overcome the liquor traffic through their twenty years of labor, brought questioning and sorrow. Yet not these alone! There are precious words telling of a renewal of spiritual strength, of a re-consecration to His service, a harmony of will with His, of love quickened, which betokens better days to come, and thus we may continue co-laborers with God. The Captain of our host was never defeated and our victory in Him is assured.

There came to me this morning from Miss Willard the following, among other words of Christina Rossetti:

"Lord, make us all love all; that when we meet
Even myriads of earth's myriads at Thy Bar,
We may be glad as all true lovers are,
Who, having gathered, count reunion sweet."

So let us love on, work on, and wait on before our Lord, that He may lay His hand upon us in His hour of need, and at length gather us, his daughters, to the home where our Elder Brother waiteth our coming. And the number constantly increases.

Our Jennie Smith has been for several weeks at Chicago Junction, O., where a revival has been steadily in progress. It is hoped that two hundred have entered a new life. Leading men in the community, and some whole families have confessed Christ. Saloonkeepers said: "If Miss Smith does not go soon, we shall be all broken up," and the citizens replied, "If she goes, we shall stay, and will show them we are on duty." The churches are aroused and ministers are heartily engaged in the work. A railroad temperance society has been organized and a reading room is to be established. The B. & O. R. R. Co. has issued orders, if when a train is to be manned, an employé is found to be in a saloon, he is not to be called, but another shall fill his place. Miss Smith is now at South Chicago where much interest is manifested.

We feel it necessary to state that the minutes of the World's and of the National W. C. T. U. Conventions will not be found in one volume. Either is as large as can be bound in paper cover and safely mailed. The minutes of either Convention will be fifteen cents, which merely covers postage and handling. Each will contain Miss Willard's address, which sells singly at ten cents. Thus it will be seen that by the addition of five cents the purchaser will not only have the address, but the entire proceedings of either Convention desired. As we have read the proof of these we have wondered if our women realize how many meetings of the local union might be made instructive and interesting by their use. Suppose each union should send for a copy; put it into the hands of a member with request that she read the proceedings of the Convention and give a synopsis at the next meeting. In the meantime let each member invite all whom she may meet to attend the meeting and learn of the Convention doings. The next week let another woman take Miss Willard's address, study her recommendations, follow her thoughts and see to what they will lead. After that take up one, two or three of the reports of superintendents, organizers and evangelists and the various features of the corresponding secretary's report, which comes direct from the secretaries of states and territories. I seem to hear the comments: "I did not know they did so much work in Texas and Washington, and on and on. Isn't it wonderful? I always thought the reports dry, but I'm delighted. We'd better be up and doing if our more favored state shall keep pace." I will assure any union that will do this thoroughly that their meetings will soon be well attended, their membership increased and the work of the union will be effective, because it will be intelligent and will command the respect of the people. Mrs. Woody, president North Carolina W. C. T. U., with Mrs. Tomlinson, corresponding secretary, are on the alert. The two will share the latter's work, and Mrs. Tomlinson will spend her time in the field organizing and strengthening stakes. What other states will do likewise?

MARY A. WOODBRIDGE.

Treasurer's Corner.

CRUSADE DIMES.

Still they come, and yet there is room for dimes and dollars. We are hoping the collections from the Crusade meetings will swell the aggregate until the first of February will find us ready to pay all bills.

A friend from Auburndale writes, "I think the idea was out of Happy Thought Hall."

From far-away Washington comes this precious bit, "Two devoted white ribbon sisters live near me who are deprived of sight, so Monday afternoons I read THE UNION SIGNAL to them from cover to cover. Daughters of the ladies were with us when I read Miss Willard's call for dimes. Our five dimes were quickly gathered which I enclose. Our hearts, our sympathies, our prayers and our labors are for our blessed W. C. T. U." What a lesson in this incident for us all.

From Rochester, N. Y., comes, "As Miss Willard's dear letter was perused by me, it not only drew tears from my eyes, but also drew from its hiding place a gold dollar given me many years since by my only brother as a keepsake. I could never make a better use of it, so enclose it." A cause that brings out such treasures is surely entrenched in the affections of its followers.

Two dimes come from Pueblo with "Godspeed 'our sober second thought.' He is with it, who inspired the 'first thought,' may the 200,000 say amen."

One from Illinois says, "Accept my mite. If a loving, sympathetic heart could pay the debt how soon it would be wiped out." Many ready hands will do it yet.

One good servant of the Master writes: "My ten cents has been out at interest, I enclose it so you can get it by Crusade Day." And it had gathered unto itself four other dimes. We trust other dimes are out at interest and will bring as good a return as did the one of this Minnesota sister.

From Maryland comes a contribution from four generations, from a baby ten months old to "great-grandma eighty-eight and an active worker in the ranks."

So many say, "I wish it were an hundred instead of one dime."

Another writes with her dime: "We all have cause for unbounded thankfulness that Miss Willard is in a fair way to recovery. God bless her."

A Syracuse sister says, "In response to the call of our 'Right Grand Worthy, whom not having seen we love,' and remembering the Scripture that says, 'Whosoever will compel thee to go one mile with him go twain,' I gladly send the twain."

Rev. H. F. Shupe, editor of Young People's Watchword, sends his dime and says, "God bless the W. C. T. U."

From Chenoa, Ill., note this, "Enclosed find one dollar for Crusade Day. One dime for myself and nine for women who ought to pay but do not."

Our Esther Housh sends this gem with her two dimes:

"A silver dime, wrapped in a golden prayer and sent out on the white wings of love, can help do the will of God upon earth."

Two tiny silver bits came with a dime, and the mother writes: "The two small pieces belonged to my dear daughter when she died eleven years ago. I have kept them as treasures, but I want to give them as a thankoffering as I know it would be her wish." Who dares to say our women do not love our work?

We are expecting great things from the Crusade meetings, not only in increased membership, but in goodly collections for local and National work.

May I urge all that in sending money they will give the state as well as the town, for every contribution will be credited to the state from which it comes, if we can find out where it belongs. Be patient a little until we can catch up with our receipts, but send on the money.

HELEN M. BARKER.

Sample vial mailed free to any address.
RUBIFOAM
For the TEETH.
Deliciously Flavored.
Cleanses and Beautifies.
Price, 25 cents.
E. W. HOYT & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Send One Dollar for the
LAWTON LAMP STOVE
Will heat a room at a cost of two cents a day.
Will heat a room in ten minutes.
Will fit any Lamp Chimney
One agent wanted in every town and city. Address
LAWTON LAMP STOVE CO.
Chelsea, Mass.

ACENTS COIN
Money selling Beveridge's Automatic Cooker. Latest and best cooking utensil ever invented. Sells at sight. One Agent sold over 1700 in one town. One sample Cooker free to good agents. Advertising matter furnished. For full particulars address W. E. BEVERIDGE, BALTIMORE, Md.

Alaska Stove Lifter

Always Cold. Will not get hot even if left in the lid.
Heavily Nickel Plated. Sold by all Stove, Hardware, and House Furnishers, or sent by mail, postpaid, for 30 cents.
—Also the—
ALASKA POKER.
TROY NICKEL WORKS, Troy, N.Y.

THE WONDERFUL MECHANICAL SPELLER.
PIANO MOVEMENT
BEAUTIFULLY FINISHED.

The Child's Best Teacher. Have you seen it? Older folks will find it very amusing. Would you like one? For $1.00 we will send it to your address, charges paid.
KINDERGARTEN MFG. CO.
925 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

485,629 PAIRS SOLD THROUGHOUT THE U. S.
PARKER PAYS THE POSTAGE on his Arctic Sock for men, women, and children. Recommended by physicians and nurses for house, chamber and sick-room. Only sock for rubber boots; it absorbs perspiration. Ask shoe dealer, or send 25c. with size.
J. H. PARKER, 103 Bedford Street, Boston, Dept. 39.

STUDY LAW AT HOME.
Take a Course in the SPRAGUE Correspondence School of Law. (Incorporated.) Send 10c. stamps for particulars to
J. COTNER, JR., SEC'Y, DETROIT, MICH. No. 22 TELEPHONE BDG.

GLOBE SAVINGS BANK
Corner Dearborn and Jackson Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.
UNDER STATE CONTROL.
INDIVIDUAL AND SAVINGS ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.
SAFETY ▲ DEPOSIT ▲ VAULTS.

DO YOU DESIRE YOUR CHILD TO READ? If so, send 36 cents for a
NEW MODEL FIRST READER.
A beautiful book, with colored illustrations. It delights and instructs. Address
GEO. SHERWOOD & CO., 303 Wabash Ave., - CHICAGO

AGENTS CAN MAKE FROM $25.00 TO $100.00 a week by canvassing for the best specialties ever offered. No competition. Address, N. Y. & LONDON ELECTRIC ASSN., Kansas City Mo.

NEW FACTS ABOUT CANCER.
Treatise free. No patent medicine.
DR. McMICHAEL, 6047 Madison Ave., CHICAGO.

AGENTS clear $100 monthly. 100 New Ladies' Specialties for Old and Young. 64 page Illust'd Catalogue FREE. G. L. Erwin & Co., Chicago, Ill. LADY

Organizers' Corner.

STATUS OF ORGANIZERS.

The mistaken idea prevails in many portions of the country that a National organizer is fitted only to organize new unions, whereas she must be a public speaker as well, especially prepared to enthuse and instruct the masses in regard to the distinctive features of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. She must be a woman of tact, consecration and knowledge of our many departments, willing to enter difficult fields, enlist new workers, strengthen and enlarge unions already formed as well as organize new ones, and instruct in regard to our special methods. Our National organizers are carefully selected by our National executive committee, and elected by the Convention.

By the coöperation and concerted action of the state and county officers, the stronger unions may help the weaker, and greatly benefit their own work by employing the National organizers while going to and from their distant fields of labor, thereby reducing their traveling expenses, which will enable them to give lower rates at each point.

The following is the list of National organizers for the present year, and whether W's or Y's they are all accredited public speakers and fully prepared to organize W's, Y's, L. T. L's, or speak to the general public and add to the membership of unions, having been long in the work.

For terms and dates address as below:

Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.

Mrs. L. H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.

Miss Frances E. Griffin, Montgomery, Ala.

Mrs. Mary Bynon Reese, Chautauqua, Wash.

Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, 1907 Bush street, San Francisco, Cal.

Mrs. E. A. Blair, 936 Cottage Place, Los Angeles, Cal.

Mrs. Maude L. Green, Manitou Springs, Col.

Mrs. E. Norinne Law, Baraga, Mich.

Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.

Mrs. Delle H. Cox, Newberg, Ore.

Miss Ida Clothier, Manitou Springs, Col.

Mrs. Henrietta Skelton, 132 McAlister street, San Francisco, Cal.

Miss S. C. Harris, Franklin, Va.

Mrs. F. E. W. Harper, Bainbridge street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.

Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.

Miss Frances Ensign, Madison, O.

Mrs. E. A. Kenyon, Townshend, Vt.

This "Corner" may be obliged to try several positions before it finds just the niche it can best fill, but it is the desire of the editors of THE UNION SIGNAL, and of the chairman of the board of organizers, that the list of names be kept standing in the paper, and that each organizer feel free to insert an itineracy of her engagements.

I have just spent ten days at work in New Madrid and Pemiscot counties, Mo., lecturing and organizing. These are the southern river counties of the state, and with the exception of my visits have been entirely unmolested by "temperance tramps" for twenty-five years. Am planning a tour of Arkansas and Louisiana to begin with the new year.

CARRIE LEE CARTER.

Official Communications.

CO-OPERATION IN THE PURITY DEPARTMENT.

When the last report blanks of the purity department were sent out they included a request that the state superintendents would make suggestions to the National superintendent in regard to ways and means of increasing the efficiency of the department. One suggestion made in response to this request was that there should be a more thorough coöperation between the state officers and the National. This is most certainly what the head of the department most desires. The query now arises, how can it be brought about? When I took the department a year ago I wrote an open letter to the state superintendents which was published in THE UNION SIGNAL. In this letter I asked the superintendents to write me, giving their addresses and adding questions or suggestions. I received not more than six replies. How, then, was I to obtain a list of the names and addresses of my aids in purity work? That I did not succeed in getting an absolutely correct list is proven by the fact that some report blanks sent out were returned to me from the dead-letter office, the persons to whom they were addressed having made a removal, and given the department no notification. Therefore some states were unreported, and it may be the state superintendent thinks the National to blame.

Since the last National Convention two state presidents have notified me of the name and address of the purity superintendent for the coming year, a courtesy I most thoroughly appreciate, and wish other states would do the same.

I hope soon to send out a plan of work for the coming year, but to whom shall I send it? I know of no way but to send to those with whom I had communication last year, and where I have no address of a state superintendent, to send to the state president, asking her to forward to the right person.

Lord Dundreary said the line, "Birds of a feather flock together," was nonsense, for any sensible bird would know that he couldn't flock by himself, and in like manner we may say that the National superintendent can't coöperate by herself. Some one must help her. Who will it be? I stretch out my hands to you, whoever you may be, that have this department work on your heart, and ask your coöperation. If a state superintendent, send me your address and any word of counsel, cheer, or inquiry that is in your heart.

If a local superintendent, or an unofficial worker, or one who in any degree is interested in this branch of our work, let me hear from you. You can hold up my hands, you can give me aid, perhaps I may be able to aid you, but at any rate we shall know whether the bonds that unite us are loosely fluttering, and therefore incapable of conducting the electric thrill of sympathy, or whether they are tightly drawn so that the good word spoken by one can flash along the line bringing cheer to every heart, and the wise deed done by one can stimulate us each and all to a renewed effort. Let us coöperate.

MARY WOOD ALLEN, M. D.,
Toledo, O. Nat. Supt.

Our Library Table.

NEW BOOKS.

POEMS OF THE INNER LIFE, by Mary J. Birdsall, author of "Easter Thoughts." The chaste cover is hand painted by Miss Minnie L. Childs—a cluster of violets.

For sale at A. C. McClurg & Co's and at Brentano's, Chicago.

Among the choicest English classics none are more highly prized than Sir Walter Scott's novels. Their descriptions of "Merrie England" are fairly contagious and the mixture of fact and fiction is after such a judicious proportion that even the most critical are satisfied. A new volume of IVANHOE, an acknowledged favorite, has reached our TABLE. It is the standard library edition of T. Y. Crowell, whose publication house is 46 E. 14th St., New York City.

THE NORSK GOPHER, by Charles N. Sinnet, is an unusually entertaining and suggestive story embodying the contrasting nationalities in its characters of Scotch and Norwegian. Nils, the "Norsk Gopher," as his friends humorously call him, is the helper of a "back East" brother and sister, who are trying life on the Dakota prairies, and Agnes is a little Scotch lassie who loves the Guid Shepherd as well as Nils loves the good Christus. Bound by this tie they are the best of friends, and the girl's bright, winsome ways are a beautiful foil for the quiet, loyal-hearted Nils, whose Christian faith has made an enemy of some evil-hearted young men in the neighborhood. Mr. Sinnet has the true story-weaver's art, and his plot is well carried to a fitting climax, making the story thoroughly wholesome and enjoyable.

Hunt & Eaton, New York; Cranston & Curts, Cincinnati.

MARGARET DAVIS, TUTOR, by Anna C. Ray, author of "Half a Dozen Boys," "Half a Dozen Girls," etc. T. Y. Crowell & Co., New York and Boston.

In this story Miss Ray takes a wider outlook than she has hitherto done. Her forte lies in the depicting of healthy boys and girls, and she has certainly allowed herself ample scope; but the story is bound together by a wholesome thread of romance which greatly deepens its interest. A young lady who is weary of the quiet life at home accepts the position of tutor to two boys in a Connecticut river town. She quietly comes into sympathy with them, and while she is in the best sense their comrade, riding horseback, walking and entering into all their sports, she manages to lead them into sensible methods of study. During her residence at their beautiful home she unconsciously wins the affection of their uncle, but her own heart is given to a young engineer whom by an unlucky accident she had offended. In the pursuit of his calling he comes to the same place and ultimately their engagement is renewed. Sprightly conversations, effective incidents and adventures give much spice to the story which is by all odds the best work that Miss Ray has as yet produced.

POLLY OLIVER'S PROBLEM, from the pen of Kate Douglas Wiggin follows well after A CATHEDRAL COURTSHIP and PENELOPE'S ENGLISH EXPERIENCES, by the same gifted author. It is a story for girls, brimful of girlish caprice, yet never swerving from its high standard of truth, purity and nobility of purpose. Would that the country were flooded with such books, and that our girls would read them!

Houghton, Mifflin & Company, Boston and New York.

BRAVE LADS AND BONNIE LASSIES. Stories of Young Folks Who Have Helped to Make History. The title is a taking one, and betokens a real treasure for the story-loving lads and lassies who love to read about other "braves" who have made history. The stories are all about "olden times," and Young America only figures once in its pages, but it is hoped that the author, Frederick Myron Colby, will give the American boys and girls who have been valiant the benefit of his bright pen. The heroes and heroines in the book in question date back as far as the fourth generation from Rameses, and it is very amusing to read of children who actually ate hippopotamus pie and gazelle soup. This was more than two thousand six hundred years ago. There are thirty-one well-written short stories, a boon for every boy and girl who "wants something to read."

Cranston & Curts, Cincinnati; Hunt & Eaton, New York City.

THE LORD'S PRAYER, by F. W. Farrar, D. D., F. R. S., Archdeacon of Westminster. This prayer, so simple that a child makes it his own and a penitent sinner comes back to God breathing its utterances, was the basis of eighteen sermons preached by Archdeacon Farrar in Westminster Abbey. The sermons are bound together in a book that ought to find a place of use and honor in every home. There is need of a more regular habit of prayer. "Ah, my friends," says the author, "Satan trembles when he sees not only 'the weakest saint,' but even the vilest sinner, 'on his knees.' He knows that the sinner is escaping him, if it can be said of him 'Behold, he prayeth.' Prayer is God's own antidote for sin. It is God's means of our gaining that gift of the Holy Spirit which can sanctify us from sin. It is God's means of applying to our souls individually that forgiveness of sins which Christ lived and died to gain for all our race."

Thomas Whittaker, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York City.

GUERT TEN EYCK, a Hero Story, by W. O. Stoddard, author of "Chuck Purdy," "Gid Granger," and "The Battle of New York."

A story of the stirring times that marked the beginnings of the republic. It is well named "a hero story," for Guert is a live Yankee boy hero, his self-sacrifice mingled with the strong common sense that made the foundations of the new government both deep and broad. It is a book for every boy and girl in the country to read, entirely free from morbid sensationalism, and as wholesome and bracing as a north wind. The Indian, Up-na-tan, has the real aboriginal flavor, and the negro, Co-co, with his marked race-characteristics, serves as a fine foil to the Indian. The book is full of stirring incident; there is not a dull page from cover to cover. The times of which Mr. Stoddard writes were not dull times for the Yankee boys, and the disclosure of the cave with its treasures is, with all its realism, as fascinating as a bit from the "Arabian Nights."

"WHEN THE KING COMES TO HIS OWN!" by E. S. Elliott. This author's booklets need no word of description to those who know his beautiful way of writing beautiful things. Familiarly as he would write to a friend, easily as he would converse in a quiet home circle, reverently as he would speak within church doors, he sets forth strong thoughts for the soul life.

"There'll be joy in the Christmas morning,
When the King comes to His own,"

From the couplet he makes his sermonette, and no one can read it without a heart-yearning toward the King of whom he writes.

Bound in the same style—in appropriate covers of white and gold, is another booklet by the same author—STILLNESS AND SERVICE. He says "these short chapters contain little more than headings for thought." It is written for those who are—

"'Laid aside by illness,' thus we say on earth;
'Set apart for stillness,' thus they sing in heaven;
Here they speak of suffering, pain, and vanished mirth,
There of God's promotions to His chosen given."

These lines tell the thought which the author so beautifully emphasizes.

Thomas Y. Crowell & Company, 46 East 14th street, New York City; 100 Purchase street, Boston.

PROF. MANLEY.

FREE.

The late Prof. Basi-Manley, of the South. Bap. Theo. Seminary, Louisville, Ky., says of the Aerial Medication after his wife had thoroughly tested it: "I can cordially recommend its use." Write for a facsimile of his letter.

The Author of Harvest Bells.

Rev. W. E. Penn, the noted evangelist of Eureka Springs, Ark., says: "I was cured of Catarrhal Deafness in 1886, by the use of the Aerial Medication, and it has proved to be a permanent cure, and I know of many cases of catarrh that have been cured by its use. Rev. J. H. Cason, of Russellville, Ark., was compelled to abandon preaching several years ago on account of lung trouble. I advised this treatment, and after three months of its use he was cured, and has been preaching ever since."

REV. W. E. PENN.

MEDICINES FOR THREE MONTHS' TREATMENT FREE.

To introduce this treatment, and prove beyond doubt that it is a positive cure for Deafness, Catarrh, Throat and Lung Diseases, I will, for a short time, send (by express) Medicines for three months' treatment free. Address,

J. H. MOORE, M. D., Cincinnati, O.

World's Fair Highest Awards
Medal and Diploma on our INCUBATOR and BROODER Combined.
"Old Reliable" Leads them all.
If you are interested in Poultry, it will pay you to send 4 cents in stamps for our 72 page catalogue, giving valuable points on Poultry Culture. Address
Reliable Incubator and Brooder Co. Quincy, Ill.

45 yards High Class Fowls.

$3 a Day Sure. Send us your address and we will show you how to make $3 a day; absolutely sure; we furnish the work and teach you free; you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully; remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 for every day's work; absolutely sure; don't fail to write to-day.
ROYAL MANUFACTURING CO., Detroit, Mich.

HIGH ARM FREE TRIAL

for ten days in your own home. $60 Kenwood Machine for - $24.50 $50 Arlington Machine for - $20.50 Standard Singers, $9.50, $15.50, $17.50, and 27 other styles. We ship firstclass machines anywhere to anyone in any quantity at wholesale prices. All attachments FREE. Latest improvements. Send for free catalogue and save money. Warranted Ten Years. Light Running. Noiseless.
WE PAY THE FREIGHT. NO MONEY REQUIRED IN ADVANCE.
Address (in full) CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 W. Van Buren St., Dept. 151 Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS MAKE MONEY
Selling the New Moon Embroidery Ring, for all kinds of fancy work, darning and mending. Good profits and a clear field. Sample and full particulars mailed for 25 cents. The Ohio Novelty Co., D35, Cincinnati, O.

$5 to $15 per day, at home, selling LIGHTNING PLATER and plating jewelry, watches, tableware, &c. Plates the finest of jewelry good as new, on all kinds of metal with gold, silver or nickel. No experience. No capital. Every house has goods needing plating. Wholesale to agents $5. Write for circulars. H. E. DELNO & Co., Columbus, O.

COMPLEXION PRESERVED.
DR. HEBRA'S
VIOLA CREAM
C. C. BITTNER & CO., TOLEDO, O.

BAKER'S COCOA
ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used

WALL PAPER Send 5 cts. postage. Large package of beautiful samples, all at wholesale prices. ALFRED PEATS, 30 & 32 W. 13th St., New York, or 136 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FREE MUSIC 44 pieces, latest Sheet Music and charming illustrated Magazine 3 months; all for 10 cents; send silver dime. American Nation, Box 1729, Boston, Mass.

Historia A monthly magazine of instructive, entertaining reading for young people. True tales of historical deeds, war and adventure. Intensely interesting. $1 Per Year. FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.
Sample copy free. Add. HISTORIA, Times Bldg., Chicago

DO YOU DRESS
For health, comfort and beauty? Send stamp for my free illustrated booklet, "Dress." Mrs. S. W. PIKE, 34 Central Music Hall, CHICAGO

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE-ROLLERS.
Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTO FAMILY RECORDS, OTHER PICTURES, PORTRAITS & FRAMES. Address Dept. G C. P. CORY & CO. 41 & 45 Jefferson St., Chicago.

WE WANT YOU to distribute circulars, samples, etc., in your locality for our syndicate of big advertisers. $3 to $5 per thousand. CASH PAID. No canvassing. Enclose stamp. DISTRIBUTING BUREAU, P. O. Box 1925. New York City.

DO YOU OWN TOKOLOGY?

Mrs. L. N. A. writes: "If I knew I was to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of TOKOLOGY." This book is a complete ladies' guide in health and disease, written by Alice B. Stockham, M. D., who practiced as a physician over twenty-five years. Prepaid, $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agts.

ALICE B. STOCKHAM & CO., 277 Madison-st. Chicago

When writing please mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

Are plated THREE TIMES HEAVIER on the three points most exposed to wear.

SOLD BY FIRST-CLASS DEALERS.

If you are not sure where the genuine 1847 Rogers Goods can be obtained, address the MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO., Meriden, Ct.

Illustrations of latest designs and valuable information will be mailed you. (Mention this paper.)

Nerve Tonic — Blood Builder

Send for descriptive pamphlet.

50c. per box. 6 for $2.50.

Dr. WILLIAMS' MEDICINE CO., Schenectady, N.Y. and Brockville, Ont.

Publisher's Notes.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER

Grows better each month.

The JANUARY issue has many new features the children will want to see. One page state superintendents will especially welcome.

The FEBRUARY number will not forget George Washington and St. Valentine's Day.

The MARCH issue will contain a supplement with the Quarterly Temperance Lesson. This will also be sold separately to Sunday schools.

Every white-ribbon mother should be familiar with this brave little temperance journal, and every L. T. L. worker, Sunday-school teacher and "big sister" should see that the young folks have it. As for the children, having once seen it, they "cry for it."

Write for our special terms to agents.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

W. C. T. U. ORDER BOOK.

For use of president in making orders on treasurer. W. C. T. U. Receipt Book for use of Treasurer. Bound in neat form, price, each, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL

Subscription Rates for 1893.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly. Price per year	$ .25
Young Crusader, monthly, one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

DEAR FRIENDS:—As the year 1893 draws to a close, we are zealously watching the subscription lists of THE UNION SIGNAL, and with gratitude we record that the renewals for November exceed those of any month since the opening of the Columbian Exposition.

It seems needless to allude to the paralyzing of business by the financial distress of the past season, so apparent are its effects throughout the entire land, yet we desire to emphasize the fact that in these days of enforced retrenchment the lists of THE UNION SIGNAL prove that our National organ is believed to be one of the necessities of every interested worker for God and Home and Humanity.

It has been said that financial depression is invariably followed by religious zeal; why not by an awakening in the cause to which we are pledged: The closing of the saloon, the reforming of the drunkard, the prohibition of the liquor traffic?

Why not arouse the community in which you live by placing in every family THE UNION SIGNAL for 1894?

We shall be pleased to send to you sample copies for free distribution, and will you not in return send to us new subscribers, and help us swell our list to 100,000 names?

We are endeavoring constantly to improve THE UNION SIGNAL, and to do this costs money, but we desire to keep the price of subscription unchanged, hoping that at the low sum of $1 per annum, it may find its way into thousands of new homes.

Who could measure the ever-widening influence of THE UNION SIGNAL, if each subscriber would make to us the New Year's offering of only one new name, and can you think of a better, more effectual way for advancing the temperance cause?

With thanks for your support and coöperation in the past, pledging ourselves to renewed efforts on your behalf, we are

Yours very sincerely,

CAROLINE F. GROW,
Business Manager.

OUR DAY FOR 1894.

We desire to call especial attention to change in issue and price of

Our Day

for 1894. This popular magazine, the only one of its kind in America, will be issued in 1894 as a Bi-Monthly at the uniform price of $1 per annum to all subscribers, clergymen and students included.

Our Day still remains without a rival. Mr. Stead, of the English Review of Reviews, says that he obtains more of value from it than any other American magazine.

It will continue to discuss fearlessly, as heretofore,

Mormonism, Temperance, Politics, Jesuitism, Labor Reform, Church Life,

and will prove invaluable to all who desire information of the World of Reform.

Price $1 per annum.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

They End this way

—the names of most so-called washing compounds. And it isn't an accident, either. It's to make them sound something like Pearline. That is the original washing compound—the first and in every way the best. These imitations are thus named in the hope of confusing you—in the hope that you'll mistake them for Pearline. For most people, that ought to be enough. It ought to convince them that the article so imitated, so copied, so looked-up to, is the one that is the best to use. If your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back—demand Pearline. 382 JAMES PYLE, New York.

SOUND ABROAD THE FAME OF

THE UNIVERSAL FAVORITE

CRAB-APPLE ∴ BLOSSOM ∴ PERFUME

AND THE WORLD RENOWNED

CROWN ∴ LAVENDER ∴ SALTS.

EXCLUSIVE PRODUCTIONS OF

THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO.,

177 New Bond Street, London.

Asked For all Over the World. Annual Sales More than Half a Million Bottles.

Sold only in Crown Stoppered Bottles as shown above.

PREVENTS LA GRIPPE!

...THE SMITH PATENT ROTARY METALLIC CLOTHES LINE...

Prevents la grippe by enabling you to hang out your entire washing from the covered porch, or door step, thus avoiding wet feet and exposure when overheated. A single trial convinces any one that it is a necessity.

A good income can be made by handling this line. Write at once for territory.

GEORGE B. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.

SOLE MANUFACTURER.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

THE PRESS CLAIMS COMPANY,

618 F STREET, NORTHWEST, WASHINGTON, D. C.

P. O. BOX 463. JOHN WEDDERBURN, Managing Attorney.

Cut this out and send it with your inquiry.

GOOD MUSIC.

Nothing adds to the effectiveness of any meeting so much as good singing. You can enkindle enthusiasm in no better way than by a solo and a rousing chorus. Send for a few copies of the "White Ribbon Hymnal," which will cost 35 cents each, and TRY IT.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS.

Mrs. Lathrap's bugle note in the Crusade number of THE UNION SIGNAL is taking form as a National Leaflet, and will soon be ready.

Nothing has yet appeared which so fully carries the Crusade fire into the advanced lines of to-day's work.

You cannot afford to be without it.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

EVANGELIST CHARLES N. CRITTENTON
FOUNDER THIRTEEN FLORENCE CRITTENTON MISSIONS

YOU WILL BE DELIGHTED WITH IT! WHAT? THE PRETTY SOUVENIR BOOKLET

"Around the World with Jesus"

BY EVANGELIST CHARLES N. CRITTENTON.

Containing a description of his trip around the world, especially his tour in Palestine, full of most interesting references to Bible events in each place visited, deeply absorbing to all that love Christ.

Also containing a sketch of Florence Crittenton Missions for the rescue of erring girls from the horrors of their pitiable life, written by Charlton Edholm, Supt. Press of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union and Reporter of Florence Crittenton Missions.

The booklet is handsomely illustrated by fine pictures of Mr. Crittenton, little Florence Crittenton, Miss Frances E. Willard and Lady Henry Somerset, President and Vice-President of the World's W. C. T. U., the New York Florence Crittenton Mission, "Mother" Prindle, its noble matron, Anthony Comstock, A. W. Dennett, Mrs. Underhill and Mr. Vasser.

PRICE ONLY 35 CENTS. 5 CENTS POSTAGE.

"THE TRAFFIC IN GIRLS
. . . AND . . .
FLORENCE CRITTENTON MISSIONS"

BY CHARLTON EDHOLM,
Superintendent Press World's W. C. T. U. and Reporter Florence Crittenton Missions.

A thrilling picture of the life of these poor white slaves in the horrors of the brothel, and their rescue by the Thirteen Florence Crittenton Missions, founded by that "Brother of Girls," Evangelist Charles N. Crittenton.

FINELY ILLUSTRATED;

PRICE ONLY $1.00. POSTAGE 15 CENTS.

As Mr. Crittenton is largely sustaining eight Florence Crittenton Missions, and has generously founded five more under W. C. T. U. auspices, Chicago, Denver, Portland, Ore., Fargo, S. D. and Norfork, Va., every white ribboner and every Christian should have copies of these books to give to friends.

Help us, friends, to rescue these precious "little sisters." Press the sale at State, County and local W. C. T. U. Conventions.

No better present could be given your pastor and friends. No better work could be done by Unions than to scatter many copies of this book.

Address orders to

CHARLTON EDHOLM, Supt. Press World's W. C. T. U.
THE W. C. T. U. TEMPLE, CHICAGO.

Published quarterly. Single copy, 5 cents each; 25 copies or over, 4 cents each. In ordering, state carefully volume, number and title to avoid mistakes.

Publisher's Notes.

CONTENTS OF OUR DAY FOR DECEMBER.

Photogravure of the Rev. Ex-Pres. Cyrus Hamlin, D. D. Frontispiece.

1. Constitutional Rights of Colored Citizens. Rev. F. A. Noble, D. D.
2. God in the Constitution. Rev. Will C. Wood.
3. Boston Hymn—Sealed Orders. Joseph Cook.
4. Boston Monday Lectures—Eighteenth Year. Promises and Perils of the World's Fair—What is Sunday Worth to Religion? Joseph Cook.
5. Book Notices:—Ex-Pres. Hamlin's Life and Times—Gen. Wallace's Prince of India—James Russell Lowell's Letters—Martyn's Life of John B. Gough—Baedeker's Hand Book of the United States.
6. Vital Points of Expert Opinion:—Bishop Coxe's Letter to Mgr. Satolli on Public Schools—Mr. Stead's Chicago Proposals on Civic Reform.
7. Questions to Specialists:—Miss Willard on Woman's Progress in 1892–3.
8. Editorial Notes:—The National League's Defense of American Schools—Afro-American Convention at Cincinnati—Five First-class Prizes for Mrs. Hunt's Exhibit at the World's Fair—Dr. Barrows' Record of the Parliament of Religions—Prospectus of Our Day for 1894—Photogravure of Ex-Pres. Hamlin.

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ALL CREEDS AND SECTS.

Unique Volume Containing the History of the World's Parliament of Religions.

Half the value of the "World's Parliament of Religions" would be lost if no permanent record of its proceedings had been kept. It is estimated that the total of words contained in the various speeches reaches the enormous figure of 2,000,000 words, or more than the Bible contains.

Some of these words may be of dubious value, but all of them were uttered in good faith and in the heat of profound convictions. The speakers were representatives of all the historic faiths, Christian and Jewish, Mohammedan, Hindo, Confucian, Buddhist, Shinto, Jain, Brahmin, etc., all were gathered on one platform in response to an invitation to come and present in terms of frankness but courtesy, the claims of their faith upon the respect and confidence of mankind.

The most learned and pious came from the four corners of the globe. There was absolute freedom of speech but no jarring or contention. They who heard the addresses heard the religions of the world in all their manifold forms presented by their ablest exponents. This impression would now be lost had not the addresses, papers and speeches been reduced to print, and so preserved for all time.

The result is a compendium of information whose value it would not be easy to overestimate.

As such a congress was never before held in the history of the world, so the record of the congress constitutes a volume at once unique and of incalculable value to clergymen and laymen alike, being in a measure a compendium of the religious history of humanity.

We are happy in being able to place this volume, profusely and handsomely illustrated with portraits of the principal delegates, within easy reach of our readers.

On receipt of only $1 we will send you the entire report. Part I mailed on receipt of 10 cents.

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE.
Chicago, Ill.

"DO IT AND BE DONE WITH IT."

A correspondent writes:

"I have one dollar that I have fifty uses for, but before it goes for anything else want to pay my next year's subscription. Profit by Miss Willard's advice, 'Do it and be done with it.' I wish you knew how much cheer and comfort you bring to so many white-ribbon homes. Of all the papers that come into our home not one is so dear to me as THE UNION SIGNAL. I would as soon think of doing without my Bible. I pity a white ribboner that does not know the joy of these weekly visits. I would make any sacrifice before I would deprive myself of knowing what is going on at the front. To hear from time to time from over the sea from our beloved Chieftain, is worth ten times the cost of the paper."

Publisher's Notes.

BOOKS.

Around the World With Jesus.

By CHARLES A. CRITTENTON. This charming booklet describes the Holy Land and contains a sketch of Florence Crittenton Missions by Charlton Edholm, superintendent of press of World's W. C. T. U. Price 35 cents.

As is well known by white-ribboners, Mr. Crittenton, the famous evangelist, already largely supports eight Florence Crittenton Missions for the rescue of erring girls, and at the Denver convention pledged $5,000 to the W. C. T. U. for founding five more missions under their auspices. These are now being established, and every cent realized from the sale of "AROUND THE WORLD WITH JESUS" will be given to the Florence Crittenton Missions, and every one whose heart throbs for our erring girls may aid the grand work for their redemption by circulating this little souvenir. It contains beautiful pictures of Mr. Crittenton, Miss Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, and Mother Prindle, Matron of New York Mission, all white-ribboners, and it cannot fail to interest all.

Brilliants from Frances E. Willard.

is the title of a dainty volume in which are compiled the choicest thoughts of that gifted woman. The book contains twenty engravings, which make it attractive as well as helpful. Board covers in white and gold and gray cloth, 60 cents.

Touching Incidents and Remarkable Answers to Prayer.

By REV. S. B. SHAW. Cloth, $1.

This book is neither doctrinal nor denominational, yet distinctly Christian. Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer.

The Well-Dressed Woman.

By HELEN GILBERT ECOB. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.

This is a work which appeals to every intelligent mother. It is valuable in its exposition, both in text and illustrations, of the artistic ideal and rules of dress, and is full of the best of advice for school-girls, young women at college and young mothers. Miss Willard and the whole corps of earnest workers in the W. C. T. U. are very hearty in their indorsement of this book, and it should be in the hands of every sensible woman.

Bright-Eyes

Or, Pleasure and Profit for Sunday Afternoon. Arranged by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. Price, 50 cents.

This pretty little quarto is ingeniously devised, so as to suggest to children, by means of outline pictures, the work of searching the Scriptures in order to find the passages which the vignettes chime in with. It will be of service to many a mother, or older sister, or brother on a Sunday afternoon, in the endeavor to teach or interest the little ones.—Central Christian Advocate.

A Young Woman Journalist.

By FRANCES E. WILLARD. Cloth, $1.

A book designed by the author to stimulate other young women to "be something," to make the most of their opportunities.

A Woman's Evangel.

By EVA KINNEY GRIFFITH. Price cloth, $1.2

"This book will interest and benefit many readers. It has some literary merit, but its special feature is the fact that it is written to explain and advocate the various kinds of effort in behalf of total abstinence which the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is making. The many members of, or sympathizers with, that influential organization will read it with approval, and so will others."—The Congregationalist.

Columbus, and What He Found.

By MRS. MARY H. HULL. Price $1.

This is a wonder-tale filled with all the romance and truth of the great event of America's discovery, and told for young readers in a pure yet thrilling manner. There is already a large demand for this unique child's history among parents and teachers who desire to answer authentically all questions and controversies which come to the ears of children. Columbus will be always with us as much a feature in the future as Washington, being the step beyond Washington and the home-nation into the great mother, Europe, and the beginnings of the child Columbia. This book is filled with patriotic enthusiasm.

Child's Christ Tales.

By ANDREA HOFER. Price $1.

In teaching little folks the Christ example by story, no book will help so much as this. It is written from the kindergarten standpoint, and full of deep, sweet truths simply told.

Signal Notes.

THE Salvation Army songs are being translated into Italian.

Two hundred and two million pounds of tea are consumed in one year in the United Kingdom.

THE American Federation of Labor voted to hold a conference early in 1894 with the Knights of Labor, the railroad workers and the farmers, looking to an amalgamation in some form of their common interests.

A NEW YORK philanthropist furnishes coal to the poor at cost, selling it by the scuttle full just as cheap as by a larger quantity. In the summer the same gentleman sells milk and ice at the same stations.

LICENSE and no-license presents the following contrast in Pittsfield, Mass. Under license there were five hundred and two arrests for drunkenness and assault in six months. During the same length of time under no-license there were one hundred and ninety arrests.

A CONGREGATIONAL church at Standing Rock, N. Dakota, composed entirely of Indians, contributed $317 last year for benevolent purposes. Over four hundred children have been gathered into the Sunday-school. Can any "white man's church" give a better record?

IT is estimated that there are over three millions of wage earners in the United States out of employment. This statement is based on official figures taken from the accurate reports of labor unions for the past year. In some of the trades, eighty per cent are out of work.

THE government of Saxony has introduced a novel way to secure payment of taxes. The names of persons who do not pay are posted up in saloons and restaurants; the proprietors of which dare not serve the men who are thus mentioned under penalty of losing their licenses.

THE first federal convention of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, held November second and third in New York, was wonderfully encouraging not only in the large number of clergymen present, but also for the attendance of strong, active, young business men. The federal council is made up of equal representation from the denominations, having brotherhood chapters, meeting biennally and is for inspiration, not legislation. It has made a numerical gain of sixty per cent the past year. More than a hundred of the young men are now studying for the ministry. Thirty-three reading rooms have been opened and many missions started.

THE great temperance demonstration held in London, December 6, was the most impressive of its kind known to the annals of the reform. Some of the American correspondents thought that its sessions should have been opened with prayer (the morning session had silent prayer at the beginning), and they felt that the absence of singing was a distinct loss. They also noticed that two-thirds of these great audiences were men, and inveighed against the fact that there was no woman on the committee of arrangements, and no woman's name on the memorial that was carried to the prime minister. Also that neither Mr. Gladstone nor Sir William Harcourt seemed at all aware of the presence of women, although the delegation of sixty had in it seven of the gentler sex. There is nothing but praise for the perfectly frank and honest words in which the prime minister and the chancellor of the exchequer promised to stand by the temperance people and push the bill.

THE TRUE SOUTHERN ROUTE

To California is via St. Louis and El Paso, Tex. Pullman Tourist Cars leave Chicago daily at 11:00, running through without change. No high altitudes or snow blockades to cause detention. Special low rates for the Midwinter Exposition. For all information address John E. Ennis, No. 199 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW CURE FOR ASTHMA.

Medical science at last reports a positive cure for Asthma in the Kola plant, found on the Congo river, West Africa. So great is their faith in its wonderful curative powers, the Kola Importing Co., 1164 Broadway, New York, are sending out large trial cases of the Kola Compound free to all sufferers from Asthma. Send your name and address on postal card, and they will send you a trial case by mail free.

Valuable but not Costly.

It may save you a great deal of trouble in cooking. Try it. We refer to the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk, regarded by most housekeepers as absolutely essential in culinary uses, and unsurpassed in coffee. All Grocers and Druggists sell the Eagle Brand.

IVORY SOAP
99 44/100 % PURE
DON'T ACCEPT IMITATIONS.
THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CIN'TI.

Dirt defies "the king."—
If the old proverb be true, SAPOLIO is greater than royalty itself: Try it in your next house-cleaning: Grocers keep it.
DO YOU LIVE IN GREASE?
As a true patriot and citizen you should naturalize yourself by using the best inventions of the day for removing such a charge. To live in Grease is utterly unnecessary when SAPOLIO is sold in all the stores, and abolishes grease and dirt.

$27.50 BUYS A Good Organ.
This is one of the grandest and most liberal offers ever made. You could not buy the same instrument from an agent or a dealer at twice the price. We sell at manufacturer's price—direct from the factory to the home. We can sell lower than any other manufacturer, because we do the largest direct business in the world. You can save from $50 to $200 by buying from us. There is an actual purchaser of a Cornish instrument in every county in the U. S. Write at once for our new Catalogue—FREE to any address. It contains beautiful colored illustrations, accurate descriptions and lowest prices of the latest and finest styles of Organs and Pianos. It will save you many times its weight in gold.
Organs from $27.50 up. Pianos from $175 up.
FOR CASH, OR ON EASY CREDIT.
All Instruments shipped on trial. No satisfaction no pay. References—Any Bank or Commercial Agency in the U.S.
CORNISH & CO., (Estab. 27 Years.) WASHINGTON, N. J.

ROSES PLANTS, SEEDS
THOUSANDS SAY OUR ROSES are The Best
They grow and bloom beautifully and are on their own roots. A sample collection of 20 Roses mailed to any address for $1.00. A fine assortment of colors. Chrysanthemums in all the different colors and forms. Largest collection of Begonias in America. Large collection of Bedding Plants, Hardy Shrubs and Vines. Pure Seed that are sure to grow. Our inducements are many for you to buy Flowers of us. All the Latest Novelties. We Give a packet of choice flower seed with every order. Our Prices are so low as to be full of interest.
20 Fine Chrysanthemums, all different, for $1.00
20 Geraniums, all different, for - - - $1.00
18 Carnations, all different, - - - - $1.00
12 Choice Begonias, - - - - - - $1.00
We Guarantee Delivery in FIRST-CLASS CONDITION.
Write now for our beautiful Illustrated Catalogue, Sent Free to all. It is full of valuable information. Dont order until you have examined our prices. We can save you money. Address
G. R. GAUSE & CO., BOX 25, RICHMOND, IND.

Don't Lose Heart.
PLANT FERRY'S SEEDS this year, and make up for lost time. Ferry's Seed Annual for 1894 will give you many valuable hints about what to raise and how to raise it. It contains information to be had from no other source. Free to all.
D. M. Ferry & Co.
Detroit, Mich.

QUITE UNUSUAL.
We have from ten to five hundred names of boys and girls, in nearly every city and town, who have sent answers to Harper's Young People Prize Puzzles, but who are not subscribers to that journal. Will YOU take these names, with addresses, in your locality, and ask their owners, or 'their owners' parents, to subscribe? Liberal pay. Particulars free.
HARPER & BROTHERS,
Franklin Square, N. Y.

HATCH CHICKENS BY STEAM
With the Improved Excelsior Incubator.
Simple, Perfect, Self-Regulating. Thousands in successful operation. Guaranteed to hatch a larger percentage of fertile eggs at less cost than any other Hatcher. Lowest priced first-class Hatcher made.
Circulars free. Send 6c. for Illus. Catalogue.
GEO. H. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.
$10.50 Buy the Oxford Improved SINGER Sewing Machine, with a complete set of attachments and guaranteed for 10 years Shipped anywhere on 30 days' trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded. Buy from factory, save dealers' and agents' profit. Write to-day for our LARGE FREE CATALOGUE.
Oxford Mfg. Co., 342 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Don't Cost You a Cent!
BOYS AND GIRLS who want an elegant high grade SAFETY BICYCLE FOR NOTHING, send your name and address to H. M. CO., 358 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

CARDS Send 2c. stamp for Sample Book of all the FINEST and Latest Style Cards for 1894. We sell GENUINE CARDS NOT TRASH. UNION CARD CO., COLUMBUS, OHIO.

PILES Instant relief, final cure in a few days, and never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. Remedy mailed free. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N. Y.

Diet for Rheumatic Persons.

Proper food will cure where drugs will fail. If you want to cure yourself, we advise dieting on Burnham's Clam Bouillon, soft boiled eggs, fresh milk, plenty of ripe apples, well cooked cereals (sparingly) and all kinds of nuts. No meat, no tobacco; coffee or tea very seldom; plenty strong lemonade once a day. Never take milk and lemonade at the same meal. Do not omit bathing your body daily with plenty of pure water.

BEECHAM'S PILLS will save doctor's bills.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO FLORIDA

The best way is to take the magnificent solid vestibuled trains of the Queen & Crescent Route at Cincinnati. Quick time. Interesting Route. Low Rates. A. J. LYTLE, N. P. A., 193 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.; W. C. RINEARSON, G. P. A., Cincinnati, O.

THE QUEEN AND CRESCENT ROUTE

Runs superb solid vestibuled trains to New Orleans and to Jacksonville (via Lookout Mountain), from Cincinnati without change.

Be sure your tickets to the south read via the Q. & C. Route. A. J. LYTLE, N. P. A., 193 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.; W. C. RINEARSON, G. P. A., Cincinnati, O.;

READ IT!

THE TEN BEST STATES OF AMERICA

"The Ten Best States of America for Agriculture, Horticulture and General Industries Traversed by the Illinois Central Railroad," is the full title of a handsome illustrated 256-page book issued by the Illinois Central Railroad Company. It contains

MUCH OF INTEREST to the general reader and

VALUABLE INFORMATION

to those whose vocation is in any of the general directions outlined by its title. It will be sent to any address in the United States on receipt of 8 cents postage, by F. B. Bowes, General Northern Passenger Agent Illinois Central Railroad, 194 Clark Street Chicago.

CONVENIENT FOR WEST-SIDE RESIDENTS

The new PENNSYLVANIA LINES' STATION at West Madison and Rockwell Streets Tickets to all points East—to Indianapolis Louisville, Cincinnati and the South at lowest rates. Baggage checked to destination. All trains stop to take on and discharge passengers. For particular information call upon D. J. Shine, Agent, Pennsylvania Lines' Passenger Station, West Madison Street, or H. R. Dering, Ass't Gen'l Passenger Agent, 248 South Clark Street, Chicago.

SUPERIOR TRAIN SERVICE TO PITTSBURGH

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad offers the public the most convenient train service between Chicago and Pittsburgh. The route is via Akron, Ravenna, Warren and Youngstown, Ohio. Two solid trains are run every day, both carrying day coaches and new vestibuled sleeping cars through without change.

The Pittsburgh express leaves Chicago at 3:00 P. M., and arrives Pittsburgh the next morning at 7:05. The vestibuled limited leaves Chicago at 7:30 P. M., and arrives at Pittsburgh the next morning at 11:10. The vestibule limited also carries a Pullman sleeper to Cleveland, via Akron, arriving at Cleveland at 8:00 A. M.

All B. & O. trains depart from the Grand Central Passenger Station, corner 5th Ave. and Harrison St., Chicago, the finest and most commodious station in America.

WHERE SEEDS COME FROM.

First among the seed producing houses of the world stands the old establishment of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich. Established in 1856, this firm has been for years the largest and best known seed house in the world. In 1893 over one hundred thousand dealers handled Ferry's Seeds, and the number of people who planted them runs far into the millions. For 1894 this firm has made preparation to supply at least 50,000 bushels of garden beans alone. Something more than shrewd business methods is required to place and keep such a business in the lead. It is something that deserves the thought of every one who plants a seed. If every sower could go on a tour of inspection through this great establishment and see what is behind the name of Ferry's Seeds, see with what care they have been developed and tested, see with what precision they are sorted and packed, ready for planting, there would be less disappointment and fewer losses from the use of inferior seeds.

Every year D. M. Ferry & Co. issue an Annual for the convenience and instruction of those who plant seeds. It is prepared by the most competent authors, and is rightly looked upon as a standard authority on the most profitable things to plant, and the best way to cultivate them. This book is sent free of charge to all who send their name and address to the above mentioned firm.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

FOR GOD AND HOME. WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOUNDED 1883 AND EVERY LAND.

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XX.—No. 2.] CHICAGO, January 11, 1894. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

Lysia D Hertick
1029 15th st
SW

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

California's Midwinter Fair opened last week.

England has been suffering from an extreme cold wave.

Important arrests of leading anarchists have been made in Spain and France.

President and Mrs. Cleveland gave their first state dinner at the White House, January 5.

Preparations are being made on both sides for a big naval conflict on the coast of Brazil between the warships of the republic and the naval fleet of the rebels.

Rumors of fighting at Honolulu have been prevalent at San Francisco since the arrival there of the U. S. revenue cutter Corwin. The officers of the steamer refused to impart information.

Great enthusiasm was manifested at the opening of the Manchester ship canal in England last week. The canal gives the town of Manchester, which is forty miles inland, a direct waterway to the sea.

The Chicago Central Relief Association has issued an appeal to the public, urgently requesting each able-bodied person receiving a stated income to contribute one day's earnings for the aid of the destitute.

The Columbian Liberty Bell started on its travels round the world, January 3, the manager of the tour planning to ring the bell on the occasion of certain great anniversaries in the various countries visited.

According to the public debt statement issued last week, the total debt of the United States is nine hundred and sixty-three million six hundred and five thousand nine hundred and seventeen dollars, an increase of over six millions during December.

THE last report of the London Young Women's Christian Association gives in detail the valuable work carried on by that society. In London it has forty institutes, homes and restaurants, one hundred other branches, and two gymnasiums. Besides the religious, social and educational departments, there are others designed to meet the special need of girls, like employment agencies, sick and convalescent aids, traveler's aid, etc. The membership numbers fourteen thousand.

A VARIETY of opinions are prevalent among our brethren of the Methodist persuasion as to what action would be taken by their bishops upon the resubmission to the conferences of the question of woman's admission thereto. Opponents to this movement have ventured to say that the method of voting on this important matter is unconstitutional, and that upon this ground, if they choose, the bishops can evade the question. A number of the bishops have been questioned, however, and (according to the daily press) say that such action on their part would be revolutionary. The statement was also made that a time for the vote to be taken would not be set until conference meets in the spring.

IN the death of Miss Elizabeth P. Peabody, all reformatory and educational interests have lost a friend. Miss Peabody passed away at her home in Jamaica Plain, Mass., January 3, nearly ninety years of age. Although enlisted in all departments of education, that of the kindergarten has occupied her attention most largely during the past thirty years. It is said that Miss Peabody's interest in the kindergarten system was aroused by the intelligence of a little six-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schurz, and when informed that it was largely due to the Fröbel instruction that the child had received in Germany, she decided to make it a study. After reading all the literature on the subject she could obtain, she made two extensive sojourns abroad in order to study the system at its fountain-head. It is doubtful if any woman has ever lived a more useful, beautiful life than Miss Peabody, and he world seems the poorer since she has left it.

NORTH WALES has been experiencing a genuine temperance crusade under the leadership of Lady Henry Somerset. The government veto bill has been greatly strengthened as a result of this crusade. Lady Henry has engagements that will occupy her time almost exclusively for the entire winter and we earnestly pray that her health may not be impaired by such continuous platform work.

WILLARD HALL noon meetings this week are with special reference to the week of prayer observed by the churches. It is hoped that they will result in a revival season of great power. This is doubtless just what the churches are hoping for, too, and it is not an unreasonable hope, as restriction of business and scarcity of money have always been followed by spiritual awakenings. In times of prosperity the human heart is not so apt to turn to Christ as in times of privation and grief. May we learn precious soul lessons because of the financial depression.

NEW YEAR'S day brought rejoicing to the hearts of temperance people throughout Ontario, Canada. The expression of the voters of the Province was taken that day on the total prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. A majority of over ten thousand votes was in favor of prohibition, over two thousand alone being in the city of Toronto. In accordance with the conditions of the vote, it is now mandatory upon the government to pass an act, making the sale and manufacture of liquors illegal, and Ontario will soon feel the beneficial effects of prohibition.

THE British Medical Association, together with the Society for the Study of Inebriety and Homes for Inebriates Association have appealed to the clergy of all denominations to petition the House of Commons in favor of a legislation which proposes to give, 1. Power to compulsorily seclude habitual drunkards in curative institutions. 2. Curative seclusion for poor inebriates at public charge. 3. A removal of existing hindrances to the immediate reception of an inebriate into a retreat. Such legislation is sorely needed to protect helpless wives and children from the maddened victims of strong drink.

FOR fear the many friends of Col. and Mrs. George Bain have not yet been apprised of the death of their beloved daughter, Mrs. Laura Bain Morrison, we reannounce that sad event, which occurred in Lexington, Ky., November 29. She was a gifted young woman, the mother of three children, and it is no wonder that her husband and parents are in great grief because of her untimely departure from them. Her closing hours were spent in expressions of gratitude for the bountiful love and care of her heavenly Father and earthly parents, and are precious legacies to her mourning friends. Colonel Bain writes: "Pray God to help me build a monument to her memory, not of marble, but of redeemed souls."

WE are informed by private correspondence as well as the newspaper press of New Zealand, that the result of woman's suffrage, first tested in the general elections of last November, is highly satisfactory to the friends of the measure. Our informant writes on the day of election: "The time has been so short between the granting of the suffrage, the dissolution of parliament and the new election, that the women are not organized as well as they should be, nor have they been able to exercise their proper influence on the nomination of candidates so that the full significance of their enfranchisement will not, in my opinion, be seen in the present election. That the women appreciate the new talent committed to their keeping and do not intend to wrap it in a napkin or bury it in the earth is evident enough from the way they voted in Dunedin to-day. The proceedings have been very quiet."

A CONSERVATIVE member of the English Parliament was making the point to a Liberal woman suffragist that women, if enfranchised, would all vote the Conservative ticket, and he instanced the fact that they had done so in a recent election for the chief municipal officer of a city in which there was an unusually large proportion of women voters, and in which the Liberal party had been accustomed to win. "What do you think is the reason that the Liberal men voters were not able to persuade the women to accept their candidate?" asked the suffragist. This was the answer which, unconsciously to the Conservative gentleman who made it, cut the ground from under his hypothesis. "Oh, we were obliged on account of the women to put up a man of such high character that the women were attracted by his superior habits and record, so that it was of no use to talk to them about the Liberal candidate, who was morally a very much lower grade of man." So then it seems that even on the admission of an opponent, women will make morality the highest test.

THE ways and means committee of Congress has finally reached a conclusion on whisky tax, which is to increase it from ninety cents to one dollar a gallon, and extend the bonded period from three to eight years. This will amount to ten million dollars in revenue. The whisky men are endeavoring to so manipulate the final report that the increased tax will not affect the liquor already in bond, so that the government will not receive any additional revenue for eight years. The whisky ring has evidently been as crafty as it is cruel and secured its desires by the detestable lobbying known to politicians of the baser sort. It proposes for one thing that the government shall be recouped in its losses from this favorable legislation to liquor interests, by levying an income tax upon savings banks, corporations and private individuals. There is still time for voters to protest against the acceptance of this report on the part of Congress. Let each constituent who objects to liquor legislation write to his congressman and demand a resistance to the encroachments of this crafty enemy.

SELDOM have the enemy's efforts been more directly traced and exposed than in the case of the proposed increased whisky tax. About four weeks ago, the associated press declared in bold headlines that the W. C. T. U. and Y. M. C. A. were indorsing the increased tax. Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, our alert National corresponding secretary, immediately took the matter in hand and wrote to the W. C. T. U. president of the District of Columbia, Mrs. Mary E. Griffith, who, with the superintendent of legislation of the District, was permitted through the courtesy of the chairman of the congressional ways and means committee to examine the petitions received. She found on record just four such requests, two purporting to come from the W. C. T. U., and two from the Y. M. C. A. Upon receiving this information Mrs. Woodbridge wrote to the two women who claimed to represent W. C. T. U. sentiments on this subject. After due delay, one of her letters was returned, marked, "No such person in town named." The other letter has received no reply. And this is the sum and substance of the "W. C. T. U. petitioning for high whisky tax"! We do not believe in tax, high or low, nor in the whisky itself. Total abstinence for the individual, and prohibition for the state and nation is our motto, and no degree of taxation is consistent with that. To put our organization officially in its true light, Mrs. Woodbridge has sent to each state W. C. T. U. the following document: "The undersigned, general officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the state of ———, PROTEST against the increase of the federal tax upon whisky." These formal protests are being signed by the four general officers of each state, and as soon as they are all returned to Chicago, will be sent to Washington for file in the congressional records.

NEW YEAR GREETING FOR MY AMERICAN FRIENDS.

BY WARNER SNOAD.

Far across the broad Atlantic I can hear the tramp of feet,
And thousands upon thousands, women's voices low and sweet,
Low and sweet as women's should be, with a purpose firm and true,
As they chant the slow transition of the old things to the new.

And here at home in England, women's voices catch the strain,
And with no uncertain purpose, echo back the glad refrain,
"For God and Home and Every Land," for homesteads pure and blest,
For the pleasures that are sinless, and the work deserving rest.

And I, a prisoner ever, with my strength but weakness now,
Pray God send each earnest worker, faithful heart and lifted brow,
Till each barrier to progress burst with bloom like Aaron's rod,
For we know that Christ is with us, and our leader's leader —God.

Lee, England.

THE DEACON'S WIFE'S PROPHECY.

BY JESSIE HARRIET MUNRO.

(Concluded.)

Everybody in the village soon knew that Job Matteson had expressed himself in the store regarding his boy's death, and had laid the responsibility on the right ones. The licensed saloon—licensed by Christian votes—had murdered Thomas Matteson, and was murdering more like him, and the rank and file of the church looked on while the saloon was doing its deadly work.

They took refuge under the portals of expediency, cherishing the delusion that their position was all right as long as they themselves were temperate, and did not frequent barrooms. They did not see that a man cannot consistently pray for God's blessing on the temperance cause, and vote to perpetuate this rum curse in the land. Jesus says, "He that is not for me (that is, out and out for me) is against me."

When Deacon Dudley reached home that day, one could see at a glance that something was wrong. The fact is, he took to heart very much what Job Matteson had said in the store, and he was thinking deeply over it. He ate sparingly at dinner but was in no mood to talk. When the meal was over he laid himself on the lounge in the sitting room. He took a paper in his hand and laid it down with a sigh; he could not read. His wife sat beside her table sewing. She was as pleasant as usual and would have entered into a conversation, but he was not communicative. Finally, however, he said: "Mirandy, Job Matteson hurt my feelings in the store this morning, and I felt it keenly."

"That is strange," said his wife; "Job is not a man to hurt anybody's feelings intentionally."

"Well," replied the deacon, "he laid the blame of his son's death on Matt Hudson and me. Of course we were excise commissioners and did the best we could to help the town when we granted a license to Martin to sell rum, but foolish man, we did not kill his boy. I'm sorry for this, Mirandy, but it's past and gone now and that is all there is to it."

"Phelps," said his wife, hurrying to get a word in, "it's not all gone or all over yet. There is more to follow, as I told you the other day."

Then the deacon responded: "Personally I am opposed to intemperance, but if my party is in favor of licensing rum I have got to follow or be left out in the cold. Perhaps I made a mistake when I voted to license Tim Martin, but I did not mean any harm by it. You know, Mirandy, I did not want to make enemies in fighting the liquor trade. I have got enough on my hands already!"

After this the deacon remained silent thinking that his position was unanswerable, but his wife thought differently.

"Look here, Phelps," said she, warming up, "you must see now that my warning is coming true. When you became an excise commissioner I told you of the consequences of granting licenses. The death of Tommy Matteson and the eternal ruin of a half a dozen other boys is the legitimate result of it. I told you, Phelps, more than two years ago that not only you and Matt Hudson but the Christian voters of the town who voted for the rum traffic, would be held responsible for the crimes of the saloon at the bar of God. Take care that your own boy, George, does not end up like some of the others. You cannot tell about it to-day. The future lies before us unknown. George has been a burden on my heart night and day since he has gone to the Hollow Academy. I wake up in the night and think and pray over it. The awful thought has come to me more than once: What if George should become a drunkard, or what if he should make a shipwreck of himself like Mr. Matteson's boy? I tell you, Phelps, it pays to do right every time."

The deacon listened very attentively, but made no reply. His wife's rejoinder almost paralyzed his power of speech. Indeed, he could make no reply; he felt convicted at the bar of an honest conscience, because he was not man enough years ago to fight this wicked business, even though it cost him his very life. After attending to some of his usual chores he retired early for the night.

Next morning he showed himself to be deeply affected by what his wife had said to him the night before. A new conviction had rolled over his soul, and he promised on his knees that in future he would take a fearless stand for the right. The politicians had flattered his pride, and gave him an office on condition that he should do whatever they asked. This was the way the neighbors criticised his conduct.

Some weeks after he concluded to leave the town and move into another state. After a few months spent in negotiations he succeeded in selling his farm on good terms. About the first of January he moved to a mountain village in New Jersey, where he had a brother engaged in the hotel business. Sam Dudley had been there for some years, and had greatly prospered. The Dudleys boarded at the Mountain House till spring, then they built a comfortable home for themselves.

In moving to New Jersey the great object of Deacon and Mrs. Dudley was that their only son, George, should be well educated and away from temptations, and when the proper time came they had means to give him a good start in life.

George spent two years at an academy in an adjoining town and did remarkably well till within six months of his graduation. In the month of June, only three weeks prior to this prospective event, the principal wrote Mr. and Mrs. Dudley that he thought George had about sown all his wild oats, and he had no doubt with proper care he would be able to enter Princeton in the fall. But the Dudleys were not quite as sanguine as the schoolmaster. They saw things in George's life that gave them great uneasiness.

On the 21st of June George finished his studies and received a diploma. His fond parents were present during the graduating services; he returned home with them on the following day. On the way across the country he promised to bend his mind to the work of entering the freshman class in the fall.

On the first Sunday he was at home after his return from school, George and his mother had a long interview. Mrs. Dudley was solicitous concerning him and she told him so. On this occasion his apologies and promises were profuse. He did not feel well enough to go to church that day and begged to be excused. After the team had left the house George was around making investigations in the cellar where he found to his delight a small keg of old cider. When his parents returned about one o'clock, George was in bed helplessly drunk. He pretended to his father that he was sick, but his mother knew better. The deacon's mind flashed back to his example while he was an excise commissioner, how he preferred to do wrong rather than "go back" on his party; but since he had come to New Jersey he had abandoned that party at the risk of being called a "crank," and intended to both vote and pray for the overthrow of the liquor traffic. They thought it best also to pour out the cider in the cellar and go without vinegar rather than again leave a temptation in George's way.

"God forgive me for the past," said the deacon, as his wife recited to him some of the experiences of former years. "I ought to have taken this bold stand for God and His cause thirty years ago."

"Look here, Phelps," said Mrs. Dudley, raising her voice somewhat, "I tell you the great curse of to-day is the complicity of the church with the saloon. Take my word for it, you will never see any permanent temperance work —such as will save our boys—till the Christians of the land vote down the saloon business."

On the evening of July 3, George, who had been working around the house all day, and had energetically helped his father in the garden, hitched up the new buggy and drove off toward the village. He did not tell his parents anything of what he was going to do or where he was going, but that afternoon he remarked to a neighbor's boy that he intended to have a good time that night. He met some companions near the adjoining village and went with them to a saloon, then to a dance in a house kept by a man of bad repute. Toward midnight George had drunk enough liquor to make him noisy. About two o'clock on the morning of July 4, he was sitting near the banister on the fourth floor; he must have gone to sleep, for he was picked up at the foot of the stairs insensible. Before medical attendance could be furnished he was dead; his neck was broken.

There was great excitement all over the town. Many persons had expressed themselves in strong language, and wished that the whole business might be annihilated. The coroner's jury viewed the body about noon and gave the usual stereotyped verdict, viz.: Accidental death. This was in every respect false. The verdict should have been: "We hereby affirm, under oath, that George Dudley was murdered by rum which the Christian voters of the town voted should be sold by Tim O'Reilly for twenty-five dollars (blood money). We believe that the Christian voters are particeps criminis, and will be held accountable at the bar of God for this murder."

Now the deacon could feel for Job Matteson; for the same sword had pierced his own soul.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" henceforth had a new and awful meaning to him; and he was his brother's keeper, as well as well as he could be with his broken, bleeding heart.

North Troy, Vt.

HOMES FOR THE HOMELESS.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

For several hours each day while I was the guest of my old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Pearsall Smith, I went out driving. On one of these excursions through delicious shady lanes and picturesque hamlets, we visited Hindhead, a panorama of country places in one of which George Eliot is said to have written "Middlemarch," in another Mrs. Humphrey Ward concocted "David Grieve," in a third the great scientist, Professor Tyndall, had his residence, and so on; but we were in pursuit of Mrs. Rogerson and her home for boys and girls.

Her butler stood at the door as we drove up, and among all of these functionaries that I have seen he bears away the palm. Thackeray would have immortalized this refined, soft-voiced, considerate personage, dressed in costume so subdued and well adapted to his gently furrowed face and carefully kept hair that had it not been that his claw-hammer coat was worn in the early part of the day, one would have voted him a ministerial guest.

Mrs. Rogerson is a widow with an income of about five thousand dollars a year, and formerly belonged to what is technically known as "London society." She is one of the most remarkable talkers among the many exceptional characters that I, who am so fond of them, have enjoyed meeting. One is perfectly at home with her from the first minute; she takes both the hands of her guests, seats them around a cozy grate in the large fire-place in her drawing-room, where comfort and rare good taste combine to produce a charming home effect. She is a lady of medium height, slight figure, and a face on which the intricate life of humanity's capital has left its moulding impress, so that you feel at once that you are in the presence of a cosmopolitan, keenly alive to every passing influence, but sending forth more waves of power than she is likely to have returned from any ordinary group of which she is the centre. Her dark and abundant hair is worn minus the regulation rolled up queue, and she frequently runs her delicate hand—a most perfect emblem of her culture—through its soft locks. She has an alto voice almost too heavy to keep company with a hand so delicate; she is pronounced in attitude and manner, and at once gathers into those small but skillful fingers the reins of conversation; one has but to be a good listener and all goes well,—not that Mrs. Rogerson is an egotist, but she is exceedingly bright, piquant, picturesque, and can hardly fail to be aware of this, while her auditors are only too glad to "let her go on," giving them the benefit of her incisive utterance and remarkably wide observation of the world. Pointing her finger at Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, she said: "You know, my dear friend, that we must all be either examples or warnings. I chose the latter as my rôle in life, and you will admit I have carried it to perfection. I am not merely a warning, I am an awful warning; but you must remember that a light-house is just like me in that particular—the farther the ships keep away the better for them, and yet the light-house is their only hope." She gave us several silhouettes of famous men and women at court, in politics and in literature, with a drollery of delineation that would have made her fortune as a journalist had she chosen that career.

We found one common term at least in her downright teetotal principles. She invited us to five o'clock tea in an attractive dining-room with a large bay-window, the cozy divans of whose embrasure struck me as a feature worthy of imitation. We had toothsome tomato sandwiches, hot muffins with cake and tea such as one hardly gets outside of England. I am not a connoisseur concerning this or any other table delicacy, but one cannot fail to note the milder and more attractive flavor of tea in this country. There is a superstition here that the longer ocean voyage injures this beverage in its passage to us in America, and also that this heavy atmosphere makes the use of tea less harmful than with us.

Sociability and hospitality having had their charming little hour, we wended our way to the children's home. As I have said, Mrs. Rogerson has a heart so kind and motherly that instead of absorbing her income she chooses to share it with about thirty homeless boys and girls; on the pleasant hillside she has built several large and inexpensive houses of pine logs without any "up-stairs," each room showing the pointed roof. In the one where she lives and entertains her friends is the nursery for the youngest and those who take care of them, and in adjoining houses built on the same plan and prettily furnished with every comfort and many æsthetic features, she keeps her boys and girls: here is their playhouse, school-house and all that goes to make life happy for children; there are ponies, donkeys, Jersey cows, calves, lambs, chickens, rabbits, little birds, indeed, pets of all kinds; flower gardens (in which each child has a part) and throughout the year so far as the weather will permit (and the mild climate with the children's hardy habits enables them to do so most of the days) they live in the open air. I have seen many friends and care-takers of children but never such a complete "major general" of little folks as Mrs. Rogerson.

We went first to the nursery and playroom of the smallest. "Here are some ladies that want to see my babies," was her first remark as the little ones clustered round her and she smoothed their heads, rubbed them on the back, patted their little hands, told us their names, chucked them under the chin, "praised them up" and passed on rapidly, leaving them in the most delighted state of mind. Going out on the lawn, she put a silver whistle to her lips and blew several musical notes, when behold, like chickens to the mother hen her brood flocked around her—boys and girls from five to ten and twelve years old. One dear little fellow came toward us on crutches. "Dear lad," she said, softly, "gangrene did it in a wretched slum at two years old, but I am going to train him up for an avocation where it will not block his way in life."

"Here are the kids," she said as they came trooping in from the playroom and the dormitories, many of them leaving their tea-tables to come to us, and all hopping about in high glee, except one little fellow who pulled a face and seemed a little averse until she went to him, rubbed him down the back, patted his cheek, and he came out of his dumps like the sun from behind a cloud. "We have good times, don't we, chickens?" said Mrs. Rogerson, and they all smiled up at her like a posy-bed under a water-pot. Then they trailed after us as she took us from one point to another to see their pets, telling how kind the children were to them and little histories of child and pet intermingled.

Then Mrs. Rogerson grouped her brood under a big tree where, led by her, they gave us a sweet song about 'Scatter sunshine as you go," the motion of her hands guiding them to modulate their little voices. "Would you like a hymn?" she said, and then stood with her hands clasped and head slightly inclined and eyes closed, every single child doing the same, even the gainsaying boys taking it as seriously as if they were so many deacons, and singing of "Gentle Jesus, meek and mild,

Look upon a little child!"

The sight was so touching, the little voices so tender and pleading, the thought of this woman—with her whole soul given over to the hapless little ones who but for her would have been in misery and sin that day, was so inspiring, the sheltering tree bending over our heads, the wide, beautiful prospect from the hill, the clustering homes that she who was the mother of them all, had built the thought that but for Christianity we should not have been there, all these impressions brought tears to every eye and a deep melting of the heart in every breast. We felt as if the children were our own little people, and the woman they loved and who had bestowed upon them all she had, was a sister indeed to us as to them. No scene that I have ever witnessed has more deeply printed on my spirit the truth that we do not really give until we give ourselves. This lady lives with and for the children; feeds, clothes, teaches, mothers them, and their devotion to her in that happy hillside home is such that when they go away, their talk turns to her, their love is focused on her heart, and they come back whenever opportunity affords. They know not only what it is to be sheltered from the "cauld, cauld blast," but to be loved, cherished and warmed in their inmost spirits by the outgoing of a great, warm nature toward their own. We were told that not a child will go to sleep till Mrs. Rogerson has passed along by its bed and bidden it good-night. She makes common cause with them. Those boys are, even if possible, more fond of her than the little girls; they evidently do not think about obedience, but they wish to do just what she would like to have them. We learned that she has no rules, and no punishments except that, when they fail as now and then everybody will, she shows them her grief, takes it all upon herself, and says, "I am afraid I am not doing well for you, I must be mistaken somehow; if I had talked to you wisely, and if I had lived as I ought in this home, and been as truthful and kind as I wanted to be, I am sure this little boy of mine would never have disappointed me. I am sure that he would have been true and good and would have tried his best to make all of us happy." Such a spirit as that on the part of the guiding genius of the place had wrought the marvels that we saw—the perfect at-homeness and at-oneness between the woman who had their destiny in the hollow of her hand and the helpless little waifs for whom her loving kindness had transformed the world.

As we turned to go away I wished to say something to this great-hearted woman that should convey the feelings of my heart, but the words that came unbidden to my lips were these: "What a good thing you've done for yourself!" As soon as uttered I was ready to apologize, but Mrs. Rogerson said: "You have spoken the exact truth; there is no other plan of life I could have followed that would have brought me half so much true happiness."

"I wish more women would follow where you lead," I said, and was rejoiced to learn that a young lady, accomplished, beautiful and rich, who had made a name by reason of her researches in archeology, had been led, on seeing this "home, sweet home," to determine that she, with a dear friend like-minded, would start another oasis for the forlorn on just the plan of this. I also learned that the first name on the list of ladies who agree to help nurse cholera patients, should London be visited by the scourge, is that of the mother-heart that founded this home—a glimpse of which seemed like a peep into the kingdom of heaven.

Reigate, Eng.

WHAT PROHIBITION HAS DONE FOR MAINE.

BY NEAL DOW.

1. We had many distilleries, seven of which and two breweries were in this city. Now we have not one in the state, nor has there been for many years.

2. At the same time a great quantity of West India rum was imported; it came to us by the cargoes, many of them every year. Now not even one puncheon is imported, nor has there been for many years.

3. Before prohibition rum shops were everywhere in in the state, wholesale and retail, no hamlet so small or retired but the rumseller found it and established a grog-shop there. Now, in more than three-fourths of the state, having three-fourths of our population, the grog-shop is unknown. An entire generation has grown up there, never having seen a saloon or the effects of one.

4. The quantity of liquor now sold in the state is not one-twentieth so great as it was before prohibition. In Portland, the largest city, the quantity sold is not one-hundredth part so much as it was, the city being twice larger than it was at the time the law was made.

5. Our people used to spend in strong drink the entire valuation of the state in every period of twenty years, as the nation is now doing in every period of thirty-five years. But now one million dollars will far more than pay for all the liquor smuggled into the state and sold in violation of law.

6. Our state saves annually, directly and indirectly, more than twenty millions of dollars, which but for prohibition would be spent, lost and wasted in drink.

7. Maine is now one of the most prosperous states in the Union; but before the adoption of prohibition it was undoubtedly the poorest.

8. The whole face of the state has been changed for the better. Before the law there were conspicuous indications everywhere of dilapidation, unthrift and decay in shabby churches, shabby school-houses, shabby dwellings, neglected and shabby barns. Now there is nothing of all that, but everywhere are seen conclusive proofs of industry, activity, enterprise and thrift, no dilapidated or neglected buildings anywhere, either public or private, but everywhere unmistakable proofs of an industrious and thrifty people.

9. In 1884, after an experience of the benefits of prohibition for thirty-three years, that policy was put into our constitution by a popular vote, the majority being 47,075, the affirmative vote being three times larger than the negative. There can be no more convincing proof than this, that prohibition in Maine has not been "a failure" as the distillers and brewers declare it to be, but on the contrary a great success.

Portland, Me.

[The above is the contents of the autograph letter of Gen. Neal Dow, sent to the Maine Building at the Columbian Exposition by request of Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, president of the W. C. T. U. of that state. It is said that the "grand old man" of prohibition rises at five o'clock every morning according to a life-time habit, walks three miles daily, and drives fifteen or twenty when the weather permits. Prohibition seems to prohibit disease and death as well as poverty.—EDS.]

RESULT OF INVESTIGATIONS IN INDIA'S CANTONMENTS.

BY DR. KATE BUSHNELL.

We visited in India the hospitals that are maintained not to take care of people, not to take care of women after they fell ill, except to a very small number; but these hospitals, called lock hospitals, which we visited, were hospitals established that the women can be kept at the mercy of the British soldiers as actual slaves in the most literal sense of the word slavery. These lock hospitals were established for their particular benefit that they might go back and forth periodically and be constantly under the surveillance of the military surgeons, that they might attend to their health so that the British soldier need not suffer physically; no matter how utterly licentious he cares to be he is promised security from the results of his own excesses. Then, as Mrs. Andrew has told you, from the time the British soldier reaches India there is the whole paraphernalia of vice provided for him at such trivial cost that it would not equal what he spends for his cigarettes.

Every avenue has been thrown wide open, every encouragement to vice, so that one young man of whom I know, when his mother heard some of our stories (he had been in the army in India and gone home), she said: "This is surely not so, is it?" he burst out crying and said: "Mother, I used to go to those places and pretend I was wicked, because I could not endure the persecution that resulted from my staying away."

This system prevailed for the downward progress of these young men, provided by the representatives of a Christian country, and it is one of the worst reproaches to Christianity that could possibly be conceived.

In view of this fact perhaps some of you who attend can better realize how the hearts of Christian people of the world mourned when the missionaries at the decennial conference in Bombay had nothing to say against the breaking of the seventh commandment in this way.

We visited these hospitals for the constant surveillance and care of these Indian girls, and there we read the records of the hospitals. We have said this was a secret system, and sure enough it was secret as far as the point of allowing England to know what the military officials in India were doing as far back as 1888. This system of things was absolutely prohibited by unanimous resolution in the House of Commons in England. It was secret, then, as far as the British officials in India could make it secret, but there was a point of difficulty there, and it was a point that the Lord showed us, and it was the point upon which the success of our mission turned ultimately.

As we were praying and trying to see some opening through which we could enter and gather the evidence we wanted, it occurred to us that this system of things was greatly to the injury of the natives and if there was any so-called benefit (of course there was no real benefit not even in the protection of the health of the soldiers,) but if there was a supposed benefit, that supposed benefit was not in favor of the natives but in favor of the British, so we felt sure that it would only be a secret system as far as the British are concerned, and they keep the natives entirely in ignorance of the fact that all this that they are doing was in defiance of the government that they were pretending to represent. We went to the natives and we found they were plain and candid and open in telling us all about this system of things, which we could not possibly learn from the standpoint of the English officers.

We visited the lock hospitals, and the native physician of the lock hospital, without any thought that there was any secrecy in the matter, simply spread the hospital books before us and we read the records there, and we took careful note of all that we read, a careful description of the books and their titles. When we returned to England and described what we had learned, not simply from the mouths of the women, though we did tell this, but described what we had seen in the records of the hospitals themselves, an order went out to India immediately that these books be sent home to England. Had they refused to send home these books that would have condemned them; they sent them home and the books condemned them, and we had an opportunity to open these books, forty or fifty of them, more or less, from ten different cantonments in India, and spread them out before the committee of investigation and point out the records made by the British officials condemning themselves, and we had an enormous amount of private evidence upon which we proved our case.

So strong was the evidence that though the commander-in-chief—he was then the commander-in-chief, but since he has been succeeded by Gen. White—although the commander-in-chief had denied that this system of things prevailed in India, when he came to realize what evidence we had found and that there was absolutely nothing to be gained by his denial any longer, he wrote a public apology to us for having ever denied our statement. The matter as you understand will shortly be brought before the British parliament again. The committee that took our evidence has reported, and in a short time the matter will be acted upon. Our latest word from England is that the result of the investigations that were made in India and the way God enabled us to prove the case has created such a sentiment in England as to make the law in India as severe against licentiousness as it is against stealing or murder at the present time, and this is what we want to accomplish.

We have a strangely complacent way of looking upon these awful crimes. I knew a woman named Noble, who lived in one of our cities, and she told me this story of her own accord—it happened to herself. Some of you may remember when they tried to introduce this infamous system of laws into a certain state. The W. C. T. U. started out with a protest against this system of laws and they circulated it throughout that state. My friend, Mrs. Noble, was the one who circulated the protest in her own town.

About this time she was invited to a reception, I think in an adjoining town. It was a grand occasion and when she entered the reception room she found that the lion of the evening was a certain senator and they all seemed interested in him. She was led right up to be introduced, and just after the form of introduction had been uttered, it suddenly dawned upon her that this senator's name was the name of the very man who had introduced this very bill into the legislature and who stood father to it. What did she do? She had walked into the trap, she had said she wanted to be introduced to him, she had been led up to him to be introduced.

I told you her name is Noble. What did she do? She put her hands behind her and she said, "You have made me acquainted with a man who has introduced a bill into the legislature which means degradation to women. I never was so humiliated in all my life." She said it right out before the whole company and they said that this man who had been accustomed to all the delightful, flattering things that could be said to him, visibly weakened under the rebuke, as the people stared in amazement at her quiet, gentle and yet perfectly fearless denunciation of his sin against God and woman, and they said: "Why, he was so weak you could have knocked him down with a feather." And when they told me that I said: "It was a pity there wasn't another W. C. T. U. woman there with a feather to finish him."

I think we have our wonderful way of being extremely merciful to those who have no mercy for womanhood or for childhood and there is something wrong in that which we call mercy, for it does not deserve the name when it opens every door wide for those who go on their infamous errands in society. That is not charity which opens the door wide for the wicked men who walk in only to dupe and deceive innocent girls. It is like having charity for wolves and having none for lambs.

I say to you to-day the greatest fault I have to find with people the world over is that what they are so ready to excuse in man they think is such an awful sin in woman. I say to you plainly that the sin in many women who call themselves virtuous is that they are not too virtuous at all to leave a little sister at the mercy of a wicked man, and consider that it is impossible to interfere in the evil that goes on about them. That is a weakness on the part of so called virtuous women which was sufficient to cause the Lord himself to turn upon these Philistines and hypocrites and speak His condemnation in the words, "The publican and the harlot will go into Heaven ahead of you."

MRS. WARNER SNOAD.

BY HARRIET B. KELLS.

The readers of The Union Signal have long been delightedly familiar with the above name through many unusually inspiring poems, so strongly progressive and singularly tender in their tone that many persons wonder: "Who is Mrs. Warner Snoad?" Fulfilling a long intention, here she is to speak for herself as to looks, and I am sure no one who sees this face will feel less interest in the sweet woman who from her invalid room (since 1882) sends out so many inspired streams from her pen-point for human refreshment and healing.

Mrs. Snoad is of Quaker ancestry; her widowed mother had the good sense to early develop in her only child the qualities of self-government and self-reliance. She tells of herself, that left alone, while yet a girl, by her mother's death, she said pleadingly to a male cousin, a well-known M. P.: "But you will still look after my affairs, won't you?" "Look after them yourself," he answered; "your brains are as good as mine." And this brusque "tossing her up to light on her own feet," if she could, made a capable, wise business woman out of the clinging girl,—as would be the case nine times out of ten if the masculine relative did not live upon the principle that his "women folks have no business sense," at the same time often, alas, proving it by living himself upon the principal of their property!

In a suburb of London, Lee, is "The Lilies," the home which this brave-hearted "woman's woman" makes ideal for her daughter, an only child, and for the husband of whom she says, "to me the best and truest friend that woman could desire." Here from her invalid's couch, like our own Jennie Casseday, this sweet spirit, "finely touched," touches others "to fine issues." Though still a young woman, a life-time's work mounts up splendidly behind her. Her poems make several volumes, the chief being "Echoes of Life"; but these she looks upon as her lighter recreations and not the grave service she owes to the world. Her first efforts were for the London working girls, many of them country bred, without protection, and subsisting on starvation wages, liable to cease whenever business grows "slack." In their interest she wrote "Our Working Girls," which proved a most successful revelator and stimulus to the public conscience. Her work for this class brought her into contact with those who had fallen beneath the double agony of hunger and temptation, and Mrs. Snoad has long been a fearless and relentless worker for social purity. "Knowing," she says, "that many lives and constitutions are ruined by wrong thinking and wrong training in girlhood, I wrote 'Our Daughters,'" which article has been copied wherever the English language is spoken; her letters on "Wholesome Food for the Poor" have resulted in the establishment of several public kitchens.

A work at the other end of the social scale greatly enlisted Mrs. Snoad's sympathetic efforts. This was "the poor lady" question which has been somewhere defined as "governesses, who have toiled all the best years of their life, frequently to support others dependent upon them, and have thus found it impossible to save; companions who are too old to be companionable; and worse than all, women who have been accustomed to comfort and luxury, but who have been forbidden to work, forbidden to learn anything useful, forbidden to stir one step out of the conventional groove, and who find themselves, at their father's death or bankruptcy, middle-aged women unable to do anything of a marketable value; and whom no one will employ." For this pathetic class Mrs. Snoad, jointly with Miss Keene, in 1881, founded the Belmont Home, the associate directorship of which she still retains.

WARNER SNOAD.

Whatever touches woman grapples Mrs. Snoad's heart inevitably as Satan does unredeemed territory. So it is not a surprise to find her the president of the Woman's Progressive Society whose object is the advancement of women politically and socially—to help women to help themselves by education concerning the laws under which they live, the management of money, and the need of women in public life. It has no sex or class, or race distinctions, and has vice-presidents in all the leading countries of the globe. This work has brought its president into communication with many of the world's great spirits, and among others she proudly shows letters from the late Lord Beaconsfield (Disraeli), Robert Browning and the Queen of Roumania. She says in a personal letter, "I value very greatly the kind letters I frequently receive from my American readers. They are too numerous to keep account of, but I should like them to know how much I appreciate them, and how greatly I admire your glorious people."

During the Columbian Exposition, in her official capacity, Mrs. Snoad sent an address to the Woman's Congress. This resulted in the organization of the International Women's Union, of which Mrs. Snoad is president, and an account of which is in another column.

Beside all these great things this versatile woman has been the head of an association for the relief of the Jews in Palestine, driven thither by persecution in other lands; was one of the staff of Work and Leisure, and keeps her pen busy for over thirty English and foreign papers, rather dictates matter for them, not being strong enough to write.

It is unnecessary to state that such a woman believes the ballot for women to be the great liberator not only of woman but of man, the white wing of the angel which shall brush away the webs of the old myths of sex and their monster injustice and brutality toward the human race. Mrs. Snoad stands for peace, for justice, for the human brotherhood Christ lived to win, for the triumph of spirit over body—of which she is a daily example—and does it all with such tact that it is said, "Nobody says of her, 'save us from our friends'!" A contemporary, otherwise says: "Every woman who has the real interests of humanity at heart should pray for the restoration of this bright and radiant spirit."

Chicago, Ill.

THE INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S UNION.

Dear Union Signal:—To an address sent by Mrs. Warner Snoad to the Congress of Women in Chicago we can trace the real commencement of the International Women's Union, although it had been "in the air" for some months previous. Many people, doubtless, recognized that much strength was wasted through want of more concerted work, knowledge of other movements and organized information upon international efforts, but it was not until the paper of Mrs. Snoad had publicly drawn attention to it, that steps were taken to make communication between workers all over the world as simple as ordinary communication between friends.

In the short time since then the union has become firmly rooted in twelve countries, a success which more than justifies its formation and which is due in large degree to the energy of Mrs. Snoad, its gifted president. Although other international societies exist, none work by the unique methods adopted by the International Women's Union.

The aim of the union is not to start a new society, but to bring together workers of all nationalities for exchange of ideas and a center of information. Its object is not to call big international meetings, but to give assistance in daily work.

It is proposed to form branches in every country, which may be either distinct from or part of existing societies, as the respective vice-presidents and members of the Foreign Council may deem advisable. Each branch is free as to its methods, and makes its own by-laws.

The officers of the International Women's Union are: Mrs. Warner Snoad, president. Vice-Presidents.—Belgium: M. Louis Frank,* Mlle. Marie Popelin.* Germany: Frau Dina Morgenstern,* Dr. Max Schmid, Frau J. Kettler.* Denmark: M. Frederik Bajer, M. P.,* Mrs. Bajer.* England: Lady Henry Somerset, Viscountess Harberton, Lady Bowyer, Mrs. Massingberd. Finland: Dr. E. Westermarck. France: Mde. Maria Martin,* M. Leon Richer, Mde. V. Griess-Traut, Mlle. Deraismes.* United States: Mrs. Clara B. Colby,* Col. T. W. Higginson, Mrs. Livermore,* Miss Frances Willard. Holland: Mde. Drucker.* Switzerland: Dr. Emilie Kempin.* India: Hon. D. Naaraji, M. P.* Italy: Signorina Rosettina Amadori,* Signora Schiff. Norway: Mrs. Ragna Neilson.*

Foreign Council and Corresponding members.—Finland: Miss Helena Westermarck. New South Wales: Mrs. K. Gent. New Zealand: Mrs. Janet Plimmer. United States: Georgia: Mrs. Claudia H. Howard; Colorado: Mrs. Lucy N. McIntyre; Kansas: Miss G. L. Hawley, Mrs. Sarah C. Hall, M. D.; Ohio: Mrs. Eliz. Cherry Haire, Mrs. Claudia Q. Murphy; South Carolina: Mrs. Virginia D. Young; Connecticut: Prof. Howard Young; Louisiana: Mrs. Oberchain; Kentucky: Mrs. Lyle Saxon; New York: Mrs. Lillie D. Blake.

Home Council.—Miss E. H. Ashwin, Mrs. Hedley-Duncan,† Miss Hole, Miss Fraser,† Mrs. Grey, Mrs. Stevens.

Hon. secretary, Mrs. Worrall, 55 Manor Park, Lee, S. E. Hon. Vice-secretaries, Miss Helen New, Mlle. De Montpeusier. Hon. treasurer, Mrs. De Rheims, 46 Charleville Road, West Kensington, W.

Many of these are names of world-wide fame and are not mere ornamental figure-heads, but for the most part active and enthusiastic workers. The members of the foreign council send twice yearly to the president a brief report of the progress made in their country, and find some paper willing to publish an occasional report of the work in all countries; already many papers are placed at the service of the union.

The names marked * are also members of the Foreign or Home Councils.

The names marked † are members of the Executive Committee.

Provision is also made for the affiliation of clubs or societies on payment of a small yearly fee, entitling them to the official organ of the union, etc. The English executive committee consists, in addition to president, treasurer and secretaries, of three members drawn from the Home Council, and has power to choose officers and add to the Council or its own number. The subscription has been fixed at a minimum of 2*s.* 6*d.*, but it must be evident that this amount alone will not be sufficient to carry on the work efficiently.

The objects of the union, which has in a few months received such wide-spread and illustrious support, are 1. The enfranchisement of women in every country. 2. The preservation of peace. 3. The promotion of friendly intercourse and united effort between workers of all nationalities.

How practical the aid of the union can be is shown by the vast amount of information it has already afforded to its many members. It is, in fact, a bureau of universal information, supplying members of all nationalities with particulars of any institution or society, introducing them to others interested in their special line of work, etc., etc. Earnest workers are particularly desired, more especially to take the position of corresponding members, to assist in removing some of the excess of work at present resting on a few, and which is a severe strain upon the delicate health of our president. Names sent to the secretary will be brought before the committee at once.

London, Eng. W. R. ORMANDY.

'RAH FOR JERSEY!

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The Philadelphia Press says: "The (New Jersey) Prohibitionists polled 8,520 votes, which was more than last year, when they polled 7,918. The heavy prohibition vote was a surprise to many."

Notwithstanding it was an "off year," the tremendous provocation to Prohibitionists to fuse with anything and everything to down the race-track and gambling legislative candidates, and no stronger and more potent appeals were ever made, yet, not only did the Prohibitionists "stand four square to every wind that blew," but they actually gained 601 votes over 1892. Well done, Jersey! "True blue',' indeed.

How was such a splendid gain against such a combination of adverse circumstances made? Consummate leadership and powerful editorials in The Temperance Gazette, and other prohibition organs had, no doubt, much to do in bringing about such a victory. Other means contributed to the same end, if we are not greatly mistaken.

The broad-gauge plank, the Jonah, was thrown overboard. Bearing in mind how William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Beecher, Lovejoy, the immortal Whittier, with scores of others, trained their guns on slavery only, so in this '93 campaign in Jersey, prohibition of the liquor traffic was the one fort assaulted, not even listening to a public discussion of the tariff or silver question. Neither was there a quasi indorsement of Populist, Republican, or Democratic views, as some of them might possibly accord with those of Prohibitionists who cannot forget past party predilections or lingering streaks of sympathy.

The stock in trade of an occasional orator for getting a party "into a hole" because of meanness received no encouragement whatever, as being neither logical nor forceful, and about as reasonable as for an evangelist during a religious revival to contend that a person ought to become a Christian just because some one denomination ignores its creed or doctrine. Hewing straight to the line of prohibition, keeping steadily in view "this one thing I do," the glad, welcome news—an actual gain of 601 votes in '93 over '92.

We believe it will be so generally when we duly consider the drink traffic as it affects capital and labor, the drink habit as it concerns the individual, the home, the church socially, morally, intellectually and financially.

En route. E. T. SCOTT.

MEMORIAL IN JAPAN FOR MISS WEST.

DEAR WHITE RIBBON SISTERS:—I think some of you who attended the last World's convention remember me as delegate of the Japanese temperance union. I made Miss West's memorial address at the convention. It was published in THE DAILY UNION SIGNAL, of the 17th of October.

I suppose most of THE UNION SIGNAL'S readers were acquainted with Miss West or heard of her. I am sure those who knew her loved her and felt very sad when they learned of her death in Japan.

Most of you have read of her hard work while she was in our country and how we loved her. We wish to have a fine building for her memory. We know it would have an unspeakable influence over the Japanese Islands. Most of our buildings are built with wood, but we intend to build this with bricks or stone so that this will last for a long, long time.

We need ten thousand dollars for building it. Our Japanese sisters had already raised about five hundred dollars when I left home. We have about two hundred and fifty white ribbon sisters in our union, but there are many who are not able to give any money, although they wish to.

This five hundred dollars came from seventy-five sisters. As you know, our country is not as rich as America, and most of our women do not have their own properties. It is not easy work to raise five hundred dollars among them. I will tell you how they made so much money. Some of them sold their nice dresses, and some of them decided not to make any new dress for a certain period, so that they can save money for this purpose.

They are trying to raise more money from all the people who knew Miss West. I have not heard, yet, how much they raised since I left home, but I know there are many who loved her and are willing to do something for her. So I am sure we can raise some from them, but not enough for our purpose.

I wish to ask each of you who knew her or heard of her to give one dollar for Miss West Memorial Hall. If you cannot give that amount we will gladly receive whatever sum you can. If you are able to give more than one dollar we would be very glad. Please send the money before the first of May to Mrs. Chika Sakurai, Moody Bible Institute, 230 La Salle Ave., Chicago, Ill.

If I were going to use this money for myself I would feel quite timid, but if I could have so much help from you how much good we can do for the temperance work in Japan, so I feel quite bold in asking your help. We intend to build in the central part of Tokio, which is the capital, and make it the headquarters of the Japanese Temperance Union, and rent some rooms in it, so that we can have some income for the temperance work. Please take the trouble of showing this letter to those who do not take THE UNION SIGNAL. CHIKA SAKURAI.

Chicago, Ill.

WASHINGTON TEMPERANCE NEWS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The District of Columbia has an "Anti-Saloon League," composed of delegates from the different churches, religious and temperance societies in the District. Each society is entitled to two delegates, and there is a vice-president from each organization and church. Various denominations, including the Roman Catholic, are represented on the executive committee. This League was organized during the early months of summer, and has occasioned the liquor men a great deal of trouble and anxiety. A clerk at the District building keeps a record of all applications for license, with all the signatures appended thereto. The temperance paper of the District, No Compromise, publishes each month a list of license applications, with the signatures of property owners and residents. Sometimes the names of church members and others who pose as friends of temperance are found upon these papers. In one case it was discovered that a Lutheran clergyman had written a letter, saying he had no objection to the excise board granting a license to a certain saloon within the prescribed "four hundred foot limit" laid down by the new liquor law, which was prepared by the liquor men themselves, passed last March at their behest and which they are already dissatisfied with, and are using every means to have amended, so that it will be in all respects perfectly satisfactory to themselves.

In another case a Catholic priest sent a letter testifying to the "respectability" of a bar-room in the immediate vicinity of his church. The conduct of this priest, however, was in marked contrast to the action of Rev. Father Gillespie, of St. Aloysius church, who personally secured protests against granting a license to one Callagahan who wished to open a bar-room within four hundred feet of the church and the parish schools. The Rev. Father also employed counsel, and in company with several Methodist ministers, and women of the W. C. T. U. appeared before the excise board, and defeated the application. This was a great victory for the temperance element in this locality.

One result of the work of the "Anti-Saloon League" is exhibited in the friendly relations existing between Catholic and Protestant temperance workers, which is illustrated by the fact that Mr. Edward J. Redmond, president of the Father Mathew Total Abstinence Society, lately addressed a temperance meeting in Fifteenth Street M. E. church, and has accepted an invitation to speak in another Methodist church in the near future, while Mr. S. H. Walker, a prominent Methodist, addresses temperance meetings of the Catholic societies.

Among other facts unearthed by the League is the signing of a license application by a prominent member of Congress from a prohibition state. It was impossible for the applicant to obtain a license until the signature of this congressman was secured. This saloon is also near a church and vigorous protests were made by pastor and people, but the name of the congressman was sufficient to defeat the moral element. If temperance voters in the states would devote their attention to sending men of prohibition principles to Congress a practical good would be accomplished. Prohibitionists are needed in the National Legislature.

While the League does not expect to close all the saloons at once, it is laying the foundations for a persistent, practical, aggressive warfare. Through its clerk it watches all applications for license and takes care that none slip through without complying strictly with the law. Through its executive committee it watches legislation and will prevent the hasty railroading of bills through Congress for the saloon-keeper's benefit. It arranges frequent public meetings in various sections of the city, and aims to keep up a continual agitation which of itself must prove educational and therefore helpful.

Much literature is distributed personally and by mail, fraudulent signatures to license applications exposed, churches reached and interested through their delegates, a feeling of cordial fellowship and union promoted among the workers from all churches and societies, and altogether an impetus given to the temperance cause which the liquor men are quick to see and appreciate and equally quick to marshal their forces to overcome.

Washington, D. C. M. B. P.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and the power of his might. Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked.—Eph. 6: 10, 16.

What wonderful things might transpire during the year 1894 if all white-ribboners would use the shield of faith. When about to undertake some work for the Master Satan is sure to whisper: "Don't attempt such a foolish thing; you will not be able to succeed—besides, you will become a laughing-stock to others." Or when moved to do a generous deed for another, he whispers that odious and well-worn saw (which has dealt a death-blow to so many generous deeds), "Charity begins at home." If we could realize what it means to be "strong in the Lord and in the power of His might," there would be no end of accomplishment in His name. Do you know what I believe would come to pass if we were properly grounded in the faith, even at this time of the greatest financial crisis that has been known in this country for fifty years? In spite of it we would be able to raise the entire indebtedness of the Temple and present to the National W. C. T. U. our "House Beautiful," free of debt upon the society attaining its majority next December. What a grand climax! On account of our lack of faith this consummation, so devoutly to be hoped, is not likely to happen.

***

The year has opened most auspiciously, and brought to the Temple a royal new year's gift of $1,800. It is a bequest from an aged man of God, Samuel Simpson, Garfield, Wash. He writes he is seventy-six years old, is feeble, and anxious to arrange his earthly affairs that he may be ready for the call of his Master. He says he is desirous to see the kingdom of Christ prosper, "and that includes temperance and woman suffrage." Hence he sends the bequest to help pay for the Temple. The gift is in the form of notes which mature in 1896 and 1898, bearing ten per cent interest—secured by real estate mortgages. In consideration of this gift we give a written guarantee to pay to Mr. Simpson during the residue of his life, six per cent interest on the amount bequeathed us. He says he has given other religious bodies money with a like proviso. We enter into the details of the manner in which this legacy has been made, hoping that others may be inspired by it. This wise and noble Christian man, in becoming his own executor, has arranged his financial affairs in such a way that he has an assured income while he lives, and at his death he knows the money is doing good in the channel in which he desired it to go. Are there not more of our good temperance men and women who are making preparations for their heavenly journey, that would like to aid our great and holy cause by bequests of a like character, which would bring them a stated income while they lived, and would be doing the highest good after their departure?

***

How we honor the brave unions at a time of such financial disaster as the present, who with faith and courage undaunted send in their hundred dollar pledges, to be paid within one or two years. The following unions have thus pledged: Buckeystown, Md.: Norfolk, Va.; Y. W. C. T. U., Duluth, Minn.; Ware, Mass.; Barton, Fla.; Westerly, R. I.; Marissa, Ills.; Central W. C. T. U., Springfield, Mass.; Mexia, Tex.; Kennet Square, Pa.; Lisbon, N. D. In the letter inclosing the pledge of the Lisbon W. C. T. U., its president, Mrs. M. M. Saunders, sends the following brave and prophetic message: "The Temple shall be paid for; it is God's work, and in the strength of the Lord shall our hosts press on to victory. Be of good cheer; the Lord is with thee." Mrs. Abbie M. Brooks, president of the South Boston W. C. T. U., in sending a pledge for the union, has the following kind words: "The South Boston union has heretofore thought the demand from its own vicinity quite equal to the length of its purse, but we are rejoiced at your recent complete vindication, and to give expression to the substantial character of our joy pledge $100 for the House Beautiful." From the tone of the following letter, written by the secretary of the Lockland, O., W. C. T. U., Mrs. Stewart, we judge the members of the union have on the shield of faith. "It is with pleasure," writes Mrs. Stewart, "we send you our pledge; we have agreed to raise $100 for the Temple, and have sent $22.90. We are blest at everything we undertake." Miss Mamie M. Miller, president of the Y's of Pittsfield, Mass., sends a $100 pledge. She writes: "We are very glad to do this. At first it seemed a great undertaking, but when we came to think it over and divide it among our members, we found it was not very much, after all, as 'many hands make light work.' "

***

We hope our friends will continue their dollar gifts until the entire cast of the Columbian souvenirs is disposed of. Every white-ribboner who loves our great leader and our House Beautiful should possess one. It is something that the generation following us will greatly value. We expect to send out more mite-boxes this year than ever before, since making such a liberal offer for the year 1894. Remember, a solid silver Temple souvenir spoon to all persons who secure $3.65 in their mite-box during the year. All persons who desire to secure the gift must send to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, The Temple, Chicago, for a mite-box and enter their name for prize. All drafts and money orders should be made out in the name of William D. Preston, treasurer, and sent to our financial secretary, Miss Sara G. Johnson, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

"AM I MY BROTHER'S KEEPER?"

Thou art thy brother's keeper and he is thine;
Each to the other owes a certain due;
Should he, less stanch, to lower planes decline,
The greater need that thou be doubly true.

"The flesh is weak." Thou knowest Frailty well,
And thou hast suffered Indecision's surge;
Then wilt thou halt to turn his feet from hell
When thine have stood upon the dangerous verge?

Fayette, Mo.

SALVATIONISTS IN FRANCE.

BY "LA MARECHALE."

This Sunday evening Paris is all alive. The Boulevards are brilliantly lighted; at the theatre doors a crowd of people are waiting their turn to enter. Outside the opera and at the entrance of their Hall, the Salvationists are pushing their notices and inviting the people into the meeting. As half-past eight approaches, the hall is filled and the side doors are opened to make more room. At the opening hymn we are aware that we have a difficult audience to deal with, but moral force and patience win the day.

Who is this tall lady who rises to speak? Every eye is fixed on her and she has evidently succeeded in gaining the attention of that audience in a remarkable manner. One can see it costs her a desperate effort to speak, and the deep earnestness portrayed in her voice carries conviction to her hearers. Eight months ago we find her a perfect infidel, worse than that, being really hostile to all religion, having seen so much glaring inconsistency and hypocrisy. She had occasion at this time to enter our little flat for a few days, but she had not been with me five minutes before she declared that it was altogether useless for me to try to convert her to religion. "For," she said, "I have seen too much, and the professors of religion are either infidel, imbecile or hypocrites. Now there was a time when I was sincere and sought the truth, but I was cruelly deceived. If I had not had something which held me back I might have fallen very low, for the last germ of faith in religion was destroyed in my soul. I gave myself up then to study to become a doctor, and my various experiences in the hospitals with students, and also entering into the houses of the rich where my profession called me, all have confirmed me in my infidelity, for those who profess religion are no better for it. They are just as selfish, as vain, as worldly, as those who make no profession whatever!"

I quietly listened to her as she continued some time in this strain. Then I ventured to ask her one thing: "Has your infidelity brought you happiness and peace?" She looked at me with an indescribable sadness in her eyes. "What, me happy! Never! My life is not worth four half-pennies. I have intended several times to commit suicide. I wish I were dead; I wish I had never been born."

Then I spoke to her of the cause of all her unhappiness, sin. The Holy Ghost helped me wonderfully to convey light to that dark mind. I did not say much the three following days, but we privately prayed that God would deal with her. Our servant told me that she had said to her: "I do not know what is the matter with me, I feel so troubled; there is such an atmosphere of peace and love in this house. I never found it anywhere else." Another day she said: "I am so happy here I want nothing to eat but bread and water!" One night, after hearing the commissioner pray with me in my room, she knocked at the door and came sobbing to the bedside asking me to teach her how to pray! Then followed a confession of one of the saddest lives I have ever heard.

Jesus listened, pardoned, soothed and comforted. What a transformation from the very first day, even in her face. No more novel reading and no more money wasted in luxurious toilet; on the contrary, every shilling she can spare is put by to help us in saving shipwrecked souls like hers.

At the time of her conversion there was a quarrel of eight years standing between her and her husband. I showed her that her pride must yield and she must forgive him. This was the hardest cross of all, as she was very proud; but Jesus' love eventually conquered and she received him back and lives with him now. This is eight months ago; now she is a soldier enrolled in our Rue Auber corps and she takes our literature, and testifies not only in public, but in the rich houses where her profession calls her, and many an opportunity she has of speaking to souls dead in sin. Her husband, although an infidel, has been to thank us for the wonderful change he says we have wrought in his wife; but divine power alone can work such miracles as these!

The day she left our house she wrote: "All is dark and dismal in the weather of the outside world, but all is sunshine in my soul." Testifying upon Salle Auber platform last week, she said: "When I used to hear of the Salvationists, or meet them in their strange bonnets, I thought them half mad; but when I first came in personal contact with them I soon saw that it was I who was mad, quite mad, for I was losing my soul. During the last months I have endured more mockery and scorn than in all my previous life, but I have also had more happiness and peace crowded into these eight months than in all the years of my life put together."

Such is the work of the Holy Ghost which we appeal to you to help us to carry on. Upon our friends and subscribers who share with us in the work by just that kind of help we are unable to give—financial help—upon them and upon their response must largely depend whether we are to be crippled in our efforts, or strengthened and sustained. This year opens to us as one of very great financial embarrassment.

Last year I crossed the Atlantic and visited sixty American cities in quest of help. This year I cannot go. All my time and strength have been claimed by the work itself. I have just traveled right round France and Switzerland holding meetings. My husband's hands are more than full, with the heavy responsibilities which ever weigh upon him in the management of the business side of our work, and his journeys, councils and literary efforts.

Look across in thought at the forty millions of France. Think of the history of this nation. Think of the legacy of darkness, infidelity and indifference left by all the moral earthquakes which have shaken the country,—its St. Bartholomew—its revolutions—its Voltaire. And coming down in thought to more recent times, picture to yourself the insidious effect in thinking circles of the degraded, enfeebled, "Jesus" of Renan, whose publisher is our very next door neighbor! Think of the gay and godless capital, the queen of this world's fashion, whose breezy laugh of mockery sounds daily in the ears of Christ's Parisian disciples.

Think of this beautiful infidel France and the millions who go laughing down to hell! Remember the Christ who died for every soul within its far-reaching frontiers. Then think of us. . . And help us. . . Help us for His dear sake!

THE WIFE'S CHECK-BOOK.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Some time ago a very suggestive and practical article in the Congregationalist gave a wife's experience in managing the finances of the family as partner in business with her husband. Both husband and wife in that charming little essay drew upon the same bank account. A more excellent way, I think, is one which has been adopted by a friend of mine, who gives his wife on the first of every month a fixed sum, which she deposits, and from which she draws for the payment of all household expenses, for the children's clothing and her own, and for certain purposes which belong to both husband and wife in common. The only stipulation made by the husband is that the wife shall never allow her balance to fall below a definite sum, which he wishes her to leave as a margin. If she has on occasion greater than usual demands upon her exchequer, he cheerfully supplements the sum in bank, so that she suffers no anxiety about ways and means. The separate bank account and independent financial management of the income, in this case, work admirably to the content of all concerned.

That the wife should be a mendicant, even a petted and indulged mendicant, is not to the conserving of her proper place in the household. When she took her husband's name and merged her own life in his she became entitled to her full share in their common interests, as truly, by virtue of her position, responsible for the right spending and right administering of the family funds as her husband for the earning of them. This is generally understood among artisans, mechanics and people belonging to the class of wage earners whose labor is repaid by a salary. The weekly wages are apportioned to a penny between the cost of rent, fuel, food and clothing, and the wife is nearly always the treasurer and frequently the sole manager of the money her husband earns. There is seldom cause for irritation and complaint in the families of men whose income is an established one, however limited, and paid over to them in weekly or monthly sums.

It is the fluctuating income of the merchant or the professional man, the man who desires his wife to make a good appearance and convey to society an impression of his prosperity, which often causes heart-burning and sometimes wrecks domestic happiness. A man naturally generous may have a very mistaken idea of the amount necessary to carry on a family in easy comfort, to dress wife and children, to pay the wages of servants and to provision the garrison against all contingencies. Most married women dislike to ask their husbands for money, just as most grown daughters prefer not to put in such a claim upon their fathers, and a delicate care for the wife's sensitive feeling on the subject will lead a truly loving husband never to allow in her that distress. A business-like review of probable income and outgo, an apportionment of expenses, with something left over for those extras on which one never can count beforehand, would make the difference in many homes between irritating friction and tranquil, mutual understanding.

While speaking of domestic finances we should not overlook the fact that the children in the family are reasonable beings, and as early as possible should possess the father's and mother's confidence with regard to this very important matter—the right spending or saving of money. An allowance to each child and the teaching each child to keep accounts is one of the best ways to induce in children responsibility about money. This allowance should be very small at first and should be gradually increased with the child's increasing years. Beyond this, however, as the young people grow up they ought to know something of the family affairs, so that they may intelligently sympathize with their parents in their aims and endeavors and that they may be armed against the temptation to a selfish extravagance.—Selected.

TYPICAL LESSONS FOR LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION TEACHERS.

V.

Water in the Household.

BY MARY E. RUDD.

Opening Exercises:—New song for to-day, "Raise your Hands," page 48, Marching Songs. Prayer, followed by hymn, and song chosen by children. Repeat the texts reverently, and let the children tell more of the "whatsoevers." Practice new song with motions.

Rhythmical exercise, 15 minutes, followed by thirty minute lesson. One morning when Dot and Trot were playing as busy as could be they heard their mamma call them, and she said: "Dot and Trot, I wish you would go down to the spring and bring me a pail of water." So they trotted along, saying the little rhyme they had known a long time, "Jack and Jill." They thought perhaps the reason why Jack fell down was because he didn't look to see where he stepped. So they were very careful, and brought the pail safely to their mamma. And what do you suppose she was going to do with that pail of water? (The answers will be various, expressing the children's ideas as to the use of water, and may be supplemented by suggestions of your own until you are astonished at the necessity of water in the household.) Use the ideas brought out as the basis of a little talk on cooking and cleanliness. The children will be interested. They always are in telling how their mamma makes the cake and bread, especially if they are allowed to show how the cake is stirred or the bread moulded. Some little one may tell of the wine-sauce her mamma makes, and you may have a chance to set the young ideas right on the subject of liquor in food. It is a great subject. You cannot dispose of it in one lesson. Save a great many things you would like to say for future use.

Then as to cleanliness. You can only touch upon the subject to-day. Go back to the little song, "Raise your Hands." Notice whether the hands are clean. Give kind praise to those who have clean hands, and advice to those who have not, but be careful not to humiliate. Express the hope that another time all the hands will be clean. Speak of the pleasure it gives to have clean hands and face, how comfortable we feel when we have been washed, and how nice we look.

But not only must we have clean hands, but clean feet as well. Do not be afraid to tell the children that the feet ought to be bathed every day, especially before going to bed. Who would want to get into a nice, clean bed with dirty feet? The suggestion may prove a hint to some mother, for in too many homes, otherwise orderly, the children's bed is the neglected part of the housework. If you have time tell them about the wonderful skin that covers the body. Show the pores with a magnifying glass, and speak of the necessity of keeping these little openings free from dirt.

Games, 10 minutes:—After five minutes marching for rest, let the children, one at a time, walk about, carrying a small pail on the head. Explain to them that some people carry burdens on the head instead of in the hands. If the pail is too light to balance put a little sand in it, but do not make it heavy. Rightly used, there is no better exercise for the child.

Occupation:—Cut from some catalogue, such as may be obtained at any large hardware store, cooking utensils of various kinds, also articles pertaining to cleanliness, such as bath-tubs, wash-basins, etc. These may be mounted on cardboard. If any child has several, carefully distinguish between the two kinds by pasting one on the right hand side of the card, the other on the left. Close as usual.

Chicago, Ill.

JOHNNY LEA.

BY M. ALICE BROWN.

I'm Johnny Lea, just ten years old,
A sturdy L. T. L.,
My badge is blue, to this I'm true,
And 'tend my chapter well.

I'll never smoke nor chew, indeed
'Tis just a fearful waste
Of needed cash, for poisonous trash
Repulsive to my taste.

In apples ripe with rosy cheeks,
I'll take, whene'er I may,
My cider sweet as food to eat
It's just the safest way.

Instead of beer, the nice sweet milk
That Brindle gives I'll take;
'Tis better far, nor will it mar,
The path I strive to make.

When I'm a man I'll vote for right
Till each saloon is gone,
And all our land curse free shall stand,—
My name will then be John!

Lombard, Md.

THE ROBIN'S STORY.

BY AGNES E. VOLENTINE. (AGED ELEVEN.)

I am a little robin. Some people call me "Robin Redbreast" because I have a red breast. I wish it was blue, gray, or some other color, though.

I have one fault. I like to eat strawberries and such things. The boys say I do a great deal of harm in this way and they try to kill me. But how can I let such tempting food alone, when it is right before me? Like other birds, I would starve if I had nothing to eat.

Though I have never been killed yet, I have just got over a wound caused by one of the boy's stones. This is the way it happened: One cold day last winter I was cuddled up on a fence rail trying to keep warm, when some boys in the pasture saw me, and one of them said:

"Say, Jim, there's one of those nasty robins on that fence. Come on, let's kill it."

I was too benumbed with cold to move quickly, and suddenly a sharp pang came in my side and I fell from the fence and behind a pile of snow. The boys hunted me a long time but could not find me, and at last they went away.

It was a good deal colder on the snow than on the fence and my side hurt me so that I could hardly breathe. I thought that likely I was going to die.

Pretty soon a little girl came along pulling a sled behind her. She stopped and looked in my direction, and said: "Poor little robin! some bad boys must have hurt you. You shall go right home with me."

She held me gently in one hand, and pulled the sled with the other. After awhile we came in sight of a small, white house. The little girl left her sled, and went in at the door.

"Why, Jennie, where did you get that robin?" said a kind lady, looking up from her sewing.

"I found it on the other side of the fence in the snow. See how badly it is hurt!"

I was immediately put on a newspaper near the fire, and my wounds were wrapped in some old cloth. Day after day I grew better, and I began to think that perhaps I should not die, after all. I felt very, very thankful to the little girl and her mother for being so kind to me, and wished I could talk—as people do—and tell them my gratitude. One day the little girl (Jennie) took me out of the house and set me on the ground, saying, "Now, Robin, you can go anywhere you want to." And I did; and here I am, sitting on a barn roof writing to you.

Now, boys—and girls, too—I want to tell you one thing before I stop: Never! never! throw stones at robins, or any other kind of a bird. Good-by,

ROBIN REDBREAST.

New Douglas, Ill.

TO FIND out your own age or that of any other person, multiply the number of the month of your birth by 2, add 5, multiply by 50, add your age (or the other boy's or girl's), subtract 365, add 115, and the last two numbers of the result will indicate the exact age.

UNCLE JOHN'S TALKS.

XVII.

SOLDERING.

Eh? So this is your first visit since the holidays. Well, I hope you found as much pleasure if you were away from home as I did at home. Wherever Aunt Mary is, that is my home. And I guess you'll find us together in the next life, just the same. We must be ourselves, over there, if we are anybody; and I could not be myself without her.

She wants me to tell you a dozen things which we shall not have time for. Just now she is rejoicing over this dust-pan. Said she should have a long, perpendicular handle, when she got rich. She learned that expression in her young days, before she had so many nice things. And she learned something else, too. She learned to do everything herself, because she had no big brother; and even yet she forgets to call on me, sometimes. So I brought her dust-pan out to the shop. Then I cut off the handle, set it up toward the sky, soldered it on, and unsoldered the end piece so as to make a tube. Then I put in a stick a yard long. You ought to see her use it. She takes Bessie's little broom with a handle like a yard stick, and goes around just looking for dust, she is so glad to get it up without breaking her back.

Can't solder? Well, I might have told you about soldering long ago, only I could not say everything at once. Yes, you must all learn, girls the same as boys. You can save the cost every year, besides having the satisfaction of whole utensils. And you may want to make tin toys, or do work for less ambitious neighbors and earn a few dimes. You will need a fifty cent soldering-"iron," which is copper, a twenty-five cent stick of ½ and ½ solder, a spoonful of muriatic acid and some powdered rosin. Put scraps of zinc into acid as long as they make it boil; or you can buy five cents worth of "soldering acid" from any tinner. Keep it in a bottle, and apply it with a stick. Mine, you see, is pushed into the cork, so the cork forms a handle, and saves the fingers. Keep it away from children. The copper must be filed to a nice point, and then "tinned." Have a narrow box about an inch deep to keep these things in. Put in some rosin and acid, heat the iron—for they never call it copper—and melt off some drops of solder. Now rub the iron back and forth in the mixture, until the point is covered with solder so as to look like new silver. That is called tinning, and is necessary in order to make it attract other solder when at work. I always give it a few rubs when I put it away, as it is hot, then, and sure to be ready for use next time.

Now that the iron is tinned, you must be careful about heating it. If reddened in a coal fire, you lose the "tin." And here is where the little kerosene stove comes in so nicely. Lay the iron across the top, and it will get hot enough without being overheated—which cannot be said of ordinary fires. When you come to actual work, you will learn many things which we have not time to take up. I can only give you a few general points. First, do not try to use the iron as a mason uses his trowel, to spread the solder. Have it hot enough to melt it, and then let it flow to its place. This is the only way to get a smooth surface. Never forget this point. For bright tin, use rosin. For greasy surfaces, or wherever rosin fails, and you do not wish to scrape them bright, use the acid. No harm in putting them together. You cannot bridge very large chasms; so you must be careful to bring the pieces close together. For pin holes, a mere touch is enough. In angles where a large quantity of solder is required, do not try to lift it on the iron, but put in some of the drops that are lying around the tinning-field. As in all mechanical things, you must practice. Go to a tin-shop, and make life a burden to the workmen. Mend every old pail you can find; and some day when other things fail, you can make a living as a traveling tinker.

Vineland, N. J.

A HAPPY COUPLE.

once knew a couple
Who lived in the wood;
Up in the tree-top
Their dwelling it stood.

The summer it came,
And the summer it went;
And they still lived on,
Though they paid no rent.

Their parlor was lined
With the softest of wool;
Their kitchen was warm,
And their pantry full.

And four little babies
Peeped out at the sky;
You never saw darlings
So pretty and shy!

—Open Eyes.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—In a recent Chicago daily a startling item appeared, which was headed

ONE MAY DIE.

THREE SMALL BOYS FOUND HELPLESSLY DRUNK.

The sad paragraph then went on to tell how three boys aged eleven, twelve and thirteen years were found in a vacant lot on Cottage Grove avenue lying unconscious on the ground with several empty liquor bottles around them. They were removed to a hospital near and, when able to speak, said that they had taken the liquor from a wagon on the street. One of them is in a very serious condition and the doctor is not sure that he will recover from the effects of the alcohol poison. These boys who, perhaps, did not know any better, committed two great wrongs. One against the law of God and their country in stealing property, and the other against God and the law of their own bodies. Which do you think was the greater evil? Let us remember these boys in our prayers to God, asking Him to strengthen them against temptation and to make them good.

A number have sent accounts of their favorite games and I hope more will do so. Send also descriptions of original games—those which you have invented your selves.

Ever affectionately,

Aunt Jane

NEPHEWS AND NIECES.

Homer Leonard, Newton Leonard,	California.	Edna Austin, Fannie Cook,	Nebraska.
Emma Pomeroy,	Kansas.	Johnnie Shafer,	Illinois.
Norma Evans, R. Stella Paxton,	Ohio.	Daisy E. Martin. Gertrudo Johnson	Illinois.
Grace Marsh,	Washington.	Julia G. Slayton,	Michigan.
E. Myrtle Dingle,	North Dakota,	Eva Frarey.	Michigan.
Magdelon Cameron,	N. Carolina.	H. R. Hanson,	Mass
Della Hermann, Belle Hermann,	Minnesota.	Lillian C. Austin, Ruby M. Austin,	Mass
Mary Thomas,	Indiana.	Lendall R. Austin	Mass

In 1891 I helped to collect money to build the Temple. Last June I attended the Exposition and saw the Temple, and thought it a very nice building. Please allow me to become your niece. JESSIE KELLY.

Knob Noster, Mo.

The Temple still needs your services, little niece; won't you again lend a hand?

Ours is a prohibition school. Nearly all the boys say they are going to vote the Prohibition ticket when they get old enough. It will not be long.

LENNIE EMERY.

Stoughton, Wis.

Ready, children, salute the Prohibition school! May the boys and the girls, too, vote for home protection when the time comes.

May I come into your Cozy Corner? I can crack nearly all the "Soft-Shelled Nuts," and find it very pleasant pastime. I am nearly thirteen years old. Our pet cat, Blondie, is temperance and has written a letter to Miss Willard's "Toots." ROSA GREEN.

Rocky Ford, Col.

We'd like to see that letter, Rosa. Blondie, too, may come in Cozy Corner.

Last night we all went to Mrs. M. L. Green's chalk-talk; all the school children were there, and as they went away all went marching and singing, "Saloons, Saloons, Saloons must go." MARY WRIGHT.

Greensburg, Ind.

May the stirring refrain never cease till the saloons are really gone.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

261.

SYNCOPATIONS.

[To syncopate is to remove a middle letter. Example: Rapid—raid.]

1. Syncopate to bend over and leave to cease.
2. Syncopate a part of the face and leave a tiny destroyer.
3. Syncopate little wagons and leave domestic animals.
4. Syncopate actual events and leave quantities of grease.
5. Syncopate pains and leave small particles.
6. Syncopate to lift and leave an army.
7. Syncopate a healing substance and leave to preserve.
8. Syncopate streams and leave fastenings.
9. Syncopate winged animals and leave proposals.
10. Syncopate a knot of yarn and leave an outer covering.
11. Syncopate a spear and leave a dainty trimming.

The syncopated letters spell my whole, —— those for whom this page is intended.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED DECEMBER 21.

253. Glory to God in the highest.—Luke 2: 14.
254. Christ.
255. Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people.—Luke 2: 10.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
MANAGING EDITOR—MARGARET A. SUDDUTH.
OFFICE EDITOR—MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—JENNIE A. STEWART.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS { LADY HENRY SOMERSET. MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Secretary.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.
President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, New Year Greeting For My American Friends. By Warner Snoad 2
The Deacon's Wife's Prophecy. By Jessie Harriet Munro 2
Homes for the Homeless. By Frances E. Willard 2
What Prohibition has Done for Maine. By Neal Dow 3
Result of Investigations in India's Cantonments. By Dr. Kate Bushnell 3
Mrs. Warner Snoad. By Harriet B. Kells 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
The International Women's Union 4
'Rah for Jersey! 5
Memorial in Japan for Miss West 5
Washington Temperance News 5
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 5
THE HOUSEHOLD:
Poem. "Am I My Brother's Keeper?" 6
Salvationists in France. By "La Marechale" 6
The Wife's Check-book. By Margaret E. Sangster 6
Typical Lessons for Loyal Temperance Legion Teachers. V. By Mary E. Rudd 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, Johnny Lea. By M. Alice Brown 7
The Robin's Story. By Agnes E. Volentine 7
Uncle John's Talks. XVII 7
A Happy Couple 7
AUNT JANE'S COZY CORNER:
Soft-Shelled Nuts 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
To "Elevate" the Saloon 8
Indiana's Test Liquor Case 8
The Poetry of Reform 8
A Clever New Book 9
THE WATCH TOWER 9
National Woman's Christian Temperance Union Directory 10
CANADIAN FIELD:
A Bird's-eye View 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
New Jersey—Tennessee 11
News in a Nutshell 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Work Among Railway Employes—Work Among Miners 12
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 12
TREASURER'S CORNER 13
National Temperance Hospital 13
OUR LIBRARY TABLE 13
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the daystar arise in your hearts. —II. Peter 1:19.

TO "ELEVATE" THE SALOON.

The liquor dealers of Ohio—those who carry on what Mr. Stead would call a "respectable" saloon business—have decided that the "groggeries" must go. To this end they have formed a combination, which is said to be the biggest trust ever organized in the country. It is to be known as the Ohio Saloon-keepers' Trust Association, and will represent a cash capital of twenty-five million dollars. Its avowed object is to "elevate" the business by abolishing the lower class of saloons, to secure absolute control of the liquor traffic, and to "run" the politics of the state.

The plan of the association is to buy out two-thirds of the retail dealers, and if some of the larger saloon-keepers refuse to sell, to allow them a percentage, provided they keep out of the business and do not interfere with the plans of the trust. By this combination they expect to bring the wholesale dealers to time and to purchase all liquors at the lowest manufacturer's prices. Whether or not they propose to furnish the public with liquor of a better quality or at reduced prices they omit to state. It is the intention, however, that hereafter no one shall engage in the saloon business in Ohio without the permission of the syndicate. The permission of the state is to count for nothing, and the government is to become more than ever the tool of the rum power.

The main object of this new "deal"—the point in the combination which we beg that our London friend will "make a note on"—is to so raise the standard of the saloon in public estimation as to place it upon a securer social and political footing. These Ohio saloon-keepers declare that unless something is done to check the growing opposition to the liquor business it will soon be "run into the ground," that "if steps are not taken at once to elevate the standing of the saloon and shut off the groggeries the whole thing will go to the dogs in a very short time." The wealthy and "respectable" saloon-keepers whose children receive all the advantages of an elaborate education find that their "daughters are handicapped because they are the daughters of saloon-keepers," and in order to remove this social stigma they have determined to get rid of the "low-down" saloon and cater to vice and depravity only in a high-toned and eminently respectable manner. We hope the poorer and less aristocratic saloon-keepers of Ohio who can afford to give their daughters but a meager education will not submit tamely to such high-handed monopoly.

The formation of this powerful trust shows that the "better class" of liquor-sellers agree with the Prohibitionists as to the proper course to be pursued in order to "run the business into the ground." They perceive with the women of the W. C. T. U. that the more "respectable" the saloon the longer-lived will it be, while the more obnoxious and disreputable it is the sooner will it "go to the dogs." They realize, as it seems Mr. Stead does not, that the high-toned, "respectable" saloon lulls the public conscience and tends to strengthen and perpetuate the business, while the groggery by its very vileness draws attention to the evils of the traffic and hastens the day of extermination.

This move on the part of the liquor interest in Ohio discloses the weak points in Mr. Stead's plan for minimizing the evils of the drink traffic. It goes to prove that his method would defeat the very object he is striving to attain. His assertion that one devil is better than three sounds reasonable enough. But when practical results show that one devil may pursue his work of death and destruction unmolested while a trinity of devils arouses an active antagonism which must result ere long, if not in their annihilation, at least in their being bound with chains, the sophistry of such reasoning is apparent.

Even if we believed that complete success could not crown our efforts until "the day before Gabriel blows his trump"—the time Mr. Stead has set for victory to perch upon our banners if we adhere to our present policy—we should still decline to "coöperate" with saloon-keepers however "respectable," still reject any compromise with our London friend's "triple-barreled devil" (drink, gambling and prostitution), still refuse to lend our aid to any movement which would, even temporarily, "justify the wicked for reward."

INDIANA'S TEST LIQUOR CASE.

The case of Haggart vs. Stehlin has been one of engrossing interest to the temperance people, not of Indiana alone, but of the entire nation. The supreme court of Indiana has just brought in a decision in favor of the plaintiffs, and so important is this decision that we take occasion to emphasize it by a brief review of the case itself.

Mary E. Haggart, one of our own white-ribboners, and Sarah C. Rathwell own real estate with a dwelling house thereon on a good street in the city of Indianapolis. George Heidt owns a dwelling and lot adjoining theirs, which he leased to John H. Stehlin. June 16, 1890, said Stehlin, "with full consent and knowledge" of Heidt, opened a saloon and began the sale of intoxicating liquors; whereupon suit was brought by Mrs. Haggart and Mrs. Rathwell on the ground that their real estate had been "so injuriously affected that, though it would have readily sold, prior to the acts complained of, for five thousand five hundred dollars, it would not now sell for more than three thousand dollars; and would have rented for thirty-five dollars, but not now for more than twenty dollars per month." The plaintiffs asked judgment of two thousand dollars, and that the acts complained of be enjoined.

Mrs. Haggart was "defeated in the court where her suit was brought, and appealed the case to the supreme court. There, also, she met an adverse decision. But on a motion for a rehearing the case was opened again, a new argument was had, and the court reversed its first decision. The case was sent back to the lower court for retrial, probably for the reason that the facts as to the damages and the amount should be determined by the verdict of a jury."

The plea for the plaintiffs at the trial before the supreme court was by Eli F. Ritter, and has passed into a prohibition classic under the title, "Is License Constitutional?" The argument is masterly. Starting with the proposition that the defendants based their right to sell liquor upon a license granted by an act of the Indiana legislature, he proves not only that no citizen has an inherent right to keep a saloon, but that the saloon business being what he shows it to be, "an act of a state legislature cannot provide for the maintenance and continuance of such a business." The brief is bristling with fact and argument, and should be in the hands of each opponent of the saloon.

Now that the case is on retrial before the lower court it will be watched with breathless interest, as its importance to our cause cannot be overestimated. Commenting upon it, editorially, the Chicago Record says:

The argument of the Indiana court, in ruling that it was a case where damages might be assessed, goes into the entire question affecting the right of property-owners to resist the establishment of a saloon in their neighborhoods, whether there is any law or ordinance on the subject or not. The judges say that the fact that a license is required for the sale of liquor and that the seller must give a bond to keep an orderly house shows that the law regards the traffic, if unrestrained, as "dangerous to public and private morals." From this it is argued that the business must be considered in the light of the license laws, as liable to injure property in the vicinity where it is conducted. If, on the retrial of the case, there shall be a verdict for damages, and judgment shall follow, sustained by the supreme court, a new point of departure will have been taken for the adjudication of the legal rights possessed by owners of property adjacent to saloons. This question of law will go to the highest courts in each state and to the federal supreme court, where it will be settled at last.

That the case is regarded with interest by the liquor men, the following quotation from the Journal of Freedom and Right (liquor organ) will prove:

The effect of his decision is one that will be felt in every town and city in the state. It means a saloon can be declared a nuisance, and damages collected not only from the saloon-man himself, but the property owner as well. It is a decision which will open up the avenue for scheming blackmailers and unscrupulous people. It means almost local option—local option of the worst and most damaging form. It means that saloons can only be located in certain districts. It's a most damnable decision.

There are curses which are in themselves blessings, and that decision which calls forth curses from a liquor organ must be in the very nature of the case a blessing to humanity.

God grant that this wise decision of the supreme court may be followed by one equally wise in the lower court, and that this flaunting saloon power may have a much needed lesson that there are limits even to the long-suffering endurance of the American people.

THE POETRY OF REFORM.

Upon this subject more fully than upon most others, it is true that to him alone who "hath ears" can hearing be given.

To speak to the vast majority of mankind upon the poetry of reform would be to speak an unknown tongue, or to use a paradox of paradoxes, as incomprehensible as, to that same majority, would be a eulogy upon the joy of sorrow, or a dissertation upon the rest of toil.

The commonly accepted theory seems to be that the life of a reformer is, of all lives, most prosaic, most baldly practical, most glaringly disillusionized.

And yet, as there is a charmed inner circle who know the joy of sorrow, and rejoice in the rest of toil, so there are many to whom the life of a reformer is of all lives the most poetic; most divinely flooded with "the light that never was on sea or land."

How to widen that circle is the constant query of those whose hearts God hath thus touched; because they realize that only as the number of true reformers grows, can the world swing round to that eternal poem, in the rhythm of which it was created.

The very definition of the word reform is its first claim to poetic usage. "To form again; to create or shape anew; to put into a new and improved form or condition; to restore to a former good state, or bring from bad to good."

The reformer is not, then, one who wantonly destroys for the mere sake of destroying. He is rather one who has constantly before his mind's eye the ideal of a possible best, and his every effort is put forth to make actual conditions yield before and rise to the level of that best. It may be necessary for him to destroy before he can create, but he destroys only that he may create.

He is allied to the Infinite God in the very nature of his work, for as the Divine mind and Omnipotent hand are constantly re-forming—remoulding the lower forms of life into forms ever higher and better, so the re-former accepts actual conditions only as the basis of his operations, the plastic clay out of which he is to mould the higher, better forms.

He sees himself and his work, if he be the true reformer, always in the God-light. The earth, in its higher unfoldings, is still "without form and void," and a darkness, dense and palpable, is upon the face of the deep. The spirit of God is breathing through him, crying "let there be light," and he realizes, with a glad heart-gush of consenting love, that the light must be given a place to shine, that the darkness must itself be re-formed into light, and that through him, God is to do this work.

Poetry? It is the quintessence of all the poetry of the ages. It was the heart of David's song, and the keynote of Isaiah's ecstasy. They saw the crooked being made straight and the rough places plain; they saw the fir tree and the myrtle springing up where the thorns and briars had been. They rejoiced that "the mouth of the Lord had spoken it" through them. Each human being is a poet so far as he is able to see the ideal in the midst of the actual. Each human being is a reformer who strives by every possible means to bring the actual up to the height of the ideal; and from the days of Isaiah to the days of Browning, the truest poets have been the most fearless of reformers; while the true reformer, though his theory of rhythm be faulty, and his "feet" prone to hopeless entanglement, is, nevertheless, a poet by just so much as he strives to bring the world back to its highest ideals, back to its God-conditions.

Prosaic? No life could be less so. Those whose days slip by on butterfly wings, whose lives are given to ease, may well spare their pity for those to whom each heart-throb means a new impulse from the Infinite; each day comes redolent with the wealth of opportunities for uplift and outlook; for remoulding that bit of the universe nearest themselves a little more fully into the Divine likeness.

It is gladness an angel might envy were it not that it is the very secret of angelic gladness, for they, too, "do His commandments, hearkening unto the voice of His word"; and that "word" in all spheres must be evermore to build a higher better out of all past bests.

There are many side-lights of poetry upon the reformer's path; the touch of heart to heart which comes with an especial nearness to those who toil for the same end; while the light of the ludicrous is never far absent from the pathos of our work.

There is full room for the play of humor and the glint of the imagination; there is scope for the deepest of human loves and the most intense of human joys; but the central note of harmony must evermore lie in the fact that we are "workers together with God"; that we are hastening the full swell of that final anthem of the universe, when we shall hear "as it were, the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings saying, Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice and give honor to him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife [humanity] hath made herself ready."

A CLEVER NEW BOOK.

Bright in its gay dress of blue and silver and gold binding, rich in its setting of large, clear type on heavy paper, wide-margined pages and unexpectedly funny illustrations by Baron C. DeGrimm, comes SAMANTHA AT THE WORLD'S FAIR, by Josiah Allen's Wife (Marietta Holley), published by Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York City. "To Columbia—who has jest sailed out and discovered woman, and to the sect discovered—this book is dedicated."

The most felicitous pen hesitates before attempting to describe in any wise Marietta Holley's incomparable style of narrative, or her unique, "side-splitting," but nevertheless acutely discriminating characterizations. A less richly endowed pen would have ere this worn threadbare the ambitions and sarcasms, the whims, the "eppisodin'" and "metafors" of Josiah Allen's wife, but she has within her the life of a true personality, and her consecutive appearances before her beloved "Public" are marked by nothing that is not fresh and captivating. She takes a long time reaching the gates of the White City, and from the hour when "it wuz a beautiful evenin' in Jonesville, and the world," (at which time she thinks over the matter of recording the experiences of herself and partner, and decides it in the brief announcement, "Josiah, we will write the book"), to the intense moment when "we wuz right in front of the Gole, and I don't believe there wuz a better lookin' Gole sence the world begun," the dear old lady covers no less than nine chapters. But this feature is well in keeping with her deliberative tendencies, and hardly to be criticised. Once within this "gole" her admiration and enthusiasm for all the wonders of the White City are restrained by no check rein, and every one will enjoy revisiting with her the scenes never to be reproduced again in their entirety.

What comfort she takes in the advancement of her "sect," and how exhaustive she is in her relation of the exhibits in the Woman's Building. Even Josiah comes down from his elevation of scorn as touching women. "He sez: 'By Jocks! I hadn't no idee that wimmen had ever done so much work that is useful as well as ornamental. . . . I hadn't no idee that they wuz a-goin' to swing out and make such a show as this.' Them remarks of hisen wuz wrung out of him by the glory of the display, as the sweet sap is brung out of the maple trees by the all-powerful influence and glory of the spring sun, and they show more plain than song or poem of the wonders about us."

Her visit to the Art Gallery is an extended one, and here she reveals the tenderer side of her nature, her descriptions of pictures and statuary are full of eloquent power.

Nothing eludes her sharp eyes where the causes of temperance and purity are concerned. Charmed as she was over the "Venuses as beautiful as dreams" she took note that "over all, and through all, wuz a-trailin' the rich clusters of the vine. The figgers seemed at first sight to kind o' encourage wine-makin' and wine drinkin'. But look clost, and you'd see on one side, workin' his stiddy way up through the fairy landscape, up through the gay revelers, a venemous serpent wuz a-creepin'. He wuz bound to be there, and Venus or Nymph, or any of 'em that touched that foamin' wine, had to be stung by his deadly venoms. Mr. Dore made that plain."

In the course of her wanderings about Jackson Park she meets Governor Markham, of California, and takes occasion to put in a plea for some improvements in the administration of state affairs. "Jonesville wuz proud of his (Senator Stanford's) doin's, and she thinks a sight of California. But in one thing she feels bad: she don't want California to make so much wine; she wishes you'd stop it. . . . . Jonesville wouldn't care if you'd made a couple of quarts for sickness or jell, but she feels as if she couldn't bear to see you swing out and make so much. . . . . It hain't a-settin' a good example to the school children in Palo Alto and the United States." Evidently Mistress Allen has not joined herself to the W. C. T. U. of Jonesville (if the illustrious village possess one), or she would have made her restrictions of wine-making exclude even the quart or two for "sickness and jell." But we surmise that the conscientious old lady's visit to the W. C. T. U. exhibit in the Woman's Building has so touched her heart and electrified her fertile brain, that already she is at work organizing the "females" of her native village into an army with the most rigid principles against alcoholics in every shape.

Marietta Holley's readers sometimes wonder if Josiah Allen is not a near relation (second cousin or thereabouts) to "Uncle Sam" himself. Certainly there is a resemblance in the portraits of these two eminents, and Josiah Allen's wife has many an experience that well compares with those which Uncle Sam's friends of the gentler sex can duplicate. However that may be, Josiah's wife is abreast of the times, and a grand woman, for all her strange vocabulary and other idiosyncracies, and her visit to the Fair simply gives her an unprecedented opportunity to prove her theories concerning her "sect" and confirm her beliefs for and against certain customs and habits in this land of the free. There is no brighter literary outgrowth of the great event of 1893 than this volume from the pen of one of America's happiest humorists.

ANOTHER FALSE CHARGE.

Miss Willard has sent the following letter to Harper's Weekly which, although so far as we can remember, it has never had a good word to say for our society, was quick to publish a criticism not founded in fact. We do not accuse Harper's Weekly nor Mr. Walter Besant of intending to do us an injury, but we cannot help feeling that if they had been friendly to our aims and purposes they would have taken more pains to verify their statements against us, and would sometimes have a word to say in our favor:

To the Editor of Harper's Weekly:

DEAR SIR:—You will, I am sure, be glad to give me room to correct in your columns a misapprehension caused by Mr. Walter Besant's article in which the impression is given that a local W. C. T. U. in Nebraska was guilty of imitating the Indiana "white caps" in the mal-administration of punishment upon some young women of questionable character. The state officers of that society, and the local officers also, have sent out an official declaration that the W. C. T. U., as a society, had nothing whatever to do with these riotous proceedings, and but one of its members was in anywise implicated therein. Will you be kind enough to state that among our ten thousand auxiliaries in the United States nothing has ever occurred that should cause the public to feel that our members are other than "law abiding" and most trustworthy and helpful citizens?

Believe me yours sincerely,

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

We give this letter entire, so that it may be presented to such papers and persons as are still reiterating this false story.

THE South Georgia Conference of the M. E. Church South at its recent session voted down about fifty to one a resolution condemning the use of tobacco and seeking to make the use of it a bar to admission to the conference. The Atlanta Constitution in commenting upon this action says, "The conference is liberal, broad and sensible. It is not composed of fanatics." A year ago, the North Georgia conference voted down resolutions condemning members of the church who, by renting their property or in any other way directly or indirectly were in complicity with the liquor traffic, also a resolution endorsing the W. C. T. U. These "straws" are very sad and startling indications of the status of temperance reform in Georgia.

This is a brief description of a drunkard's career: The man takes a drink; the drink takes a drink; the drink takes the man.

***

An excellent plan is under contemplation by the Brooklyn board of education, and that is the reservation of one per cent of the salaries of the public school-teachers for a pension fund for retired and disabled teachers, who shall have taught twenty years in the Brooklyn schools. Men teachers must have taught twenty-five years to be entitled to the pension. For once, On Duty is able to rejoice that the salary tables are turned.

***

Lord Derby, meeting a collier walking on his ground one day, said, "Are you aware that this is my property and you have no right to be here?" "What is your name?" said the collier; "I must walk on somebody's ground, and so I am walking on yours." "My name is Lord Derby," he replied. "How did you get this land?" asked the collier. "I inherited it from my father," he replied. "How did your father get it?" said the collier. "He inherited it." "But how did his father get it in the first place?" "He fought for it," said Lord Derby, with some asperity. "Come," said the collier, beginning to take off his coat, "I'll do the same."

***

The farewell letter of one of our round-the-world missionaries to a friend reads like that of an early Christian pilgrim: "I am off. It seems like starting for the great unknown, but I go with my Bible in hand, God in my heart, an abiding faith in my fellow creatures and a widening love for them all, an eternal belief that the world will yet be won for Christ and that I must do my small part. This is where I stand, and whatever may befall me, through evil and through good report, through shadow and sunshine, through life and in death, that is where you can count on me." Let us remember the noon-tide hour of prayer especially for our brave white ribbon missionaries.

***

Joseph Cook, having been called on for an opinion on card-playing and dancing, wrote recently the following letter which has never before been published:

"There is a famous French proverb which says, 'Où la vertu finit, la commence le vice,' 'Where virtue ends, vice begins.' I see no virtue in what is known to-day as the round dance, nor in social card-playing. These are ante-chambers of mischief, even if they are not themselves the worst forms of mischief. It is safest to keep out of such ante-chambers. I am assured by those whose work has given them opportunity to know the facts at first hand that hundreds of gamblers have found fashionable card-playing the beginning of their road to ruin, and also that the commencement of the unreportable degradation of thousands of abandoned women has been in the modern ball and round dance. For one, I always maintain that card-playing and dancing, learned by respectable young people, may easily become a bond of union between them and other people who are not so respectable, and so be a snare to those who are yet in their largely inexperienced years."

***

The river Thames has yielded up many a body from its mystic depths, but seldom has a more pathetic letter than that found in the coat-pocket of a young man, only twenty-nine years of age, who recently drowned himself in the famous London river. The letter is from the girl he loves, and runs as follows:

My Dear Bob:—I shall never forget you broke your promise to me, the only one I asked of you. If you are merry or if you are sad, it is the same ending—to the public house; I do not think you can help it. A girl may love a man, still she need not be his wife; it is not for a day, but for a whole lifetime. If I had been a careless girl and leading an idle life and was fond of drink, would you like to rush into matrimony and be tied for life to any one so shiftless? I, myself, prefer my liberty. I can earn enough to keep myself, but I cannot earn enough to keep a man, who, perhaps, through his own fault lost his living. You are not the only one who has disgraced himself and the girl he loves through drink. I do not mean that you have disgraced yourself, but it generally ends in a wretched existence. Anyhow you have seen enough of the past to know its results. Are you now any happier for it all? No, I am sure you are not. I should not have written this letter only you ask me a question and I hope I have not wounded your feelings. Our future lies in your own hands, but I am not won by promises. I must see an improvement, or when I return home I shall give you back your ring. Good-bye. V——.

The coroner truly remarked: "I think it was a question whether he would have her or the drink."

ON DUTY.

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION DIRECTORY.

PLEDGE.

I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt Liquors, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

FORM OF BEQUEST.

I give and bequeath to the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union the sum of ———; and the receipt of the treasurer thereof shall be a sufficient discharge of my executors for the same.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

HEADQUARTERS—The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
Miss Anna A. Gordon, Private Secretary
Corresponding Secretary — Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, The Temple, Chicago.
Miss Irene Fockler, Office Secretary.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, 150 Free St., Portland, Me.
Assistant Recording Secretary—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, 510 Rialto Building, Kansas City. Mo.
Treasurer—Mrs. Helen M. Barker, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

YOUNG WOMEN'S BRANCH.

General Secretary—Mrs Frances J. Barnes, 146 W. 103d St., New York City.
Asst. Secretary—Mrs F. S Evans, 161 W. 84th St., New York City.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Alabama — Mrs. Mattie L. Spencer, Birmingham.
Alaska—Mrs. Jno.G. Brady, Sitka.
Arizona—Mrs. L. C. Hughes, Tucson.
Arkansas — Mrs. Sarah B. Hart, Little Rock.
California — Mrs. B. Sturtevant Peet, San Jose.
California, Southern—Mrs. Mary E. Garbutt, Temperance Temple, Los Angeles.
Carolina, North—Mrs. Mary C. Woody, Guilford College.
Carolina, North, No. 2.—Mrs. M. J. O'Connell, Greensboro.
Carolina, South—Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston.
Colorado—Mrs. Eva Higgins, 1723 Tremont St., Denver.
Connecticut — Mrs. Cornelia B. Forbes, 206 Wethersfield Ave., Hartford.
Dakota, North — Miss Elizabeth Preston, Casselton.
Dakota, South—Mrs. Emma Cranmer, Aberdeen.
Delaware—Miss Margaret S. Hilles, Wilmington.
District of Columbia—Mrs. Mary E. Griffith, Hotel Fredonia, Washington.
Florida—Mrs. E. A. Hill, Orange City.
Georgia—Mrs. W. C. Sibley, Augusta.
Georgia, No. 2—Mrs. Georgia Swift King, Atlanta.
Idaho — Mrs. R. Mitchell, Idaho Falls.
Illinois—Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, The Temple, Chicago.
Indiana—Mrs. Lena Beck, Bloomington.
Indian Territory—Mrs. Jane Stapler, Tahlequah.
Iowa—Mrs. M. H. Dunham, Burlington.
Kansas — Mrs. L. B. Smith, Ottawa.
Kentucky—Mrs. Nannie A. Munnell, 427 W. Chestnut St., Louisville.
Louisiana—Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, Baton Rouge.
Maine—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Stroudwater.
Maryland—Mrs. Summerfield Baldwin, 1006 N. Charles St., Baltimore.
Massachusetts—Mrs. Susan S. Fessenden, 171 Tremont St., Boston.
Michigan—Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, Jackson.
Minnesota—Mrs. H. A. Hobart, Red Wing.
Mississippi — Mrs. Lavinia S. Mount, Greenville.
Missouri—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, 510 Rialto Bldg., Kansas City.
Montana—Mrs. M. S. Cummins, Helena.
Nebraska—Mrs. M. A. Hitchcock, Fremont.
Nevada — Mrs. Clara S. Ward, Reno.
New Hampshire—Miss C. R. Wendell, Dover.
New Jersey—Mrs. Emma Bourne, 205 High St., Newark.
New Mexico—Mrs. M. J. Borden, Albuquerque.
New York—Mrs. Mary T. Burt, 202 W. 133d St., New York City.
Ohio—Mrs. Henrietta L. Monroe, Xenia.
Oklahoma —Mrs. Lucy A. Switzer, Kingfisher.
Oregon — Mrs. A. R. Riggs, 295 D St., Portland.
Pennsylvania — Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, Chestnut and 43d St., Philadelphia.
Rhode Island—Mrs. Mary A. Babcock, Phenix.
Tennessee—Mrs. Lide Meriwether, 14 Talbot St., Memphis.
Texas—Mrs. Helen M. Stoddard, Dallas.
Utah— Mrs. Caroline Humphrey Reid, 218 S. 9th E. St., Salt Lake City.
Vermont—Mrs. Ida H. Reid, Shelbourne.
Virginia—Mrs. R. H. Jones, 130 Granby St., Norfolk.
West Virginia—Mrs. Jennie P. Sisson, Main St., Wheeling.
Washington, Eastern—Mrs. Julia B. Cole, Walla Walla.
Washington, Western—Mrs. M. A. Shaffer, Old Tacoma.
Wisconsin—Mrs. Vie H. Campbell, Evansville.
Wyoming Territory—Mrs. Wilhelmine Brown, Laramie.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF DEPARTMENTS.

I. ORGANIZATION.

Organizers—Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, 348 W. 4th St., Elmira, N. Y.; Miss Frances E. Griffin, 69 Maple St., Chicago; Mrs. Lucy H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.; Mrs. Mary Bynon Reese, Chautauqua, Washington; Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, 1907 Bush St., San Francisco, Cal.; Miss Ida Clothier, Manitou Springs, Col.; Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.; Mrs. F. E. W. Harper, 1006 Bainbridge St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Mrs. E. A. Blair, Creighton, Neb.; Mrs. Maude L. Green, Manitou Springs, Col.; Mrs. Delle H. Cox, Newberg, Ore.; Mrs. E. Norinne Law, Baraga, Mich; Mrs. Henrietta Skelton, 132 McAllister St., San Francisco, Cal.; Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.; Miss S. C. Harris, Franklin, Va.; Miss Frances Ensign, Madison, O.; Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.; Mrs. E. A. Kenyon, Townshend, Vt.

Work among Foreigners—Mrs. Sophia F. Grubb, Kirkwood, Mo.; Dutch, Mrs. Mariette S. Van Olinda, Holland, Mich.; Spanish, Mrs. E. J. Harwood, Socorro, New Mexico.

Juvenile Work—Mrs. Helen G. Rice, 1597 Washington St., Boston, Mass.; Associate, Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill.; Organizers and Chalk-Talkers, Mrs. Ellen A. Blair, Creighton, Neb.; Mrs. Maude L. Green, Manitou Springs, Col.

Work Among Colored People—Mrs. Lucy Thurman, Jackson, Mich.

II. PREVENTIVE.

Health and Heredity—Annette Shaw, M. D., Eau Claire, Wis. Lecturer—Mary Wood Allen, M. D., 1412 Adams St., Toledo, Ohio.

Sanitary and Economic Cookery—Mrs. Sara C. Bull, 168 Brattle St., Cambridge, Mass.

III. EDUCATIONAL.

Scientific Temperance Instruction—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, 23 Trull St., Boston, Mass.; Associates, Mrs. Mary F. Lovell, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Miss Emma L. Benedict, Hyde Park, Mass.; Advisory Board—Rev. Albert H. Plumb, D. D.; Rev. Joseph Cook; Hon. W. T. Harris, LL.D., Daniel Dorchester, D. D.; William E. Sheldon, President National Teachers' Association, 1887; Wm. A. Mowry, Ph.D.

Physical Culture—Mrs. Frances W. Leiter, Mansfield, Ohio; Secretary, Miss E. M. Hecker, Mansfield, O.

Sunday School Work—Mrs. Julia A. Bidwell, Deposit, N. Y.

Temperance Literature—Mrs. Katharine L. Stevenson, The Temple, Chicago.

The Press—Miss L. E. Reed, Indianapolis, Ind.; Associate—Miss Irene Fockler, The Temple, Chicago.

Presenting our Cause to Influential Bodies—General Officers of the National W. C. T. U.

Relation of Temperance to Labor—Mrs. S. E. V. Emery, Lansing, Mich.

School of Methods and Parliamentary Usage—Mrs. Anna S. Benjamin, Portland, Mich.

Narcotics—Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, 4119 Westminster Pl., St. Louis, Mo. Lecturers—Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, 348 W. 4th St., Elmira, N. Y.; Mrs. M. E. A. Gleason, Roslindale, Mass.

IV. EVANGELISTIC.

Evangelistic—Miss Elizabeth W. Greenwood, 151 Remsen St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; National Evangelists—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I.; Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Annie M. Palmer, Boone, Iowa; Mrs. Mary Sparkes Wheeler, Phœnixville, Pa.; Mrs. Harriet D. Walker, Providence, R. I.; Mrs. Mary McGee Snell, Columbus, Miss.; Mrs. R. J. Trego, Delaware, Ohio; Mrs. Mary J. Weaver, Batavia, N. Y.; Mrs. E. M. Haughton, Midland, Tex.

Unfermented Sacramental Wine—Mrs. E. G. Hibben, Peoria, Ill.

Systematic Giving—Mrs. Esther Tuttle Pritchard, Kokomo, Ind.

Work in Penal Institutions.—Mrs. Jane M. Kinney, North St., P. O. St. Clair Co., Mich.; Prison Evangelist—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I.

Work in Charitable Institutions.—Mrs. S. A. Morrison, Wayne, Mich.

Work among Railroad Employes—Mrs. Caroline M. Woodward, Seward, Neb.; Evangelist—Miss Jennie Smith, Mountain Lake Park, Md.; Secretary—Miss Mattie Woodward, Seward, Neb.

Work among Soldiers and Sailors—Mrs. S. A. McClees, 22 State St., New York, Associates—Mrs. Mary Grant Cramer, East Orange, N. J.; Mrs. Cornelia Chauvet, 22 State St., New York City.

Work among Lumbermen—Mrs. Mary C. Upham, Marshfield, Wis.

Sabbath Observance—Mrs. J. C. Bateham, Williamsburg, Ky.

Department of Mercy—Mrs. Mary F. Lovell, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Lecturer and Organizer, Mrs. Lydia A. Irons, Lima, O.

Purity—Dr. Mary Wood Allen, 1412 Adams St., Toledo, Ohio; Mothers' Meetings.—Mrs. Dr. J. H. Kellogg, Battle Creek, Mich.; Lecturers.—Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Alice Williams, Cameron, Mo.

Purity in Literature and Art.—Mrs Emilie D. Martin, Room 85, Times Building, New York City. Associate, Mrs. Eliza T. Hauk, Dayton, Ohio; Counselors—Anthony Comstock, Secretary of New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, Room 85, Times Building, New York City. R. W. McAfee, Agent for the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice, St. Louis, Mo.; Lecturer—Yates Hickey, Supt. American Railway Literary Union, Pure Literature Bureau, 1512 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Work Among Miners.—Mrs. W. F. English, Quincy, Ill.

Securing Homes for Homeless Children.—Mrs. Margaret T. W. Merrill, 99 Winter St., Portland, Me.; Lecturer—Miss Lucia E. F. Kimball, Woodfords, Me.

V. SOCIAL.

Parlor Meetings—Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, Plainfield, N. J.; Associate.—Maria W. Vaughn, Moscow, Pa.

Flower Mission—Miss Gertrude Ferguson, 2633 Bank St., Louisville, Ky.

State and County Fairs.—Mrs. Clara V. Weaver, Des Moines, Ia.

VI. LEGAL.

Legislation and Petitions—Mrs. Judge Belford, 2336 Evans St., Denver, Colo.

Franchise—Dr. Louise C. Purington, 3 Park Street, Boston, Mass.; Associate.—Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, 3 Park St., Boston, Mass. Lecturers.—Miss Frances E. Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, Mrs. S. S. Fessenden, 171 Tremont St., Boston; Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, 510 Rialto Building, Kansas City, Mo.; Miss E. U. Yates, Round Pord, Me.; Mrs. Mary E. Haggart, California, Penn.

Peace and International Arbitration.—Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, Winthrop Center, Maine. Associate and Lecturer.—Mrs. Emilie U. Burgess, Highlands, N. Y.

VII. AFFILIATED INTERESTS.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Association—The Temple, Chicago. Pres.—Mrs. Matilda B. Carse. Directors—Mrs. H. M. Barker, Mrs. L. H. Plumb, Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Mrs. L. A. Hagans, Mrs. H. J. Bailey, Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, Miss F. E. Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, Mme. Louise Demorest; Business Manager—Mrs. C. F. Grow, The Temple, Chicago.

Editors The Union Signal—Miss Frances E. Willard, Miss Margaret A. Sudduth, Mrs. H. B. Kells; Associate Editor—Miss Jennie A. Stewart; Contributing Editors—Lady Henry Somerset, Mrs. Katharine Lente Stevenson.

Editor Oak and Ivy Leaf—Miss Jennie A. Stewart, The Temple, Chicago.

Editor The Young Crusader—Miss Ada M. Melville, The Temple, Chicago.

Editor Dept. Books and Leaflets—Mrs. Katharine Lente Stevenson, The Temple, Chicago.

National Temperance Hospital and Training School for Nurses—1619 Diversey St., Chicago, Ill. President of Board—Mrs. M. E. Kline, 62 43d St., Chicago. Treas.—Mrs. Calista E. Bigelow, 539 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

The Temple—Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, President Building Association.

VIII. STANDING COMMITTEES.

Railroad Rates—Miss Mary G. Hay, 66½ N. Penn St., Indianapolis Ind.; Mrs. Ellen M. Everett, 171 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

On Appropriations.—Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Vie H. Campbell, Evansville, Wis.; Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Helen M. Barker, Nat'l Treasurer, Advisory Member, The Temple, Chicago.

Sabbath Meetings—Mrs. Louise Downs Quigley, Orange, N. J.

Overflow Meetings—Dr. Anna H. Shaw, Somerton, Pa.

Convention Seating—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Miss Carrie Buzby.

Musical Director—Mrs. Alice J. Harris, Parker House, Boston, Mass.

Canadian Field.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW.

The whole Dominion of Canada is deeply stirred at present on the prohibition question. Ontario is on the eve of an important crisis in temperance work. The plebiscite on prohibition has accomplished far more than its warmest advocates dared hope for, not only in the mere showing of numbers, but incidentally in the spirit of unity which has prevailed. The rallying cry brought together men and women of every religious opinion and of all shades of politics. Young people's societies were drawn in and the W. C. T. U. was always found where most needed.

The result of the plebiscite in Prince Edward Island is most encouraging. The total vote polled was about 14,000, 10,616 in favor of prohibition and 3,390 against. It is cheering to note the stanch temperance feeling which pervades the Eastern Maritime Provinces. A most harmonious and enthusiastic W. C. T. U. convention was held recently in Truro, Nova Scotia, the good things of which can only be hinted at for want of space.

Mrs. Todd, in a clear and forcible way, discussed "The Ballot for Women," and Mrs. Phillips drew special attention to the use in schools of the new temperance textbooks. In this connection it may be mentioned that the educational department of Ontario has just issued a book on "Physiology and Temperance," for use in the public schools. The book is compiled by William Naltress, M. D., M. R. C. S., Eng., who has done his work with so much care, skill and efficiency that it is interesting to all classes and ages, and would be most useful to workers among young people.

It may not be out of place to refer here to the loss which the cause of temperance had sustained in the death of Mr. W. H. Howland, ex-mayor of Toronto. Such men, who strive to live up to high ideals, and whose influence with others is great, can be ill-spared.

Chatham was the scene of the very inspiring and helpful convention of the Province of Ontario this year. A plan of work was outlined which shows that Ontario is well abreast with the latest thought of the day. Mrs. Ella F. M. Williams, of Montreal, was present and conducted a parliamentary drill in her own bright and efficient manner. Mrs. Williams has worked indefatigably this year in her capacity of Dominion president, and with her talent for organization and happy faculty of rallying good workers around her has succeeded in putting flesh on dry bones and infusing new spirit into many flagging unions.

Carleton county, Ontario, after a sleep of some years, has roused itself and taken the necessary steps for a convention in September, 1894, by electing the following officers: President, Mrs. Donaldson, Ottawa; vice-president, Miss Dickinson, Manotick; corresponding secretary, Miss F. A. Stephenson, Diamond; recording secretary, Mrs. R. H. McElroy, Richmond; treasurer, Mrs. Carruthers, Carp.

Mrs. Williams had also the gratification of assisting at the annual meeting of the Ottawa Y's, whose record for the last year proves that they at least have been very wide awake. The secretary reported a membership of two hundred and twenty-five, and Mrs. Donaldson, the president, is to be congratulated on the reports read, which show evidence of active and steady work.

A new Y has been organized in Saint Stephen, New Brunswick, and shows promise of future usefulness by the formation of two departments already; flower mission and work among lumbermen.

Manitoba has also been active in Y work. The superintendent of that department, Miss Cora Hind, reports that the Winnipeg Y has arranged for a course of lectures embracing "Nursing," "Canadian Laws Relating to Women," "Life Insurance for Women," "Adulteration of Food," "Social Purity," "Mental Culture," etc. The union has also started a building fund in the hope that some day they may erect a "home for working women."

Manitoba, through the medium of a plebiscite, has already sounded the prohibition trumpet, and before the echoes had quite died away, its energetic president, Mrs. E. A. Blakely, organized a tour through the province for the purpose of educating public sentiment in favor of temperance and extending the borders of the W. C. T. U. Special attention was called to woman suffrage and Loyal Temperance Legion work as effective means of furthering the purposes in view.

Mrs. Blakely was accompanied by Mrs. Norinne Law, who drew large audiences and large collections, the latter a noteworthy fact, as the expense of securing a good lecturer often stands in the way of those who are afraid of incurring loss. Unions already formed were quickened into fresh life and new ones added to the rôle. Fifty-two public meetings were held, and a large number of names secured.

Dr. Amelia Youmans, of Winnipeg, Provincial superintendent of heredity and hygiene, has issued a leaflet in the interests of the social purity department, called "Warning Words," which deserves more than a casual mention. It points out the insidious temptations to which girls are exposed whose daily work brings them into contact with all classes, and deals with a delicate subject in an earnest, practical way which cannot fail to arouse thought in all who read it.

The annual convention of the Province of British Columbia met late in the fall this year to admit of the president, Mrs. Cunningham, visiting and giving a report of the World's W. C. T. U. Convention in Chicago. There has been a change in some of the offices. Mrs. Spofford, of Victoria, has replaced Mrs. Cunningham as president, the latter kindly accepting the position of treasurer, which was vacant. Further particulars will probably come in time for the next UNION SIGNAL report.

MARGARET G. URE.

772 Palace St., Montreal.

Royal Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure
A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.
Royal Baking Powder Co.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

News from the Field.

NEW JERSEY.

WORK FOR THE NEW YEAR.

To some, "the morning dawneth!" New duties make new responsibilities, therefore I beg pardon for so long neglecting to represent the interests of the Jersey Blue constituency in THE UNION SIGNAL, and also, that at this late date I cannot refer to the rounding up of their year's work which they so kindly furnished me, but must hasten to tell of the year's beginnings.

At our last state convention it was decided to present three objects to the incoming legislature for their consideration, and we hoped, approval. First, the appointment of police matrons in cities. Second, the amendment of the cigarette law, and third, that of impure literature; but not to present our educational bill, as heretofore, for fear it would defeat the others.

"But the best laid schemes of mice and men Gang aft aglee!"

Instead of those we deemed wisest to present, the evolution in politics has changed our base, and now in conjunction with various ecclesiastical bodies and Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, of Boston, we have formed and the foremost bill is scientific temperance instruction in all our public schools.

A SOCIETY FOR THE PROMOTION OF TEMPERANCE LEGISLATION,

Rev. W. E. Honeymen, chairman of the temperance committee of the Presbyterian Synod, set the ball in motion, and after several conferences with our president, corresponding secretary and superintendent of temperance instruction in public schools, Mrs. Swan Brown, and Mrs. Hunt, a representative committee was appointed, with Rev. B. F. Everett, D. D., of Jamesburg, chairman, and Rev. Madison Hare, of Burlington, secretary, plans were formulated, discussed and adopted, and Mrs. Hunt will spend January, at least, in our state in the interest of her special department.

If the legislature is anywhere near as perfect as our Republican editors now declare it to be, we shall get all the temperance legislation we want, and my advice is, "Try them." "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," and may apply just as well to politics as to the home.

However it does seem strange to me—but then I'm only a woman—that these very same editors and their allies were so very positive before election that the liquor question must not be made the issue with the "race tracks," are now putting it in the same category, declaring "this is the issue they were elected upon, as well as the repeal of the race track laws!" and "of course they must give us all the reform laws we ask for, for we of the moral force put them where they are," losing sight of the fact that a number of good Democrats, who last year voted every time against those infamous laws, were sadly defeated this—but here again my sex is against me, and I can't understand, but the future will explain to you as well as to me.

The supreme court has declared

THE COUNTY EXCISE COMMISSION UNCONSTITUTIONAL,

and the cities of Bridgeton, Millville, Camden and Lambertville were for a time relieved, for which we give thanks. Of course this very same good legislature is going to repeal the law, notwithstanding it is not a law now, constitutionally—still they must do some things to please the good people, and this is one of them, and then the praise they'll get, "for their broad statesmanship," etc. When will the good people learn to have their own kite, and no longer be the tail to somebody's else? When?

DOINGS.

But to leave the "sphere of man" and chronicle that of our own, I begin with Dr. Anna Shaw's new lecture on "America undiscovered by America." She keeps all her old friends and wins many new ones in this lecture. At Trenton the opera house was literally packed. The morning papers spoke in highest praise of her eloquence, wit and logic, bespeaking for her whenever she comes a large audience. She also spoke at other points in the state, the series being arranged for by Mrs. Quigley, who herself has been giving her paper on "The public meeting—why?" with much success at a number of points.

Mrs. Sullivan, of Moorestown, made a most successful itinerary of twenty-five lectures for Miss Moore, of Ohio, in Burlington county. One of the county officers writes that "Miss Moore's clear, forcible, pleasing manner has made an influence, which cannot fail to do good, and we regard her as one of the best platform lecturers we have, and wish her 'God-speed' wherever she goes!"

Rev. G. W. Bryant, M. D., the colored orator of Philadelphia, has been delighting the immense crowds which each time he comes to Trenton, never fail to hear him. His eloquence is something marvelous. One of his lectures—"The Gray, the Black, and the Blue," is a masterful affair, abounding in metaphors, similes, etc., that one never wearies, though he talk for hours. This rare "jewel in an ebony casket" was once a slave, but is now devoting his educated talent to breaking the bondage of the drink habit from his people, which he regards as far more harmful than the old bondage of slavery.

Mrs. Ellis, through our state paper, gave our women the privilege of reading Miss Willard's letter to them, and they thoroughly appreciated its kindly words of love, for none are more "loyal to she, than we!" Her call for ten cents per member on Crusade Day was willingly responded to, but as the funds were ordered sent to the National treasurer direct, I fear our state will not know how well she has done. By our state constitution all funds shall pass through the state treasurer to the National.

About two weeks previous to this call of Miss Willard's, the state officers sent out a call for Crusade Day collection and new members, as our work was pressing and no funds to carry it on, and no wealthy friends to make us a donation. It did not serve to stir a dissension as to distribution of funds but one call before them seemed to stimulate the other, and thus brought about a condition there should ever be in all work for the uplifting of humanity.

We have issued recently a little booklet called the "Prayer Record," compiled by Mother Penfield, suggestive of the "noontide prayer" which originated in New Jersey. Our friends would do well to obtain a copy for themselves or friends and also help bring in a little revenue to the state.

The "Y's" held a very successful conference for two days at Ocean Grove in December. Two new unions have been recently organized by the General Secretary.

The L. T. L's are progressing finely, and the superintendent, Mrs. Sparks, has invited them to contribute to the Temperance Hospital in the shape of a table. Lakewood, Island Heights, Point Pleasant have each had a medal contest with good results. Merchantville and Midland Park have recently become united to our "band of ribbon white."

Bloomfield is planning for a new building, while on the other hand Orange has suffered loss by fire of their fine building, but nothing daunted they will arise and rebuild.

The colored work in several of our cities is receiving a goodly share of attention especially among the children in the L. T. L. This is as it should be, for the colored child, if it be male, counts just as much at the ballot box, when he becomes twenty-one years of age, as if his skin were alabaster.

Plainfield has taken up special work with the L. T. L. and Christian Endeavorers. Roseville, with unions near by, also the mother union at Newark, as well as the Camden Central, have been holding most successful all-day meetings, so ought more of the unions to do—for the devil, or devils, "goeth not out but by prayer and fasting."

Mrs. Ellis, our corresponding secretary, is gaining from her illness of last spring. She has held several parlor meetings, but is not yet sufficiently strong to bear the exposure incident to evening platform speaking. She has in charge the petitions for our educational bill, and thus is working.

Mrs. Bourne, ever since her return from the National, has been flitting up and down the state in labors abundant. She has organized several new unions, speaking in churches, visiting unions that are weak and putting new life in them, planning wisely, yet carefully for the advancement of the work in our borders.

We have lost a sincere friend, and the temperance cause a life-long worker in the death of Hon. Stephen B. Ransom, of Jersey City. One by one they pass over to the boundless shore and we pause and wonder who will take the vacant place?

God give us added strength to leave no broken links that the enemy can creep in; but with our dependence upon the Almighty who is strong to deliver, victory some day will be ours!

N. L. CAMINADE,
State Reporter, Trenton.

TENNESSEE.

WORK FOR THE COMING YEAR.

I cut the blooms from my last chrysanthemums yesterday, and all my house is filled with the nodding glories of the queenly blossoms. These and many more things remind us that the year is drawing rapidly to a close. How well would it be with all of us were our work well rounded up and we ready to begin the new year with a bright, unspotted page, with no unfinished or neglected duties staring us in the face or haunting us like grim ghosts of a dead past that refuse to be buried.

In spite of approaching holidays some of our unions send in good reports of work done. East Nashville reports their meetings regular and well attended. They were making elaborate preparations to observe Crusade Day, and I am almost ready to pronounce the meeting a grand success, even though no report of the occasion has yet reached me, because that union never does things by halves.

That their union has influence in the city is proven by the following circumstance: A prominent grocery merchant largely patronized by the W. C. T. U. took out a license to sell liquor by the quart, saying he did this to accommodate his customers, who often sent with their orders for supplies orders for brandy, whisky or wine for cooking purposes to procure which he had to send to a saloon. He was at once notified of a discontinuance of W. C. T. U. patronage. The effect of this was that he at once discontinued the sale of intoxicating liquors, and notified them of the fact.

The Nashville papers were loud in their condemnation of the Osceola outrage and the part borne in the matter by the W. C. T. U. The union at once demanded a correction, and was met with a prompt response and apology.

A committee from this union visited Springfield recently, and organized there a union with forty members. The pastors and prominent officials of the various churches gave hearty coöperation, and a number of honorary members were secured. The first of these to pay his dues was the mayor of the city. The new pastor of the East Nashville Christian church, Elder Lloyd, is a hearty sympathizer with W. C. T. U. work, is an honorary member, a warm suffragist and wears the white ribbon in the pulpit.

From Harriman I have two reports, one of which came just too late for insertion in my last letter. They report distributing a good amount of literature at their county fair; also the holding of a Demorest medal contest in which the L. T. L. acquitted themselves creditably, and several entertainments by the L. T. L. for the purpose of raising funds to make the monthly payment on their piano.

Their superintendents of departments are doing faithful work, special mention being made of Mrs. Manly and Mrs. Karr, of the juvenile work, Mrs. McKinney, of health and narcotics, and Mrs. Kellar, of the colored work. This latter lady has just organized an enthusiastic colored union. She is also superintendent of social purity work, and has sent me, as state superintendent of that work, one of the best reports received from any union in the state. She is certainly doing a grand work for God and home and humanity.

Mention is also made of Mrs. Bridewell, superintendent of mothers' meetings, who is doing a good work.

They edit a column in the Harriman Advance, weekly, and could have one in the Magic City Star if they could get any one to take charge of it. They have interesting Bible readings every month, and were planning a Crusade meeting which will be an accomplished success, I am sure, before this reaches the eyes of UNION SIGNAL readers.

Luther Benson, well known to temperance people everywhere, lectured in Fayetteville, Sunday and Monday nights to large audiences. All were delighted with the magic of his eloquence, so full of the pathos and wit and life that go to make a good lecture and insure attentive audiences.

Our state executive committee has adopted the Obion Outlook, a paper published at Obion, Tenn., as their state official organ. The W. C. T. U. department will be edited by Mrs. Margaret J. Gardner, of Nashville, whose trenchant pen and fearless articles are so well and favorably known to W. C. T. U. women in our state, and whose brave heart knows no abatement of interest in any work for the betterment of humanity. The price is one dollar a year. All official communications will appear in it in the future.

MRS. T. P. HOLMAN,
State Reporter, Fayetteville.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

CHEMUNG COUNTY W. C. T. U. issues an excellent directory in leaflet form, of its county and local officers and superintendents, which must greatly facilitate the county labors.

COLORADO women are saying that in nothing has their president, Mrs. Higgins, shown more wisdom than in nominating for the position of National legislative and petition work, Mrs. Frances Belford, of Denver. Miss Willard's quotation from Mrs. Belford's plans in her annual address is significant and practical.

THE union of Hampden county, Mass., has just sustained a severe loss in the death of its superintendent of franchise, Mrs. L. C. Field, of Westfield. She was a woman of rare personality, sweet and gracious in her bearing and full of contagious zeal for the cause. It is not strange that the county president writes: "It seems as though we could not toil on without her."

Letters from Mothers speak in warm terms of what Scott's Emulsion has done for their delicate, sickly children. It's use has brought thousands back to rosy health.

Scott's Emulsion

of cod-liver oil with Hypophosphites is employed with great success in all ailments that reduce flesh and strength. Little ones take it with relish.

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All druggists.

For Busy Men.
Business men with exhausted nerves and tired heads need a stimulating food that will replace the daily wear and tear. The phosphorus, lime and sodium contained in

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON.

is what you must have. It is an acknowledged fact that no other food contains so large a percentage of nerve and brain stimulant as this.
Never buy Clam Bouillon for the sick, except in Glass Bottles.
Grocers and Druggists.
Six ½ pint bottles expressed for $1.50. Send stamps for book, "Household Hints."
E. S. Burnham Co., 120 Ganesvoort St., N.Y.

Knox's Sparkling Calves' Foot Gelatine
THE PUREST MADE
Received the only Medal and Diploma at the World's Fair, Chicago, on Package Gelatine for table use, for STRENGTH, PURITY and GOOD FLAVOR.
The only Gelatine positively free from odor or taste. Our new package has Rose Gelatine in top of each package to make fancy desserts. Your grocer has it if he keeps the best.
CHARLES B. KNOX, Johnstown, N. Y.
Send a 2-cent stamp for little book. "DAINTY DESSERTS FOR DAINTY PEOPLE."

"Many diseases arise from one cause—blood impurity.
Beecham's Pills
(Tasteless)
WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.
Purify the blood and, thus, go to the root of many maladies."
25 cents a box.

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE WAISTS
Have MANY IMITATORS but NO EQUALS.
Be sure your Waist is stamped, 'Good Sense.'

WE HAVE NO AGENTS,
But save you money on everything you eat, wear or use. Send 8 cts. for full catalogue.
H. R. EAGLE & Co., 68 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

SEND TO GOOD & REESE, SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, for their beautiful catalogue of roses and shrubs.

Official Communications.

WORK AMONG RAILWAY EMPLOYES.

To Railway Workers:

Through your faithfulness, efficiency, sacrifice and spirituality, and by the blessing of God, work among railway employés has gained greatly in influence and power, with a corresponding gain in opportunity for the coming year. To meet this increasing responsibility and to give you aid and suggestion, I have the honor to present the subjoined plan of work for 1894:

Motto: "Nothing is inexorable but love."

PLAN OF WORK FOR 1894.

I.—ORGANIZATION.

1. National department: Superintendent, evangelists and secretary. These officers to constitute a department board.

2. In each state and territory, upon each railroad division, in each county and local union, the same line of organization is recommended. State and territorial department boards are advised to hold meetings bi-monthly, at which time the exact status of work shall be learned, its needs and future advancement provided for.

3. State superintendents shall direct carefully the work of division superintendents, who, in turn, shall advise and instruct county and local superintendents upon their respective railroad divisions as to methods, causing the same to conform strictly, in spirit as well as in letter, to the rules, as relating thereto given by officials—general managers, superintendents or other competent railroad authority—upon whose lines work is sought to be done, in no case inaugurating work for railroad men upon railroad grounds, depots or trains without official sanction.

II.—LITERATURE.

1. Distribute, by permission, in stations and offices, to trainmasters for way-cars, to section-men, shop-men and yard-men, in construction camps and trains, boarding places, conductors, engineers' and firemen's rooms, baggage and express cars or rooms, cabooses, flagmen's houses, bridge men, barbers' shops, engine houses, including, always, papers and pretty cards for children.

Recommended Literature: "Timely Talks," Nos. 7, 24, 32 (per 100, 30c); "Signal Lights," Nos. 7 to 13 inclusive, Nos. 18, 21, 22, 25, 27, 30 (per 100, 15c.); "Gospel Lights," entire series (per 100, 15c.); "National Leaflets," Nos. 10, 12, 14, 23, 32, 34, 36, 39, 40 (per 100, 90c.); "White Cross" series, 1 to 10 (each 3c.); "Railroad Department Leaflets, THE UNION SIGNAL, Oak and Ivy Leaf, The Young Crusader and "Temperance Bonds."

The above published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, The Temple, Chicago.

2. Publications of Miss Julia Colman, New York City.

3. Leaflets of department of narcotics.

4. Leaflets of department of Sabbath observance.

5. Leaflets published by Mrs. E. D. C. Mair, superintendent Pennsylvania W. C. T. U. railway department, Home Hotel, Pittsburg, Pa.

6. The Royal Railroad, Silas Farmer & Co., 31 Monroe Avenue, Detroit, Mich., three cents each; $2.50 per 100, $9 per 500.

7. The Christian Railroader, a most excellent paper published by J. W. Vickerman, Allegheny, Pa. Leaflets by same publisher.

8. For Way Cars, lithographed card and "Family Card," send to Miss Jennie Smith, Mountain Lake Park, Md.; scrap and pledge books, framed Scripture mottoes; calendars and pictures.

9. This department recognizes the justice and sound policy of recommending the excellent literature now issued by The Temperance Publication Bureau of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union; and "Manifestoes," addressing respectively, Rev. A. P. Doyle, 415 West 59th street, New York City, and Rev. Martin Mahoney, St. Paul, Minn.

10. Address superintendent of department for information as to leaflets soon to be issued, and note publisher's column of THE UNION SIGNAL.

11. The way-car, cabin-car or caboose is the home of many employés, and their equipment is urged as a specialty in work for local unions. Let individuals as well as societies push this needed work and furnish at least one way-car outfit, consisting of a rack for literature, to be replenished weekly; a rack for gospel hymns and Bible. Upon the fly leaves of the Bible inscribe the pledge and Scripture texts, and mark throughout comforting passages to be quickly found in case of accident. Place name of any trainman who may have died or been killed belonging to the crew, upon the outside of Bible in gilt letters, thereby making it a memorial.

Equip engine-cabs in the same manner when permitted. Suitable copies of the Bible to be obtained of American Bible Society, free or half price; the regular price of those recommended, 55 cents. Testaments for vest pockets, 3 cents each in quantity. Write name of employé and name of W. C. T. U. superintendent on fly-leaf.

12. Place silent comforters in rooms of the sick and injured, and in railroad wards of hospitals.

III.—SOCIETIES.

1. Railroad Temperance Associations. (Constitutions and bonds to be ordered of the W. T. P. A., the Temple, Chicago.)

2. White Cross Leagues in connection with societies of railroad men, or separately.

IV.—PLEDGES AND BADGES.

1. Total Abstainer's Bond.

2. Triple pledge against drink, gambling and profanity.

3. White Cross Pledge.

4. Badges. The white button (R. R. T. A.) or blue ribbon; White Cross pin.

V.—MEETINGS.

1. Permission given, hold meetings in shops, depots, transfer buildings and in construction camps, mass-meetings and cottage-meetings, with song services everywhere.

2. Public meetings should be regularly held, addressed, if possible, by a department specialist:

(a) For the explanation of purpose and plans of department.

(b) That the sacrifices, exposure and risks of railway men may be realized; their responsible and difficult duties better understood, and their ability and faithfulness more appreciated.

(c) To impress upon Christian men and women their obligation toward railway, motor and cable men, all who are deprived of Sabbath rest and worship.

3. Invite the pastors of the several churches to hold special services, alternately, for railway men. Issue for the same neat cards of invitation which should be mailed or handed to the men. A formal invitation to the several societies of railway men having headquarters in the city, or town, should also be extended.

4. The first Sabbath in March shall be observed as railway men's day.

5. Request pastors of churches to offer at least one sentence of definite prayer for railway men, at each Sabbath service.

6. Ask that good seats be reserved for railway men, in churches, which they shall be cordially invited to occupy.

7. Endeavor to enlist in lines of special service for this department, societies of Christian Endeavor, Epworth Leagues, Young People's Unions, and lay members of churches.

8. Present plans, as relating thereto, before ecclesiastical bodies, ministers' meetings, conferences, synods, associations, etc. Lines of effort suggested will usually secure the friendship and sympathy of railway men and their families, and gain more general attendance at regular and special church services.

9. Avoid the mistake of selecting as a location for meetings, small, obscure churches or halls for the reason that these may be located near railroad shops or stations. The best and most centrally located churches and halls will be more convenient, and will much better accord with the views and tastes of railway men and their families.

(Other suggestions will follow in a later issue.)

Yours prayerfully,
CAROLINE M. WOODWARD,
Seward, Neb. Nat. Supt.

WORK AMONG MINERS.

DEAR FRIENDS OF THE MINER: GREETINGS: Sickness in my home has prevented me from coming to you through these columns earlier than this. I am more than ever before, deeply impressed with the fact that we must be in sympathy with the miner, and more earnest in the work of educating him in sound temperance principles. My heart aches when I think that winter is on, with hundreds of these men idle while the octopus saloon, with its open mouth of hell and slimy arms of treachery and deceit, reach out after them to drag them into the ways of death. So many of the hovels they call home are bare and cheerless, while the saloon, always planted in their way, offers warmth and light.

If you have not already done so, I wish you would read the official communication of Mrs. S. F. Grubb in THE UNION SIGNAL of Nov. 23, the first paragraph of which is applicable also to work among miners.

We need to take this work on our hearts and then to God and He will open the way for us to work. To my request that state superintendents be appointed, several state presidents have replied: "We have no need of the work, no mines in this state," while the official report of "mineral resources" authorized and sent out by the United States government say there are mines being worked in every state and territory except Oklahoma. Louisiana has only gypsum and haliti mines.

I would suggest that in the states where the mines are remote from the W. C. T. Unions, that state superintendents write to the pastors of the churches in the mining towns enlisting them in the work of reaching the more distant and isolated mines with gospel and temperance literature.

Quite a number of unions in eastern states have written me for the address of mines to which they may send literature. Dear state superintendent, this is your opportunity to get help in the way of literature. Send the addresses to me and I will forward to unions who will help us.

Some unions who have no mines near are willing to contribute small sums of money for literature. Let us gather up these fragments and apply them where the need seems greatest. Our apportionment from the National treasurer has been cut down this year so we must make up the deficiency as best we can.

Miners' votes count, and no doubt many votes from among the fifty-seven thousand miners of Colorado were counted on the side of the one hundred and sixty thousand newly enfranchised women citizens of that noble state.

Let me emphasize the necessity of gathering these miners and their families into religious and temperance meetings. Get the ministers and lay workers to assist. Write to Miss Jennie Smith, Mountain Lake Park, Md.,—railroad evangelist—for her dates in your state, ask her to hold meetings with your miners and she will do it. She said to me at the late National meeting she would be glad to go among the mining classes, but no state superintendent had asked her thus far.

Whenever you meet a miner speak to him, make him feel that you are interested in his and his family's good.

Order quantities of our "department leaflets" for distribution. We have a new leaflet just published, "Answer this Question," by our round-the-world missionary, Miss Jessie Ackermann. Get it at once. What more can I say to "stir you up unto good works." I desire every state superintendent of this department to write to me as soon as possible. I have not the address of all. Some are new and need instructions for the work, but I cannot send them without your name and address.

Our department leaflets are only fifteen cents per hundred.

Bishop Fowler says, "Every great man has a great purpose." So has every great woman and so should every superintendent of work among miners. The work is great and the women must be great with a holy purpose to help Our Father save these souls. Will you do it?

Yours,
WINNIE F. ENGLISH,
Nat. Supt.

Quincy, Ill.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

DEPARTMENT WORK.

Owing to the financial stress of the times it was found necessary at our late Convention to lessen the salaries of officers and the appropriations annually made for the work of departments. Of the latter, some having received the larger amounts were cut down one-half; this was the case with the department of Work Among Foreign Speaking People, of which Mrs. Sophia F. Grubb is superintendent.

The reduction of appropriations does not indicate less need of work in our various departments, but obligation to curtail, greater responsibility is thereby thrown upon each union to carry on in its own locality the work there needed. That special diligence is required in this department is clear, as there are foreign speaking people in almost every township in the United States. Mrs. Grubb, under the former financial regime, has kept a missionary at Ellis Island who has met immigrants as they have landed, furnished them literature in their own language, taught them the fundamental principles of Christianity and civilization, and done all in her power to fortify them against temptation and rum; and we have magnificent indorsements of the missionary's (Miss Lindahl) faithfulness and ability. Shall our future citizens from foreign lands be neglected and forgotten because of financial depression?

Should not unions in cities and localities where foreign speaking people abound, inaugurate some form of work among them that will continue the education and Christian influence so well begun, and (as long as possible) faithfully prosecuted?

Mrs. Grubb has carefully prepared suitable literature which has been published in many languages, her long experience having taught her exactly the need of these people.

Will not the unions write her at Kirkwood, Mo., and secure supplies for distribution? She will also be glad to give information how the work may be most effect-

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

Send One Dollar for the
LAWTON LAMP STOVE
Will heat a room at a cost of two cents a day.
Will heat a room in ten minutes.
Will fit any Lamp Chimney
One agent wanted in every town and city. Address
LAWTON LAMP STOVE CO.
Chelsea, Mass.

Complexion Preserved.
DR. HEBRA'S VIOLA CREAM
Removes Freckles, Pimples Liver-Moles, Blackheads, Sunburn and Tan, and restores the skin to its original freshness, producing a clear and healthy complexion. Superior to all face preparations and perfectly harmless. At all druggists or mailed for 50 cts. Send for circular.
G. C. BITTNER & CO., TOLEDO, O.

THE SIGNAL DID IT!
WHAT? Made hundreds of homes of its readers happy with our "Modern Bath." The thousands who saw them at the World's Fair indorse their merit, for which HIGHEST PRIZE was awarded.
Send 2c. for catalogue illustrating 18 styles.
THE MOSELY FOLDING BATH TUB CO., 181 K. S. Canal St., CHICAGO.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS
FOR MAN AND BEAST.
Manufactured by
THE J. L. Mott Iron Works
84 to 90 Beekman Street, NEW YORK.
311 & 313 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO.
Catalogue on Application

THE WONDERFUL MECHANICAL SPELLER.
PIANO MOVEMENT
BEAUTIFULLY FINISHED.
The Child's Best Teacher. Have you seen it? Older folks will find it very amusing. Would you like one? For $1.00 we will send it to your address, charges paid.
KINDERGARTEN MFG. CO.
925 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

GLOBE SAVINGS BANK
Corner Dearborn and Jackson Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.
UNDER STATE CONTROL.
INDIVIDUAL AND SAVINGS ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.
SAFETY ▲ DEPOSIT ▲ VAULTS.

FAT PEOPLE YOU can reduce your weight permanently from 10 to 15 lbs. a month at home, secretly, without starving, sickness or injury, by the use of Dr. Clarke's Home Treatment. Perfected in many years' practice. Causes no wrinkles or flabbiness. Stout abdomens, difficult breathing, relieved by sure scientific methods. No experiments. Guaranteed. Best references. Price within reach of all. Write today. Positive proofs and testimonials free.
Dr. F. B. CLARKE, Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

$3 a Day Sure. Send us your address and we will show you how to make $3 a day; absolutely sure; we furnish the work and teach you free; you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully; remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 for every day's work; absolutely sure; don't fail to write to-day.
ROYAL MANUFACTURING CO., Detroit, Mich.

DOUBLE Breech-Loader $6.00. RIFLES $2.00 WATCHES GUNS BICYCLES $15 All kinds cheaper than elsewhere. Before you buy, send stamp for catalogue to POWELL & CLEMENT CO. 166 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

Bickford Family Knitter.
Knits everything required by the household, of any quality, texture and weight desired. A. M. LAWSON, 783 Broadway, N. Y.
Beware of cheap and worthless knitters.

ALASKA STOVE LIFTER
will not get hot even if left in the lid. Heavily Nickel Plated. Price by mail, postpaid, 30 cents
TROY NICKEL WORKS, Troy, N. Y.

ively carried on; concerning speakers for meetings among German, Chinese, Hollanders and other nationalities, and no one can so well present the work to American audiences as Mrs. Grubb herself, who has been the faithful superintendent of the department from its organization.

Learning that the American Sabbath union would hold its anniversary in New York City, too late to arrange for our greetings to be presented in person by one of our women, a letter was addressed them expressing our interest and sympathy in their effort to which the following kind reply has been made:

SECRETARY NATIONAL W. C. T. U.:—Your kind note of December 9, bearing the greetings of the union you represent to the American Sabbath union at its fifth anniversary, held in New York City, December 10-12, was duly received. Our union has requested me to respond to your kind words in the same spirit that is evident in your communication. We are engaged in the same warfare, against the foes of the Lord's Day, that your union is engaged in, and we wish in every way to co-operate with you in this important struggle.

Wishing your union all success in its great work, believe me, sincerely yours,

J. H. KNOWLES, Gen. Sec.

Mrs. Stephen Matthews, of London, England, a National organizer of the British Women's Temperance Association, and who was sent by that body as delegate to the World's and National W. C. T. U. Conventions, has remained in this country, and is going from place to place, from union to union, in the interest of our work. She will soon be in Canada and New York, and would be glad to speak afternoon or evening to those desiring her services, at the low charge of five dollars and expenses. Address her for the present at Headquarters.

A friend writes: "The report comes that liquors were sold in the café of the Woman's Building at the World's Fair. I have denied it. Am I right?" Mrs. Helen M. Barker, National W. C. T. U. treasurer, who was one of the Lady Managers of the Fair, authorizes me to say that there was no liquor in the Woman's Building at any time, hence the inquirer is correct.

MARY A. WOODBRIDGE.

Treasurer's Corner.

If the corner is not as full as usual this week, please remember that the treasury is fuller, and it is because the dimes have come in at such a brisk rate that the treasurer and assistant have scarcely been able to keep up with the work; and yet they are glad. Evidence reaches us every day that the observance of Crusade anniversary was very generally and very heartily observed, and the National treasury remembered in the collections.

From Bellefonte, Pa., six dollars was sent, five from the union, and the letter said: "The one dollar is worth ten times the amount of ours, as it was raised in the small country union of Port Matilda, by a woman poor and sick, but devoted to our work, and ambitious to do all requested by THE UNION SIGNAL."

Meriden, Conn., sends a New Year's gift of $10, with the following: "Organized April 12, 1874. Loyal to the National and World's Unions, including all 'affiliated interests.'"

"A bag of paper-rags furnished this dime," says another.

From Dexter, Mo., $2. One from W's and one from Y's, and under the inspiration of the giving a bright Y sends this little gem:

"Thus, young and old unite,
In bonds of ribbon white,
To aid the cause of right,
At our loved chieftain's call.
With hope and courage strong,
What though the way be long?
This thought, 'We all belong,' Brings blessing to us all."

A good brother sends $5 and says, "One dime is for myself and the forty-nine for that number of poor women who have been so cruelly robbed."

A Maryland woman considerately sends, "One dime for myself and nine for shrinkage," and then she adds: "My prayer is for God's blessings upon all our officials and workers in the ranks."

One brother writes: "I saw in the 'Corner Stone,' Miss Willard's appeal for ten cents from the W. C. T. U. Although not of that crowd, I am traveling the same way, and quite as anxious to get there, and if I can have the privilege am very much disposed to put my ten cents on the pile and have faith that another will come to me in its place." His faith seemed to increase and he gave two dimes and promised more if the occasion required it.

Ohio and Massachusetts have sent in dues that will help us in bringing in the New Year in better shape than we hoped. Truly the "Lord is better to us than our fears."

HELEN M. BARKER.

Organizers' Corner.

[It is the desire of the editors of THE UNION SIGNAL that this Corner should serve the National Organizers as a sort of Lecture Bureau, and to that end they are invited to send their calendar of appointments long enough ahead to secure engagements in the territory to which they are called.]

The following is the list of National organizers for the present year, and whether W's or Y's they are all accredited public speakers and fully prepared to organize W's, Y's, L. T. L's, or speak to the general public and add to the membership of unions.

For terms and dates address as below:

Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.
Mrs. L. H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.
Miss Frances E. Griffin, 69 Maple street, Chicago.
Mrs. Mary Bynon Reese, Chautauqua, Wash.
Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, 1907 Bush street, San Francisco, Cal.
Mrs. E. A. Blair, 936 Cottage Place, Los Angeles, Cal.
Mrs. Maude L. Green, Manitou Springs, Col.
Mrs. E. Norinne Law, Baraga, Mich.
Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.
Mrs. Delle H. Cox, Newberg, Ore.
Miss Ida Clothier, Manitou Springs, Col.
Mrs. Henrietta Skelton, 132 McAllister street, San Francisco, Cal.
Miss S. C. Harris, Franklin, Va.
Mrs. F. E. W. Harper, Bainbridge street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.
Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.
Miss Frances Ensign, Madison, O.
Mrs. E. A. Kenyon, Townshend, Vt.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL.

I can scarcely leave this place without giving a word of hearty thanks to all who are interested in this branch of our W. C. T. U. work. After six weeks' stay, I know whereof I speak. Every day I have been made grateful by enjoying some bounty at the hands of those who have it at heart. I have slept under your handiwork, I have tasted of your jellies and delicious grape juice and fruits and many other articles so generously sent by our sisters all over the land. Almost anything you can send will be used. In a family of forty or more daily scarcely anything can go to waste. Blankets are especially needed, being lighter and more available for the sick than quilts or comfortables, of which we have a surplus. Donations of oranges and fruits from our Southern California sisters would be especially appreciated by invalids. All this is well and of great help to the hospital, but that which answereth all things is of course most desirable and greatly needed.

Cannot we all give a long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together, and ere long pull these faithful, hard workers out of their present inconvenient building into one under their own vine and fig tree, independent of unwilling landlords, large rentals, expensive repairs?

The National Temperance Hospital is no longer an experiment, but tried and tested, until it has won a victory over all alcoholic stimulants, and is most successful in all cases, both medical and surgical. With a corps of physicians among the best in the city who work most earnestly and harmoniously with the faithful house physician and head nurse, also the matron and nurses, the hospital cannot fail to grow to be a success if we do our part in the work.

We are pained when we see how much the work is hindered and how much good that might be done is not for lack of proper quarters. We cannot fail to cry aloud and spare not to all our women to come up to our help to enlarge the building fund which is now distressingly small. I fear many of our sisters are as ignorant as I was of this great work that is being done.

I have great reason to thank God for all who cared for me so kindly when too sick to know their kindness. I shall not soon forget when after a two weeks or more fight with my strength and determination to keep at my work, a friend saw dear Mrs. Hobbs, who is and has been head and heart in this work, and she said, "Telephone Mrs. Hornby at once and have Mrs. Russell taken into my room."

Have we not some others among our white-ribboners who can endow a room in the hospital? It means much to one obliged to be laid aside for awhile to find such a home. Are there not some of our women in the lecture field who will bring it before their audiences, the great need of funds for this branch of work?

E. A. RUSSELL.

Our Library Table.

JANUARY MAGAZINES.

OUR LITTLE ONES AND THE NURSERY, published by the Russell Publishing Company, 196 Summer St., Boston, is a thirty-two page monthly magazine for little children, beautifully illustrated, and containing just the short, amusing healthy stories and bright jingles that children revel in. The January number is a good promise for the ensuing year.

OUR LITTLE MEN AND WOMEN is suggestive throughout of Christmas good cheer and a "Happy New Year" greeting. The author of Lady Gay begins to tell about "A Dozen Good Times," and Gretta Bryar in "Nurse Powell's Giant" suggests something interesting and altogether unique on that wonderful subject, electricity. "My Pussy's Adventures," by C. P. L., is a charming story. Poems and shorter stories by Mrs. M. F. Butts, Lavinia S. Goodwin, Lilla Barnard and Helen A. Hawley, need only their authors' names to tell of their worth. The new feature begins in this number, "Our Kindergarten," under the charge of Miss Sara E. Wiltse. "The Light Bird" is a song which not only the Kindergartners, but our little men and women everywhere, will play and sing with delight. The music is by Eleanor Smith and the song is one of Froebel's.

D. Lothrop Company, Boston, Publishers.

THE PANSY FOR JANUARY opens with an excellent chapter of "Vira's Motto," its leading story, written by that leading story-writer, Pansy, followed by a poem, "New Year," by R. M. A., delicate in touch and sympathetic in thought. There are shorter stories and other poems, all up to the standard of this leading young folks' magazine, while "The Christian Endeavor Bulletin," "The Mission Bulletin," "Our Picture Gallery," "Best Things," and "Games Round the Family Lamp," as well as its "Baby's Corner," are progressive and the best of their kind. Margaret Sidney's Golden Discovery paper this month treats of John B. Gough, his life and work. The Greek Literature Papers take up "The Odyssey," and a clever paper it is, helpful and scholarly.

D. Lothrop Company, Boston, Publishers.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY begins the New Year with a most inviting array of material for consideration by its host of good friends. Margaret Deland, whose name is the sole recommendation her stories need, leads off in a serial entitled "Philip and His Wife." In the first chapter her picture of a self-immolated, self-righteous invalid is most life-like. Sarah Orne Jewett's story, "The Only Rose," is full of humor and sympathy. Mrs. Mary Hartwell Catherwood's story of "Wolfe's Cove," has historical color of Canadian setting. Miss Edith M. Thomas, delights lovers of nature by her exquisite pen-picturing in "From Winter Solstice to Vernal Equinox." "Lowell, Brooks and Gray in their Letters," is an extended book of review of positive, present value. Such is a portion of the first-class reading matter in this well-established friend of the literary world.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston and New York.

A quiet morning over the CENTURY is time charmingly and profitably spent. 1894 ushers in an imposing array of fine magazines and it behooves the critic to exert a fine discrimination that he may unhesitatingly pronounce which one takes the lead. And tastes differ; therefore, it is safe to say, given any one of the list as "leader" the CENTURY is fully abreast. The January issue gives chapters four to eight, inclusive, of Mark Twain's "Pudd'nhead Wilson" which gives great promise of being his masterpiece in style and plot. His humor ever outdoes itself. "Garfield and Conkling" is a study of political situations by Henry L. Dawes. "The Vanishing Moose" is a fine contribution by Madison Grant, containing valuable bits of natural history, hunters' lore, and a severe rebuke to the vandal-like destruction of America's forests and the denizens of those noble retreats. "Sir James Simpson's Introduction of Chloroform" is written by the scientist's daughter, a paper made more valuable by the date of its appearance "before those who can remember when there was no blessed anodyne to annul suffering, and before those who assisted at the introduction of chloroform, are gone from us." "A sketch of Robert Schumann," by Edward Grieg, and one of "George Sand" by Th. Bentzon (Mme. Blanc) will hold the attention of students in literature and music. These with other features fully as fine make up in themselves a library of history, fiction, science, poetry.

The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York City.

Roses
How to get the best, and how to grow them successfully—that's the text of our new Guide to Rose Culture
for 1894. It tells you how to get the famous D.&C. Roses on their own roots; gives the very latest and best information for the culture of all kinds of flowers. We send it free to anyone, together with a sample copy of our interesting floral Magazine
"SUCCESS WITH FLOWERS."
THE DINGEE & CONARD CO.
Rose Growers and Seedsmen, West Grove, Pa.

Nerve Tonic — Blood Builder
DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR PALE PEOPLE
Send for descriptive pamphlet.
50c. per box. 6 for $2.50.
Dr. WILLIAMS' MEDICINE CO., Schenectady, N.Y. and Brockville, Ont.

AGENTS MAKE MONEY
Selling the New Moon Embroidery Ring, for all kinds of fancy work, darning and mending. Good profits and a clear field. Sample and full particulars mailed for 25 cents. The Ohio Novelty Co., D35, Cincinnati, O.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$10.50 Buy the Oxford Improved SINGER Sewing Machine, with a complete set of attachments and guaranteed for 10 years. Shipped anywhere on 30 days' trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded. Buy from factory, save dealers' and agents' profit. Write to-day for our LARGE FREE CATALOGUE. Oxford Mfg. Co., 342 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

WALL PAPER Send 5 cts. postage Large package of beautiful samples all at wholesale prices. ALFRED PEATS, 30 & 32 W. 15th St., New York, or 136 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FREE MUSIC 44 pieces, latest Sheet Music and charming illustrated Magazine 3 months; all for 10 cents; send silver dime. American Nation, Box 1729, Boston, Mass.

RUBIFOAM FOR THE TEETH.
SAMPLE VIAL FREE.
E. W. HOYT & CO., LOWELL, MASS.

6 tubs in one BATH TUBS, Wholesale & Retail. For "Bath Room" & "Portable." Durable, many long used renewed, light, little water. Agents and others send for circulars.
E. J. Knowlton, Ann Arbor, Mich.

AGENTS CAN MAKE FROM $25.00 TO $100.00 a week by canvassing for the best special ties ever offered. No competition. Address, N. Y. & LONDON ELECTRIC ASSN., Kansas City Mo.

Don't Cost You a Cent!
BOYS AND GIRLS who want an elegant high grade SAFETY BICYCLE FOR NOTHING, send your name and address to H. M. CO., 358 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

PILES Instant relief, final cure in a few days, and never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. Remedy mailed free. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N.Y.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTO FAMILY RECORDS, OTHER PICTURES, PORTRAITS & FRAMES. Address Dept. G C. P. CORY & CO. 41 & 45 Jefferson St., Chicago.

SALESMEN WANTED to sell our goods by samples to the wholesale and retail trade; sell on sight to every business man or firm; liberal salary, money advanced for advertising and expenses. Permanent position. Address with stamp, KING MFG. CO., A 55 Chicago, Ill.

At 1/4 Price Watches, Guns, Buggies, Harness, Sewing Machines, Organs, Bicycles, Farm Tools, Safes, etc. List FREE. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

14 KARAT GOLD PLATE
CUT THIS OUT and send it to us with your name and address and we will send you this watch by express for examination. A Guarantee For 5 Years and chain and charm sent with it. You examine it and if you think it a bargain pay our sample price, $2.75, and it is yours. It is beautifully engraved and warranted the best timekeeper in the World for the money and equal in appearance to a genuine Solid Gold Watch. Write to-day, this offer will not appear again.
THE NATIONAL MFG. —AND— IMPORTING CO.
334 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL

Subscription Rates for 1893.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly. Price per year	$ .25
Young Crusader, monthly, one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago.

CALENDARS! CALENDARS!
Half Price!

We have a line of calendars for 1894, unique and attractive, which we are ready to offer at just half their former price:

Poet's	Calendar, formerly	.50	now	.25
Little People's	" "	.40	"	.20
Christmas	" "	.40	"	.20
Onward and Upward	"	.25	"	.12
Play Day Calendar,	"	.15	"	.08
Petit	" "	.15	"	.08

Special Attention

is called to the Poet's Calendar as being best value for the price, also to the Onward and Upward Calendar, which has Scripture texts for each month. We have but a limited number of each, and in order to avail yourself of this opportunity to secure a lovely gift for a friend you must order at once. Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ATTENTION! BOYS!

See our display advertisement which cannot fail to interest you. This opportunity is not for your mother or sister, but for you only. We do not offer many premiums but we are confident this nickel watch is just what you need, just what it claims to be, and for the effort it will cost, you can not obtain a better time-keeper. It is really a clock movement in a nickel case, manufactured by the Waterbury Clock Company, small enough to fit in your vest pocket. The smallest boy can wind it and tell accurate time by it. It is not a toy watch nor as small and delicate as your father's, yet will keep perhaps better time than his. Read our offer and notify us at once that you wish to work for one of these watches and we will be ready to fill your order as soon as it reaches us.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

NOW READY.

Prospectus for Responsive and Bible Readings of 1894.

Send for it that you may know what a rich feast is in store.

Miss Willard and Lady Henry Somerset are among those who furnish Bible readings. The Responsive Reading for January is on purity, by the gifted National superintendent of that department, Dr. Mary Wood Allen. The Bible Reading is by Mrs. J. H. McMinn, who has furnished several in other years.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER.

A TEMPERANCE EIGHT PAGE MONTHLY.

What the Children Need.

LOW RATES.

Send for samples of the JANUARY number. Sunday-schools are ordering in large packages. L. T. L. superintendents say they cannot do without it. The children express themselves as delighted with it. We are making special terms to agents, and the boys and girls can earn pocket money in this way. Urge them to write to us for information.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

OUR NEW CATALOGUE

is ready, and is the very best we have ever issued. Many publications, and even new lines of publications, are here catalogued for the first time, and our workers will find it indispensable if they are to be well informed. It leaves room for additions because of our rapidly growing and changing list, and, withal, has

A Bit of a Story, with a "moriole," which we want you to read. Sample copies sent free. Ask for one.

The Great Encyclopedia Britannica, only $19.75.

This offer open till Feb. 1, 1894, only. The genuine, unabridged, illustrated edition, over 20,500 pages, 10,000 illustrations, 200 maps

This is the genuine, unabridged, illustrated edition. The full set is ready for immediate delivery. It is a reprint, in large type, of the last (9th) English edition, over 20,500 pages, including more than 10,000 illustrations and 200 maps.

Size of volumes, 8 3-4 by 10 inches, by 3 1-2 thick; weight, about six pounds each. Size of type shown by these lines.

It is issued in 24 volumes strongly bound in 12 volumes, cloth, price of the set as above. The same bound in half Russia, $4.80 extra. Index volume, if wanted, extra, cloth, $1.00; half Russia, $1.40. By freight or express.

Beware of humbug claims } Investigate.

Whoever has need for an encyclopedia ought to be wise enough to avoid being humbugged by book agents, or by flashy newspaper advertisements.

A Trial Offer.

For $1.00 we will send you by express (50 cents extra if by mail) volumes 17–18 of the Britannica in cloth binding; in half Russia 25 cents extra.

In this you will have a world of knowledge, between Montanabbi and Phthisis, over 1,700 pages and hundreds of maps and illustrations, including Motley.	New Hampshire, New Jersey and New York, (24 pages.)	Palestine.

Mozart.	Ohio.	Paris, (22 pages.)
Music, (30 pages.)	Oregon.	Pathology, (47 pages.)
Mythology, (34 pages.)	Ornithology, (49 pages.)	Paul, (15 pages.)
Napoleon, (35 pages.)		Pennsylvania.
Norway.		Persia, (100 pages.)

Return volume within one month and get money back, if you will. Don't buy any cyclopedia that will not submit to a similar test. It is easy to put merits and claims to the test.

Supplementing the English edition, especially treating American topics and living biography, we publish:

American supplement } Over 3,800 pages.

American Supplement, edited by Howard Crosby, D.D., LL.D., and others, 5 volumes, 3,843 pages, and Index to entire work, 579 pages, the 6 volumes, bound in 3 volumes, cloth, price, $6.00; half Russia, $7.20.

Though the Britannica is complete in itself, this Supplement, from the hands of about 150 American scholars and writers of highest reputation is generally wanted.

Size: some customers at first thought object to the thickness of the volumes of this edition, but when they consider: ●

Even when bound in 24 volumes they are too large to hold in the hand, and must be consulted on a table; these volumes open just as readily as the others, being more flexible in fact, on account of the thinner paper; the cost of this is about half that of any 24 vol. edition; thus the objection quite disappears.

N.B. The above offer will not be repeated; order AT ONCE.

If you can't well spare the price of the set immediately, you may order the sample volume, or send us $1.00 on account, and we will agree to accept balance of payment for the set on its delivery within three months thereafter.

Any book supplied; the Britannica at one-sixth its former price is a fair illustration of what we are doing for book-buyers all along the line. Our publications not sold by dealers or agents; direct sales make the low prices possible. 160-page Catalogue sent for 2-cent stamp

Please mention this paper when you write.

JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 57 Rose St., New York.

Publisher's Department.

ADVANCE GUARD FOR DECEMBER.

The subscribers to The Advance Guard have been compelled to exercise a little patience, but the December number is now ready for mailing, and orders for single copies will be promptly filled.

Contents.

Christ is King. Alice M. Guernsey.
Here and There.
A Case of Nerve.
Godliness is Ease. Millie Andrews Bell.
Four Centuries. L. A. Ruble.
Tobacco and the Body. Florence W. Hoes.
The Tables Turned. Mattie E. Fay.
At the Vanishing City. Alice M. Guernsey.

Send orders to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

OUR DAY FOR 1894.

We desire to call especial attention to change in issue and price of

Our Day

for 1894. This popular magazine, the only one of its kind in America, will be issued in 1894 as a Bi-Monthly at the uniform price of $1 per annum to all subscribers, clergymen and students included.

Our Day still remains without a rival. Mr. Stead, of the English Review of Reviews, says that he obtains more of value from it than any other American magazine.

It will continue to discuss fearlessly, as heretofore,

Mormonism, Temperance, Politics, Jesuitism, Labor Reform, Church Life,

and will prove invaluable to all who desire information of the World of Reform.

Price $1 per annum.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

...BEAUTIFUL AND USEFUL PRESENTS...

WHAT?

Why, the beautiful

Souvenir Spoon

which we have been preparing for our workers and all making a collection of spoons. Could it be more complete in design? It shows the beginning of the Great Reform in the bowl, where is pictured the little Crusade Church in Hillsboro, whence it sprang.

The culmination is emblemized in the World, belted with the White Ribbon at the extreme end, while the Medallion of the President of the National and the World's W. C. T. U. is embowered in the National Floral Emblem, the trailing arbutus.

On the reverse side are the World's Floral Emblem, the water lily, as also are the initials of the great Official Publishing House, which secured the production of the spoon.

Of course, every one will want one or more of these spoons—want them for personal use and as gifts. And we have decided to reduce the profits on the same to the lowest point of safety, so as to enable more to buy them.

NOTICE.—They are offered at a lower price than any sterling silver spoon on the market. Here are our rates for the different styles, all made of Solid Sterling Silver:

TEA SPOONS.

For single spoon,	$ 2.25
Per set of 6,	12.50
With bowl gilded,	2.75
All gilded,	3.25

ORANGE SPOONS.

For single spoon,	2.50
With bowl gilded,	3.00
All gilded,	3.50

AFTER DINNER COFFEE SPOONS.

For single spoon,	1.50
With bowl gilded,	1.75
All gilded,	2.00

Send to

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association

...THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO...

Publisher's Notes.

BOOKS.

Around the World With Jesus.

By CHARLES A. CRITTENTON. This charming booklet describes the Holy Land and contains a sketch of Florence Crittenton Missions by Charlton Edholm, superintendent of press of World's W. C. T. U. Price 35 cents.

As is well known by white-ribboners, Mr. Crittenton, the famous evangelist, already largely supports eight Florence Crittenton Missions for the rescue of erring girls, and at the Denver convention pledged $5,000 to the W. C. T. U. for founding five more missions under their auspices. These are now being established, and every cent realized from the sale of "AROUND THE WORLD WITH JESUS" will be given to the Florence Crittenton Missions, and every one whose heart throbs for our erring girls may aid the grand work for their redemption by circulating this little souvenir. It contains beautiful pictures of Mr. Crittenton, Miss Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, and Mother Prindle, Matron of New York Mission, all white-ribboners, and it cannot fail to interest all.

Brilliants from Frances E. Willard

is the title of a dainty volume in which are compiled the choicest thoughts of that gifted woman. The book contains twenty engravings, which make it attractive as well as helpful. Board covers in white and gold and gray cloth, 60 cents.

Touching Incidents and Remarkable Answers to Prayer.

By REV. S. B. SHAW. Cloth, $1.

This book is neither doctrinal nor denominational, yet distinctly Christian. Its high religious tone, its fascinating spirit and the high rank of its contributors, make it a strong faith tonic and an inspiration to prevailing prayer.

The Well-Dressed Woman.

By HELEN GILBERT ECOB. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.

This is a work which appeals to every intelligent mother. It is valuable in its exposition, both in text and illustrations, of the artistic ideal and rules of dress, and is full of the best of advice for school-girls, young women at college and young mothers. Miss Willard and the whole corps of earnest workers in the W. C. T. U. are very hearty in their indorsement of this book, and it should be in the hands of every sensible woman.

Bright-Eyes

Or, Pleasure and Profit for Sunday Afternoon. Arranged by ALICE M. GUERNSEY. Price, 50 cents.

This pretty little quarto is ingeniously devised, so as to suggest to children, by means of outline pictures, the work of searching the Scriptures in order to find the passages which the vignettes chime in with. It will be of service to many a mother, or older sister, or brother, on a Sunday afternoon, in the endeavor to teach or interest the little ones.—Central Christian Advocate.

A Young Woman Journalist.

By FRANCES E. WILLARD. Cloth, $1.

A book designed by the author to stimulate other young women to "be something," to make the most of their opportunities.

A Woman's Evangel.

By EVA KINNEY GRIFFITH. Price cloth, $1.25

"This book will interest and benefit many readers. It has some literary merit, but its special feature is the fact that it is written to explain and advocate the various kinds of effort in behalf of total abstinence which the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is making. The many members of, or sympathizers with, that influential organization will read it with approval, and so will others."—The Congregationalist.

Columbus, and What He Found.

By MRS. MARY H. HULL. Price $1.

This is a wonder-tale filled with all the romance and truth of the great event of America's discovery, and told for young readers in a pure yet thrilling manner. There is already a large demand for this unique child's history among parents and teachers who desire to answer authentically all questions and controversies which come to the ears of children. Columbus will be always with us as much a feature in the future as Washington, being the step beyond Washington and the home-nation into the great mother, Europe, and the beginnings of the child Columbia. This book is filled with patriotic enthusiasm.

Child's Christ Tales.

By ANDREA HOFER. Price $1.

In teaching little folks the Christ example by story, no book will help so much as this. It is written from the kindergarten standpoint, and full of deep, sweet truths simply told.

Publisher's Notes.

CONTENTS OF OUR DAY FOR DECEMBER.

Photogravure of the Rev. Ex-Pres. Cyrus Hamlin, D. D. Frontispiece.

1. Constitutional Rights of Colored Citizens. Rev. F. A. Noble, D. D.
2. God in the Constitution. Rev. Will C. Wood.
3. Boston Hymn—Sealed Orders. Joseph Cook.
4. Boston Monday Lectures—Eighteenth Year. Promises and Perils of the World's Fair—What is Sunday Worth to Religion? Joseph Cook.
5. Book Notices:—Ex-Pres. Hamlin's Life and Times—Gen. Wallace's Prince of India—James Russell Lowell's Letters—Martyn's Life of John B. Gough—Baedeker's Hand Book of the United States.
6. Vital Points of Expert Opinion:—Bishop Coxe's Letter to Mgr. Satolli on Public Schools—Mr. Stead's Chicago Proposals on Civic Reform.
7. Questions to Specialists:—Miss Willard on Woman's Progress in 1892-3.
8. Editorial Notes:-The National League's Defense of American Schools—Afro-American Convention at Cincinnati—Five First-class Prizes for Mrs. Hunt's Exhibit at the World's Fair—Dr. Barrows' Record of the Parliament of Religions—Prospectus of Our Day for 1894—Photogravure of Ex-Pres. Hamlin.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER.

Best Young People's Temperance Periodical Published.

Small But Mighty.

Cheap But Precious.

Why Have You Not Subscribed?

REGULAR SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

One copy, 12 numbers per annum, 15 cts.

Twenty-five copies or over in one package at the rate of $1 per hundred copies per issue.

For our terms to agents address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

CHILDREN, READ THIS!

Don't you want to earn some money? We want AGENTS for The Young Crusader in your town.

Write to us and we will tell you all about it. Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

We would call your attention to our CALENDAR OFFER on another page. If you or your friends desire something that will be a pleasure all the year through, send for one of these calendars.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

GOOD MUSIC.

Nothing adds to the effectiveness of any meeting so much as good singing. You can enkindle enthusiasm in no better way than by a solo and a rousing chorus. Send for a few copies of the "White Ribbon Hymnal," which will cost 35 cents each, and TRY IT.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS.

Mrs. Lathrap's bugle note in the Crusade number of THE UNION SIGNAL is taking form as a National Leaflet, and will soon be ready.

Nothing has yet appeared which so fully carries the Crusade fire into the advanced lines of to-day's work.

You cannot afford to be without it.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

BIBLE AND RESPONSIVE READINGS FOR 1894.

The prospectus for the New Year will be issued early in January, and a rich feast is promised. Names well known in W. C. T. U. lines the world over, are to be found among the contributors to both these monthly readings.

Our list of subscribers should double in the year to come. Send in subscriptions at once.

THE NEW Y MANUAL

by Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, Nat. Supt.

This manual is an encyclopedia of Y work. You need it. Price 25c.

Attention Boys

We want Every Temperance Boy

To work on time during 1894 and to this end we give the opportunity to secure a first-class time-keeper....Just a few hours' work daily and this fine Nickel Watch will be yours....

This Offer is for Boys only

For Six New Subscribers

to THE UNION SIGNAL we will send it to your address, postpaid.

For Four New Subscribers

and Fifty Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

For Two New Subscribers

and Seventy-five Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

Boys who will thank us for this generous offer to own the best pocket time-piece yet made by any Clock Company. Extreme diameter of case 2¼ in.

We believe in an honest thing and so offer Nickel Watches, but if you prefer gilt, which resembles gold in appearance but is likely to wear off, we offer it on the same terms.....As soon as your mind is made up to secure one of these Watches, write to us. This will insure prompt delivery when your order reaches us....Address

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO.

Sent in box, postpaid, to any address, for 60c. Address

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO.

Signal Notes.

"WHISKY is the dynamite of civilization."

DENMARK has one hundred and forty-nine Young Women Christian Associations.

AN International Christian Endeavor convention to be held in London, in 1900, is being talked about.

THE workingmen of Great Britain and Ireland earn £600,000,000 a year, sixty per cent of which goes for drink.

THE earl of Carlisle has given a practical illustration of his belief in the drink evil, by destroying the contents of his famous wine cellar.

THE authorities of Plainfield, N. J., have forbidden the display of indecent posters on the city bill-boards, an action worthy of imitation by every city.

OF the three hundred and thirteen brewing companies in Germany only two-thirds could pay any dividend last year, the others had but losses to record.

"THERE are two things needed in these days—first, for rich men to find out how poor men live, and, second, for poor men to know how rich men work."—Edward Atkinson.

AUSTRIA numbers one hundred and thirty-one suicides in her army to every one hundred thousand men; Germany, sixty-seven; Italy, forty; France, twenty-nine and England, twenty-three.

EXCELLENT work in the direction of education is being done by the New York Kindergarten Association which has now fourteen kindergartens with six hundred and fifty children in attendance.

T. V. POWDERLY, ex-president of the Knights of Labor, believes that the cause of temperance is gaining ground, and all because men and women who believe in it cannot be browbeaten or frightened.

A CONFERENCE for good city government has been called by the Municipal League of Philadelphia for January 23 and 24. Persons throughout the country who are interested in city reform have been invited.

MULTIPLY fifteen dollars per day by two hundred and fifty thousand, the number of saloons, that result by three hundred and sixty-five days and the final result represents the drink bill for the United States.

A YEAR ago, no less than forty-three total abstinence mayors were elected in England. Twenty of these were entertained recently by the lord mayor of London and gave their testimony to the benefits of total abstinence.

THE Boston man, who induced business men to contribute food, beds and clothing, coal and groceries with which to run a home for a thousand seamstresses who are out of work, has commendable energy and philanthropy.

THE Society of Decorative Art, New York, was formed fifteen years ago for the purpose of teaching gentlewomen how to help themselves. The society has now about five thousand contributors, many of whom are the principal home-supporters. None of the managers receive any salary.

THE Louisville Wine and Spirit Bulletin declares that what the whisky trade needs most is some sort of legislation at Washington which will throw aside unnecessary obstacles which now hamper the largest contributor to the revenues of the country. The temperance people ought also to see the wisdom of legislature at the fountain-head.

THE TRUE SOUTHERN ROUTE

To California is via St. Louis and El Paso, Tex. Pullman Tourist Cars leave Chicago daily at 11:00, running through without change. No high altitudes or snow blockades to cause detention. Special low rates for the Midwinter Exposition. For all information address John E. Ennis, No. 199 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail, by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

Ill Tempered Babies

are not desirable in any home. Insufficient nourishment naturally produces ill temper. Guard against the annoyance of fretful children by feeding nutritious and digestible food. The Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is the most perfect and successful of all infant foods.

IVORY SOAP

99 44/100 % PURE

DON'T ACCEPT IMITATIONS.

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CIN'TI.

"A bright home makes a merry heart"

JOY TRAVELS ALONG with SAPOLIO

is a solid cake of scouring soap. Try it in your next house-cleaning.

All work should be so done as to give joy to the worker. Perhaps you have never felt joyful when cleaning house? You never will till you use SAPOLIO to assist you. House-cleaning has been revolutionized since housewives first learned its value. Why shouldn't you find joy in your work? All Grocers sell SAPOLIO.

A PIANO —AND— ORGAN BOOK FREE.

Send us your address on a postal, and you will receive the finest and most elaborate Catalogue of Pianos and Organs ever published. It will show you the latest and best styles, and how to SAVE $100. Send for it to-day. It will more than please you. Write and see how little it takes to get an instrument when you begin right. (ORGANS from $27.50 up.) (PIANOS from $175.00 up.)

CORNISH & CO., — Established 27 Years. — Washington, N. J.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

THE PRESS CLAIMS COMPANY,
618 F STREET, NORTHWEST, WASHINGTON, D. C.
P. O. BOX 463. JOHN WEDDERBURN, Managing Attorney.

Cut this out and send it with your inquiry.

OUR DAY FOR 1894

This leading American Journal of Reform will be issued in 1894 as a BI-MONTHLY, and mailed to all subscribers, including clergymen and students, at the uniform price of

..ONE DOLLAR PER ANNUM..

Remit by money order, express order, draft or postal note to

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
...The Temple, Chicago...

WALTER BAKER & CO.

COCOA and CHOCOLATE

Highest Awards (Medals and Diplomas) World's Columbian Exposition.

On the following articles, namely:

BREAKFAST COCOA,
PREMIUM No. 1 CHOCOLATE,
GERMAN SWEET CHOCOLATE, VANILLA CHOCOLATE,
COCOA BUTTER,

For "purity of material," "excellent flavor," and "uniform even composition."

SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE.

WALTER BAKER & CO., DORCHESTER, MASS.

What folly! To be without BEECHAM'S PILLS.

CONVENIENT FOR WEST-SIDE RESIDENTS.

The new PENNSYLVANIA LINES' STATION, at West Madison and Rockwell Streets. Tickets to all points East—to Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati and the South at lowest rates. Baggage checked to destination. All trains stop to take on and discharge passengers. For particular information call upon D. J. Shine, Agent, Penna. Lines' Passenger Station, West Madison Street, or H. R. Dering, Ass't Gen'l Passenger Agent, 248 South Clark Street, Chicago.

SUPERIOR TRAIN SERVICE TO PITTSBURGH.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad offers the public the most convenient train service between Chicago and Pittsburgh. The route is via Akron, Ravenna, Warren and Youngstown, Ohio. Two solid trains are run every day, both carrying day coaches and new vestibuled sleeping cars through without change.

The Pittsburgh express leaves Chicago at 3:00 P. M., and arrives Pittsburgh the next morning at 7:05. The vestibuled limited leaves Chicago at 7:30 P. M., and arrives at Pittsburgh the next morning at 11:10. The vestibule limited also carries a Pullman sleeper to Cleveland, via Akron, arriving at Cleveland at 8:00 A. M.

All B. & O. trains depart from the Grand Central Passenger Station, corner 5th Ave. and Harrison St., Chicago, the finest and most commodious station in America.

Asthma Sufferers

Who have in vain tried every other means of relief, should try SCHIFFMANN'S GERMAN ASTHMA CURE. No waiting for results. Its action is immediate, direct and certain, as a single trial will prove. Send for a trial package to Dr. R. Schiffmann, St. Paul, Minn., but ask your druggist first.

THE QUEEN AND CRESCENT ROUTE

Runs superb solid vestibuled trains to New Orleans and to Jacksonville (via Lookout Mountain), from Cincinnati without change.

Be sure your tickets to the south read via the Q. & C. Route. A. J. LYTLE, N. P. A., 193 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.; W. C. RINEARSON, G. P. A., Cincinnati, O.;

IF YOU ARE GOING TO FLORIDA

The best way is to take the magnificent solid vestibuled trains of the Queen & Crescent Route at Cincinnati. Quick time. Interesting Route. Low Rates. A. J. LYTLE, N. P. A., 193 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.; W. C. RINEARSON, G. P. A., Cincinnati, O.

TEN CHANCES TO ONE!

If you are feeling nervous, low spirited, have a headache, sour stomach, growing thin, feeling weak, can't sleep, catch cold easily, you will be scared by reading some frightful tale into believing that you have consumption, la grippe, or are threatened with nervous prostration; don't you believe it. A disordered stomach will cause all of those difficulties, and more too. Burnham's Clam Bouillon is a delicious food, that is better than drugging. Diet on it for three days, and if your case is chronic use it longer. You will discover its wonderful curative properties and enjoy the process.

What "Smith" Did He Mean?

A bright New Yorker won a bet that he could get exactly the same answer to the same question from fifty people. He asked them if they had heard of Smith's failure, and every one of the fifty inquired, "What Smith?"

In like manner when people are told they can get roses by mail, if they are bright they will ask, "what roses?"

If they have not learned that there are roses and roses, they should get the Dingee & Conard Co's New Guide to Rose Culture and become posted. This Company makes a specialty of sending the famous D. & C. roses everywhere by mail. They are "on their own roots," which is another peculiarity, and how good they are may be inferred from the fact that they have made the Company the largest rose growers in the world. The book will be sent to any flower-lover on request, and early applicants will get beside a sample copy of the Company's magazine, "Success with Flowers." The address is West Grove, Pa.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XX.—No. 3.] CHICAGO, January 18, 1894. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance

Mrs. Ursula D. Hetrick 1029 13th St. N.W.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Abbé Le Grande, Vicar General of Paris, France, has passed away.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey are holding a series of revival meetings in Providence.

The French Chamber of Deputies reassembled last week and elected M. Dupuy president.

The debate on the tariff bill continues in the United States House of Representatives.

The new tobacco tax bill received its first reading in the German Reichstag, January 11.

Vaillant, the French anarchist, who threw a dynamite bomb in Paris, has been sentenced to death.

A committee of European delegates having in view the formation of an international colonial institute, has met at Brussels.

The United States Potters' Association met at Washington, D. C., last week, discussing the proposed tariff changes and protesting against them.

A dispatch from Massowah states that in the battle recently fought between the Italians and the Dervishes four thousand of the latter were killed, including their leader.

Nearly seven million dollars have been realized from the sale of the Cherokee bonds, a sum which will be distributed pro rata among the twenty-five thousand Cherokees.

For the purpose of enforcing the statute which declares such places a nuisance, indictments have been returned by the grand jury at Cleveland, O., against four houses of ill repute.

The Brazilian warfare still continues in a desultory manner, the rebels having no adequate land force, and the government's naval equipment being insufficient, no advance is made on either side.

The German commercial congress convened at Berlin, January 12; the president in his opening address congratulated the country on the splendid exhibit of German industries at the World's Columbian Exposition.

Another set of law-makers have conducted themselves like prize-fighters. This time it is the New Jersey legislature where scenes have been enacted similar to those in the Kansas difficulty, not quite so violent but equally as blameworthy.

Woolen manufacturers, representing five hundred million dollars capital, in session at New York last week, presented a protest to Congress against what they considered the damaging provisions of the proposed new tariff schedule.

The widow of the celebrated novelist, William M. Thackeray, died at her home in a private asylum near London, Friday. Mrs. Thackeray suffered from a mental affection, brought on by a serious illness a few years after her marriage, which was the great sorrow of the renowned author's life.

It was with universally expressed regret that news was received of the disastrous fire at Jackson Park last week, which left in ruins the Casino and Music Hall, the noble Peristyle and the gold statue of the Republic, threatening also the magnificent Manufactures Building with its many packed exhibits still awaiting removal.

There has been no fighting at Honolulu. The report of the week is that the proposed plan of President Cleveland to restore the deposed Hawaiian queen will be opposed by the provisional government, with force if necessary. The President submitted his Hawaiian correspondence, some of which has been withheld, to Congress, January 13, where much adverse criticism of his policy has been voiced by members of both parties.

THE new commander-in-chief in India, Sir George White, has warmly indorsed the Army Temperance Association and spoken strong words to it in favor of total abstinence, reminding it that nearly all crime in the service may be traced to drink.

A NATIONAL anti-gambling league has just been organized in New York City. Many well-known names are given as promoters of the league, which proposes, not only to prosecute every form of gambling and betting, but to provide and distribute among young men such information of the dangers of the evil as will warn them in time against this insidious foe. It is proposed to organize in the churches.

SO MANY complaints have reached us of one Mrs. A. D. Bellah, who claims to be a W. C. T. U. woman, and who formerly resided in Wilmington, Del., that we feel obliged, for the protection of our white-ribboners, to warn our readers against her. Her usual form of robbery is requesting the cashing of a check for fifty or one hundred dollars, or asking identification at some bank. Her check is invariably returned as worthless, but by that time she has left for some other city to work her dishonest scheme. The name is peculiar enough to attract attention, and after this announcement we trust our readers will be forewarned and consequently forearmed.

IT is not often that we refer to business matters on this page, but when we have a bit of good news we are not inclined to be selfish with it. Despite the prevailing reduction of reading matter, one day's mail last week brought us nearly five hundred new subscriptions, the majority being renewals. The same mail brought a notice to discontinue, the cause assigned being, not "hard times," but that "THE UNION SIGNAL had lost its prohibition backbone and gone over to namby-pamby gospel temperance." We will leave our readers to judge of that, at the same time assuring this discontinued friend that the liquor organs and Republican and Democratic papers do not seem to coincide with her view, much to our satisfaction.

THE sporting element is trying to take possession of Jacksonville, Fla., and defying the authority of the state by planning to hold a prize fight within its borders despite the law. Governor Mitchell has expressed his determination to prevent its consummation; but has received warning from a company of militia, residents of Jacksonville, and sympathizers with the sporting fraternity, that they will not obey his orders to that effect. Surely there is a sufficient number of law-abiding citizens in the Peninsular state to enforce the statute and prevent the occupation of its territory by disorderly factions. We trust that the governor will be supported in his efforts to keep Florida a desirable place of residence for an orderly and well regulated class of citizens.

ANOTHER evidence of the power of organized effort among women comes from the recently settled Cherokee strip. Our readers will remember distinctly the wild scenes enacted at the opening of this so-called promised land and the ensuing disappointments and suffering. A certain settlement of one square mile, however, is said to be a refreshing exception to this experience, the most comfortable one in the strip, and it is occupied entirely by single women and widows. Previous to entering the land, they formed an organization, by which they agreed to take individual claims and hold them in common. The settlement is christened "The Woman's Home," and when one marries she forfeits all rights to the property, which reverts to the colony. The boomers dub it "The Adamless Eden," but at the same time are very glad to patronize it for the butter, eggs and knit socks which are supplied in abundance and good quality.

FROM a private letter from Miss Willard we extract these sentences of general interest: "I remember George P. Rogers, of New London, Conn., who has so generously given five thousand dollars to the National and Connecticut unions, as a handsome man with a dark, bright face and most gentlemanly and agreeable bearing, whom the Prohibition party nominated, I think, for governor of Connecticut some years ago. He was just the man to have thought of the women's cause and to have rejoiced in helping us. What a waft of cheer was Mrs. Barker's letter in which she gave me the good news. The Crusade number was excellent and breathed the genuine Crusade spirit from the first to the last page. Mary T. Lathrap's article, 'After Twenty Years,' was worth twenty years' subscription to the paper." Apropos to this our readers will be glad to know that the article has been leafleted and can be had of the W. T. P. A.

ONE of the social abominations of Alaska has just been abolished by the action of United States Marshal Orville T. Porter, whose name should hereafter be gratefully remembered by all womankind. The evil in question is the purchase of native women for wives on the part of the white men, for some trifling barter. Although this is said to be the almost universal custom, such unions have frequently been declared unlawful, and nearly every grand jury which has convened in Alaska has been instructed from the bench to inquire into the matter and indict all violators of the law. "This charge is, however," says the associated press, "generally a dead letter, as the average Alaska grand juryman is naturally averse to bringing in a true bill against himself." Seeing the total disregard to the execution of the law on this subject, Marshal Porter concluded to take the matter into his own hands and has instituted a genuine crusade against the offenders, who are said to be legion. Scores are already in jail, and it is stated that if all who are living in such an illegal union are brought to justice, the jails will not suffice in number. We are glad to see crusades becoming popular, and can think of no worthier object than that for which brave Marshal Porter is now working. All honor to him and his deputies!

BOTH retiring Governor Boies and Governor-elect Jackson, of Iowa, were kind enough to touch upon the prohibition issue of that state in their valedictory and inaugural addresses. Although cautious and reserved in their statements, it is plain to be seen that they both advocate a substitution of local option for state prohibition. Here are Governor Jackson's words: "A trial of ten years has demonstrated that in many counties it has fully met the expectation of its friends, having successfully driven the saloon system out of existence in those counties. While this is true, there are other localities where open saloons have existed during this period of time in spite of the law and in spite of the most determined efforts to close them. In such localities the open saloon exists without restraint or control, a constant menace to the peace and safety of the public. From these localities there is an earnest demand for relief—a demand, not from the law-defying saloon sympathizer, but from the best business element,—from the best moral sentiment of such communities,—from the churches, and from the pulpit. While the present prohibitive principle, which is so satisfactory to many counties and communities of our state, should remain in force, right, justice, and the interests of temperance and morals demand that a modification of this law should be made applicable to those communities where the saloon exists, to the end of reducing the evils of the liquor traffic to the minimum." "The demand for relief" in the governor's eyes seems to be an avowal that law cannot be enforced, hence the "relief" must come through license and an increased revenue! How are the mighty (in Iowa) fallen!

MAKE THE WORLD BETTER.

BY MRS. M. P. A. CROZIER.

"Make the world better," said sweet Lucy Stone,—
And her work for the cause she had loved was all done;
They have laid her away, but her life will still speak,
For the cause that she loved was the cause of the weak.

'Twas a womanly heart, 'twas a sisterly soul
That had lived for all womanhood, seeking a goal
For her feet that should lie in the beautiful light
Of the star-shine of freedom, the sunshine of right.

Ann Arbor, Mich.

REED MASON'S RIDE.

BY ALBERT E. LAWRENCE.

It was nine o'clock and Reed Mason was busy setting things to rights before closing up for the night. Mr. Stevens had gone home and Reed was the only person left about the store. He was on the point of turning out the last light when a belated customer came running in.

"Ain't too late to get a gallon of m'lasses, be I, Reed?" he asked.

"Mighty nigh it, Mr. Parker," said Reed. "But a miss is as good as a mile. Let me take your jug."

Reed needed no light for he was familiar with every foot of the premises. He passed out at the rear door and on to the large shed in which was kept much of their stock.

The molasses was slow in running for the night was cool and frosty. While waiting Reed leaned his shoulder against the side of the shed. As he did so his ear came opposite a knot-hole and he was surprised to hear the low rasping whispers of persons on the outside. Reed recognized a voice as that of Jake Starke, who had formerly run a saloon in the village, and who was still the proprietor of a billiard hall and a bar over which he sold "soft" drinks.

"You see the no-license people are too confident," Jake was saying in a noisy whisper. "They won't come out and vote. They didn't last year—or only 'bout a hundurd an' fifty of 'em. An' if we git out our full vote we'll beat 'em. There is two hundurd in this town that'll vote for whisky ever' time there's a chance to win."

"There wa'n't fifty that voted for whisky last year," interrupted the other.

"Of course not, 'cause they thought there wa'n't no chance to win. But ye see there is. These other fellers won't vote any stronger this year 'an they did last, if so strong. An' all we've got to do is to keep mum an' see that ever' man what's on our side votes, don't ye see? I've got men all over the township workin' for it, makin' a still hunt, ye know. An' if Fairfield don't go 'wet' to-morrow, Jake Starke will eat his head!"

It was only since Fairfield had been a Prohibition town that Reed Mason heard it all and a great fear came over him. now if his father had been able to live a sober life. And would soon the town was to go back to the saloon his father

He saw his father come reeling home; he heard the harsh, unnatural words spoken to his mother and sisters; and felt the cruel abuse which only a drunken man can heap upon his family. Again there were hard and pinching times. All the misery of those days which he hoped had gone forever came sweeping through his mind in that moment while he waited.

Reed Mason had gone to work in his thirteenth year to help support a neglected family. About this time the state enacted the local option law which allowed the towns to vote on the question of license. Fairfield had been one of the first towns to banish the saloon under this act. Then, the temptation being removed, Reed's father had left off his drinking ways and there had come brighter times at the Mason's. Reed was now in his sixteenth year. By careful savings he had lately been able to buy a handsome bicycle.

The persons whom Reed had overheard had by this time moved on; but he had caught enough to understand their scheme and to be thoroughly alarmed. Hastening back to his customer, he put out the light and locked the store.

Out in the cool, starlit night he had to think what he should do. The temperance people must be roused and notified of the danger. There was no time to lose: in ten hours the polls would open and the voting begin. Springing upon his wheel he sped silently and swiftly down the south road in the direction of Hayes. There was no need of stopping at any house in the village, for there would be plenty of time to tell them of the danger in the morning.

Farmer Weston's was the first place at which he halted. They had all gone to bed, but Reed knocked loud and long, determined to waste no more time than was absolutely necessary. An upper window was thrown open, and a projected head demanded: "Who's there, and what's wanted?"

"It's Reed Mason, and I came to tell you the whisky people are goin' to try and carry the election to-morrow. They reckon on taking the temperance people off their guard." His voice trembled with excitement as he continued, and this added to the pathos of his concluding words: "Won't you, Mr. Weston, come out and vote against them?"

"Why, bless you, yes. But I didn't know's there was any danger but what the temperance people would beat, anyway."

"There is; lots of it," he added, springing upon his machine. "I've got to hurry, because I've got to rouse ever'body in the township."

On Reed flew to the next house, and then to the next and the next. Waking the people at each place, he told them of the danger that threatened, and received from them a promise to turn out and vote on the morrow. On and on he sped, up hills and down hills; woods were now on his right, now on his left, and now on both sides, dark, lonesome and silent. Now he shot into the open country, the blue-black sky, with its ever-changing, starry patterns spread above him and the rolling farm lands stretching before him. At Brownson's he was sharply attacked by the farmer's dog. But Tige soon recognized a friend in the reproachful voice which addressed him, and in the most dog-like manner begged pardon for the mistake.

The roads were much better than spring roads are apt to be, and for this Reed was very thankful. But he was continually worried lest he should run upon some sharp bit in the dark and puncture his tire. If this were to happen he knew he should despair.

It was twelve o'clock when he turned north upon the road which formed the western boundary of the township. He knew now that he would not be able to rouse every one; but he determined to reach the most distant neighborhoods and call upon one or two persons in each and get them to spread the alarm the first thing in the morning.

When he turned east on the road which led back to Fairfield his heart leaped into his throat. Was that a fire in the village? Through the thin line of wood before him he saw a deep red glare which every minute grew brighter and brighter. He darted forward with increased speed. All sorts of fears flashed through his mind; he had come away from the store in such a hurry that he hardly knew what he done with that last lamp. Puffing and panting he forced his wheel up Long Hill where he felt sure he could locate the fire. Stretching his neck as he reached the brow he peered anxiously forward. Then he had a laugh for all his pains; for the fire was nothing more than the moon in its third quarter, slowly rising over the roofs of the sleeping town.

At Herrmann's his knockings awoke the whole family, and the children in their night clothes came trooping to the door in the rear of their father. Reed stopped long enough to get a drink of water; it was three o'clock when he rode out of the yard. Mrs. Herrmann, who had kept out of sight, now peeped from behind the door-casing.

"Vhere is he, Yackob?" she asked.

"Dere he coes. Shust see his vheels flash in the moonpeams."

"Oh!" said his wife in slow wonder. "Looks like he vas riding of two puzz-saws."

The children crowded around and they all stood watching until the rider disappeared over a hill in the road.

Reed kept this road west for six miles, stopping at most of the houses on the left. Then he turned south for three miles where he again reached the road which led over Long Hill to the village.

For the second time that night he forced his wheel up the long, weary ascent. From the summit he saw the first signs of the coming day; and felt that his night's work was done. He had ridden over thirty miles and stopped at nearly a hundred houses; only one corner of the township remained unvisited. But that would have to go; he was too tired to do more.

He stole quietly into the house and up to his room where he threw himself upon his bed determined to secure what little rest he might before his day's work should begin.

The voting began promptly at seven o'clock and proceeded slowly; but as the day advanced the interest steadily increased. The weather was balmy and spring-like, and the men formed in groups in sunny places. Every one knew pretty well how every one else would vote, and no electioneering was attempted; but this was made up by any amount of whittling and neighborly gossip.

When a new-comer arrived everything was dropped, and all gathered about and watched the proceedings while he cast his vote. Then they broke into little knots and awaited the coming of the next voter.

On either side two or three who were most interested kept count as well as they could of the way the vote went. This added greatly to the excitement, for the license, or whisky people, or "wets," as they were variously called, led from the first.

At noon it was generally agreed that the "wets" were about fifty ahead. Reed heard this on his way to dinner and his heart sank within him. Was his night's work to be of no avail? Was the saloon to come back to town again?

The "wets" had polled their full strength at noon, and there were no more to come. On the other hand the no-license people continued to come, now two and sometimes three, from the more distant parts of the township. The vote was steadily growing closer and closer. By and by it was agreed that the temperance people led, and a great shout went up from those gathered about the polling place. Every new arrival now helped to increase this lead, and the crowd greeted the voters as they came with cheer after cheer.

Reed, at work in the store, heard the noise and wondered what it could mean. As the whisky people had led at noon he naturally thought that they were the ones who were rejoicing, and felt very gloomy.

About the polls the excitement increased every moment. The scheme of the whisky people had been frustrated and they were sullen and silent. But the temperance people grew noisier and more jubilant with the arrival of each new-comer who swelled the excited crowd. The story of Reed Mason's midnight ride was told from mouth to mouth and lost nothing in the telling. At five o'clock the polls closed and the counting of the votes began amid breathless interest; although it was now only a question of how large was the temperance majority.

Reed, on his way to supper, stopped on the outskirts of the crowd, and learning that the vote would soon be announced waited to hear the result. Every one told him that the temperance people had won but he could not feel sure until he had heard the exact vote.

The sun had gone down back of Long Hill; everywhere was that soft evening glow which lights up all things and still casts no shadows. Suddenly from the window where the voting had been done, a voice which reached every ear, cried: "For license, 201; against license, 325."

There was a second's silence as if for comprehension, and then a great shout went into the air followed by hats and caps and coats and the wild waving of hands.

Mr. Wilson, the mayor of the village, caught sight of Reed, and stepping upon the spout of the town-pump, he steadied himself with one hand, while with the other he waved his hat above his head, and, as soon as he could be heard, shouted: "Gentlemen, I propose three cheers for Reed Mason. Except for him our town would have lost its fair name."

The cheers were given, and that, too, with lungs accustomed to outdoor shouting. Hardly had they ended when two stout fellows picked Reed up, and placing him on their shoulders, started down the street. The crowd fell in line, shouting and yelling, but this noise was soon changed for the clatter of tin cans and tin pans, and in a surprisingly short time any number of tin horns, each with its own discordant blare, was added to the din. A little later an immense bon-fire was started at the crossing of the principal streets, and the rejoicing was continued until late in the evening.

Altogether it was a glorious day, as the Fairfield Flower stated in its issue that week. In the glowing account which it published the editor capped his climax by comparing Reed Mason's ride to the ride of Paul Revere, and paraphrased Longfellow's famous lines:

"Through the gloom and the light,
The fate of our Fairfield was riding that night."

Lansing, Mich.

TAINTED LITERATURE.

BY JOHN L. WRIGHT.

Novels and short stories of certain current writers are working a widespread social evil. We refer to suggestive books. They who make them are neither hunters, hermits nor city vagabonds, but men, and to their lasting shame, women of ability. They are of those who figure in society. Nearly all are writers who would have reared enduring reputations had they used their talents properly. The books they write are always most elegantly printed and illustrated, for those who turn them out know that evil is a thousand fold more attractive if well attired. A full dress suit and a diamond stud or a decolleté costume cut to the extreme, will make conquests "where seraphs might despair."

Public attention is soonest drawn through the sensational. To create a literary reputation of any real worth requires, usually, years of abject toil. Thousands are possessed with the desire to have the public discussing their names. Their ambition goes no farther. The wish to make this great, toiling world better and happier has never entered their hearts. Therefore, the literary market is flooded with the suggestive. Passion's path is portrayed as enchanting and full of romance. The snares found in it are never heard of in these stories. It would not do to tell the young men and women that the deviation from virtue's narrow ways, according to practical experience, generally brings regrets that are life-long. Sales would be curtailed. What volumes these are! In them the very last stair above obscenity is reached.

There is a certain limit at which these bidders for notoriety stop, for the good reason that they are compelled to. A little more letting down, a few bolder words, pictures a trifle more disgusting, would bring the writers under the pale of the law. So far as the publicity of a trial is concerned they would welcome it most gladly. It would bring the newspapers to commenting upon them, and then there would be a general demand for their books. To this extent these people would fairly rejoice in being brought before a court. A trial at law would, however, bring up two liabilities that they wisely know overweigh all other considerations. These are the danger of heavy personal expense and of conviction as a felon.

Mothers and fathers unwittingly buy books and periodicals in which vile sentences are scattered all the way through. The whole fabric is overdrawn and sensational, to say the least. They place these upon the home reading table, that the daughter who is hoping to soon enter society may become well informed through the medium of current literature. The father buys the book because it is extensively advertised. He has no time to glance through its pages. The mother buys it because it is being talked about. They are completely mystified when they discover that their daughter, reared in a refined home, doesn't see much in her French but "French novels," not much in the theatre but the style of a recent play wherein, during the leading act, the heroine jerks her lover's head from under the hammer of a pile-driver just as the weight begins its descent. They wonder that their daughter receives the attentions of the blasé youth and quietly ignores the young man of high aims. They cannot understand their child. Had a little time been taken to find out what she was reading things would have been revealed as by an electric flash.

A popular young actress, some time since, came to the offices of a metropolitan detective and tried to get his pledge to keep quiet if she published a "spicy" book. She begged the officer not to arrest her but wanted him to "persecute just a little." Why did she talk so? She knew that if she could be assured of a threatened prosecution the newspapers would "write her up."

This craze for the sensational is our great American excrescence. It has developed from our fast age. A day witnesses the making and breaking of fortunes and reputations. Regard for patient labor is blotted out. Fortune must come in a day and fame in a month or the flame is not worth the candle. The blame for the production of pernicious books cannot be laid wholly at one door, for just as the member of the bar says: "If there were no rascally clients there would be no rascally lawyers," so the literary-minded will declare: "If there were no cravers of the immodest there would be no purveyors."

We were at a news-stand the other day. On the pine table were two stories by standard authors, surrounded by forty-three of the kind the young lady would not like to hear mentioned if her mother were near. We asked the dealer why he kept this class of books. Said he: "People won't buy the high-toned style. The two you have in your hand have been on this table six months. They want the kind that has the 'snap' in 'em." Go to the public library and see how its frequenters pass by the great daily newspapers and eagerly direct their steps toward the weekly that contains only the salacious. The other papers are crisp and clean but this is always finger-marked and torn.

Years ago the claiming of homes from woods and prairie gave a practical tinge to the national character. In the new regions sprang up towns and cities peopled by those hoping to quickly become rich by developing the country. The only knights then recognized were those of the axe, the plow or the yard-stick. Wealth flowed in and with it, to a certain extent, an aristocracy. Simple tastes gave way to the extravagant, the plain to the pretentious, the real to the artificial. Hence it is that so often the sons and daughters of the rich, retired farmer see nothing in common with the plodding fellow ahold of the plow handles on the next section. The family of the prosperous merchant discovers no relation with the stripling behind the counter on the corner. All forget from whence they came. The daughter of the landed farmer too frequently wants no one if not a duke for a husband, and her brother the daughter of a palace car director for a wife.

But after all, what is the necessity or excuse for the suggestive story? What a wondrous land we have in its varied resources! What boundless and unworked fields it presents for the writers who are capable of tilling them. The great trouble with us all is that we cannot see what lies around us. No other nation exhibits the diversified industries that are to be found in America. Among the sixty-two million inhabitants of the United States are to be found those of every race. All types of men are here! Writers often think they must tour Europe to find material for plots and themes. Go down the streets of any representative American town and there will be found sights that should call forth dozens of novels. Step up and talk with those begrimed miners about the mouth of that shaft. Many of them can unfold tales as thrilling as ever inspired the hearers of a cowboy's campfire yarn. Visit the Swedish workmen in a great zinc works, or the patient girls tending the machine in that manufactory. They will tell of a life hundreds know nothing of. What a legend might be wrought from the few words scratched on a tin bottle and found in a mine. It was the last message a miner, hemmed in by an explosion, left to his wife and little son.

Is it necessary to study biographies or hunt through army records to find a more sublime type of devotion than his? Here was earth's holiest spirit and not in the reign of intellect, but down in the heart of a miner. What a story of heroism those few words tell. Think of that man delving in the dust, darkness and danger day after day. Contented was he if his wife and children were well and happy. His home was his empire. Yet this man was but one of scores of unknown heroes who toil each day in our great commercial industries.

The probe of the surgeon is not for the public gaze. Let the exhibition be something that shall unconsciously lead us to a nobler mode of life and therefore a happier one. We want "genuine American" stamped on our people as well as on our tin and zinc plate. Our people must be American in their ideals. We are surfeited with bankrupt earls and marquises. We ought to sweep from our libraries books that tend to inspire a society that will accept men at its balls and banquets solely through their self-assertion—a society that frequently finds its titled princes to be foreign forgers.

Give us books that place America on a par with any nation of the globe, books that will show our young people that a high standard of manhood and womanhood is the only condition that will make them happy and the world better. Let us have characters portrayed that will bring them irresistibly to see that noble, queenly virtue in woman is the only power that will lead man to stand before the world in his truest grandeur. Create types of life in the novel which convince them that brave, fearless, honest manhood is the sole, earthly inspiration that will cause womanhood to reach the highest ideals of love and reverence.

Chicago, Ill.

THE ONWARD TENDENCY.

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

There is nothing in life so full of encouragement as its constant tendency to sublimate. No one can watch the process of his own evolution or that of those about him and not perceive that a well-ordered life, entered upon generations back and unbrokenly pursued by the descendants of those who started in that way, results in better health, stronger mental powers, a more genial disposition, and more regnant will than we are likely to find in ancestors and descendants who pursued the opposite way of living.

But we shall be asked, "What do you mean by a well-ordered life?" I answer in the famous phrase of Bishop Butler: "One that is conformable to the constitution and course of nature." But another question will now follow, "How do you know what is conformable?" and I answer: "We know by comparing different courses of conduct for long periods of time which one of those courses gives the best results in physical vigor, mental acumen and moral power."

No one will deny that the consensus of opinion from the dawn of history up to this day declares that a temperate life conduces most to man's development, in the best sense, throughout all the ranges of his complex nature. Concerning this proposition no sane person will raise an argument. We know, too, that as mankind emerges from savagery into civilization the process of sublimation steadily goes on. A Hottentot can carry an enormous quantity of gin, so travelers tell us, and still make a straight line as he walks. This is because his nervous system is but slightly developed, and the brain which is the culmination of that system is comparatively inactive. But the white man, toned and tempered by ages of intellectual activity, has acquired nerves so much finer and more sensitive that a small amount of gin will set his steps upon a zigzag. It has well-nigh passed into a proverb that the man who has most brain grows dizzy first from the use of alcohol; and the same is true of all brain stimulants and narcotics, for the very patent reason that the finer-fibred nervous system is more easily deranged, even as a watch of the most delicate mechanism would be injured by a blow that would not in the least affect what is called in common parlance "an old turnip." For this reason as the processes of refining, sublimating, and specializing go steadily on with the general development of the great world-life, it is reasonable to expect that man will turn with distaste from foods and drinks that were attractive to the less highly sensitized appetites of his ancestors. We have reason to think that in early ages the food was eaten uncooked, even as it is now by many savage tribes, and blood was not unfrequently the drink of warriors, while now such a regimen would be unspeakably nauseating to civilized men. In former times the hog was well-nigh the central figure in the menagerie of the shambles, but now he is not much eaten by the most refined, while beef and mutton are less favored than the finer flesh of fowl and bird. I know a literary character, who, on being asked to choose, has always said: "Oh, give me anything that flies." Perhaps we of this age have had a winged vision to replace that of Peter on the Jaffa housetop. At any rate it is apparent that the blood of humanity is cooler (even as the earth itself has cooled) and a milder diet seems better suited to our need.

It will be generally admitted that the proportion of farinaceous and vegetable food is gaining in each generation and that fruit was never used in such large quantities as now. This, as a matter of course, results largely from the incalculably increased facilities of inter-communication which now exist between different zones so that the best products of each can be placed at the service of all. But a change is slowly coming over us by the usual noiseless, subtle but unceasing processes of evolution, and through it we are rising from the purely animal to an almost ethereal type of being. The great American inventor, Edison (whose disregard of food, and whose total abstinence from alcoholic drinks are among his best known peculiarities), has said that he expects the time will come when, with all his other "witty inventions," man will invent a food that will contain and combine all that is desirable for nourishment, and all that is attractive in flavor. This he will carry in his jacket pocket, putting a pinch of it upon his tongue from time to time in a fashion analogous to that of snuff-takers in other days. Perhaps this may be going a little farther than most of us can follow, but there is reason to believe that changes as great will yet be seen in the food and clothing of mankind and in their modes of heat and shelter as have already taken place in their methods of transporting material and transmitting thought.

For myself I am not a vegetarian but I clearly recognize that the society which has honored me with its leadership is laying strong foundations for those symmetrical and exquisite towers and temples of humanity that shall yet rise in the crystalline air of a purer and better reasoned civilization. It is pleasant to remember that every sincere effort made to advance the interest of humanity helps every other method in a downright practical way. I should like to enforce upon my own mind, and the minds of any who may do me the honor to read this, the stirring words of the great American poet, James Russell Lowell:

"New occasions teach new duties,
Time makes ancient good uncouth,
They must upward still and onward,
Who would keep abreast of truth."

Eastnor Castle, Eng.

THE TEMPERANCE DEMONSTRATION—FROM AN OPERA BOX.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

On December 6, 7 p. m., out of sight and out of mind a group of American white-ribboners watched the culmination of England's "Temperance Demonstrations" at Covent Garden Theatre. We had seen the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, which holds five thousand, packed like a sardine-box at eleven o'clock a. m., when the National W. C. T. U. convened there in 1887, and similar audiences had rallied when our chief speakers were announced at great conventions; but legislators were scarce as hen's teeth in those gatherings, while among the one hundred who have addressed meetings here and in the overflow at Exeter Hall, thirty are Members of Parliament, and, instead of one, there are thirty-eight temperance societies represented by well-nigh two thousand delegates. "John Bull's tight little island" has its advantages; he claps his hands, and presto! the clans gather and mass their forces for weal or woe. This time it is for weal; a searchlight glance around the splendid auditorium proves it.

SPEAKERS AND HEARERS.

These people belong to the "happy mediocrity," the comfortably well-to-do, who have invested rather than spent their time; have sown clean wheat instead of wild oats; have "looked up and not down, forward and not back, and lent a hand." On the platform are gathered the accredited officers of these reputable people, from the eighty-four out of one hundred and seventeen counties in Great Britain and Ireland in which the temperance vote predominates. An opera-glass seldom focuses so many leaders. That fine head and hale figure of a man sixty years old or thereabouts in the center of the group is Sir Wilfrid Lawson, president of the United Kingdom Alliance, which is far and away the greatest temperance society in England. He has been the Parliamentary leader, too, for thirty years. When he entered the House of Commons the temperance people said: "Will you move to put the power of license or no-license in the people's hands?" "Yes," was his sturdy answer, "if I can find one man to second the motion we will begin to hold temperance meetings at public expense for the education of Parliament." On the first vote he had thirty-seven out of two hundred and ninety-seven; including pairs, they counted forty, and were called "the forty thieves." He has now a majority of thirty-six. The savor of wit has made Sir Wilfrid's wisdom attractive to those even who do not admit his logic.

A POLITICAL JOLLIFICATION.

To-night, when he rises to congratulate the friends of temperance on their greatest gathering, the house rises with cheers and handclapping, closing with "Kentish fire," a sort of punctuated clap that increases to an effective climax. Somebody tried to start "He's a jolly good fellow," but the sober minded "temperancers" (as Germans call us) will not give their time to a mere political jollification. Perhaps Sir Wilfrid is more than usually impressed on this most impressive occasion with a sense of the supreme dignity of the leadership he has so honestly won; at any rate he heeds the dictum of Dr. O. W. Holmes, who thought it is not always well to be "funny as you can." His speech is clear-cut and cogent as ever, but mostly minus humor. He said the temperance party could not understand "why a handful of magistrates should be allowed to protect their own families from the incursions of the liquor traffic into their neighborhood when the poor man had no such power." This was the essence of the bill and of the speech. He hoped that before another twelvemonth passed the people would have in their hands a powerful instrument with which to raise the level of their national life and clear the way for a brighter, better and happier future for a great and noble country.

A LEADER OF WOMEN.

Sir Wilfrid, then, without a word of comment, pronounced the name of Lady Henry Somerset. (It was refreshing, by the way, to attend a temperance meeting where no introductions were indulged in.) This leader of temperance women was "loudly cheered" (so the morning papers said) as she came forward from her seat at Sir Wilfrid Lawson's right hand, and her statesmanlike arguments were worthy of the House of Commons at its best. (Lady Henry is now making addresses in Wales, and does not know a word about this opera-box voice of her comrade from over the sea.)

OBITER DICTA.

Augustine Birrell, M. P., was the next speaker. He is the well-known author of "Obiter Dicta," and a "Life of Charlotte Bronté," and married the widow of Hon. Lionel Tennyson, the Laureate's eldest son. Mr. Birrell is himself the son of a clergyman, and worthy of his antecedents. His admirable speech was based on rendered reasons spiced with humor.

Next came the wiry and fiery young Welsh orator, D. Lloyd George, M. P. He said the drink was England's most dangerous dynamite. Some men were like weather-vanes; they showed which way the wind blew. But other men were like the mountains, that determine which way the wind should blow. The temperance people were a mountain range, and the direct veto bill the loftiest of its peaks. In Wales they placed the temperance question at the front, and in thirty-four Parliamentary contests only two were won by their opponents.

A HISTORICAL GROUP.

Mr. T. B. Whittaker, M. P., (son of the veteran temperance lecturer) did credit to his bringing up in the incisive speech that declared: "Behind this audience is the Liberal party and the flower of the English democracy." He might well say this, as one hundred and forty-two chief (official) labor leaders have recently called upon the government to pass the bill.

Canon Murnane represented the Catholic church. From my opera-box he looked one of the largest figures in that crowded historic group, for behind him I saw looming St. Peter's cathedral and the wise old Pope, whose "modern spirit" means so much for the old church.

The weighty figure and well weighed words of Samuel Pope, Q. C., were a notable feature of the evening, and the dapper little working-man, introduced by Joseph Malins (the Good Templar chief) as "Sam Woods, the collier," was most welcome, as was his vigorous speech. He said alcoholic liquors bewildered the working-man to his ruin, he could never rise while this temptation stood across his path.

IN BROTHERLY PROPINQUITY.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, chief reformer of the great Wesleyan Cummunion, rose to the occasion as he always does, and the audience rose with him to cheer and indorse. He defied the House of Lords to cheat the people out of this bill, and showed that, while in legitimate industries labor receives the lion's share, its proportion of profits in the liquor trade is ridiculously small. Great speaker that he is, Mr. Hughes said he had never before faced a meeting so significant and so great. But to my mind nothing in the whole evening was more prophetic than to see this Methodist seated beside the Catholic Canon in brotherly propinquity.

And now came Canon Wilberforce, whose name is "a spell to conjure by"—not more in England than throughout Christendom. But this beloved leader has been seriously ill for some months back, and the resolution that he was to second had to be read by the secretary. It called upon Her Majesty's government to place the direct veto bill at the front on next year's program, and the eloquent and witty Canon—who will never forget the affectionate enthusiasm with which that audience received him—said little more than that "our century plant of temperance is about to bloom,—woe to the hand that hinders the opening of that perfect flower."

A FOREST OF ARMS.

Mr. W. S. Caine now stood forward (he had been making one of his telling speeches at the Exeter Hall overflow, where Lady Henry and other leading speakers also went after addressing our audience). The usual vote of thanks to Sir Wilfrid as chairman, having been proposed by Mr. Caine, was seconded by Canon Barker in his mellow tones, and the snapper was put on this whip-lash of a meeting when the people loudly called for that Nestor of the temperance movement, Mr. J. H. Raper, who handles an audience as a skilful mother does a restless child, only he never puts it to sleep. No one scored a more signal success than he did by delighting a crowd that had already listened that day to scores, and that evening to sixteen speakers bien entendu! But so far were they from being tired, that when Sir Wilfrid, in his hearty way said, (on the resolution of urgency): "Those in favor vote with both hands," up went a forest of strong British arms, like the spars along the Thames.

Well, in his day Garrick wrought his wizard spell in Covent Garden (not in this building, but in some one of its predecessors) and so did Kemble, Matthews, and Macready. Here Grisi and Mario, Patti and Albani charmed unnumbered thousands; here Richard Cobden and John Bright were the central figures of the Anti-Corn law agitation; but never, in my way of thinking, has the great, bright scene been fairer to behold by men and angels than on this happy night when home folk met to plead the sacred cause of a clear brain, an untrembling hand, a steady-beating heart.

Reigate, Eng.

"FALLEN" WORDS.

BY ELIZABETH CUMINGS.

Unlike men, words do not seek bad company, but once in it, their position is even more surely lost for all good and dignified uses. Witness the word saloon, twin to the French salon, and coming straight to us from the German "saal" a hall. Born and reared in a village of about five thousand inhabitants I know not what a grog-shop was called thirty years ago. I remember certain places never entered by the better sort, known as "canal groceries," and certain forbidden quarters said to be infested, my old-fashioned liquor-hating father said, with "Hell Holes." But if they set above their doors the word "saloon," I do not know.

But fancy the amazement of the Marquise de Rambouillet, and her charming train of ladies, and later of Mme. de Stael, Mme. Roland; and the sprightly women of the French restoration, could they know that a salon has come to mean, not an elegant apartment set apart for the exhibition of pictures, or the meeting of intelligent and cultured men and women, but a groggery, more or less expensively appointed, but still—a groggery. Fancy, too, an American poet of this year of 1894 saying of his hero as did Wordsworth: "He had descended from the proud saloon!" The finest cabin of a steamer is still called a "saloon," but I know of no other appearance of the word in respectable society in our own land, and that no respectable woman is expected to enter what currently passes by that name, I know by personal experience. Not long ago while shopping in my own city of Chicago, suffering intensely from nervous headache, I asked a policeman to tell me where to find the nearest drug-store, for I was in a locality seemingly bereft of these ministers of comfort. He indicated a corner, and I set out, giving heed to my steps because of orange peel, mud, and general slipperiness, besetting and upsetting. Arrived, as I supposed, I mounted several steps and entered a door without looking at the windows, much less the sign. I have a confused recollection of a babel of voices, then a sudden silence, a stretch of polished mahogany, and gleaming glass, and men standing about looking toward me. But I remember vividly the young man in a white linen jacket nearest me and the entrance. He held a napkin in his hand, and with parted lips, and wide open eyes he advanced upon me very much as if I were an intrusive hen, which he must circumspectly "shoo" out of the place. He shook the napkin, and essayed to speak. Of course I relieved him instantly.

Last summer, en route eastward, we stopped over night at Detroit, and in the morning I rose with the weariness of several weeks of overwork throbbing in my temples. Eight hours of railway travel were before us, and knowing something must be done to quiet the pain, I told Timotheus I would meet him at breakfast, and slipped out while he was doing his last prinking. I was gone, perhaps, ten minutes, and on my return joined him without a word, sure that if I did not volunteer to tell where I had been I would be asked. He waited perhaps three seconds. Then came the expected question. I replied quietly, that I had gone a bit down the street for a drink, and that I believed I was going to feel better.

"A drink!" he echoed in astonishment. "If you feel so bad you needed brandy or something, why didn't you have it brought up to our room, instead of going to a drug-store?"

"No one knows better than you I don't drink 'brandy or something,'" I replied.

"But you said you went for—a drink," he protested.

"I did. What I bought was an effervescing beverage charged with gas, and made out of aqua pura and bromo seltzer."

A few weeks ago while driving with an old school acquaintance I was again in the clutch of my arch enemy, and as we neared a drug-store I begged him to stop. He offered to do my errand, when I explained that I had best do it myself, "for," said I, "I want a drink."

"Don't stop here for it," he said nervously, and giving me an odd, apprehensive glance, "I am sure we have a little whisky at home, and if we haven't, I'll go and get you some."

Again I had to explain, though this man knew me very well, that my "drink" was a very innocent compound guiltless of any sort of spirits. Alas, once upon a time all my little world would understand my entreaty for "a drink," to mean a wish for water. Two dear old people who always understand me, understand that phrase when I use it now. But so identified has it become with something the antipodes of my favorite tipple, old friends, and even Timotheus can be misled when, reverting, for fun, to my childhood phrase, I, who count myself a temperance woman, say, "I want a drink." To such depths have words "fallen" in evil company.

South Evanston, Ill.

CAPE NEWS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—On September 4, I left the fair city of Durban, Port Natal, for a steamer trip of twenty-four hours. It was the plan to land at East London, reconnoitre for volunteers, form a union, and then go on to Burghersdorp, one of the villages of the interior, where the temperance army possesses a fine contingent in the shape of a Good Templars lodge, which was asking us to organize a local W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Leavitt and the "third and fourth round-the-world missionaries" had been to East London, and the result of their visits yet remained, though they had not been able to effect a "branch." It is a work requiring time, as it is necessary to have a long, plain talk with each lady named for office about her "duties," and hear, in return, the needs and possibilities of the community. I find that foundations laid in this way are almost sure to stand, and the work is much better done than when the organizer goes on without having left a sort of individual impression We were surprised and pleased with the interest manifested in the meetings at East London, and predict for the new union warm sympathy and active help from the "Ministers' Association" and the leading church workers.

Miss Campbell, stopping at Burghersdorp a few months since for a little rest, while returning from the "Teachers' Association," had left an impress there favorable to the W. C. T. U.; so we wended our way to Grahamstown for the fourth annual convention of Cape Colony, with two new unions to report. The convention was a success from commencement to finish, there being sixty-five delegates present, all the local unions and Y unions represented but four, and every superintendent save three in her place. When I tell you that the eighteen "Western Province delegates," including four of the general officers and three superintendents, left their homes before midnight Wednesday, carried their own bedding and a greater part of their food with them, and traveled continuously until Saturday at six o'clock p. m., you will get some idea of the difficulties that have to be surmounted in holding our Colonial conventions.

Railway officials are very courteous to the white-ribboners in this country, as I think they are everywhere, and a special carriage was granted the ladies, much to their convenience, both going and returning.

We left Grahamstown at nine o'clock Wednesday evening, the convention having closed with a reception to the delegates at four o'clock at the "young ladies' high school" kindly given by the principal, Miss Lowe. Thursday afternoon at the highest point on the Karoo we ran into a snowstorm. It was the first experience for some of our Colonial girls. The Americans, of whom there were six, enjoyed getting out at a "siding" and snow-balling for a few minutes. By nine o'clock the next morning we seemed to have reached the region of perpetual spring, and having to stop at a junction for about an hour and a half, after we had breakfasted some of the more active members of our party "walked on," the "guard" stopping for them a mile or two further on. It was quite a novel journey, like keeping house on wheels, and certainly a most restful and enjoyable holiday for hard working white-ribboners.

The following week I went to Cape Town to a purity meeting, which department is to receive special attention this year, for every effort is being put forth to get a repeal of the dreadful C. D. Acts. Other meetings were also held at Cape Town, and the third Demorest medal contest for the Colony at Wellington occurred about this time. It takes quiet courage to hold these contests in the midst of a wine farming population, and it is not surprising that they stir up much criticism. They also stir minds and consciences, and many converts to total abstinence and prohibition are being made now.

As Miss Pride and Miss Cummings are going home this year for a much needed rest, Miss Campbell was elected president, and Mrs. Helm, of Grahamstown, took her place as general vice-president, which are the only changes made in the officers. Miss Dudley, of Wellington, was appointed Miss Cummings' associate, and will look after the interests of the Y Branch in South Africa this year, while Miss Cummings will engineer the interests of the South African Y Branch in England, America and wherever she goes.

One of the most enjoyable weeks of my life was spent in Wellington at the close of October. It was the occasion of what is called the South African Keswick convention. Ministers and missionaries from every part were present, and the recital of experience and self-denial were sometimes thrilling. At the beginning of this month I made a journey of two days and nights to Queenstown, there organizing a local union. Thence to King Williamstown on a similar mission, and then to visit East London, where I find the work fully established and growing in interest. I hope next week to reach the "Transkie," for a visit to Mrs. Sprigg, who is president of that district, and of whose faith and labors I might have much to say to you.

The latest venture of the Colonial W. C. T. U. is a little monthly paper, a very much alive little paper, with Miss Campbell and Miss Sears as editors. This paper is sent forth without a penny or a postage stamp appropriated, but it goes out with a spirit of prayer and faith and sacrifice, and I have no doubt but that the edition will appear promptly and regularly from month to month. This paper is the organ of the South African W. C. T. U., and is called The White Ribbon for South Africa.

We are not yet in possession of news from the World's and National Conventions, but though we have to wait for a monthly mail we enjoy the DAILY UNION SIGNAL from year to year as only strangers in a strange land can.

Yours in the Master's service,

ALICE R. PALMER,

Fifth Round-the-World Missionary.

Wellington, Cape Colony, S. Africa.

AN ANSWERING CRY FROM THE ORIENT.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—By the last mail I received a copy of a Chicago daily paper. In a column headed, "A Cry From the Orient," occur these words: "Christianity was widely spread in Japan when in 1837 the Christian missionaries, combined with their converts, caused a tragic and bloody rebellion against the country. It was understood at the time that these missionaries intended to subjugate Japan to their own country. It was this which caused the prohibition of Christianity in Japan. Christianity has brought riot, bloodshed and rebellion in its train. Verily it has brought a sword instead of peace. The government was forced to drive out the Christian missionaries in self-defense. . . . . It was then that the audience of four thousand men and women—most of them Christians, rose to their feet and cried, 'Shame, shame,' upon the missionaries they themselves had sent out."

Is this an actual fact? Did such a disgraceful scene really occur in an American city in the year of grace, 1893? If the reporter for this paper manufactured the account, then to what depths has journalism fallen, and what can be said of an American public that will tolerate such falsehoods! But if such an occurrence actually took place, I have no words to adequately express my indignation and astonishment at the ignorance and anti-Christian sentiment of that American audience. Was there no one present sufficiently well-read in history to contradict such an utter subversion of facts?

Three hundred years ago the Portuguese Jesuits were accused of plotting to overthrow the government. Whether this be true or not we have no means of knowing; many students of Japanese history doubt it knowing the extreme suspicion with which foreigners were regarded by the government at that time, and its readiness to take alarm at most trifling causes; but the fact is that instead of a rebellion on the part of the Christians, the government waged a most cruel and bloody persecution against them.

But what have Protestant missionaries of to-day to do with the intrigues of Jesuits centuries ago, admitting the very worst to be true? Yet the enlightened Chicago reporter puts the date 1837. It was not until 18*54* that Commodore Perry opened the country to foreign commerce.

What is to be said about the anti-Christian sentiment of an American audience that would so readily accept the unsupported testimony of one man, a heathen priest, who to be consistent with his own faith and practice, must oppose Christianity, and which in doing so rejects the repeated assertions of Christian brothers and sisters who have been working in Japan for forty years? Do they think that after having lived blameless lives at home, and being accepted by mission boards after most careful inquiry into life and character, a few years in Asia have turned them all into base hypocrites? Do they doubt the statements of scores of Christian travelers, who often spend months among us, investigating mission work for themselves? One of these after going about independently for many months, not as a sightseer, but as one who had come to make a careful study of missions for himself, said in my presence, "I heard many severe criticisms of missionaries from so-called Christian people before leaving home, and from tourists and officers on steamships. On my return it will afford me exquisite pleasure to say to them, 'You lie.'"

Who are the people that have been pleading for treaty revision for Japan and justice for China? Missionaries. Who are the people that during floods and earthquakes leave homes of safety and go to earthquake centers and flooded districts to succor the injured and needy? Missionaries. Do Shinto and Buddhist priests go upon such errands and at such times? Never. Who are working for the very poor, extremely ignorant and morally degraded, as a large proportion of the people of this land are? Not the priests. By translations from Shinto and Buddhist periodicals, which we read every week and which state repeatedly: "It is not the encroachments of Christianity we bewail, but the depths of immorality to which the priesthood has sunk," by the testimony of their own people and by what we are constantly seeing and hearing for ourselves every day, we must denounce these "blind leaders of the blind." Yet when one of their number states to an American audience falsehoods against American citizens, "four thousand men and women"—most of them Christians—rise to their feet and cry, "'Shame, shame,' on the missionaries they themselves have sent out."

Who "marched through the streets bearing banners inscribed, 'The Japs must go'?" Just such people and of the nationality that constituted that enlightened audience. We are accustomed to being maligned by dissipated, irreligious foreigners in the ports, the worst heathen around us, and of having just such statements made publicly by priests, but almost always there is some Christian Japanese present who rises and denies the false charges; but to have our own brothers and sisters in America show such antipathy and injustice is more than we can bear, and we hang our heads in shame when we hear other nationalities here scornfully criticise the excitability and ignorance of American audiences.

What other weapons do such priests as those who were now your guests use against us besides falsehoods? Stones. Outbreaks are constantly occurring that must be suppresed by the government. We have just been suffering from one. In addition to breaking the church and stoning Christians, they threatened to burn our houses, making it necessary to have them guarded night and day.

Why is it that treaty revision does not take place? Other nations have signified their willingness, the United States leading the way. The fault now lies entirely with the Japanese. The delay is caused by the people of the nation not being able to agree as to what they want. They say treaty revision must rest on a basis of perfect equality, yet very inconsistently say: "We deny to foreigners the right of residence in the country." Therefore, for the present treaty revision is held in abeyance.

We must confess that the dense superstition and ignorance, the injustice to womanhood and the moral degradation of the people around us so blind our eyes that we cannot appreciate "the truth and beauty which lie embodied in religions practically unknown to Christendom, and which were laid bare to the wondering and almost reverential eyes" of that Chicago audience. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

For eleven years a resident in Japan.

ADELAIDE DAUGHADAY.

Tottori, Japan.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

By faith they passed through the Red sea as by dry land: which the Egyptians essaying to do were drowned. By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days.—Heb. 11:29, 30.

Who were these that accomplished such great things through faith? Men and women of like endowments with ourselves. They had their shortcomings just as we have, and they had recourse to the same mighty God for help "who is the same yesterday, to-day and forever."

Will the Temple be all paid for in two years? Without a doubt if we exercise the same faith which animated the children of Israel when they crossed the Red sea. No doubt among them were to be found those who murmured against Moses and said: "This is a foolhardy undertaking, we shall all be drowned before we get across this terrible water." These were among those who fell in the desert; failed to reach the promised land because of their unbelief. It was only the faithful whose eyes beheld the wondrous sight of Jericho's massive walls crumbling to pieces after a peaceful army with prayer and song had marched around them for seven days.

The white ribbon army will see wondrous things done in the next two years if they continue in faith nothing wavering, giving all they can themselves to the Temple and inspiring others to do the same. That there are those in our midst who are trying to sow the seeds of mistrust is painfully evident; they are bound to make paying for the Temple as difficult as possible, but they might as well try to turn Niagara's current. This work is of God and no opposition will prevail against it.

***

The following letter which was addressed to Miss Johnson from Mrs. S. M. Bowerman, president of the W. C. T. U. of Ingham county, Mich., will, in a measure, show what kind of opposition is at work to undermine confidence in the Temple enterprise. Mrs. Bowerman enclosed a check for $100, and desires her name placed on the Michigan tablet. None more deserving will be found there, we are sure. She says: "This money has been consecrated to the Temple for over a year. I visited it in the summer intending to give the money then. I called on Mrs. Carse but she was not in the city at the time, and one good woman in the Temple advised me to wait until after the National Convention; that I, perhaps, then would change my mind about giving it. Amid opposition in many ways I was persuaded to wait, but was not persuaded to change my mind.

"I attended the National Convention and I am of the same opinion still that I was on reading that outrageous attack on the Temple and its founder. The Temple is all right, and Mrs. Carse is too. I wish to assure her of my sympathy in all she has had to bear, and my disgust for the one who so unmanfully has worked against her and her project. When papers containing the attack were put into my hands through the postoffice by the half-dozen, they went into the fire, save one I keep. May the Lord bless and prosper the work, and may it prove a greater blessing to this and future generations than we can ever ask or think. My county has raised $70 on its pledge; we will soon complete the $100 and send it."

The W. C. T. U. president of Hancock county, Ill., in sending her dollar gift to the Temple says: "'It is only at the tree loaded with fruit that people throw stones,' is an old Persian proverb. Judging from the amount of pelting the Temple and its builder have received of late, there must be some fruit, and good fruit at that, on that tree."

***

Nine cents have been received from Rochester, Ind. The following lines without signature were found enclosed with it: "Little Marion Ross died and the enclosed was found in her mite-box. Mrs. Ross called and left it." Some friends in San Jacinto, Cal., who do not wish their names published, send $2 to the Elizabeth Comstock tablet; $2 for the Julia Ames memorial, and $1 for the Madam Willard window. One dollar has been received from Mattie Dickson, Marshalltown, Ia., for the Whittier clock. The contents of dear Rosie E. Bennett's mite-box continue to be sent quarterly; $2 has just been received from it through her faithful mother. And yet dear Rosie has been in heaven over two years. "Though dead she yet speaketh."

***

The Winfield W. C. T. U. of Kansas sends $32.13 on its pledge, making $88 paid. Cedar county, Iowa, W. C. T. U. sends $28 on its pledge. From Courtland, N. Y., W. C. T. U. $15 comes on its pledge. Mrs. H. R. Osborn sends $31.35 for the North Johnstown, Wis., W. C. T. U. She writes: "We will be very proud to have the name of our union inscribed on the Wisconsin tablet in Willard Hall. I had the pleasure of visiting the Temple during the summer, and was delighted with it. I do hope and pray the Lord will incline the hearts of the people to respond to your call, and that our 'House Beautiful' may be paid for in two years."

***

The offer of a solid silver Temple souvenir spoon to all who fill a mite-box during 1894 is causing great activity in our mite-box department, as very many are sending for them; $3.65 must be placed in the box, and the boxes filled, but cannot be counted on the hundred dollar pledge of any union, as we cannot afford it. It must be an individual gift. Send to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, The Temple, for mite-boxes and all things pertaining to the Temple. All drafts and money orders should be made out in the name of William D. Preston, and sent to Miss Sara G. Johnson, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

A LITTLE LETTER IN RHYME.

Dear Friend:—

The world is wide
In time and tide
And—God is guide;
Then do not hurry.

That man is blest;
Who does his best,
And—leaves the rest;
Then do not worry.

Yours faithfully,
—Charles F. Deems.

"ONE SOLUTION."

BY G. E.

I looked out of my window on Christmas eve, my heart heavy within me, for the realities of life faced me with sad, gloomy and mocking eyes, and the gay, good-humored crowds, with their holiday cheer seemed only the stage setting for a few hours of the endless drama of sin and sorrow played nightly in our streets.

Bitter voices spoke in my ears and said: "We are the great realities; it is we who are always here! In a few days the good will, and the joy, and the mirth will have vanished from the streets; they will not be here as long as the holly decorates the shop windows. But we, who are sin and want and wickedness will be here all the year; the Christmas spirit is very beautiful, but it only lasts for a day or two; we are the realities; it is we who live!"

And my heart knew that the bitter voices spoke some truth, and I questioned in myself why it should be so! Why, after eighteen hundred years the essence of life should still be so untouched by the spirit of the One in whose honor the church bells would ring their most triumphant peals that very night, and whose followers almost all in that great city claimed to be.

And as I pondered, I fell asleep and dreamt. I found myself in the court yard of an Eastern temple. The early sunshine stole through the white marble pillars and fell on a little group gathered around a central figure seated on one of the great stone steps, talking to the people. He was a man with a face so careworn that not one sorrow in the world seemed to have passed him by, and yet with such a strong, kindly and serene aspect as I have never seen before. As I joined the group and bent forward to listen to the Teacher's words, we were interrupted by a small company of men who hurried across the court-yard, pushed the listeners imperiously aside, and placed themselves in front of the Teacher. Their dress and bearing denoted them to be chief men and rulers. Their faces were of many different types, intellectual, cynical, scholarly and sensual; all of them looked defiantly at the man who faced them, and contemptuously at a woman who stood with them, her shoulders bent, her face hidden in her robe.

"Master," said the eldest man, with a sneer in his voice, and pointing to the woman, "this woman was taken in adultery! Now, Moses commanded that such should be stoned, but what sayest thou?"

All the people stood silent; the Master answering nothing, turned from them and wrote upon the ground.

Again they ask.

And He stood up and said unto them: "He that is without sin among you let him cast the first stone at her."

And one by one each man went out. And Jesus was left alone with the woman. And He said: "Hath no man condemned thee?"

And she said: "No man, Lord."

And He said: "Neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more." . . . .

And the vision faded, and I slept, and dreamt I stood in the park of a great modern city, and I saw again the figure of the Teacher standing under the shadow of a great tree. And up the asphalt pavement came a band of women toward Him. They were women of to-day, and I knew in my dream that the name "Master" was breathed by their lips with awe and reverence and love. Where the men had mocked and sneered they bowed down and worshiped. With the women came a girl who laughed and shrugged her shoulders disdainfully till she stood before the Man they called "Lord," and then she bent her face and covered it with her hands.

And the women told the same story that had been told in the Eastern temple, and asked the same question; and they received the same answer: "Let her that is without sin cast the first stone at her!"

And as these words were spoken, immediately with one impulse the women all pressed forward: "Dear Lord," each said, "I never sinned as this woman has done." "My faults have been great, O Lord, but not like hers!"

And I awoke, and looked out on the stars in the sky and the lights in the city. My heart burned within me, and I longed for the morning when I might go out into the world and find some one to whom I could say: "We have both sinned; will we not both tell the Master and 'go and sin' no more?" And in the night watch these words, which I had read somewhere, made a new vision, and a new light came into my deep longing:

"Country primroses! fresh and sweet!
Violets! only a penny a bunch!"
A young girl cries whose weary feet
Tread many a muddy city street,
While rich folk idly dine or lunch.

Repletion theirs! starvation hers!
How long will those pale flowers keep fresh,
If no heart-yearning pity stirs?
How long, ere she no more demurs
To sink the spirit in the flesh?

Ay; sneer and pass the other side!
But when Christ comes, of this be sure,
'Tis not her shame He will deride,
The shame is yours who have not tried
To keep His blossoms fresh and pure.

Toronto, Can.

A TEACHER OF MOTHERS.

BY J. FOWLER WILLING.

There can be no higher work than teaching those to whom God intrusts His best service, the care of little children. According to the old Scotch proverb, "An ounce of mother is worth a pound of clergy." The millennium will come when mothers do their work well.

Elizabeth Harrison has written a book, "A Study of Child Nature," to help Christian women in this most lovely and difficult task. I want to say a word about it, not only for the pleasure that it gives one woman to speak of another's beautiful work, nor alone from the hope that young mothers who are at their wits' end, may be led by this woman of genius to sow aright the divine seed from which they may reap richly and help gloriously the coming of Christ's kingdom, but to acknowledge a personal debt.

When I met Miss Harrison a few years ago, she gave me three principles that I have done my best to pass to those who are working to help people to be good. She told me how she teaches children: 1. Absolute human equality. That is the soil in which our Declaration of Independence strikes root; neglected, it turns out rank crops of tyranny, anarchy, communism and all manner of noxious weeds. 2. Every soul must be given an opportunity to express its good sentiment in self-sacrifice. Violation of that principle is at the bottom of all sentimentality and fanaticism, 3. We must give our best.

Miss Harrison taught this lesson once to a kindergarten of the petted children of the rich by a Christmas object lesson. She had them fill a tree with presents for some very poor children, requiring them to bring only the things that they thought most of. There were some bits of pathos in the partings with the dearest dollies and the loveliest picture books. When they were all seated for the "giveaway," the hungry-eyed little waifs on one side and the happy donors on the other, she told them of our Father's great gift to us when we were bad—His only Son. A little hand went up timidly from among the givers, a reverent, half tearful face was lifted to hers. "Oh, Miss Harrison, God is just like us, isn't He?" Years could never efface that sweet lesson in the divine joy of service.

This book gives the philosophy of teaching the little ones, of whom Christ said it would be better for us to be drowned in the depths of the sea than to offend one of them. It is as beautiful and tender as the shining of stars, the glow of dawn, the morning songs of birds, the dewy opening of flowers.

It does not set aside the work of the Holy Spirit. It shows simply how to prepare the soil for His seed, and weed out the rough, coarse, wicked things that would choke and hinder its growth. As if one should teach the "tonic sol-fa" as an easy way of learning music, but with no thought of making ready musical rendering the main thing in public worship. He believes that this is the best way to "sing with the understanding," which is as certainly commanded as singing "with the Spirit," though far less important. The table of contents must make any young mother or teacher want the book. "Training the muscles, the senses, the emotions, the affections, the reason, the instinct of justice, the will, the worship, the faith."

The motive of the book is given in a word of Froebel: "We must cultivate women who are the educators of the human race, else the new generation cannot accomplish its task." The author shows how the training of children can be learned as a system of vital, practical principles. Note this:

The following facts place this study of child culture upon the broad basis of a science. First: The child bears within himself instincts which can be trained upward or downward. Second: These instincts give early manifestation of their existence. Third: The mother's loving guidance can be changed from uncertain instinct into unhesitating insight.

Let me illustrate this change of instinct into insight. A young mother who had been studying Froebel for some months, placed her four-year-old boy in my kindergarten. I soon saw that he was suffering from self-consciousness. In a conversation with the mother I told her that I had discovered in her child a serious obstacle to mental growth —self-consciousness. "What is the cause of it?" said she. "If the child had not such a sensible mother," I replied, "I should say that he had been 'shown off' to visitors until the habit of thinking that every one is looking at him has become fixed in his mind." Instantly the blood mounted to her face, and she said: "That is what has been done. You know that he sings very well. Last winter my young sister frequently had him stand on a chair beside the piano and sing for guests. I felt at the time that it was not right, but if I had known then what I now do, I would have died rather than allowed it."

Instinct is often overruled by others; insight makes the mother stand invincible for her child's right to be properly brought up.

Take another paragraph. Such teachings would put up lightning-rods to conduct off the terrible things that James wrote about the tongue. It would kill out the gossip that destroys the peace of communities and churches:

More than this, a negative method trains a child inevitably into a critical, pessimistic character very depressing to us all. For instance: A mother came to me in utter discouragement, saying: "What shall I do with my five-year-old boy? He is simply the personification of the word won't." After the lesson was over I walked home with her. A beautiful child, with golden curls and great dancing black eyes, came running out to meet us, and with all the impulsive joy of childhood threw his arms around her. What were her first words? "Don't do that, James, you will muss mamma's dress." I had already suspected where the trouble lay; now I knew that I was right.

In a moment it was: "Don't twist so, my son." "Don't make that noise." In the four or five minutes we stood at her steps she had said don't five times. Can you wonder that when she said, "Run in the house, now; mamma is coming in a minute," he replied: "No, I don't want to." Such training develops unduly the critical faculty, and criticism leads to separation from our fellow-beings. Therefore, care must be taken, not only that the child himself be not over-criticised, but also that other people shall not be criticised in his presence; he is injured far more than they are helped. Unless some principle is involved, let the people about him pass for heroes and heroines.

Miss Harrison is a close student. She knows Homer, Dante, Michael Angelo, Goethe, Carlyle, and the rest. She does not use borrowed quotations as rhetorical ornaments. She has walked and talked with those calm, old philosophers till they have let her into the secret of their thinking, as He also has done who spoke as "never man spake." She shows how sympathy with the weak, and tender helpfulness may be taught by the kindergarten play of the butterfly. She says:

A morning or two after the introduction of this game into my kindergarten, a child, full of life and animal spirits, came running to meet me with a face which proclaimed some good news that he was eager to tell. He began: "I saw a truly little worm this morning." "Did you? Did you watch him crawl?" "Yes, I picked him up and put him over into a yard, so he wouldn't get stepped on, 'cause I knowed what a nice butterfly he would be some day!" All the glow of intense and tender sympathy was in his face and voice: he was indeed at one with God's creation; the worm and he had become brothers through his having imitated its form of activity. As I looked down into his soul-lit eyes, I wondered if this childish sympathy would not some day help him to save, for the sake of the glorious possibilities which lie in each of them, the little worms of humanity, which crawl about the streets and gutters of our large cities.

She shows how mothers may teach genuine religion, and be greatly ennobled thereby. "They can make their lives such that religion is to them not the mere going to church, the reading of the Bible, the performance of any religious duty, but that nearness to God which renders all these things a joy. Not until the mother has reached this state is she ready to lead her child beyond the petty temporal things of life into a realization of the great and everlasting things. Truly her office is priestly, and great is the reward—the greatest on earth."

I bought this beautiful book at our Temple in Chicago. Why may not every union have a copy to lend to the young mothers of its town? It would be a lovely thing for one of the Lord's stewards to use $100 in sending it to every young mother who could not afford to buy it, and who would send her name as needing its help.

New York City.

ALSO I think that good must come of good,
And ill of evil—surely unto all—
In every place and time.
—Edwin Arnold.

FACT shall be fact for me, and the truth the truth forever.—A. H. Clough.

IF a man is his brother's keeper, still more is he his sister's.—George Macdonald.

THANK GOD FOR LITTLE TROUBLES.

BY ALICE MAY DOUGLAS.

Thank God for little troubles
We meet with day by day;
The scoffs of those about us,
The piercing words they say,
The slights of those once friendly,
Their looks of scorn and pride,
For these but drive us closer
To our dear Saviour's side.

Thank God for tears of sorrow,
That our eyes so often dim,
For every tear we're shedding
But brings us nearer Him.
And He will wipe all tears away
With His own pierced hand,
And comfort us and lead us
Unto the tearless land.

Bath, Me.

BUYING GOSPEL WATER.*

BY MABEL GIFFORD.

Little Katrina Kipley, with her face pressed against the chilly window-pane, was squinting at a very blurred vision of "wet sky, wet bricks and wet mud" outside the window. She could hardly make out the two elm trees opposite, protesting against the wind and rain in a melancholy fashion only to yield up their yellow, brown-speckled leaves after each struggle. Then before the wind could toss them the rain beat them down to the ground and pressed them into a brown mosaic.

All this Katrina saw through the watery perspective. It was very melancholy, indeed, yet she continued to kneel in the big black haircloth chair and pressed her face closer to the cold glass.

And why, do you think? Because inside the window-pane it was sadder than the outside. Mother was crying. She had been crying ever since noon when father came home and went to bed without speaking to anybody, and without eating any dinner.

By and by, mother said in a very choking voice, "It is time for you to take a nap, Katrina."

Then Katrina left the dizzy, brown-speckled leaves to fall down into the mud without any one to pity them, slid out of the big chair and went over to the sofa where she took her afternoon naps. As she was about to climb up she half turned, not daring to look into mother's face:

"Could I go in still an' kiss farzzer jes' once?"

"Oh, no! he is sick, he must not be disturbed."

Then Katrina, with a very mournful little face, curled up on the sofa and mother came and covered her with her red plaid shawl, and a big tear dropped on Katrina's cheek. She shed a few tears to keep that one company, and then went to sleep. It seemed but a little minute when she woke up and heard some one saying:

"Yes, he's in a very bad way; there's only one thing that will ever cure him."

"What's that?" cried Katrina, sitting up very straight, and looking hard at a pale, kind-faced man who stood at the door with his hat in his hand. It was Minister Records; Katrina knew him and loved him, because he was always so kind to mother.

They both started when Katrina spoke, and looked at each other and then at her.

"Gospel-water," said Minister Records, smiling a little; "Gospel-water is what will cure him, and that is the only thing that will put out this cursed fire-water."

"What's gos—" that's all Katrina had a chance to say, for mother hurried to talk about the weather, and the minister went home. Katrina's face was all alight. "Now, muzzer, we will go straight and get some Gospel-water and make farzzer all well, won't we?" She leaned against mother's shoulder, but saw no answering light in the tear-dimmed face she looked up to.

"It's no use, no use," said mother, covering her face with her hands. "They let the wicked folks sell him the curse, and follow him if he tries to keep away from it, and urge him to take it, put it into his hands and hold it to his lips. Why don't they stop them? They could if they would; there are millions of them, ministers and Christians. No; they let it all go on just to please the heartless people who prefer to make money by poisoning and killing other people instead of working. Then after the harm is all done they go about preaching salvation." Mother laid her head down on the table and cried harder than her little daughter ever had seen her before.

Katrina stood looking on in great consternation, her eyes getting rounder and rounder, and her alarmed little nose getting higher and higher, and I don't know when the corners of her mouth would have stopped going down if mother had not stopped crying a bit to say:

"Katrina, go down stairs and play with the Kilpatricks until I call you."

"Does it cost very much?" she asked, going backwards toward the door,—"the Gospel-water?"

"A great deal," said mother.

"Then I'll have to take the whole of it," said Katrina, very decidedly to herself, and she went across the narrow entry to her own room on the opposite side, climbed up to the shelf and shook a little red house that stood there, upside down, until there was no more "jingle" left in it. She went down stairs with a hat and cloak on, and never stopped at the Kilpatrick's door. She went right out into the street where the mud was muddier and the wet wetter than ever. Little crooked rills of water straggled in and out of the brick pavement in every direction, and little pools of water filled every hollow. The people walking over the pavement were very wet and solemn, even the boys forgot to shout "Pickaninny," as Katrina passed them.

The little brown-cloaked figure pattered and slipped and splashed bravely up the street, and the rain ran down its face so fast you could not have told whether it was the weather, or Katrina, or both that were crying, Katrina could hardly have told herself.

She was frightened to find herself alone, out in the dismal, dripping streets. It was early, but so dark that lights already began to glow in the windows.

"I guess Mr. Sun forgot to come around this way to-day," mused Katrina, and then she turned another corner and came into the full blaze of a great window that displayed plates of tempting food, pretty glass bottles, bouquets of beautiful flowers, and evergreens all about.

"This must be the place," she cried in a rapture, and after one timid look at the great glass doors she went in.

There were many people, all men, in there, eating and drinking, chatting and laughing, and having the pleasantest time. The light and the pleasantness seemed to warm her poor chilled little body through, and she walked up to the counter with rising courage.

"Please, mister, I want ten cents' worth of Gospel-water."

"What?" cried the clerk in such a queer voice that Katrina began to wilt, and wonder if little girls never bought that kind of water.

"Gospel-water," she repeated in a louder voice; the man might only be deaf. "Ten cents' worth of Gospel-water."

"We don't keep that kind of water here," grinned the clerk, reminding Katrina of the organ-grinder's monkey.

"Who sent you here?" demanded a big voice over the clerk's head. Katrina looked up and saw a tall, black-whiskered, stern looking man with cross looking eyes. "Some trick of that temperance crew, I'll wager," he muttered, looking crosser every instant.

"I sent myself," answered Katrina with dignity, growing brave as difficulties thickened.

"Very well, then; what do you want of Gospel-water?"

"For farzzer; he's sick. Fire-water's got him. Fire-water's awful; when it gets farzzers, muzzers cry all the time, an' there isn't much to eat, and it gets shady 'fore the lamps is lighted, an' big scissors have to go to work in a big, big house where there's lots of wheels that go 'whiz-z-z' all day, and little scissors don't have any good times or any nice cloze. An' the meetin' man said Gospel-water would put out the fire-water. Couldn't you fix a little, don't you s'pose?"

By this time every one in the room was listening. A man in a russet coat near the door got up and went out. Then two more men started as if they had just remembered an engagement.

The clerk stopped grinning, leaning over the counter and rolling horrible eyes at the little mite on the other side, he hissed loudly, "S-s-s-s-scat!"

Katrina fled in terror, and she heard the men laughing as she rushed from the bright room out into the dark street.

Abington, Mass.

(Concluded next week.)

*Republished by request.

SPEAK a shade more kindly
Than the year before;
Pray a little oftener,
Love a little more:
Cling a little closer
To the Father's love;
Life below shall liker grow
To the life above.

—Selected.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Such a breezy, nice letter from our Scottish cousin this week! I wish our Corner would permit of publishing it in full, for she tells of many interesting events in the Young Abstainers' Union, which is the Scottish L. T. L., as well as sending the following special message to Cozy Cornerers who have written to her:

I wish to thank all the dear girls who have written to me. I have received so many letters that I have found it quite impossible to reply to every one. Indeed, I have done my best to fulfill my promise; but if those whose letters I have not answered could see the drawerful of correspondence which has been sent to me, I am sure they would forgive me, and say that this is certainly a case when a promise may be broken.

It has been a very great pleasure to me to answer the majority of the letters. It has been an excellent exercise in composition and I can assure you I have become quite an expert in describing the beauties of Edinburgh!

EDINA WILSON.

29 Hartington Place, Viewforth, Edinburgh, Scotland.

I trust that other Cozy Corner correspondents have had equally as happy an experience.

Here's a budget of New Year letters, bright and crisp.

The descriptions of games are coming in but not so many as I expected. On reading this just sit down, write an account of your favorite game, and send it right away to Your

Aunt Jane

NEPHEWS AND NIECES.

I wish you a happy New Year! When you receive this letter I shall be thirteen years old. I hope I shall grow up to be as good a woman as dear Miss Willard is, and I have just sent away for a picture of her cat.

Waldoboro, Me. GRACE F. SPRONE.

Our greetings to you, dear temperance girl.

I like this text about as well as any for this new year: "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." RUBY M. AUSTIN.

My motto for the new year is, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits."

LENDALL RUSSELL AUSTIN.

167 Tremont St., Taunton, Mass.

These are both excellent mottoes for the New Year.

My papa voted the prohibition ticket the first time it was in the field. He died six years ago. I mean to grow up to help drive King Alcohol out of our land. I am nine years old. This is New Year's day, so I will wish you and little cousins a happy New Year.

Ottawa, Ill. GERTRUDE JOHNSON.

May God help and strengthen you in that resolve, little niece. A Happy New Year to you.

We have four saloons here but that is just four too many, I think. JUNA NAFE.

Fremont, Mich.

We all say "Amen" to that.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

261.

NUMERICAL ENIGMA.

I am composed of nineteen letters and represent a place which temperance children love.

My 17, 2, 4, grows on hickory trees.
My 1, 14, 11, 16, 3, grows on oak trees.
My 7, 15 is what a young man should say to wrong.
My 13, 8, 9, means I will.
My 18, 19 is added to the positive to make the comparative.
My 5, 10, 12, are consonants.

LENNIE EMERY.

262.

CROSSWORD ENIGMA.

My first is in laugh but not in cry.
My second is in cook but not in fry.
My third is in Velma but not in Selma.
My fourth is in pitcher but not in bowl.
"The greatest thing in the world" is whole.

BEULAH L. FIELD.

263.

ENIGMA.

A mixture made of hops and malt,
Drink me I beg you never.
For borne away on me by friends
Your life line thus you'll sever.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED DECEMBER 28.

256. A Happy New Year.
257. Cigars done 't.

Correct answers: E. Myrtle Dingle.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
MANAGING EDITOR—MARGARET A. SUDDUTH.
OFFICE EDITOR—MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—JENNIE A. STEWART.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS { LADY HENRY SOMERSET. MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Secretary.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.
President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, Make the World Better. By Mrs. M. P. A. Crozier 2
Reed Mason's Ride. By Albert E. Lawrence 2
Tainted Literature. By John L. Wright 2
The Onward Tendency. By Lady Henry Somerset 3
The Temperance Demonstration—from an Opera Box. By Frances E. Willard 3
"Fallen" Words. By Elizabeth Cumings 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Cape News 4
An Answering Cry from the Orient 5
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 5
THE HOUSEHOLD:
Poem, A Little Letter in Rhyme 6
"One Solution." By G. E 6
A Teacher of Mothers. By J. Fowler Willing 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, Thank God for Little Troubles. By Alice May Douglas 7
Buying Gospel Water. By Mabel Gifford 7
AUNT JANE'S COZY CORNER:
Soft-Shelled Nuts 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
The Polyglot Petition 8
"We Shall March Onward" 8
A New Missionary (?) Movement 9
SPECIAL DIFFICULTIES 9
THE WATCH TOWER 9
CRUSADE DAY ECHOES 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Ohio—New Jersey—Texas 11
News in a Nutshell 11
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Department of Evangelistic Work 12
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 12
TREASURER'S CORNER 12
ORGANIZERS' CORNER 13
A Card 13
OUR LIBRARY TABLE 13
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people.—Prov. 14:34.

THE POLYGLOT PETITION.

Some of our friends will begin to think that the phases of the Polyglot Petition are not unlike the farewells and reappearances of Madame Adelina Patti and other personages of world-wide note, but the fact is we have been obliged to "sound the tocsin, beat the drum" in fifty different countries, and as our round-the-world missionaries have gone out each one has made fresh requisitions for signatures to this protest of women against the foes of home. Besides all this the World's W. C. T. U. has not been sufficiently systematized until within the last two years for us to accomplish the gathering up of names to any such extent as the greatness of the enterprise requires, but notwithstanding all these disadvantages we have something solid to show for the seven years' canvass now well-nigh completed. We are assured by those good and true women who have managed the detail of counting, classifying, and pasting the names (under the supervision of Miss Alice E. Briggs, our efficient office secretary) that the signatures number not less than one and one-half millions, while the attestations of good men who desire to see the prayer of the Petition carried out, and who have signed either as individuals or as representatives of the general sentiment of great associations, will have swelled the total to between three and four millions.

So far as we can learn, there has never been a petition to which so large a number have given their influence and names. The nearest approach was at the time of the anti-corn law agitation, when from two to three million names are said to have been gathered and presented to the British Parliament, but they were from a single country, while the Polyglot Petition is so named because it represents "all peoples, kindreds and languages of civilized mankind." As is well known it asks for the outlawing of the alcohol traffic, the opium trade, and the slavery of women in the cities of Christendom and camps of Christian nations in the countries of the Orient.

Within one year from the time that the eyes of our friendly and helpful readers mirror these lines the Polyglot Petition is likely to be, if heaven so wills, on its way around the world in charge of a commission of white-ribbon women appointed for that purpose. It is contemplated to present the Petition to the United States Government at Washington, D. C., just before or immediately after the next National W. C. T. U. Convention to be held in Cleveland, O. It is most fitting that this commission should be connected with our convention in the city where the National W. C. T. U. was organized in 1874, one year after the Crusade, which is the real date of the beginning of the women's temperance movement, so that we shall have "come of age" when we start out to see the world. The next government to which the Petition should be presented is, as a matter of course, the Dominion of Canada, then that of Great Britain; India will probably come next, then China, Japan, South Africa, Australia, the Hawaiian Islands, and so on, the commission, we hope, returning to San Francisco, Cal., when its labors are over.

Now let us urge each local union to gather up names for us without delay as a part of its regular work for 1894. We are sorry to confess that in proportion to the number of our local unions our own country makes the poorest showing of any, but we suppose that is on the principle that a petition "is not without honor save in its own country" and among its own kindred; nay, rather, it is because we have said to ourselves: "Oh, we can send in our names any time," while the countries at a distance have said: "Now is the accepted time," and so have outdone us to an extent that we should not like to exhibit in cold figures at the present writing.

But it is not too late to redeem our record. If, as the French say, "It is the first step that costs," it is often the last step that wins. People who know about regattas tell us that the "final spurt" often determines who shall be the winner. It is that last ounce of power which so often proves decisive. Therefore, we turn to the local unions in the United States, North, South, East and West, and ask if they cannot each one secure from fifty to five hundred names. Surely the large ones can secure five hundred with more ease than the little ones can gather up fifty. It will be a strong thing for the cause that America, the foremost country in temperance reform, led the world in the Polyglot Petition. We are sure no woman who wears the white ribbon is willing that we shall be obliged to confess that "God's Country" brought up the rear of the procession, and please take notice that the procession is about to start!

Think what it will mean as an object lesson to a world that is taught more by object lessons than by all other means, to see passing from government to government the accredited representatives of the women's temperance movement, born of the Holy Crusade inspiration, with the united prayer, plea and protest of such an army, good and true, asking that the guarantees and safeguards of law shall be stripped away from the saloon, the opium den and the haunt of nameless infamies. It will be the most representative errand that has ever carried men and women around the globe, for it will represent the universal empire of the home, the kingdom of the heart, the republic of childhood, the united states of those united hearts pledged to God and Home and Every Land.

Here follows the Polyglot Petition, pray cut it out, paste it on a long strip of paper, take it to the next meeting of the local union and let us hear from you.

PETITION OF THE WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE HOME.
ADDRESSED TO THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE WORLD.

Honored Rulers, Representatives and Brothers:

We, your petitioners, although belonging to the physically weaker sex, are strong of heart to love our homes, our native land, and the world's family of nations.

We know that clear brains and pure hearts make honest lives and happy homes, and that by these the nations prosper, and the time is brought nearer when the world shall be at peace.

We know that indulgence in alcohol and opium, and in other vices which disgrace our social life, makes misery for all the world, and most of all for us and for our children.

We know that stimulants and opiates are sold under legal guarantees which make the governments partners in the traffic, by accepting as revenue a portion of the profits, and we know with shame that they are often forced by treaty upon populations, either ignorant or unwilling.

We know that the law might do much, now left undone, to raise the moral tone of society, and render vice difficult.

We have no power to prevent these great iniquities beneath which the whole world groans, but you have power to redeem the honor of the nations from an indefensible complicity.

We therefore come to you with the united voices of representative women of every land, beseeching you to raise the standard of the law to that of Christian morals, to strip away the safeguards and sanctions of the state from the drink traffic and the opium trade, and to protect our homes by the total prohibition of these curses of civilization throughout all the territory over which your government extends.

NAMES.	RESIDENCE.

N. B.—Send for copies. Return, after having canvassed, to Miss Briggs, The Temple, Chicago.

To see the Petition succeed has been our dream for seven years. Honest hard work on its behalf has occupied us for unnumbered hours of happy toil. Its early home was in Rest Cottage, and "St. Courageous'" patient hands, now folded in eternal quietness, have worked for it with tenderness and zeal. On her first visit to America, Lady Henry Somerset brought us 250,000 names. Mrs. Leavitt carried its healing leaves to every nation in her long and lonely pilgrimage. Miss Ackermann, our lamented Mary Allen West, Mrs. Andrew, Dr. Bushnell, Miss Palmer, of South Africa, Mrs. Hauser, of India, the Misses Leitch, of Ceylon, and ten thousand coadjutors, have wrought valiantly in this cause. The Dominion of Canada has made common cause with us; Catholic and Protestant, Gentile and Jew, Christian, Hindoo and Mohammedan have found in the Polyglot Petition a common ground of faith and works. Sisters of the white ribbon in America, let us now, at the last, put the capstone on this strong pillar of God.

"WE SHALL MARCH ONWARD."

The mental blur that leads some good people to keep on saying: "You will never stop the liquor trade as long as you live," and then to go on declaring that "half a loaf is better than no bread" is one of the strongest illustrations that our age affords of the power of the human mind to resist knowledge. These people seem to have a kind of "Now you see it; now you don't see it" way of looking at the saloon. In one breath they say (after they have stated their solemn aphorism, that "you will never overthrow the liquor trade") that "there is no harm in taking a glass of wine," and they seem to think this last platitude clinches the first. But these same talkers would not so stultify themselves before the public as to convene meetings for the purpose of declaring, "You will never overthrow the gambler's den," and "There is no harm in a game of cards."

Furthermore, these people would not expect the gambler and the keeper of a house of infamy to become their allies in reforming both of these rendezvous of shame and sin, but by some hocus-pocus they seem able to make themselves believe that to license evil is to restrict it, and that they have said something when they put forth their two cardinal propositions: "You can never stop the liquor traffic," and "there is no harm in a glass of wine."

To speak in this way in the face of the foulest abomination the world has ever known, viz.: the legalized and permitted traffic in drinks that deprive men of the use of their reasoning powers and nerve their sinews for the destruction of those they love the best, is to speak without thought. The time will come when people who talk at random concerning reforms that are the breath of life to the nation, will be regarded as men who in their insane folly would carry a lighted candle into a powder-house. The amount of fog, smoke, dust and distemper that such talk infuses into the minds of the unthinking is the greatest harm of which we know. When people who mean to be good, speak or write thus they unconsciously overthrow the patient, painstaking, wearying work of those whom they profess to esteem and whose coadjutors they claim to be. "Deliver me from my friends" has been the deepest prayer of many a stalwart reformer; "wounded in the house of his friends" would be the most frequent epitaph of the reformer if truth were wont to be engraved on headstones; but in all this seething cauldron of controversy and contradiction—this witches' broth of modern thought—there is one fresh and fragrant sprig of healing and of hope. Nobody can crucify the truth beyond the power of resurrection: in the long run it will come out ahead, for it is woven of the warp and woof of God's thought and emblazoned with the golden threads of His all-transforming love. Well may temperance reformers say in times like these:

"Right forever on the scaffold;
Wrong forever on the throne,
But that scaffold sways the future,
And behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow,
Keeping watch above His own."

But the signs of promise are greater than at any previous epoch. As our National president said in her recent annual address:

"There was never so much intelligent thinking in any one year as to the drink delusion; there were never so many children studying in the schools the laws written in their members; there was never such a gathering of temperance people together to consult on the temperance question, what to do and what not to do, as in this year; there was never such a volume of experience with expert testimony and knowledge so varied and complete as we had this year at our International Congress; there were never so many total abstainers in proportion to the population, never so many intelligent people who could render a reason scientific, ethical, æsthetic, for total abstinence as now; there were never so many pulpits from which to bombard the liquor traffic and the drink habit, and there were never so many journalists who had a friendly word to say for the temperance reform; there was never such a stirring up of temperance politics, for the foremost historic nation of the world—Great Britain—has this year for the first time adopted as a plank in the platform of its dominant party the principle that the people shall themselves decide whether or not they want the public-house, and as a natural consequence of this political action there was never a public sentiment so respectful towards the temperance reform. The great 'world-brain' has become saturated with the idea that it is reasonable and kind to let strong drink alone. The vastness of these changes can only be measured by the remembrance that a few generations ago the same drinks were the accredited emblems in cottage and palace alike of hospitality and kindness and good-will."

The Prohibition party—that pointed plowshare breaking the way for the ballasted track of the future's dominant party—has held its own "amid the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds," in a year when the turbulence of conflicting interests has stirred our country up like "a California earthquake" and "a South Carolina" inundation combined. "Our flag is still there," not dimmed by the loss of a single bright and penetrating ray. And best and hopefulest of all, in this same year women have been marshaled into line as the enlisted peaceful soldiers of our ballot war in the great state of Colorado and in the progressive British colony of New Zealand, while the recent action of the British Parliament on the Parish Councils Bill promises to equip them for the defence of their homes in every hamlet of Great Britain.

Prohibition by the people's will is not only "in the air" but in the thought and conscience of the world. It is what men on the street would call "the winning card." It is what white-ribboners describe as "the most winsome of key-notes." With woman's vote behind it, combined with that of the best men, the liquor traffic will speedily find itself the wandering Jew of every clime, cast out as evil, smitten with the righteous malediction of those forces that mean health, healing and happiness for the homes of the people in this and every clime.

"Grant me where to stand and I will move the world," said Archimedes. Give us the ballot, We, Us and Company—the people—and every poison that blights the brain, and every institution based on human appetite and passion, shall be put under the ban of law, in the name and for the sake of home protection, humanity's salvation, and God's glory.

A NEW MISSIONARY (?) MOVEMENT.

"The God above us faileth,
The God within is strong."

The above lines close a production it were flattery to call a poem, entitled, "Why Don't He Lend a Hand?" which, with two or three like samples of a most remarkable literature, has found its way to our desk.

The whole purports to be issued by the board of directors of the American Secular Union (whatever that may be), and is a strange blending of blasphemy, ignorance and credulity.

The exciting cause of this inundation of "secularism" (?) is stated in the largest leaflet of the series, entitled "To the Clergy and their Supporters in this City and Vicinity," to be the plan on the part of the ministers to district the city in order to find out the number of non-church goers. They propose, if this plan is "persisted in," to follow such visitation in each instance with copies of the literature sent us; but they magnanimously add: "As long as you rely on your boasted power of supplication to a pretended myth no action will be taken, as we have no particular wish to show up such a sickening system of immorality."

We, also, "have no particular wish to show up" the weaknesses and fallacies of these arguments. They are of the true Ingersollian stamp, minus the power of rhetoric, and have been met again and again. The texts cited to prove the immorality of Bible teachings are chosen at random with total disregard to context or logical sequence; the assertion that the existence and support of the Christian church in a community increase the poverty and suffering there, is made with the usual disregard to the facts of history, while the theory that the taxation of church property would largely put an end to poverty and suffering, is as Utopian as anything that was ever evolved in the brain of a "Christian visionary."

Personally, we have no objection to the taxation of church property, though we can see great force in the argument which regards the church as the conservator of public morality, and therefore at one with the public buildings belonging to state or city; but we should really like to understand the process of reasoning through which any rational mind must pass in order to persuade itself that the taxation of church property or the abolition of churches would lessen poverty. Would the money received from this taxation be employed for the relief of the poor? What guarantee have we of this? The fact that the individual property tax might, thereby, be decreased, proves nothing; for the poor are not taxpayers, and could not be benefited thereby. The abolition of churches would, undoubtedly, decrease taxes, since it is an indisputable fact that real estate appreciates or depreciates in value according to the existence or non-existence of churches in the community; but we question whether our friends would care for a lessening of taxes which would mean a corresponding lessening of property valuation!

We think the ministers of Chicago have nothing to fear from this proposed scattering of blasphemous literature. Certainly the threat should in no sense deter them from more forceful and systematic efforts at evangelization. Such efforts always overreach themselves, and the proposed evil result, in actual good. That Bible which has stood the assaults of a Voltaire and a Hume need hardly fear the American Secular Union; surely not if the literature sent out be a proper exponent of the ability of its propaganda. That church which, despite its defects and its failures, has still stood as the central power in all true work for humanity through the ages, will stand when the American Secular Union has long passed out of memory. That Christianity, whose very essence is "good will to men," will go on making that good will more and more practical and beneficent when the works of its opponents of this generation shall have passed into the "innocuous desuetude" which belongs to its opponents of the past. The good sense of humanity to-day, as ever, will cling to that which means its ultimate uplift, however its workings may be deterred through misconception or inefficiency.

"The God within is strong" our enemies themselves being judges—and it is because Christianity makes possible this "God within" humanity, this power of an indwelling Christ to supplement and supplant human weakness, that it must survive all attacks made upon it, and must finally conquer to itself the universe.

"The God above us faileth"; indeed, so long as He be only a God above, but when He becomes God within, working through humanity for the uplift and redemption of humanity, He is strong to the overthrowing of strongholds and the subduing of all things unto Himself.

It is the failure of the church to apprehend this ideal in the past, which has made such organizations as the American Secular Union possible. It must be by the fuller acceptance and more perfect conforming to this ideal on the part of the church of the future that such organization shall be made forever impossible. When "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" is rightly construed on the part of the Christian church, we shall have mastered the social problems of the age.

PLEDGE.—"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquor, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same."

QUERY.—If a district president attends a county convention in her own district without official invitation other than that of the local president in whose town the convention is held, who is responsible for her expenses incurred, (railroad fare, etc.,) the district, county, or the local union whose president extended the invitation?

ANSWER.—The district president in such case does not attend the convention upon official invitation, the president of the local union not being invested with such power, and she would therefore be the responsible person for payment of expenses. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE.

Q.—Is boiled cider admissible in mince pies?

A.—If the cider is taken fresh from the press, when it is only the expressed juice of apple, and is boiled to the rich syrup consistency, we do not see how its use in mince pie can be in the least degree objectionable. We have known it to keep in that form for twenty years, without the slightest fermentation, which proves the entire absence of alcohol. But we know that good mince pies may be made without boiled cider, and in order to refrain from even the appearance of evil, we advise white-ribboners to substitute the delicious juices from preserved and pickled fruit and tart jellies diluted with hot water. There is no loss but great gain to the palate in these substitutions.

Lady Henry Somerset tells an effective story of a poor woman in her own town who was a great drinker and who, in a fit of the drink distemper, had thrown her own child into the fire. Meeting her sometime after this hideous transaction, both being on their way to the polls, and temperance being the issue in the election, Lady Henry asked the poor creature how she was going to vote, and she answered with vehemence, "I shall vote against the men who make devils of us women."

***

To show the difference between the social status of brewers in England and America, I quote a letter from a good temperance woman in the mother country, who says: "The gentleman whose article in the paper I send you I wish you would answer, is quite a young man, but he is one of a large family of Christian brewers for three generations back and they are really nice and good people if it were not for their trade. They are very active workers in our Methodist church here."

***

While it is not always true that nothing in life becomes us like the leaving of it, it is undoubtedly true that the last words of illuminated and inspired souls are eagerly sought for by those to whom the great trial is sure to come. A young friend, a little over twenty years of age, and full of the brightest promise of American womanhood along the lines of intellectual and moral power, said with a glowing countenance and her last breath, as she seemed to behold what others could not see, "The mountain tops are gleaming from peak to peak." Another who had been a teacher in college in early years, and who became a missionary of great usefulness, said in her final moments, "I bless God that I was ever born that I might know the bliss of dying."

***

What is the temperance cause doing for women? It is leading us outside the hedges of a narrow sectarianism. Going into the streets to pray meant going beyond denominational walls and clasping hands with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in such sincerity as leads them to "rescue the perishing." This temperance work is also revealing to us the absurdity of always standing below the cataract to grasp, often vainly, for those who have made the fearful plunge, instead of stationing guards above it to keep the ignorant and unwary from falling in. It has taught us also that, as God has given us eyes which can look up and around, but not within ourselves, the most healthful Christian life is one that gazes lovingly into the face of Christ and helpfully around upon humanity, instead of tiring itself out with morbid introspection. Slowly we are discovering, with happiness that mocketh speech, that this fight against home's bitterest enemy is God's highway of the exodus for half the race.

***

Apropos to the prevailing hard times, it is well to state the "discovery" of one of our readers to the effect that if coal be drenched with a saturated solution of chloride of sodium (salt) it will kindle quicker, burn freer, last longer, and emit less gas. This friend insists that if the plan were generally adopted, millions of tons of coal would be saved each year. Three or four quarts of salt is sufficient for one ton of coal. As this method is guaranteed to save twenty-five per cent of the amount of coal required to produce a given result, On Duty recommends its trial, and as she has no means to test it herself, requests that the results of the experiment be made known.

***

We are but children of a larger growth and the following incident illustrates the foolish way in which we conduct ourselves: I awoke in the night and fell to thinking after this fashion. "Here I am the third day without a stenographer; Sydney Smith said barbarism consisted in being fifty miles distant from a lemon; my definition would be that beyond earshot of a stenographer is crass heathenism." A telegram had missed its mark, and I was left lamenting minus my faithful helper; so in the darkness I fumed and fretted about my disappointment, when behold, in the morning I learned that she had arrived the night previous and slept but just across the hall from me. Reflecting on my folly I said to myself, "Here in the body pent, with but five narrow and often choked up avenues from the material world into our spirits, how little can we know. If one whose help I wished so much was yet so near and I had not the faintest notion of it, how easy it ought to be to think that mother is close by and yet I cannot know, so heavily am I encased in earthly ligaments."

ON DUTY.

Crusade Day Echoes.

[So many reports of the Twentieth Crusade celebrations have reached us that we have been obliged to condense each one in order to make room for all. This list includes all that were received prior to January 10; others will be mentioned in the regular Nutshell columns, from time to time, and doubtless many more will be faithfully recorded by the state reporters. These are enough to show how universally and successfully the day was observed.]

FROM MANY STATES.

Newberg, Ore., takes the lead in new members, forty-one being added. They held a grand all-day meeting, opening with a prayer and praise session—praise for the way in which God has led us on from a little praying band of women to a great organization 200,000 strong; for the white ribbon chain around the world, and the uplift to women.

"We held a mass-meeting on the 24th, and had grand addresses on the Crusade and outlook by two of our ministers, and by one of our sisters on membership," writes an earnest member of Elizabeth City, N. C.

Miss Willard's "Woman and Temperance" furnished the readings and the National reports the selections for the Crusade anniversary at Thomasville, Ga. Dr. Rodgers, from Louisville, Ky., introduced and closed the services with most appropriate remarks, as well as words of encouragement to all engaged in the "peaceful war."

Earnest prayers, songs of praise, readings from THE UNION SIGNAL, a history of the Crusade and an address by the local minister, followed by refreshments and "camp-fire," completed the program of Elliott, N. D., a union of farmers' wives and daughters. No new members were secured, for they "all belong."

The three churches of Colton, Cal., united in the Crusade service, December 31, all the pastors assisting. Mrs. Cameron, who organized the union and was the first president, was there after an absence of six years, and gave a very interesting sketch of the Crusade. A collection of four dollars was taken and six new members gained.

The day was observed in the W. C. T. U. rooms at Union, Me., by an interesting order of exercises and with many fervent prayers for national prohibition and the final overthrow of the liquor traffic. Fifteen new subscribers were received for THE UNION SIGNAL. Two new members were added to the union.

The ministers of Corinth, Miss., assisted at the Crusade mass-meeting, and the congregation was composed of members of the five churches, there being no other service at that hour. Six new members were enrolled.

"No, we did not have a regular jubilee on Crusade Day, but we did have an earnest, soulful meeting," writes Mrs. Mary M. Pugh, president of Buckingham union, Omaha, Neb. "Two of the band of original Crusaders were present. We had a letter of greeting from 'Mother Stewart' that was like a benediction. Renewed consecration and arrangements for a temperance mass-meeting in January were the results of our day."

Coming so near the busy holidays, Mannington, W. Va., almost feared to undertake a Crusade anniversary, but it proved a great success. They spent a pleasant, as well as profitable afternoon, receiving six active and three honorary members, and one subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL.

Miss Willard's "Our Sober Second Thought," was read at Arend, Wis. The old Crusade hymns, dear to every white-ribboner, were sung with spirit. Rev. Pinkerton gave a timely address, eulogizing the efforts of the W. C. T. U. to crush out the saloon. A collection of $2.50 was taken for the Temple.

"Rise and Progress of the W. C. T. U.," was the fertile topic discussed at the Lead, S. D., Crusade anniversary. Three members were added to the union.

From Dallas, Texas, comes most encouraging news. On December 23 the union made visiting tours securing pledge signatures. Public meetings were held January 4, afternoon and evening, which were full of power and inspiration. Thirty-three pledges, five dollars in membership dues, and a collection were taken.

The only union in Arkansas to report to date is that at Little Rock, where a prayer and praise meeting was held in the W. C. T. U. parlors on Saturday, and a Sabbath mass-meeting incited them to strive for double membership the coming year.

The Pennington, N. J., union held its celebration at headquarters on the 24th, where an interesting order of exercises was enjoyed.

More men than women were present at the small but deeply interested gathering at Yakima, Wash. Four honorary members were added to the list and temperance sentiment was increased.

Although it was a stormy night there was a good audience and deep interest manifested during the rendition of the appropriate program at Valparaiso, Neb.

THE HAWKEYE STATE.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather the attendance was good at Cedar Rapids, and interest taken creditable. The program was listened to by an appreciative audience. Manuscripts were requested by reporters, and the whole proceedings came out in the papers.

Temple and Loyal W. C. T. U., of Des Moines, united in the observance of Crusade Day with Mrs. Anna M. Palmer, state evangelistic superintendent, in charge of the day program, every topic assigned as in THE UNION SIGNAL. Three mothers' meetings in different localities of the city were the outgrowth of the day, in which social purity and the studies of that department were explained and urged by Mrs. Palmer.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Hampton Falls held a grand rally and mass-meeting at Dearborn Hall, uniting with the Seabrook W. C. T. U. All the clergymen in the two towns were invited. Rev. Joseph Kimball spoke on the Crusade, its meaning and spirit, Rev. Mr. Rand upon the outlook. Spirited songs were sung and select readings given, interspersed by remarks from the order of the Sons of Temperance. Five new members have been added recently.

Words of cheer and encouragement were heard at Littleton's Crusade meeting, where a good program was rendered. One new member and a collection of two dollars are reported.

KANSAS.

Emporia had a stirring program, commencing with the call to Crusade celebration, with readings from noted women temperance workers, discussion, paper and address by the pastor.

The day was observed with good results at Phillipsburg, where a thankoffering of $1.50 was taken. One new member and one new subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL were received.

HOOSIER STATE REPORTS.

The Crusade spirit burned again in the hearts of the loyal white-ribboners of Knightstown, as one after another spoke of the lessons learned from the Crusade and the world-wide work that had sprung from it.

In spite of the pessimistic views, with which it has to contend among some of its Christian workers, the little union at Monon faithfully celebrated Crusade Day and will labor on until the victory is won.

A full house, encouraging speeches by gentlemen who assisted in the Crusade, seven new members, a collection of almost $5, literature distributed and expressions of good will and sympathy, are the outcome of the Crusade meeting at Worthington.

MISSOURI.

A carefully prepared program was that of Appleton City, embracing an original poem, recitations, papers on W. C. T. U. topics, with remarks by three pastors. One hundred copies of the Crusade-Christmas UNION SIGNAL were distributed, and two hundred and fifty pages of leaflets. One dollar and thirty cents was sent to National treasurer for thankoffering.

A Sabbath mass-meeting was held in Carthage, in which four ministers participated, two of whom declared in favor of woman suffrage. An inspiring all-day service was held December 27. Five members were added, and three subscriptions were received to THE UNION SIGNAL.

Kansas City observed the day by holding an all-day union meeting. The program outlined by the National evangelistic superintendent was carried out, and a deeply spiritual atmosphere pervaded the meeting. There was a social hour, with refreshments. Mrs. Hoffman, state president, led the meeting in its closing hours, and her tender, helpful words will long be remembered. Several pastors found time to step in and give words of cheer and encouragement. On Sunday afternoon a mass-meeting was held, at which Mrs. Hoffman gave one of her stirring addresses. Excellent music was rendered, and a good collection was sent to state and National union.

THE EMPIRE STATE.

Reminiscences of the Crusade were given at the meeting of the Clara Seekreg W. C. T. U., Ithaca. The address was given by Miss Barbara Buchanan, of Sage College, Cornell, who is a native of South Africa, the daughter of missionary parents. She dwelt principally upon the results of the drink traffic in that country, not forgetting the work of Mary Clement Leavitt and others. The pastor of the church endorses the work of the W. C. T. U.

Junius had a good attendance and a blessed time.

Excellent meetings were held at Bradford, where one active and three honorary members were secured, and two new subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. The pastor, in his earnest address, said: "I expect to see the day wherein the Holy Bible, the influence of the blessed Christ and His gracious spirit shall become void, and of no effect, just as much as I expect ever to realize the time wherein the W. C. T. U. will subside from its godly mission."

At Sidney, the Crusade program was followed, and the pastor gave a most convincing temperance sermon on Sunday evening.

MICHIGAN.

Our Chieftain's letter was read at Marshall, and also the letter from the state president, Mrs. Lathrap. Reminiscences of the Crusade days were enjoyed, and many other letters which were written for the occasion. Four members were received and a thankoffering given.

A consecration meeting marked the anniversary in Stambaugh, where the Crusade public service was blessed by a fine audience. The Loyal Temperance Legion participated.

A large and attentive audience greeted the Crusade memories as given at Charlevoix, and the public was brought to a better understanding of W. C. T. U. work than ever before. One hundred copies of the Crusade-Christmas UNION SIGNAL were distributed, and words of appreciation were spoken for it.

Flint North Side W. C. T. U. adhered to the good program suggested by our National evangelistic superintendent, and they go forth "on another decade, if necessary, believing, trusting."

PENNSYLVANIA.

A splendid report comes from Butler, where public services were held on December 22, with a suitable program. The 23d was passed in all-day prayer and praise meetings. Contributions to the amount of eight dollars were received and forwarded to the National treasurer in response to Miss Willard's appeal. The members were asked by postal to attend these meetings and each to bring a new one, resulting in nine new members.

The Y's assisted the Williamsport union by furnishing the music for their well attended mass-meeting. Eighteen new members were added here.

Royal Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure
A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.
Royal Baking Powder Co.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

At the meeting in Florence, the Presbyterian pastor spoke in high terms of Mother Thompson and our World's and National leader, and, best of all, said that prohibition was "written on every page of the Word of God." He particularly addressed the voters, telling them that the time has come to act.

Six unions at New Castle held a united service, each different session being conducted by a president of a union. The presence of the Spirit was manifest, and many new members were secured.

The only report from a Y union comes from the earnest first Philadelphia Y, which held a "lift up and help on" meeting, the young women re-consecrating themselves to double diligence, and imbibing much of the Crusade spirit through this commemoration.

Carlisle union met in faith and hope and found it good to be there. Miss Ruth Schaffner of the Indian Training School gave an inspiring address and the Crusade was reviewed.

THE CRUSADE STATE.

Twenty original Crusaders were present at Millersburg's gathering, which was in the form of a largely attended parlor meeting. Recollections of the never-to-be-forgotten event were received with great interest. An orchestra was in attendance which rendered sweet music. The refreshments, spiritual and temporal, were greatly enjoyed and the meeting proved a memorable one. Five new members were added.

The day at Berea was well termed a great success. Five new members were received, and one new subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL.

Akron's "veteran volunteers" aim to become recruited, so as to respond ready, ready, the result of sitting in the bright glow of the Twentieth Crusade camp-fire.

That the old Crusade spirit has not died out was attested at Lafayette, where original Crusaders participated in the program.

There was great interest manifested at Van Wert, and the encouraging words spoken by the sympathetic ministers were much appreciated. Five new members were secured.

A voice was heard at the Crusade celebration of the union of unions in Toledo, declaring it impossible for any one to keep informed concerning the immense strides taken in the great cause by our women without familiarity with the pages of the World's and National organ.

The eventful date did not pass unnoticed at West Alexandria, whose observance was conducted in the spirit of the day, and most appropriately

ILLINOIS.

Seventeen new members were added to the roll as a result of the Crusade rally in Belvidere. The evening meeting was placed in charge of the young women and was full of interest.

A parlor meeting was held by the faithful little union at Anna. Two of the ministers made appropriate remarks, and the members present pledged themselves to greater effort for the cause this year than ever before.

A stirring speech on the recent anti-saloon decision in Indiana by a lawyer, was a novel feature at Mason City. Three ministers also took part. A collection of three dollars and thirty cents was taken.

"Our meeting was attended with unusual interest," writes

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

the press superintendent of Marissa. "Distinctive reminiscences in the history of the Crusade were read, followed by appropriate remarks on the origin, growth, and development of the W. C. T. U. in the past twenty years. Three new subscriptions for THE UNION SIGNAL were taken."

Freeport held its Crusade celebration on Sunday afternoon, December 31. Good music and an address by Miss M. Lena Morrow, district president, comprised the exercises. A few additions for membership were obtained.

Mary Allen West union, Chicago, reports much interest in its work from the celebration of Crusade Day, a large attendance and interesting program. Several new members were secured and an offering of $1.30 was sent to the National W. C. T. U.

The district and county presidents each gave an excellent address at Sterling. A consecration meeting was a fitting close.

Reading from Mother Thompson's "Hillsboro Crusade Sketches" in THE UNION SIGNAL, a praise and prayer meeting with remarks by three ministers, made the day a profitable one at Alton, where three new members were received.

News from the Field

OHIO.

IN THE "OLD CRUSADE CHURCH."

In the old Crusade Church, at Hillsboro, a memorable meeting was held December 23. The morning was warm, and so calm that Mother Thompson was allowed to venture out for the first time since her attack of La Grippe. The program of Miss Greenwood was carried out, but the personal experiences of overflowing hearts made the occasion truly a "Crusade anniversary."

Seventeen of the "Original Band" were present, and toward the many who had removed to other earthly localities, and the blessed number who have "obtained the prize," Mother Thompson feelingly writes, "It was natural that our hearts should 'On the eagle wings of love,' aspire to sweet fellowship." She adds, "New impulses were given for future work and the prospect is that some important additions will be made to our working force. The impoverished condition of our union and of our citizens, generally, because of the times, and the explosion of our Citizens' National Bank, gave us cause for humiliation, because our offerings must needs be so sadly minus, but God will make up our lack of service.

"We were greatly rejoiced by the presence of one dear old gentleman, who said he was induced to join us in our services that he might offer upon the altar earnest thanksgiving, for the Crusade had startled him from a life of indulgence that if continued would have ruined him soul and body. Now at the age of eighty-one he was clear-headed, sound in body, and full of gratitude to God, and the noble, brave Crusaders. He said also many other good things, which I have not time to write, but which are treasured in my heart, for that speaker was no other than Judge Thompson."

CRUSADE DAY IN ATHENS AND NELSONVILLE.

Athens celebrated the anniversary on the 24th. Rev. Wm. A. Powell gave an excellent address, and several short talks were given by old Crusaders. It was an inspiring meeting.

On the 28th the Nelsonville union held an all-day meeting in commemoration. Mrs. Helen S. Burns, now their district president, who twenty years ago had the honor of offering the first prayer, when the Crusaders of that place began their visits to the saloons, was with them for the occasion and assisted in the meeting. Eight new members were secured. One can imagine Mrs. Burns' enjoyment of that day and of the large prosperity that has attended that union. Twelve Crusaders were present.

CLEVELAND'S COMMEMORATION.

The anniversary was duly celebrated in Cleveland. The Wade Park avenue union held a meeting at two p. m. Sabbath, the 24th, and the West Side union held a large meeting in the evening, in the M. E. church. Mrs. S. M. Perkins gave addresses at each meeting, and also assisted Mrs. T. K. Doty in the jail services in the morning. Mrs. Mary Ingham, Mrs. J. T. Foote, Mrs. Geo. Presley, original Crusaders, also gave addresses at the West Side meeting. Rev. Dr. Buxton, pastor of the church, is in accord with the work, and his wife is a valiant leader. Greetings from Mother Thompson were read.

Franklin union held an interesting meeting on the 23d, in the M. E. church. Twenty-one members were present, thirteen of whom were original Crusaders. The meeting was opened by reading the Crusade Psalm followed by prayer. An address was given by Rev. Mr. Haynes. Readings from Mother Stewart's Memories were an interesting feature, and were followed by personal reminiscences from old Crusaders.

ANTOINETTE H. CLEVENGER,
State Reporter, Wilmington.

NEW JERSEY.

TWENTIETH CRUSADE ANNIVERSARIES.

West Side avenue, Jersey City, observed the Crusade in place of the regular prayer service, December 22. The room was artistically decorated by the Sunday-school artist—flowers and music lent beauty and harmony to the exercises. The pastor, Sunday-school superintendent, also one who was present at the Chautauqua Crusade day in 1874, gave the literary treat to the audience of L. T. L's, running on up to seventy-four years. Practical thoughts were sown which must bear abundant fruit. Literature was circulated and collection taken.

Westfield used the prepared program, and the Crusade Christmas number of THE UNION SIGNAL was distributed. Two new members, collection good, and they were gratified to learn that those who hitherto knew nothing of our work, became interested.

Haddonfield, too, observed the day with special services, but owing to storm, the attendance was small.

Elizabeth, No. 1 and No. 2, each held interesting exercises. Mrs. Frances was chief speaker for No. 1, while Mrs. Tomlinson, National superintendent of parlor meetings, conducted the services in No 2. One of our first honorary members, Mr. B. E. Bowne, was present and spoke. He used to conduct platform meetings at the Union depot, when our work was in its beginning in the state.

Madison, organized by Mrs. D. P. Kidder, of Evanston, Ill., the year of the Crusade, held a most delightful service in the very same parlor, that of Mrs. H. M. Brittin, press superintendent. The scene from daylight to the fairy-like appearance with its twenty lights for the twenty years of their existence, was a beautiful idea to help commemorate its beginning, as well as that of the Crusade, and Mrs. Earl C. Greenman, president of Morris county, added pleasure as well as profit with her most able bird's-eye view of "all the way the Lord hath led us!" Thus good seed was sown.

Elmer held a mass-meeting Sunday evening. A history of the Crusade was given and an address on the outlook, also an address on scientific instruction. A vote was taken in the congregation and forty voters pledged themselves to sustain the scientific temperance instruction bill which is to be presented to the legislature. Good music, good collection and two new members were the results.

Atlantic Highlands was favored with the presence of the state president, and observed on Sunday afternoon. A class of boys gave good cheer with music, and the pastor of the Methodist church gave hearty indorsement to the exercises.

At Dunellen, Mrs. Tomlinson was the speaker in the rooms of the union on Thursday, 21st. Four new members were gained. Mrs. Cox presented the cause on the Sabbath following to a union service from the four churches, and the many who were present were pleased and profited.

Camden Central observed on Sabbath afternoon in First Baptist church. The president gave an excellent pen picture of the Crusade, and Mrs. J. S. Baer on the "Outlook for the Nation and the World." The Rev. A. B. Richardson, D. D., as well as the pastor of the church, each gave most encouraging addresses.

Keyport held a two hour service in Seabrook Hall on Sunday, December 24, with much success, because the voters helped, and declared themselves religiously and politically with us.

Woodstown celebrated in the new Methodist Episcopal church on the evening of December 24, with appropriate exercises. New members were gained, and results were gratifying.

At East Orange, Mrs. L. D. Quigley gave a most appropriate address, and the program was full of inspiration and profit.

Trenton No. 1 had a varied program conducted by members of the union upon the Sabbath previous to the Crusade Day, and much food for thought and action is the outcome.

These bits I send you only slightly convey the helpfulness of the keeping of our birthday; its influence will continue all through the year, calling us to renewed consecration, aroused activity, that cannot but help show blessed results.

N. L. CAMINADE,
State Reporter, Trenton.

TEXAS TIDINGS.

Mrs. S. J. Sweeney, our state evangelist, has been "in labors abundant." It would be interesting to give the details of her various meetings did space permit. Commencing with a school of methods at Waco where new names were added to the W. C. T. U. and an L. T. L. reorganized, she proceeded to Granger where the union and L. T. L. were reorganized and many new names secured.

At the Georgetown Chautauqua, Mrs. Sweeney addressed large audiences. Miss Angus, our new superintendent of juvenile work, organized an L. T. L. and Mrs. Sweeney, a union. At Tyler, two lectures were delivered and names added to both W. C. T. U. and L. T. L. At Hutto, another promising union was added to our list. The camp-meetings at Macedonia and Willis Creek were attended by Mrs. Sweeney, where her work was wonderfully blest.

Afterwards she went to Dublin and addressed the people so effectually that with the efforts already put forth they voted the town "dry." A telegram called her to Will's Point to arouse a protracted meeting which was at a standstill. A union of twenty-three members was one result of that visit.

At Lancaster and Waxahachie small unions of earnest women were started. At Hillsboro, where Mrs. Sweeney was beautifully entertained, a union of fifty-six, six of whom were gentlemen, was organized. A short rest at Taylor, where a lecture and meeting the ladies in session added six to their number, then she went on to San Antonio.

The women had made elaborate preparation for Mrs. Sweeney, hiring the gospel tent and having it erected within a stone's throw of the post-office and center of the city. The meeting was a success, if we may judge by the number of names signed to the pledge cards. There were one hundred and thirty. One hundred were gentlemen between the ages of twenty-one and forty. After securing so many names Mrs. Sweeney felt alarmed, she didn't know what to do with them. Spending a night in prayer, next day she organized them into a Y auxiliary to the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Sweeney pronounces that the most unique and prosperous W. C. T. U. meeting ever held in Texas.

Our state superintendent of scientific temperance instruction has not been idle. Mrs. Calhoun prepared an address on her department of work and had it read by Mrs. Winn before the synod of the Cumberland Presbyterian church which met at Tyler. The body pledged itself and its presbyteries to coöperate with the W. C. T. U. in teaching the young the evil effects of stimulants.

Miss Fannie L. Armstrong, superintendent of unfermented wine, spent a month traveling in the cause so dear to her heart. While on her trip two flourishing L. T. L's were organized and named themselves for her. She was largely instrumental in calling together the authors of Texas at the Georgetown Chautauqua. Twenty-five names were sent in for membership in the association.

The Tyler L. T. L. recently gave "The Congress of Nations," and added something to their finances.

The medal contest of the Baird L. T. L. was quite a success, all the speakers acquitted themselves well. Miss May Belle Summers was awarded the medal.

While in Corpus Christi, Mrs. F. B. Davis, president of the Jones Stuart union, of San Antonio, made several addresses to L. T. L., Sunday-schools and W. C. T. U.

Galveston mourns the loss of a valuable corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lulu Sherrard. Her last request was, "place the white ribbon on my breast."

San Antonio sympathizes with them as so recently from the West End union has passed the gentle, lovely Rosa Bates, the model treasurer.

After a summer's rest Mrs. Stoddard, state president, returned to the work quite well and resolved to shirk all she can. We all know how much that will be.

Your reporter is at home again after an absence of five months and begs that you will send her whatever you may think worth publishing in THE UNION SIGNAL!

CORNELIA KEITH CARTER,
State Reporter, San Antonio.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MRS. EMMA CRANMER, president of South Dakota, will give the month of February to Missouri. Unions desiring her services should write at once to Miss Ellen D. Morris, Kansas City.

PANA and Greenfield, Ill., were assisted in observing Crusade Day by Mrs. S. A. Stout, evangelistic superintendent for thirteenth district, who was the guest of Rounds W. C. T. U. at the former place for a week, holding a number of meetings and organizing a W. C. T. U. of eleven members at Oconee.

A Weak Digestion

strange as it may seem, is caused from a lack of that which is never exactly digested—fat. The greatest fact in connection with appears at this point—it is partly digested fat—and the most weakened digestion is quickly strengthened by it.

Scott's Emulsion

The only possible help in Consumption is the arrest of waste and renewal of new, healthy tissue. Scott's Emulsion has done wonders in Consumption just this way.

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All druggists.

For Children

recovering from measles, mumps, whooping cough, fevers, or in cases of cholera infantum or summer complaint, feed them on

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON.

Their recovery will be accomplished with a quickness that is surprising. Many lives have been saved by its use. Mothers, make a note of this. Some day you will need it.

Never buy Clam Bouillon for the sick, except in Glass Bottles.

Grocers and Druggists.
Six ½ pint bottles expressed for $1.50. Send stamps for book, "Household Hints."
E. S. Burnham Co., 120 Ganesvoort St., N. Y.

No local dealer can compete with us

WALL PAPER

in variety or price. Our new designs and colorings are handsomer this year than ever before.

Our "Guide How to Paper and Economy in Home Decoration," mailed free with samples

Beautiful Gold Paper, 5c. per Roll.

We carry the largest stock in the country, and can save you 50 per cent. on every roll of paper you buy. No matter where you live, if you have any use for wall paper, send 10c. to nearest address to pay postage on a large package of samples. One good agent or paper hanger wanted in each town to sell from sample books, price $1.00.

ALFRED PEATS,
80-82 W. 13th St., NEW YORK. 136-138 W. Madison St., CHICAGO.

Worth a Guinea a Box.

Stubborn tendencies to digestive troubles in children will always yield to a mild dose of

Beecham's Pills

(Tasteless)
25 cents a box.

SENSIBLE MOTHERS } BUY { GOOD SENSE
CORSET WAISTS for themselves and daughters

COMPLEXION PRESERVED.
DR. HEBRA'S
VIOLA CREAM
G. C. BITTNER & CO., TOLEDO, O.

BAKER'S COCOA.
ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used.

Official Communications.

DEPARTMENT OF EVANGELISTIC WORK.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR 1894.

DEAR SISTERS:—In addition to the usual evangelistic work outlined in my previous circulars, I recommend for our winter campaign the following special lines of effort.

I.—THE CHURCHES.

Let the movement to arouse the churches, so happily commenced last winter, be continued. This movement succeeded beyond our most sanguine expectations.

Hundreds of sermons were preached under the auspices of the W. C. T. U.; many of these in most conservative churches. New interest has thus been aroused, and new light thrown upon the traffic in strong drink. In one town nearly every woman in the churches united with the W. C. T. U. after these special sermons.

II.—THE MASSES.

Let us inaugurate this year a system of coöperative evangelistic work, similar to that proposed by Dr. Strong in his "Coming Era." Let each union take the district in its own vicinity, and send its evangelistic workers from house to house with wisely selected gospel and temperance literature, invitations to the temperance meetings, and that personal contact which the church has so sadly lost, and which alone can bridge the chasm between the church and the masses. Let our W. C. T. U. women systematically and repeatedly visit these homes, studying spiritual and temporal needs, and carrying an atmosphere of health and hope, for spirit, mind and body. No effort is as practical as that which carries Christ to the sinful, sad or discouraged. This two-fold effort in the churches on the one hand, and by house-to-house visitation on the other, will give a mighty impulse to our work, and result in the saving of many lives and souls. The W. C. T. U., like the Salvation Army, is called to this hand-to-hand contact.

III.—GOSPEL MISSIONS.

We also recommend the admirable plan of the evangelistic superintendent of the British Women's Christian Temperance Association. Over seventy gospel missions are to be conducted, in as many different centers, east, west, north and south, each of eight or ten days' duration. Most careful arrangements are made for these missions. Undenominational halls are secured when possible. Weekly prayer-meetings are held for two months previous, to ask God's blessing upon the work. A well-led choir is organized. All the ministers and leading Christian workers are visited and interested in the proposed mission. Large handbills are posted for three weeks before the mission, and small bills are carried from house to house, with personal invitations. Toward the end of the services, temperance meetings are held, pledges presented, and women invited to join the B. W. T. A. The evangelistic department pays the expenses of the missioner, and a collection is taken on the last day of each mission and sent to headquarters. Boxes are often placed in the halls, headed, "For Expenses of the Mission." At close of the week a full report of the mission is sent to the National evangelistic superintendent. Over seventy lady missioners are now ready for the work.

IV.—KANSAS CRUSADE BANDS.

We also recommend the plan so successfully inaugurated by the evangelistic superintendent of Kansas, by which Crusade bands of four or more members, including a player and singer, go throughout the state holding gospel and temperance services. Full particulars of these bands can be gained from Mrs. Alice M. Henderson, state superintendent of evangelistic work, Mankato, Kan.

V.—RECOMMENDATION.

By request of Mrs. Annie Palmer, evangelistic superintendent of Iowa, we present, with cordial endorsement, the following recommendation, to be presented by our evangelistic superintendents to pastors and evangelists holding special religious services. "As Christian temperance workers, realizing the need of a stronger and more united effort on the part of the church and the W. C. T. U., in the prosecution of evangelistic temperance work, we appeal to all pastors and churches to devote one or more days of their revival services, wherever practicable, to gospel temperance meetings; the churches and the W. C. T. U. coöperating in such services, for the salvation of the intemperate, and the awakening of the latent consciences of men and women of the churches, who still fail to understand their obligations to the temperance reform."

VI.—OUR DEVOTIONAL HOUR.

Let there be special vigilance on the part of each superintendent, to guard our devotional hour from eleven to twelve a. m., in each state and county convention. The unusual help and inspiration received by the delegates and the city or town in which they gather, prove the wisdom and the power of this plan. At the close of the recent National Convention in Chicago, during which this devotional hour was crowded out, the following resolution was passed unanimously: Resolved, "That it is the sense of this National Convention, that in the future, nothing should be allowed to interfere with the hour set apart for worship." As we rekindle our altar fires during this twentieth anniversary of the Crusade, let us recall our sources of power.

VII.—THE NOONTIDE PRAYER.

We especially emphasize the importance of our daily practice of noontide prayer. This is the golden chain which binds us as workers, to each other and to God. Let us strengthen the tie, and daily meet, "around one common mercy seat."

This circular can be secured from the National superintendent for 60 cents per 100 copies. Will each state evangelistic superintendent order at once, copies sufficient to send one to each county and local superintendent in her state? Thus our efforts will be in harmony, and she will save the labor and expense of printing her own circular.

ELIZABETH W. GREENWOOD,
World's and National Supt.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

NOTICE.

The address of the president of the board of National superintendents is Mrs. Mary F. Lovell, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; that of the secretary of board, Mrs. W. F. English, Quincy, Ill. All communications relating to the board of superintendents should be addressed to either of the above.

M. F. LOVELL, Pres.
W. F. ENGLISH, Sec.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

Mrs. Eva Higgins, president Colorado W. C. T. U., writes: "We are planning and organizing for a prohibition campaign. I believe we shall do a good year's work regardless of the money panic. Our women are studying political economy that they may be better equipped for the work before them. We held a prohibition conference last Tuesday. We had about two hundred present in the afternoon and in the evening ex-Governor John P. St. John addressed an audience of over two thousand on 'Hard Times, the Cause and Remedy.' It was a masterly effort and did much good. Our proposed work of the year will be truly Gospel politics."

The annual address of Mrs. Henrietta H. Forrest, president of the West Philadelphia W. C. T. U. is received and is a model of neatness and beauty in typography and binding, and an honor to the writer and the union to whom her words were spoken. I speak of this particularly, because I am impressed with the benefit that would come to our organization, were such thought and care taken by all local presidents. A thorough resumé of the work of the year, wise deductions therefrom, with helpful suggestions for the coming year, from the president, would give to a union an arrest of thought which would be life, and light, and blessing on their future pathway, and for which they would ever be grateful. The annual meetings of the spring are not far away. What local president will gather and collate and present such a message to her constituency on that occasion? "A word to the wise is sufficient"? By the by, the Y's are just the ones to "do it," and to send report.

Another admirable document is the directory of the Chemung county, N. Y., W. C. T. U., giving the address of general officers and superintendents of departments, with a directory of each local union and all local superintendents. We congratulate the women who have so planned that no one can plead the excuse of ignorance of any name, when her report is not received—and more, that such supply will certainly insure increasingly good work.

Mrs. W. H. Upham, National superintendent of work among lumber-men, remembering that men were boys and boys will soon be men, and in common parlance that some will always be "boys," has addressed "A Letter to 'the Boys' in Lumber Camps," showing the mother heart, and leading them to "think of home and Sunday and heaven."

The question is asked, "What must we do to become a member of the Somerset W. C. T. U.?" The Somerset W. C. T. U. has not been fully organized in the United States and a membership has not been established. Miss Willard's annual address found in the Minutes of the Denver Convention of 1892, contains the plan of the union.

Mrs. Vie H. Campbell, president Wisconsin W. C. T. U. has but lately returned from a tour through her state of several weeks' length, and writes of her increased interest in W. C. T. U. work as she has witnessed the devastations wrought by drink in Wisconsin alone.

Mrs. Caroline M. Woodward, during a trip of seventeen days, held seventeen meetings, distributed two hundred white buttons to railroad men, and in association with Mrs. Smith and Mrs. McIntyre, of Nebraska, equipped twenty-four way cars with literature, which included many choice magazines, and writes: "Railway officials are becoming more and more interested. The General Superintendent of our great system has promised to furnish magazines for such equipment. During the trip several Crusade meetings were attended and a railroad temperance association formed at Edgemont, S. Dakota, and one teachers' institute addressed at Newcastle, Wyoming, which was inspiring, as the speakers knew that each woman might help to frame the government under which she lived and her vote be cast for those who would execute law.

MARY A. WOODBRIDGE.

Treasurer's Corner.

The holidays with all their joyous associations and delightful obligations that sometimes draw so heavily upon our pocket-books, are gone into the oblivious past, and we are here to meet the duties of the present, and plan for our future work that lies so near our hearts and sometimes seems so burdensome. I have often wished we could always think of the moral, the religious, the sentimental phases of the work and not be compelled to think and talk and work for money. But whatever we undertake in this earth-life sooner or later calls for money, either for the materials for the work, or the support of the worker.

To-day I was down in Willard Hall at an all-day missionary meeting and the noon hour was given to the W. C. T. U's to tell of our missionary work. Ladies from the various denominations of the city interested in home and foreign mission work of the churches, were there in large numbers and we were glad to have them hear something of the evangelistic phases of our work. Toward the close of the meeting four splendid looking men arose and told of their conversion in Willard Hall and that at the feet of Christ they had found freedom from the bondage of strong drink and from all sin. I came back to count the dimes with new interest as every one helps to make it possible to spread our work to save these poor victims.

I must give the readers of the Corner a part of a letter just received from our good Mother Thompson:

HILLSBORO, O., Jan. 8, 1894.

Mrs. Barker:

MY DEAR FRIEND AND SISTER:—The words of the Apostle Peter at the "beautiful gate of the Temple," seem to have become the approved response to all efforts in the line of temperance and other solicitations at this "old fort"(of late) "Silver and gold have I none!" So many of our most liberal citizens have suffered the "loss of all things" by the failure of banks and business, that "begging" has become almost iniquitous in this locality, and our Christian temperance women have not yet recovered from the holiday draw upon their exchequers, which you know is the inevitable. Therefore having given you the Crusade, and renewing the spirit thereof at our meeting (in the old church) on the 23d, we concluded to ask at your hands the grace of patience for the present.

As soon as we read your suggestion and the appeal of our beloved chieftain our hearts responded most cordially—but we have been "withstood,"—as was the angel commissioned with the answer to Daniel's prayer.

Perhaps ere the "one and twenty days" pass by our dimes may be forthcoming. We all rejoice in your success, and are praying for the Temple.

Most sincerely yours,
E. J. THOMPSON.

Now such a letter as that did me more good than the money it might have contained, for it showed me that the needs of the National are recognized, and that the love for its aims and its principles would prompt the dimes were they to be had.

One mother in Tennessee writes, "My son, just ready to vote, reads THE UNION SIGNAL faithfully, and oh, lift your heart to God for him, praying that he may vote right."

One good woman from York State sends ten dimes and says, "If I gave a dime for every blessing I would have to pay the whole debt."

A Perfect Liquid Dentifrice.
RUBIFOAM
Harmless as Pure Water.
Fragrant as Sweet Flowers.
Sample Vial Free. Price, 25c.
E. W. HOYT & CO., LOWELL, MASS.

New Suits for 10 Cents

"There are Mrs. Brown's boys all out in new suits again. I never saw such a woman! They are the best dressed family in town, and anybody would think her extravagant if they didn't know that she did it all with Diamond Dyes

The boys' clothes are made from her husband's old ones, dyed over, while her own and the girls' dresses are dyed over, and many of the suits and gowns do not cost her over a dime, the price of a package of Diamond Dyes."

No experience is needed to do good work with Diamond Dyes. They make beautiful colors that are non-fading, and are prepared for all kinds of goods. Their three special Black dyes for different goods, make the blackest and fastest color known.

☞Direction book and 40 samples colored cloth free. WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

Alaska Stove Lifter

Always Cold. Will not get hot even if left in the lid.
Heavily Nickel Plated. Sold by all Stove, Hardware, and House Furnishers, or sent by mail, postpaid, for 30 cents.
—Also the—
ALASKA POKER.
TROY NICKEL WORKS, Troy, N.Y.

THE WONDERFUL MECHANICAL SPELLER.
PIANO MOVEMENT
BEAUTIFULLY FINISHED.

The Child's Best Teacher. Have you seen it? Older folks will find it very amusing. Would you like one? For $1.00 we will send it to your address, charges paid.
KINDERGARTEN MFG. CO.
925 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

DO YOU DESIRE YOUR CHILD TO READ? If so, send 36 cents for a
NEW MODEL FIRST READER.
A beautiful book, with colored illustrations. It delights and instructs. Address
GEO. SHERWOOD & CO.,
303 Wabash Ave., - CHICAGO

485,629 PAIRS SOLD THROUGHOUT THE U. S.
PARKER PAYS THE POSTAGE on his Arctic Sock for men, women, and children. Recommended by physicians and nurses for house, chamber and sick-room. Only sock for rubber boots; it absorbs perspiration. Ask shoe dealer, or send 25c. with size.
J. H. PARKER, 103 Bedford Street, Boston. Dept. 39.

STUDY LAW AT HOME.
Take a Course in the SPRAGUE Correspondence School of Law. (Incorporated.) Send 10c. stamps for particulars to
J. COTNER, JR., SEC'Y, DETROIT, MICH.
No. TELEPHONE BDG.

GLOBE SAVINGS BANK
Corner Dearborn and Jackson Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.
UNDER STATE CONTROL.
INDIVIDUAL AND SAVINGS ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.
SAFETY ▲ DEPOSIT ▲ VAULTS.

AGENTS CAN MAKE FROM $25.00 TO $100.00 a week by canvassing for the best special ties ever offered. No competition. Address, N. Y. & LONDON ELECTRIC ASSN., Kansas City Mo.

A Nebraska sister says in sending ten dimes, "I heartily approve the plan. It will not be felt to pay such a pittance, yet in the aggregate it will accomplish much."

Philadelphia Y's send three dollars as a thankoffering and sign, "Yours for Prohibition." The Y's and the children are our hope.

A worker from Colorado writes that on account of revival meetings they could not hold services on Crusade Day, "but I have spoken to our sisters as I have had opportunity, and I send one dollar and twenty cents as a thankoffering." If all would improve the opportunities how much we could do.

I have a hundred letters before me from which I would like to quote, but my corner is full. Read Miss Willard's letter in every union and give all a chance to help in the good work. HELEN M. BARKER.

Organizers' Corner.

[It is the desire of the editors of THE UNION SIGNAL that this Corner should serve the National Organizers as a sort of Lecture Bureau, and to that end they are invited to send their calendar of appointments long enough ahead to secure engagements in the territory to which they are called.]

The following is the list of National organizers for the present year, and whether W's or Y's they are all accredited public speakers and fully prepared to organize W's, Y's, L. T. L's, or speak to the general public and add to the membership of unions.

For terms and dates address as below:

Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.
Mrs. L. H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.
Miss Frances E. Griffin, 69 Maple street, Chicago.
Mrs. Mary Bynon Reese, Chautauqua, Wash.
Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, 1907 Bush street, San Francisco, Cal.
Mrs. E. A. Blair, 936 Cottage Place, Los Angeles, Cal.
Mrs. Maude L. Green, Manitou Springs, Col.
Mrs. E. Norinne Law, Baraga, Mich.
Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.
Mrs. Delle H. Cox, Newberg, Ore.
Miss Ida Clothier, Manitou Springs, Col.
Mrs. Henrietta Skelton, 132 McAllister street, San Francisco, Cal.
Miss S. C. Harris, Franklin, Va.
Mrs. F. E. W. Harper, Bainbridge street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.
Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.
Miss Frances Ensign, Madison, O.
Mrs. E. A. Kenyon, Townshend, Vt.

We organizers have not all "spoken at once," nor have we made any unbecoming scramble to see how many of us could get into this corner. Indeed, I do not know whether our backwardness is the result of our over-modesty, or a pardonable neglect of the high privileges granted us. I have waited for the others to "speak out," until we seem too long silent. Especially when the whole organization waits "arrectis auribas" to know what we are daily doing.

It is in consideration of this fact that I am impelled from my life-long habit of depending on the spoken word more than the written one, to rise and explain. I have just finished a trip in Kentucky of several weeks. The meetings were always well attended. In no town were we without the sympathy and encouragement of a minister, sometimes of several. If there were in the town a preacher who did not believe in "the thing," and staid at home, he was very lonesome, for most of the town would go out to the meeting. Kentucky, celebrated for its whisky, has many a distillery in its borders, and many men who have made fortunes from the sale of its liquors, but it has many men and women who are brave and strong to combat the evil. In one of the towns my attention was called to the fact that one of the largest distillers in the place was also the largest stockholders in the Keeley Cure. Like the darkey's trap, he caught them "both a-comin' and a-gwine." Perfect harmony exists among the unions as to the Temple, faith in Mrs. Carse, and devoted loyalty to Miss Willard. The women testify to the change of public sentiment in their favor that is increasing each year. I bade farewell to that most hospitable region, with tender hopes and earnest prayers.

I have a few engagements for January, and with February I turn southward to work in Louisiana some weeks, and to be present at Defuniak to conduct there the school of methods during the latter part of the month.

Where is that other organizer? Her report is now in order.

FRANCES E. GRIFFIN.

Our Library Table.

JANUARY MAGAZINES.

THE MAGAZINE OF POETRY, published by Charles Wells Moulton, Buffalo, N. Y., celebrates the opening of its sixth volume by devoting its pages to poets native to or dwellers in the city of Buffalo. The list is surely a goodly one. The magazine is to be issued monthly, hereafter, instead of quarterly, a change to be commended.

THE CHAUTAUQUAN for January opens with a masterly article by Bishop John H. Vincent, entitled "In Italy," accompanied by attractive illustrations. The frontispiece of this issue is a fine view of the Leaning Tower of Pisa. In the department, "Woman's Council Table," Leon Mead gives a history of "Women as Inventors." Margaret W. Noble tells of the workings of a woman's prison where only women keepers have charge, and Hester M. Poole preaches a bright little sermon on "Social Shams."

Dr. T. L. Flood, Editor, Meadville, Pa.

BABYLAND for this month opens with a bright frontispiece entitled, "The Christ Child." The first page reveals the dainty touch of Margaret Johnson, in the exquisite setting she has given Helen A. Steinhauer's pretty finger play, and which will afford baby and mamma no end of good times. "Santa Claus and His Helpers," "The Magic Chest," "A Merry Crew," and "Go Take a Romp With the Baby," are true nursery gems.

D. Lothrop Company, Boston.

LIPPINCOTT'S novelette for January deserves high comment. Harry Willard French, beloved by young people through his "Lance of Kanana," has excelled himself in a love story for older readers. The true heart of the story, however, though it culminates in a love climax, is in a friendship between three men. Their affection for one another reveals a glimpse into the life of the sterner sex not often given in the literature of the day. The plot of the story is admirable, the character sketches unique and the style at once vigorous and pleasing.

J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia, Penn.

For the present state of the flying machine the public is referred to McCLURE'S MAGAZINE for January. Hiram S. Maxim, maker of the Maxim gun, and one of the few inventors of real ability and authority who have been attracted to the subject of aerial navigation, has now nearly completed an air ship that gives great promise of sailing the skies successfully. Some hitherto unpublished letters of Whittier's, written to an intimate friend, Charlotte Fiske Bates, appear in this issue. They are especially important as being the direct expression of that sweet, serene faith in an overruling Providence and the soul's immortality, of which there are such delightful glimpses in Whittier's poems.

S. S. McClure, Ltd., 743 and 745 Broadway, New York City.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE for January marks the beginning of the fifteenth volume. The first great fiction feature for the year is the serial, "John March, Southerner," by George W. Cable, the author of "Old Creole Days." This is the first long novel that Mr. Cable has published in many years, and is a most dramatic story of the new South. The opening chapters reveal Mr. Cable's sympathetic style and clear character-drawing at their very best. Serial stories by J. M. Barrie and George Meredith are announced to begin later. Frederick Keppel, the widely-known print collector, an authority on the subject, has written an entertaining article about Sir Joshua Reynolds, which is illustrated with reproductions of some of the most famous portraits painted by that artist.

Charles Scribner's Sons, New York City.

The familiar face of DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE is as friendly and inviting as formerly in the first issue of 1894. Its exquisitely finished illustrations are alone an education in themselves. "A Ceylon Tea-Farm," by Leslie Kane, is a picturesque word depiction of this far-off country from whence comes provision for our cheering cup that "not inebriates." No less than fourteen cuts make the descriptions very real. "Among the Nurses," by Eva Stanton, will be of interest to all—since none escape the common woe of humanity,—illness and consequent need of care. "The Road to Fame or Fortune" is a serial by Margaret Bisland, now in its second chapter, which tells in easy vein the experiences of a young woman on whom fortune has frowned, in trying to gain fame and wealth in a newspaper office. But DEMOREST'S list is too long to mention here. Its household department, fashion notes and hints, views of the world's progress, and other practical departments are well calculated to meet the varying tastes of the home circles.

W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East Fourteenth street, New York City.

THE QUARTERLY ILLUSTRATOR begins the New Year with a rich array of things beautiful in art. The current number contains articles by W. Lewis Fraser, the art manager of the Century Magazine, who chooses for his theme Albert Edward Sterner, the popular illustrator. A new and interesting feature is introduced. A number of famous paintings are reproduced, and side by side with them are duplicates in which celebrated actresses have posed in the costumes, and with all the accessories of the original pictures, affording a unique comparison. The work of posing and photographing these pictures was done in the studios of THE ILLUSTRATOR, and the results have been copyrighted. The descriptive article accompanying these illustrations is by Will H. Low, whose "Contrasts of Life and Art" is a fitting close to a most charming and delightful number.

Harry C. Jones, 92-96 Fifth Ave., New York City.

AMONG THE BOOKS.

MOTHER GOOSE IN THE KINDERGARTEN is the title of the best Mother Goose book yet published. The rhymes are altered enough to take out, without in anywise spoiling their charm, expressions that have been objected to in these ancient nursery jingles. Each poem (?) is printed in large type and illustrated by the simple outline sketches children love. The author, Fannie S. Bolton, drew the original of these to please her own little ones and found them a decided success. The paper on which the rhymes are printed is a heavy parchment paper that baby cannot tear and the binding is too strong for ruthless fingers easily to harm.

Published by the Kindergarten Literature Co., Woman's Temple, Chicago.

A rare combination of artist work in poetry and decorative illustration lies before us. It is THE OLD GARDEN, by Margaret Deland, whose flowers of song are superbly wreathed in quaint chromo-lithoetchings, by Walter Crane. Each charming song has its special illustration, every one of which is a work of art, conveying the writer's thoughts through the eye to the pleased intelligence. The popular artist has a rich garden for his facile pencil, reveling in æsthetic tints and unique outlines to his heart's content. The reader passing through THE OLD GARDEN, to "Songs of Nature," "Love Songs," "Poems of Life," and "Verses for Children," reads with an enduring delight the rare, sweet verses of the well-known poet-author. A wonderful gift this for the holiday season, sent out by the Riverside Press, Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Cambridge, Mass.

ELEMENTS OF LIFE INSURANCE, by Miles M. Dawson. This compact volume gives the reader a comprehensive analysis of life insurance without burdening the mind with needless technical terms. While upon a scientific subject, it is so written as to be intelligible to the general public and will be most useful to beginners, corresponding to Blackstone's Commentaries in law. Its study will prepare the solicitor for more effective work and aid the expert to distinguish and hold fast first principles while struggling with the difficult mathematical problems of his profession. Its style is simple, thought-inducing. Its scope is not confined to the analysis of rates and reserves only, but covers as well the hitherto neglected territory of contracts, their construction, application, nature and legal effect.

Published by the Independent Printing and Publishing Co., Chicago.

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND, by Lewis Carroll. Published by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., Boston and New York.

As long as the world stands there will be children and as long as there are children there will be a demand for the stories that turn flowers into fairy-folk and invest the dumb things of the natural world with charming personalities. Here and there is found a child who scorns to "make believe," and an occasional parent who does not countenance anything in her children's play or reading that is not strictly "true." Who does not have the profoundest pity for such children—debarred as they are from the loveliest portion of childhood's play-time, the world of healthful imagination. Many a white-haired father and mother looks back with joy to the days when Bean-Stalk Jack, Cinderella and dear old Mother Goose were friends and companions who did them good and never harm. And who that has made her acquaintance does not love gentle little ALICE and revel in her strange ADVENTURES in the WONDERLAND of talking animals? Fresh, bright, pure, not a word or suggestion to sully the white page of a child's mind, it can be recommended with as much safety as mother will place in her little one's hands the light, sweet, wholesome cake from her own oven.

ELI BROWN.

FREE.

The following remarkable statement, to which we direct special attention, is from a Tennessee farmer.

My age is 63. I suffered intensely from catarrh 10 years; dry scabs formed in nostrils, one or both sides stopped up continually, dryness and soreness of throat, hoarseness, intense headache, took cold easily, and had continual roaring, cracking, buzzing and singing in my ears. My hearing began to fail, and for three years I was almost entirely deaf, and continually grew worse. Everything I had tried, failed. In despair I commenced to use the Aerial Medication in 1888, and the effect of the first application was simply wonderful. In less than five minutes my hearing was fully restored, and has been perfect ever since, and in a few months was entirely cured of catarrh.

ELI BROWN, Jacksboro, Tenn.

MEDICINES FOR THREE MONTHS' TREATMENT FREE.

To introduce this treatment, and prove beyond doubt that it is a positive cure for Deafness, Catarrh, Throat and Lung Diseases, I will, for a short time, send (by express) Medicines for three months' treatment free. Address,

J. H. MOORE, M. D., Cincinnati, O.

Spoons and Forks with our "XII" SECTIONAL PLATING ARE THE MOST ECONOMICAL FOR GENERAL USE

·1847· ROGERS BROS "XII"

SPOONS AND FORKS

Are plated THREE TIMES HEAVIER on the three points most exposed to wear.

SOLD BY FIRST-CLASS DEALERS

If you are not sure where the genuine 1847 Rogers Goods can be obtained, address the MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO., Meriden, Ct.

Illustrations of latest designs and valuable information will be mailed you. (Mention this paper.)

QUITE UNUSUAL.

We have from ten to five hundred names of boys and girls, in nearly every city and town, who have sent answers to Harper's Young People Prize Puzzles, but who are not subscribers to that journal. Will YOU take these names, with addresses, in your locality, and ask their owners, or 'their owners' parents, to subscribe? Liberal pay. Particulars free.

HARPER & BROTHERS,
Franklin Square, N. Y.

Send One Dollar for the

LAWTON LAMP STOVE

Will heat a room at a cost of two cents a day.
Will heat a room in ten minutes.
Will fit any Lamp Chimney
One agent wanted in every town and city. Address
LAWTON LAMP STOVE CO.
Chelsea, Mass.

World's Fair Highest Awards
Medal and Diploma on our INCUBATOR and BROODER Combined.
"Old Reliable" Leads them all.

If you are interested in Poultry, it will pay you to send 4 cents in stamps for our 72 page catalogue, giving valuable points on Poultry Culture. Address
Reliable Incubator and Brooder Co. Quincy, Ill.
45 yards High Class Fowls.

DO YOU DRESS

For health, comfort and beauty? Send stamp for my free illustrated booklet, "Dress." Mrs S. W. PIKE, 34 Central Music Hall, CHICAGO.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE-ROLLERS.
Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS,
But save you money on everything you eat, wear or use. Send 8 cts. for full catalogue.
H. R. EAGLE & Co., 68 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

FERRY'S SEEDS

Are just what every sower needs. The merits of Ferry's Seeds form the foundation upon which has been built the largest seed business in the world. Ferry's Seed Annual for 1894 contains the sum and substance of the latest farming knowledge. Free for the asking.

D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Mich.

SEEDS GIVEN AWAY

FOR TRIAL. I have found that the best way to advertise good Seeds is to give away a sample for trial. If you will send me a 2-cent stamp to pay postage, I will mail free one package, your selection, of either Cabbage, Carrot, Celery, Cucumber, Lettuce, Musk or Water Melon, Onion, Parsnip, Pepper, Pumpkin, Radish, Spinach, Squash, Tomato, Turnip, or of Flower Seeds—Aster, Balsam, Celosia, Carnation, Mignonette, Pansy, Phlox, Poppy, Sweet Peas, Zinnia, or Verbena, and one of my 1894 Catalogues. Under any circumstances do not buy your Seeds until you see it, for I can save you money. Over 200,000 people say my seeds are the cheapest and best. I have earliest vegetables on record. Discount and large prizes to agents. 50c. worth of Seeds free with $1.00 order. Write to-day. F. B. MILLS, Box 50 Rose Hill, N.Y.

HATCH CHICKENS BY STEAM

With the Improved Excelsior Incubator.

Simple, Perfect, Self-Regulating. Thousands in successful operation. Guaranteed to hatch a larger percentage of fertile eggs at less cost than any other Hatcher. Lowest priced first-class Hatcher made. Circulars free. Send 6c. for Illus. Catalogue. GEO. H. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

$3 a Day Sure. Send us your address and we will show you how to make $3 a day; absolutely sure; we furnish the work and teach you free; you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully; remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 for every day's work; absolutely sure; don't fail to write to-day.

ROYAL MANUFACTURING CO., Detroit, Mich.

AGENTS MAKE MONEY

Selling the New Moon Embroidery Ring, for all kinds of fancy work, darning and mending. Good profits and a clear field. Sample and full particulars mailed for 25 cents. The Ohio Novelty Co., D35, Cincinnati, O.

Nerve Tonic — Blood Builder

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR PALE PEOPLE

Send for descriptive pamphlet.

50c. per box. 6 for $2.50.

Dr. WILLIAMS' MEDICINE CO., Schenectady, N.Y. and Brockville, Ont.

THE SIGNAL DID IT!

WHAT? Made hundreds of homes of its readers happy with our "Modern Bath." The thousands who saw them at the World's Fair indorse their merit, for which HIGHEST PRIZE was awarded. Send 2c. for catalogue illustrating 18 styles.

THE MOSELY FOLDING BATH TUB CO., 161 K. S. Canal St., CHICAGO.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

FOR MAN AND BEAST. Manufactured by THE J. L. Mott Iron Works 84 to 90 Beekman Street, NEW YORK. 311 & 313 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO.

Catalogue on Application.

Bickford Family Knitter.

Knits everything required by the household, of any quality, texture and weight desired. A. M. LAWSON, 733 Broadway, N. Y. Beware of cheap and worthless knitters.

DOUBLE Breech-Loader $6.00. RIFLES $2.00 WATCHES GUNS BICYCLES $15 All kinds cheaper than elsewhere. Before you buy, send stamp for catalogue to POWELL & CLEMENT CO. 166 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

6 tubs in one. BATH TUBS, Wholesale & Retail. For "Bath Room" & "Portable." Durable, many long used renewed, light, little water. Agents and others send for circulars. E. J. Knowlton, Ann Arbor, Mich.

FREE TO EVERY AGENT!

A wonderful Wire Puzzle sent absolutely free; also catalog of finest agents goods ever offered. Write quick. Ladies goods also. F. Cassgreen M'f'g Co., Chicago, Ill.

SEND TO GOOD & REESE, SPRINGFIELD, OHIO for their beautiful catalogue of roses and shrubs.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL

Subscription Rates for 1893.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly. Price per year	$ .25
Young Crusader, monthly, one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15

Address all orders to WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, The Temple, Chicago.

CALENDARS! CALENDARS!

Half Price!

We have a line of calendars for 1894, unique and attractive, which we are ready to offer at just half their former price:

Poet's	Calendar, formerly	.50	now	.25
Little People's	" "	.40	"	.20
Christmas	" "	.40	"	.20
Onward and Upward	"	.25	"	.12
Play Day Calendar,	"	.15	"	.08
Petit "	"	.15	"	.08

Special Attention

is called to the Poet's Calendar as being best value for the price, also to the Onward and Upward Calendar, which has Scripture texts for each month. We have but a limited number of each, and in order to avail yourself of this opportunity to secure a lovely gift for a friend you must order at once. Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, THE TEMPLE, Chicago, Ill.

ATTENTION! BOYS!

See our display advertisement which cannot fail to interest you. This opportunity is not for your mother or sister, but for you only. We do not offer many premiums but we are confident this nickel watch is just what you need, just what it claims to be, and for the effort it will cost, you can not obtain a better time-keeper. It is really a clock movement in a nickel case, manufactured by the Waterbury Clock Company, small enough to fit in your vest pocket. The smallest boy can wind it and tell accurate time by it. It is not a toy watch nor as small and delicate as your father's, yet will keep perhaps better time than his. Read our offer and notify us at once that you wish to work for one of these watches and we will be ready to fill your order as soon as it reaches us.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, THE TEMPLE, Chicago, Ill.

FREE TO ALL SUBSCRIBERS.

We shall take pleasure in mailing Part One of the reports of the proceedings of the "Parliament of Religions" FREE to any of our subscribers who may be interested in the subject. This will give you an opportunity to examine the work. The remaining numbers can be had on remitting us 90 cents for the entire series.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, THE TEMPLE, Chicago, Ill.

GOOD MUSIC.

Nothing adds to the effectiveness of any meeting so much as good singing. You can enkindle enthusiasm in no better way than by a solo and a rousing chorus. Send for a few copies of the "White Ribbon Hymnal," which will cost 35 cents each, and TRY IT.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, THE TEMPLE, Chicago, Ill.

NEW LEAFLETS.

Three new series are about to be issued:

BUSY DAY LEAFLETS,

FOR OUR LITTLE FOLKS,

and

PICTURE LEAFLETS.

All are in accordance with our effort to put forth less expensive literature.

The first is a series of brief, pointed articles on live topics.

The other series are for children, and cannot fail to take.

Send in orders at once.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, THE TEMPLE, Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

TEACHING

Is this part of your work in the world? And do you teach in Sunday-school? Then you will remember that the "Quarterly

Temperance

Lesson" comes in March and you will want to be fully posted. Send to us in good time for the March issue of The Young Crusader. The supplement will contain the temperance lesson. It ought to be supplied to all Sunday-Schools.

The lesson is prepared by Mrs. Helen G. Rice, whose able pen makes the subject attractive and fruitful. Read our terms:

For 100, 65 cents; 500, $2.75; 1,000, $5. The Young Crusader and the Lesson will be sent, 100 for $1; 500, $4.75; 1,000, $9; 2,000, $15; 5,000, $35; 8,000, $48; postage paid by us. All orders between numbers named at the rate immediately preceding.

Send order in time to distribute in your schools on the Sunday preceding the date of the lesson.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, THE TEMPLE, Chicago, Ill.

TO SHORTHAND STUDENTS.

THE UNION SIGNAL is always seeking to promote the interests and improve the condition of all who come within the radius of its influence.

One of the many ways in which the young of both sexes are to-day benefited is by a knowledge of some business or profession by which they are lifted out of the ordinary rut of life and placed in a position of independence. To thousands a thorough knowledge of shorthand is the short road to success. With this in view we have made arrangements with the National School of Shorthand, at Washington, D. C., whereby any one sending us five new subscribers at $1 per year will receive a receipt for one month's instruction, the price of which is $5. The system taught in this school is the Pitman, the same as used by reporters in both Houses of Congress, the supreme court and all the government departments.

To any one wishing to complete this course without the expenditure of money special terms will be offered by the principal of the school.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, THE TEMPLE, Chicago, Ill.

UNION SIGNAL "GEM CLUB."

A subscriber from Philadelphia writes: "Our union has a UNION SIGNAL Gem Club, which meets at our largest houses once a month, when all present must read or recite the raciest article she has found in her paper. These meetings are wonderfully improving, and add greatly to the interest in the work."

JUST A HUNDRED.

We have just a hundred left of our UNION SIGNAL binders. Do you wish them at $1 each?

MAKE NO MISTAKE.

THE UNION SIGNAL... $1.00 per year	OAK AND IVY LEAF 25c. per year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER 15c. per year
OUR DAY 1894 Bi-Monthly $1.00 per year	Monthly Readings BIBLE READINGS Sub'n price, per year. - - - 12c RESPONSIVE READ'GS Sub'n price, per year, - - - 10c

Woman's Temperance Pub. Ass'n, ...The Temple, Chicago...

Don't be the Axe! Just keep in mind that the grocer or the peddler has "an axe to grind," when he tells you that he has something "as good as" or "the same as" Pearline. There can be but one reason—more profit to him by your use of the substitutes.

But how is it with you? What reason can you have for wanting to take the risk? Certainly not economy—Pearline leads to the greatest economy in every direction—saves the most money, time, clothes and health. If your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 336

THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO.'S DELICIOUS NEW PERFUME,

CRAB-APPLE BLOSSOMS.

Sold everywhere, in Crown stoppered bottles only.

High Arm Warranted Ten Years.

FREE TRIAL in your own home for 30 days without paying one cent in advance; machine to be returned at our expense if unsatisfactory. We take all risks, pay freight, ship anywhere, to anyone, in any quantity at wholesale prices. $65 Kenwood machine, $24.50; $55 Arlington, $20.50; $45 Arlington, $17.50; $35 High Arm Gem, $12. We sell all makes and styles, from cheapest $7.95 to best "Kenwood," $24.50. All attachments free. THREE HIGHEST WORLD'S FAIR MEDALS AWARDED. Over 100,000 now in use. Buy direct from factory. Save agents large profits. Catalogue and testimonials free. Write at once. Address (in full) CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 W. VanBuren St., Dept. A 151, Chicago, Ill.

$25 to $50 per week, to Agents, Ladies or Gentlemen, using or selling "Old Reliable Plater." Only practical way to replate rusty and worn knives, forks, spoons, etc.; quickly done by dipping in melted metal. No experience, polishing, or machinery. Thick plate at one operation; lasts 5 to 10 years; fine finish when taken from the plater. Every family has plating to do. Plater sells readily. Profits large. W. P. Harrison & Co. Columbus, O.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$10.50 Buy the Oxford Improved SINGER Sewing Machine, with a complete set of attachments and guaranteed for 10 years Shipped anywhere on 30 days' trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded. Buy from factory, save dealers' and agents' profit. Write to-day for our LARGE FREE CATALOGUE. Oxford Mfg. Co., 342 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Don't Cost You a Cent!

BOYS AND GIRLS who want an elegant high grade SAFETY BICYCLE FOR NOTHING, send your name and address to H. M. CO., 358 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. O. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

PILES Electrobole gives instant relief, final cure in a few days, and never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. Mailed free. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 695, New York City, N.Y.

AGENTS clear $100 monthly. 100 New Ladies' Specialties for Old and Young. 64 page Illust'd Catalogue FREE. G. L. Erwin & Co., Chicago, Ill. LADY

$3.50 HUNTING CASE GENTS OR LADIES SIZE

FREE A fine 14k gold plated watch to every reader of this paper. Cut this out and send it to us with your full name and address, and we will send you one of these elegant, richly jeweled, gold finished watches by express for examination, and if you think it is equal in appearance to any $25.00 gold watch pay our sample price, $3.50, and it is yours. We send with the watch our guarantee that you can return it at any time within one year if not satisfactory, and if you sell or cause the sale of six we will give you One Free. Write at once, as we shall send out samples for 60 days only. Address THE NATIONAL M'F'G & IMPORTING CO., 334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Attention Boys

We want Every Tem= perance Boy

To work on time during 1894 and to this end we give the opportunity to secure a first-class time-keeper....Just a few hours' work daily and this fine Nickel Watch will be yours....

For Six New Subscribers

to THE UNION SIGNAL we will send it to your address, postpaid.

For Four New Subscribers

and Fifty Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

For Two New Subscribers

and Seventy-five Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

This Offer is for Boys only

Boys who will thank us for this generous offer to own the best pocket time-piece yet made by any Clock Company. Extreme diameter of case 2¼ in.

We believe in an honest thing and so offer Nickel Watches, but if you prefer gilt, which resembles gold in appearance but is likely to wear off, we offer it on the same terms.....As soon as your mind is made up to secure one of these Watches, write to us. This will insure prompt delivery when your order reaches us....Address

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO.

Sent in box, postpaid, to any address, for 60c. Address
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

THE PRESS CLAIMS COMPANY,
618 F STREET, NORTHWEST, WASHINGTON, D. C.
P. O. BOX 463. JOHN WEDDERBURN, Managing Attorney.

☞ Cut this out and send it with your inquiry. ☜

Publisher's Notes.

OUR PHILANTHROPY FUND.

We shall have to ask our friends to cease sending any more names for THE UNION SIGNAL to be provided for from our Philanthropy Fund, for, alas! it is already exhausted, so numerous have been the applications.

TWO NEW Y LEAFLETS.

WHAT IS YOUR VALUE? By Mrs. O. W. Scott, and

INASMUCH. By Miss Ida C. Clothier.

Both invaluable.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

HO! FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

Here are books which cannot be bought in this city or any other at the price we offer them.

CHILDREN'S CARNIVALS.
Over 178 pages.
Over 100 illustrations.
Price, 35 cents.

GOLDEN GEMS.
Over 241 pages.
Over 60 illustrations.
Price, 35 cents.

OUR JEWELS.
Over 108 pages.
Over 70 illustrations.
Price, 25 cents.

TOT, TOM AND TOBY.
Over 100 pages.
Illustrations on every page.
Price, 25 cents.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS.

Mrs. Lathrap's bugle note in the Crusade number of THE UNION SIGNAL is taking form as a National Leaflet, and will soon be ready.

Nothing has yet appeared which so fully carries the Crusade fire into the advanced lines of to-day's work.

You cannot afford to be without it.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

BIBLE AND RESPONSIVE READINGS FOR 1894.

The prospectus for the New Year will be issued early in January, and a rich feast is promised. Names well known in W. C. T. U. lines the world over, are to be found among the contributors to both these monthly readings.

Our list of subscribers should double in the year to come. Send in subscriptions at once.

THE NEW Y MANUAL

by Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, Nat. Supt.

This manual is an encyclopedia of Y work. You need it. Price 25c.

We would call your attention to our CALENDAR OFFER on another page. If you or your friends desire something that will be a pleasure all the year through, send for one of these calendars.

Publisher's Notes.

SIGN YOUR NAME.

When you send an order please sign your name and give your post-office address. If you do not have your orders promptly filled it may be you have forgotten to give your post-office address.

Daily we receive letters containing money and orders without signature to the letter or post-office address. Please read your letters carefully before sending, and see if the name and address is plainly written.

DOES YOUR MINISTER TAKE THE SIGNAL?

At the request of our correspondents we repeat the offer to send THE UNION SIGNAL to all clergymen at fifty cents per annum, being half the regular subscription price. Will not the unions see to it that at this low price THE UNION SIGNAL is in the home of every minister in the land?

WHITE SHIELD MANUAL AND PLEDGE CARDS.

These most valuable adjuncts to our Purity department may once more be obtained from the W. T. P. A.

The manual, prepared by our National and Associate National superintendents is clear, terse, and comprehensive. It contains statement of purpose, plan of organization, constitution, methods of work and general suggestions, in White Shield lines. It need only be seen to be appreciated.

The pledge is issued upon a neat, attractive card, and is the usual five-fold pledge of the White Shield society. It is hoped that the workers in the purity department will push this line of work, and these publications. Order at once.

Price of Manual, five cents; Pledge cards, per 100, fifty cents. Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER.

A TEMPERANCE EIGHT PAGE MONTHLY. What the Children Need.

LOW RATES.

Send for samples of the JANUARY number. Sunday-schools are ordering in large packages. L. T. L. superintendents say they cannot do without it. The children express themselves as delighted with it. We are making special terms to agents, and the boys and girls can earn pocket money in this way. Urge them to write to us for information.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

W. C. T. U. ORDER BOOK.

For use of president in making orders on treasurer. W. C. T. U. Receipt Book for use of Treasurer. Bound in neat form, price, each, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Signal Notes.

An Afro-American League has been organized in the South with three hundred members, all pledged to use every legitimate means to put an end to the crimes which incite lynching. They resolved to petition the legislature to help them to secure trials for all suspected criminals.

An educational work in New York City has attained large dimensions. A course of free lectures to the people is given by the Board of Education in a large number of school buildings scattered over the city. Nearly three hundred lectures on different subjects are given by some of the most prominent men in the city.

The Royal National Lifeboat Association shows that notwithstanding the march of nautical science, there were five thousand wrecks in one year on the shores of Great Britain and Ireland. These wrecks are increasing in number every year. In thirty years there has been a loss of twenty-two thousand five hundred and fourteen lives.

The chief representative of the empress of India in the Southern presidency, as well as the viceroy of India, is not willing to desist from attending any social gatherings where the nautch dance appears, for he does not find anything objectionable to it or the nautch-girls. He was petitioned to do this by a Hindu Social Reform Association.

The New York Wayfarers' Lodge has accomplished a reform which ought to be followed by the establishing of similar lodges in all cities where the problem of the unemployed or of the tramp is attracting attention. The decent, willing men are cared for and given a chance, while the tramp proper is quickly sifted out. The homeless out of work, upon admission, receives a bath, a clean shirt and is put to bed while his clothes are fumigated, for which luxuries as well as for his meals he is expected to work in the woodyard, and is also given time and opportunity to seek work.

Excluding the upper and middle classes, it has been roughly estimated that there are in London two hundred and fifty thousand youths between the ages of fifteen and twenty-one. As many as twelve thousand young men go to London annually in search of work. These young men are surrounded by every temptation to ruin, and it is one of the problems of the day to meet the wants of this class. Institutions of various kinds have multiplied rapidly in this decade but it still remains true, "we have provided for the working classes, churches and schools, but have left it to the devil to find their recreation." The Regent Street Polytechnic and Young Men's Christian Institute is one of the first, largest and most flourishing institutions to provide recreation, education and religious training to the youth of London. Mr. Quinton Hogg, a merchant prince, started a mission for boys in 1864. In two years, he opened his first home for working boys as an adjunct to the ragged school to which he devoted at first every Sunday evening and finally his whole time. The school was so absolutely ragged that the boys often came with a shawl pinned around them to hide their nakedness. The school grew and became a free night school. During that period he sent one thousand five hundred boys to Canada. In ten years he found himself unable to keep the older boys, so they organized an institute which now has an actual paying membership of three thousand five hundred. The object is to provide social, recreative, athletic, intellectual and religious opportunity for them, and to this end classes, the gymnasium, clubs for all sorts of games, for cooking, are well patronized. One great reason for success is that the directly religious teaching is never forgotten. Large Bible classes of one thousand two hundred members testify to the interest of London boys in Bible study. The temperance work is not neglected. Mr. Hogg states as one of the principal reasons for the failure of many other institutions, the endeavor to pander to questionable tastes and amusements, referring particularly to drinking, smoking and billiards.

DO YOU HAVE ASTHMA?

If you do, you will be glad to hear that the Kola plant, found on the Congo river, West Africa, is reported a positive cure for the disease. The Kola Importing Co., 1164 Broadway, New York, have such faith in this new discovery, that they are sending out free by mail, large trial cases of Kola Compound to all sufferers from Asthma, who send their name and address on a postal card. Write to them.

A Good Child

is usually healthy, and both conditions are developed by use of proper food. ▫ The Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is best infant's food; so easily prepared that improper feeding is inexcusable.

IVORY SOAP

99 44/100 % PURE

DON'T ACCEPT IMITATIONS.

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CIN'TI.

Good Wives grow fair in the light of their works, especially if they use SAPOLIO: It is a solid cake of scouring soap used for all cleaning purposes. All grocers keep it.

COPYRIGHT.

LOVE'S LABOR'S LOST by many a woman who strives to please her household and works herself to death in the effort. If the house does not look as bright as a pin, she gets the blame—if things are upturned while house-cleaning goes on—why blame her again. One remedy is within her reach. If she uses SAPOLIO everything will look clean, and the reign of house-cleaning disorder will be quickly over.

PREVENTS LA GRIPPE!

...THE SMITH PATENT ROTARY METALLIC CLOTHES LINE...

Prevents la grippe by enabling you to hang out your entire washing from the covered porch, or door step, thus avoiding wet feet and exposure when overheated. A single trial convinces any one that it is a necessity.

A good income can be made by handling this line. Write at once for territory.

GEORGE B. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.

SOLE MANUFACTURER.

$27.50 BUYS A Good Organ.

This is one of the grandest and most liberal offers ever made. You could not buy the same instrument from an agent or a dealer at twice the price. We sell at manufacturer's price—direct from the factory to the home. We can sell lower than any other manufacturer, because we do the largest direct business in the world. You can save from $50 to $200 by buying from us. There is an actual purchaser of a Cornish instrument in every county in the U. S. Write at once for our new Catalogue—FREE to any address. It contains beautiful colored illustrations, accurate descriptions and lowest prices of the latest and finest styles of Organs and Pianos. It will save you many times its weight in gold.

Organs from $27.50 up. Pianos from $175 up.

FOR CASH, OR ON EASY CREDIT.

All Instruments shipped on trial. No satisfaction no pay. References—Any Bank or Commercial Agency in the U.S.

CORNISH & CO., (Estab. 27 Years.) WASHINGTON, N. J.

AGENTS WANTED for Mother Stewart's new book, "THE CRUSADER IN GREAT BRITAIN." Is creating great interest on both sides of the water. Crowded full of humor, fun, pathos and valuable history. Just the book that agents like to handle. Price $1. Address M. CAMPBELL, Springfield, Ohio.

AGENTS WANTED to sell the "Wells Passage Indicator" for giving Bible Readings, of which John G. Woolley says: "'The Wells Passage Indicator' enables any one to string together a number of texts, and give them to an audience almost as though they had been printed for the occasion." Address WELLS PASSAGE INDICATOR CO., 1102 The Temple, Chicago.

At ¼ Price Watches, Guns, Buggies, Harness, Sewing Machines, Organs, Bicycles, Farm Tools, Safes, etc, List FREE. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

FREE MUSIC 44 pieces, latest Sheet Music and charming illustrated Magazine 3 months; all for 10 cents; send silver dime. American Nation, Box 1729, Boston, Mass.

WE WANT YOU to distribute circulars, samples, etc., in your locality for our syndicate of big advertisers. $3 to $5 per thousand. CASH PAID. No canvassing. Enclose stamp. DISTRIBUTING BUREAU, P.O. Box 1925. New York City.

SALESMEN WANTED to sell our goods by samples to the wholesale and retail trade, sell on sight to every business man or firm; liberal salary, money advanced for advertising and expenses. Permanent position. Address with stamp, KING MFG. CO., A 55 Chicago, Ill.

If out of order, use Beecham's Pills.

CONVENIENT FOR WEST-SIDE RESIDENTS

The new Pennsylvania Lines' Station, at West Madison and Rockwell Streets. Tickets to all points East—to Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati and the South at lowest rates. Baggage checked to destination. All trains stop to take on and discharge passengers. For particular information call upon D. J. Shine, Agent, Penna. Lines' Passenger Station, West Madison Street, or H. R. Dering, Ass't Gen'l Passenger Agent, 248 South Clark Street, Chicago.

Kernels.

Age imprints more wrinkles in the mind than it does in the face.

There is but one failure, and that is, not to be true to the best one knows. To us and to our race there is but one failure, and that is sin.

The darkest hour in the history of any young man is when he sits down to study how to get money without honestly earning it.—Horace Greeley.

We ought not to acquiesce in the shadows which are only around us because we do not hear, or hearing, do not heed, God's call into the sunshine.

When God's vail of adversity is upon us, we should not be like the chaff which flies into the face of the thresher, but like the precious grain which lies at his feet.

There is nothing more pleasing to me than to see young men in the bloom of life break the ranks of the enemy and enlist in the service of Christ.—Matthias Ambrose.

Friend: "Is it not remarkable that, with the thousands of authors in the country, the price of writing paper does not go up?"

Struggling Author (gazing at returned packages): "N-o, but I should think stamps would go up."

Sunday-school Teacher—Yes, Johnny, and I hope that one day you will have a mansion in the skies. Johnny—And I hope I shan't, I've had all that kind of mansion I want. Guess you didn't know we'd lived in the upper flat of an apartment house.—Boston Transcript.

School Examiner:—(Who notices a backwardness in history): Who signed Magna Charta? (No answer). Examiner—(more urgently): Who signed Magna Charta? (No answer). Examiner—(angrily): Who signed Magna Charta? Scapegrace—(thinking matters are beginning to look serious): Please, sir, 'twasn't me, sir!

A loud, rasping and impatient voice rang out from the kitchen. It was the voice of the new cook.

"Mrs. Billus!"

"Well, Mary?"

"You told me to bile the warter, mem, and I've been bilin' it an hour and a half. I want to know if you think it's done yet?"

"What have you named your baby, Rastus?"

"Sam Pro Tem Johnson, sah."

"What is the Pro Tem for?"

"To show that the name is only temporary, sah. We kind o' thought Sam might like to choose his own name when he growed up, sah, so we put Pro Tem in as a warning to de public."

It was a South Boston schoolboy whose bad behavior had led the master to depart from his accustomed rule and resort to a flogging. The next day the boy "brought a note." The master read it as follows: "Licking don't do this boy no good—talk to him." Peculiarities about the epistle led to inquiries; it turned out to have been written by the boy.—Boston Traveller.

The Burman Bible, printed in Rangoon, costs four rupees, or $1.44 a copy. The Missionary Union, availing itself of modern processes of photo-engraving, has had each page of this Burman Bible photographed on a reduced scale, and plates made from these by means of which a Burman Bible can now be printed in Boston, so as to be sold for one rupee, and the New Testament for about eighteen cents. This is a triumph of modern science which will be a great blessing to Burma.—Helping Hand.

She: "Do you believe one's fate can be read in the hand, as people say?" He: "To a certain extent. Give me your hand, for instance, and I can tell you that my fate will be sure to be a happy one."—Chicago News Record.

Miss Oldun: "Yes, indeed, children are a great trial. You love your little Mamie here and think you couldn't do without her. But if you had never had her you wouldn't know the difference."

Little Mamie (with startling emphasis): "Well, I guess I'd know the difference!"

A good general calls into active service every part of his military force, and uses each for the accomplishment of the work for which it is best adapted. So also should every pastor utilize all the church forces at his command. There is not one soldier of Christ to whom appropriate work should not be assigned. There is no ungifted or unarmed one in the ranks of his army, and He teaches the hands of each to war and their fingers to fight. Each, therefore, should hear the bugle call, and go forth to the help of the Lord against the mighty.—The Treasury.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XX.—No. 4.] CHICAGO, January 25, 1894. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

Ursula D. Henrick
1029 16th St.
NW

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The opium commission is in session in Umballa, India.

Miss Helen A. Shafer, president of Wellesley College for four years, died of pneumonia last Saturday.

Authoritative dispatches from Rio Janeiro, Saturday, state that the backbone of the rebellion is broken.

News from India indicates that financial matters are in a strained and depressed condition in that empire.

Nickel-in-the-slot machines have been placed in the same class as lotteries by a grand jury at Winona, Minn.

The tariff bill is still under discussion in the House, and employers are reducing wages, taking it for granted that the bill will pass.

Emperor William opened the Prussian Diet at Berlin, last week, by a speech which promised help for agricultural and financial interests.

The Chinese government has agreed to pay an indemnity of forty thousand dollars to the families of two murdered Swedish missionaries.

The Dresden Diet, by an overwhelming vote, has rejected the motion of the socialists for universal and equal suffrage at the Diet elections.

The world's committee of the Y. M. C. A. has just issued a call for the thirteenth international conference to be held in London, May 31 to June 9.

Paris was the point of meeting for the International Sanitary Congress, January 24. The United States was represented by three physicians appointed by the President.

Stockholders of the Nicaragua Canal Company have agreed to a plan of reorganization, by which a new company will be formed, with a capital stock of twelve million dollars, to push the work.

By the bill introduced in Congress last week, the Columbian Museum of Chicago will have added treasures in the shape of the exhibits of the department of state from La Rabida and the Government Building.

Ten thousand dollars is recommended as an appropriation by the House committee on labor, to enable the commissioner of that department to report in detail concerning the effect of the use of machinery upon labor.

The gold reserve in the United States Treasury is now at the lowest point ever reached. In view of this Secretary Carlisle has announced his intention to issue fifty million dollars, five per cent, ten year government bonds.

The Senate sub-committee is still investigating Hawaiian matters, to ascertain the real connection of the United States marines with the ex-Queen's deposition, and the steps taken by President Cleveland and his advisers to restore the Hawaiian monarchy.

Governor Mitchell's order to the Second Battalion state militia to occupy Jacksonville, Fla., January 23, for the purpose of preventing the proposed prize fight, caused the sporting club managers to change their plans and seek another location which was not made public.

A horde of cruel and murderous slave dealers numbering 4,000, who have terrorized the West Coast of Africa, has been finally dispersed by a troop of British frontier police, who captured all the guns and ammunition, rescuing two hundred abused slaves, most of whom were women and children.

A happy incident in connection with the one hundred and eighty-eighth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin last week was the payment by the treasurer of the "Franklin fund," of $329,300.48 to Boston's city treasurer for the purpose of erecting and equipping the "Franklin Trades School."

ADDITIONAL and valuable Nutshell items will be found on page 14.

HON. JOHN R. MULVANE, president of the Bank of Topeka, Kansas, speaks in unqualified praise of the effect of prohibition on the financial condition of his state. One great evidence of its prosperity he gives is, that forty-four counties possessing poor-houses and farms are without a pauper, and in thirty-seven counties at the last term of the district court there were no criminals for trial.

FRANCE has fallen into line, and the beginning of woman's suffrage has been heralded from within its borders. The French Senate, by a vote of one hundred and thirty-two to eighty-four, on January 20, bestowed the right on women engaged in business to vote for tribunals of commerce. This is simple justice, and will prove the entering wedge for the granting of larger and more generous privileges in the future.

THE associated press last week circulated an item from Washington, Iowa, which received very obscure positions in the daily papers, but which rejoiced the hearts of all temperance workers. Being brief and pointed, we give it entire: "At a recent revival at Wellman a notorious saloon-keeper was converted. To impress the public with his sincerity he extended a general invitation to a salvation bonfire in the public park at three o'clock. When the hour arrived nearly one thousand persons were gathered around a pile composed of billiard and gaming tables, four counters and sideboards, and other fixtures of the ex-saloon-keeper's saloon. Prayers were offered by local clergymen and the pile was fired by the owner. While it blazed he made a temperance talk to the crowd. The public schools had been closed so that the children might witness the object lesson."

FOR the first time since the civil war the United States proposes to issue new bonds for meeting the current expenses of government. Secretary Carlisle has issued an official circular offering fifty million dollars of bonds running ten years and drawing five per cent interest. That means an annual interest of two million five hundred thousand dollars. This is rather disheartening to those who have watched so joyfully the rapid decrease of our national debt and who expected to see it all or nearly wiped out by the end of this century. It is questioned by many legal minds whether the Secretary of the Treasury has the authority to issue government bonds for the purpose of running the government, as the law of 1875 calls such a proceeding, "an act to provide for the resumption of specie payment." There has been a lively bidding for the bonds, one New York man having offered to take up the entire amount. Western bankers look upon the issue as of ephemeral relief only.

JUST as we go to press comes the first copy of the long-expected Woman's Signal, the new organ of the British Women's Temperance Association. A cursory glance displays many interesting and valuable contributions, aside from the editorials and New Year's message by Lady Henry Somerset and Annie E. Holdsworth. We have room for one paragraph from the able editorial which outlines the policy of the new paper: "The Woman's Signal, flashing its light from 'humanity's capital,' the highest point of observation that the world affords, hopes to help forward the concerted action of good women, not only in our own land, but in other lands. Its signal will be that of the World's W. C. T. U.: 'Agitate, educate, organize.' Its shining will, by God's blessing, help to dispel the coldness of inaction and the darkness of despair. We would put 'a light in the window' for the forgotten and forlorn, and among the brilliant luminaries and broad search-lights of London's journalism, we hope that some day grateful hearts that we have helped may say, when they think about The Woman's Signal, 'How far that little candle throws its beams.'"

THE internal revenue bill has not been presented to Congress up to the time of our going to press, but it seems to have been agreed upon by at least the Democratic members of the ways and means committee. So far as these members are concerned, the income and corporation tax is a finality. All incomes above three thousand five hundred dollars are to be recorded by the internal revenue collector and all above four thousand dollars are to be taxed two per cent. The tax on salaries is to be paid by the employer. The penalties for failing to make correct returns are a double tax, fine and imprisonment. It is estimated that there are only eighty-five thousand persons in the United States thus taxable. Corporations are to pay two per cent tax on all income, however large or small, and this amount is to be deducted from the dividends of stockholders. It is not probable that Congress will adopt the report of the committee, at least not without modifications, for it is clearly against the spirit of our institutions and no act of a Democratic Congress could make its party more unpopular in the people's eyes.

AT the fourteenth annual convention of the National Farmers' Alliance, held in Chicago last week, the most remarkable feature was the adoption of a plan for the union of five most important agricultural associations, under the name of the Farmers' Union. It is reasonable to expect that this new union will receive the indorsement of every farmer in the country, as it looks to the amelioration of the loneliness and isolation of the farmer's domestic life, as well as assigning him more prominent positions in our social and political structure. It is to be a non-secret union, and recognizes the principles of equality in the sexes, as women will be admitted to membership under the same conditions as men. While the union is to be strictly non-partisan, it will, through calm and thorough discussion and through the Australian system of balloting, obtain an expression of the sentiments of its members on the leading questions of the day, such as the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, the tariff, food adulterations and the monetary system. We hail the advent of this union of the agricultural interests of our great country. We believe in the farmer, and desire his more effective contact with our public affairs. Too long has he been a silent factor in our body politic.

MASSACHUSETTS papers, within the past weeks, have been calling attention to the case of a little Italian girl, at the north end of Boston, whose father had consented to have her marry a middle-aged Italian man in consideration for a sum of money. The child was in the public school, and was herself obliged to make out the application for the marriage license, as neither her father nor the prospective bridegroom could write. She looked about nine years of age, and the officers refused to issue the license. The Italian priest also refused to perform the marriage ceremony, and the child herself said she would rather stay with her mother than be married. This circumstance has opened the eyes of the Massachusetts citizens to the fact that, in accordance with the common law of England, a girl of twelve and a boy of fourteen can contract marriage in Massachusetts, provided the consent of the parents be given. It is easy to see that that consent might often be falsely sworn to, as indeed it has been—but even if that were not possible, it is terrible to think that vicious and irresponsible parents have such power to wreck the lives of their children, and perpetuate a system of criminal marriage. Unfortunately Massachusetts is not the only state where this condition of affairs obtains. In many if not most states of the Union the legal age of marriage is as above stated. Is it strange we cannot raise the "age of protection" when the age of marriage is so scandalously low? Is it not time the ballot was placed in the hands of women, that these wrongs may be righted?

IN EXTREMIS.

BY JOSEPH COOK.

Better to go than stay,—
I would not live alway;
If pardon through heaven's grace is won,
Be heaven this hour begun.

Almighty God, give peace,
In swift or slow release;
My empty, frail, poor hand in Thine,
Thy sight and strength are mine.

The glory of Thy deeds,
The highest heaven exceeds:
Thyself, Thyself more glorious still,—
My bliss to do Thy will!

The world is out of joint;
Swift messengers appoint
To set it wholly right, and I
In serving them will die.

And after death my soul,
As the vexed ages roll,
Do Thou as ransomed spirit send Man's miseries to mend.

Great mansions in the sky
Hast Thou for loyalty:
Life, Hope, Peace, Strength, Atonement now,
My all in all art Thou!

Boston, Mass.

THE MEMBER-AT-LARGE.

I.

BY HELEN CAMPBELL.

The club was conservative. There was no doubt about that. Until women's clubs became so distinctly the fashion that it would have seemed a breach of propriety not to form one, the town, meaning by the town its social leaders, had rather frowned upon them. There was something in the nature of a guild formed by a busy woman who wanted the working women to know each other better, and who had brought in a dressmaker or two, and various girls and women who entered it with deep suspicion but had grown to believe heartily in its mission. But this was on a back street, and socially, a thing of absolutely no importance. What was wanted was something that could be reported in the society column of the papers, and be another testimony to the active interest felt by the fashionable people in what women everywhere seemed bent upon doing.

To this end then the club was organized, with dues so high that only the well-off inhabitants could even think of joining, and with committees for each of the nine months it would meet. Art and literature, science, music and all the usual list were appointed, and the chairman of each found her hands full in apportioning subjects and making as creditable a show as her resources permitted. And it was surprising how really creditable it proved. A bright woman who thinks at all is certain to make an entertaining paper, and these papers were all entertaining, so that the club swelled with gentle pride. To write about a Wagner opera, the Russian school of painting, or French literature of the eighteenth century, gave charming intellectual employments with no risk of offending anybody. But when it came to the philanthropic committee, that was another matter, and the chairman sat up nights wondering what they had better talk about.

Associated charities they had not, for the town was not only too small but too comfortably well off for more than an occasional poverty-stricken family to show itself. Each church had its own, and each church was a trifle jealous of the interference of any other, insisting that old-fashioned ways were best, and that poverty, except in case of long sickness or sudden disaster, was, on the whole, totally unnecessary. With these views it was difficult to discuss the latest methods in work of this nature without giving offense to somebody, and yet the chairman could not consent to let her committee compromise on a musicale or some other pleasing evasion of the plain call to action. One enthusiastic member suggested a paper on soup houses, as this could be made very entertaining by descriptions of the people who came. But as the town needed no soup house, having nobody in its limits who required feeding in this particular fashion, it was decided at once that something more practical ought to be taken, though what its nature should be grew more and more impossible to settle.

It was at this point that they all adjourned to the regular fortnightly meeting, postponing any conclusion as to their own action, and happily so, as at this meeting the matter settled itself. For the appointing committee moved that a new arrival in town, a guest who would spend the winter, and it might be longer, should be made a member-at-large with all the privileges of the club, and requested at once to prepare a paper on what they had been told was her specialty—work among the poor of a great city. The chairman of the philanthropic committee beamed on her associates, for here was the way out of all difficulty, and folded her hands with the air of a woman who has done her utmost, and of whom nothing more is to be expected. She had lost this look when, a fortnight later, the new member-at-large, a stout and comfortable looking woman of middle age, took her place on the platform and looked about interestedly on the hundred faces before her. And this is what she read, with no idea that she represented the solution of a problem or that she was filling a breach more troublesome than any before encountered in the history of the club. Others came which later she filled with equal unconsciousness, and this is what she read, as she smiled upon them all:

"I trust the members of the woman's club will not regard it as taking a light-minded advantage of the situation if they find me giving my share in the subject for to-day after a theory of my own. Far back in the days of my youth, I remember searching out the meaning of the phrases, a 'congressman-at-large,' which I had at first conceived as something in the nature of a lunatic-at-large. With full explanation came the conviction that not the president himself was half so much to be envied. Elected by the state as a whole, bound by no petty district, but free as air, happy the congressman who could speak his full mind, with no shadow of frowning constituents in the background, no apprehension as to whether Jonesville or Tinkumville would vote or not vote for his reëlection.

"There can be in a republic only one other distinction in the same line as this most fascinating position, and in conferring that upon me you give me the opportunity of a lifetime. To be member-at-large of a woman's club releases one forever from all responsibility as to course of conduct or thought. In fact, the very title 'at-large,' is an instant demand for revolt against fixed lines, and a fluid treatment of the most solid subject. That I have then been asked, as my share of your topic to-day, to say something on work in cities naturally, you will see, compels me, if true to the title I bear, to deviate as far as possible from what may be expected of me, and to give, if not the opposite pole, whatever may chance to lie between, certain that you will accept this course not only as the result of your own action, but as a necessary demonstration of the obligations of the position.

"In full earnest, now, let me say that after long experience of all that is implied in work in cities, with the perplexing and often baffling problems it includes, it is perfectly plain that far more than our old definition of charity is involved. There were centuries in which the mere fact of giving was held to save the soul of man or woman whose purse-strings were open. That the slightest personal responsibility for the conditions to be relieved could exist, never entered the mind of giver or receiver. It has remained for our own day and the gospel of evolution, with all its bearings and compulsions, to reorganize absolutely our idea of charity, and prove that lopping off the branches of this upas tree of poverty, with its misery and want and crime, will be useless so long as the roots remain untouched. To extirpate causes we know now to be the first and chiefest need. To this end the great congress of charities and corrections meets yearly, and has taken its place as a matter of national importance. In every city, large or small, there are certain problems practically identical. The great seaport faces a hundred, where the quiet inland one may have but ten, but at the bottom for each and all is the same need.

"It is prevention we want, and every earnest worker in the associated charities, every student of social problems, every lover of progress, faces, sooner or later, the question, How shall this be brought about? Till this frame of mind is reached, there is no real progress. A great institution, nobly endowed, nobly administered, whether it be orphan asylum or hospital for lunatic, idiot or the sick, is so solid a testimony to the helpful spirit of the century that to ask why it is in existence seems an impertinence. Yet the day is coming when not the few alone, but the many will know that its existence is not our honor, but our shame, and that, save in most limited degree, it has absolutely no right to a place in the social scheme.

"If every child born into the community had found provided for it from the beginning a training that developed every power in the fullest, most harmonious fashion, there would be small need of prison or reformatory, asylum or home, save for that small proportion of hopelessly diseased, imbecile or homeless children, who must be our charge till a few more generations have educated the parents of those to come, and heredity does better for our future than our present. In giving to each child of men the work for which their faculties best fit them, we are giving them the surety of the happiness which is the natural right of every soul. From the baby who wants to 'help mamma,' and whose best growth is in being allowed to help, to the little gutter-snipe or street Arab who, because no one has ever wanted his help or given the restless hands any reasonable task, is presently a candidate for the reform school, each and all have the same need. But it is something more than being given an occupation or a trade. It is the being taught what happiness and satisfaction may lie in the perfect doing of an appointed task. Untrained hands, undisciplined minds, starved and undeveloped souls—these make up the problem of poverty; and to render escape from it even less possible, our present system adds that curse of modern civilization, the tenement house, and with it the sweating system, a working day for its victims stretching often far into the night, and a starvation wage.

"All this the cities know. For the untrained worker it is the normal condition. The trained, save in some great financial disaster, escape, but even for them it becomes a question if existence is to mean unending toil for mere subsistence.

"Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness—this was our ideal in the beginning and the meaning at the heart of each word is the lesson the philanthropic worker is first to learn, and having learned, to teach in such fashion that a new day may dawn—a day in which joy may have its place at last, and the sorrow born of ignorance and man's blunders flee away into that darkness that gave it birth."

Madison, Wis.

(To be continued.)

VICTORY FOR THE VETO.

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

"What came ye out for to see?" was the question that Sir Wilfrid Lawson asked the immense audience on the platform of Covent Garden theatre, and the answer seemed not far to seek, for the immense concourse of people of one heart and of one mind had come to witness the triumph of a cause for which they had worked well and loyally for many a past year. It was not difficult to understand why the temperance party had triumphed when we looked into the faces of that multitude, and saw the sturdy stuff of which they were made; for earnest eagerness and steady purpose were the trade-marks that stamped the majority. There was a pathetic side to that scene that probably only came home to the hearts of those who had toiled long in a cause that seemed well-nigh hopeless a few years back. The silver heads of the veterans who but a short time since had stood well-nigh alone,—the tones of those who had cried in the wilderness, "Make straight the way of the Lord,"—spoke of the long and weary battle, the days of conflict and of disappointment in which they had grown gray, and emphasized the fact that ere their eyes were dim they had seen the dawning that told of the coming day.

That the principle of the veto bill is in harmony with every progressive movement that has marked this age must remain an undisputed fact. It stands not alone as a temperance measure, but as a necessary outcome of that recognition of the people's will that has brought the extended suffrage in the parish councils bill; and we venture to assert that the very crudeness of the measure has its advantage in that it places it in the ranks not alone of a bill for temperance reformation but as a distinct liberation from unfair oppression.

But however much we understand the importance of great gatherings, enthusiastic receptions and eloquent speeches, the significance of the manner in which the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Premier received the deputation that waited on them from the temperance party on the following day, was of far deeper import. It would be impossible to doubt the sincerity of the words spoken at that meeting, and it was evident that the demands of the temperance people were no longer ignored, but were considered of primary importance. Possibly no more weighty words were spoken than those uttered by Mr. Gladstone when he said:

I am far from supposing that the introduction of the popular principle of local option and the veto of the population is all that you desire in regard to legislation on the subject of the liquor traffic. On the contrary, it seems to me that there is much that requires to be done, and without the doing of which your work—for it is your work—will not have been fully and satisfactorily accomplished, but I am persuaded that in respect to this bill it would be a grave, and, perhaps, a vital mistake to give to it that universality which some of its advocates may at first sight be tempted to desire, or even to hamper the main proposition of the bill by adding to it other propositions which might in themselves be most valuable, but which would be out of place in this measure.

The temperance reform in this country has an assured future that cannot be marred by the money of millionaires, the influence of those in high places, or the power of social customs.

In the proposals made by Her Majesty's government for placing the control of the liquor traffic in the people's hands, three principles are involved, which in the nature of the case must characterize every progressive movement. The first is that the good of society, as a whole, is of incalculably more importance than the personal advantages of any member of society,—that individual demands must always make way for the immeasurably higher consideration of the benefit of the community. On the principle that every member of the social compact must be protected from possible injury by any member is based the rationale of every law on any statute book. The man who steals a watch is not imprisoned for that act alone, but to make safer all the watches owned by all the people of this realm; and it is not for the benefit of a single life, or of a single home that we would give the people power to banish, at their will, the licensed houses, but that all lives and homes in the United Kingdom may be made more safe by such protective power.

Men and women are not temperance reformers simply because they cease to drink intoxicating liquors, but because they have gauged the evil, have seen the misery, heard the cry of captive millions, and have determined to see enacted laws that shall put rich and poor upon one level, and shall consider the welfare of the people before the pocket of the publican. Hence, by as much as the whole is larger than a part, we urge the government to seek the greatest number's greatest good by relegating the most momentous problem now before the public to the people's own decision.

In the second place, we contend that the spirit of this legislation is in harmony with every progressive measure that stands on our parliamentary records since the beginning of the century. The spirit that has framed the liquor traffic control bill is the same that inspired Clarkson and Wilberforce to consider the sacredness of human liberty before the commercial interests of the slaveholders; that sustained Cobden and Bright in their great struggle for the repeal of the corn laws, in which they recognized that the right of all to live was greater than the privilege of the few to gain; that pressed the claims of the extended franchise in the reform bill upon Lord J. Russell and Sir Robert Peel; that led Lord Shaftesbury into the battle for the freedom of the enslaved operatives, and the release of the children of England from a bondage that was then upheld as a necessary part of "freedom of contract" and "individual right"; the spirit that gave the agricultural laborer the vote; that enacted free education for all; that has recognized the ability of the people to elect their representatives to govern the largest city in the world, and will soon extend this principle to the rural districts through the parish council's bill. Is it wonderful that the whole trend of such legislation should have led on, by a sequence at once natural and inevitable, to a measure for dealing with the greatest evil this country knows on the principle of granting to those districts which it affects the power to banish it if such should be their will? We remember that it is ever true that while "the letter killeth, the spirit giveth life."

To the argument based upon the solidarity of society and the evolution in legislation, I would add the third—which is if possible of paramount importance—that the word "people" means all the people. It is perhaps difficult to grasp the exact definition of the word "people"—it has so long been used to designate man only whenever the power to enact laws is concerned; although the women have had no reason to complain so far as having accorded to them their full share in the penalties. I do not here raise the question as to the limits that are to be placed on women's power, but I do here maintain that the strength of the demand for local control lies in the fact that it is essentially a measure for home protection and that the vote of women will be the enacting clause of the direct veto bill.

Proofs of this statement are not far to seek. The Licensed Victuallers' Gazette, when first it poured forth the vials of its wrath upon the proposals of the government, said they would not object so much if the votes were taken among men only, but women would vote from "sentimental reasons." The recent convention of liquor dealers in the state of Michigan declared that the municipal vote which the last legislature conferred on women was intended as a direct blow to their trade; the same class in Colorado have declared that the full suffrage granted there to women within the last few months is infinitely more harmful to them than the passing of a prohibition law; and the same declaration comes to us from New Zealand. The women will vote not from sentimental reasons, but reasons of sentiment;—the love of home and children, the faithfulness of the wife, the tenderness of the sister, will be the canvassers that will secure votes against the everlasting foe of home, comfort and peace, this legalized temptation that is set along our streets.

Shall woman have no voice in the framing of the law because she does not endanger her life on battle-fields? Those who advance this threadbare argument forget that woman faces death with deliberation and a fortitude that equals, if not excels, the loftiest heroism each time that she descends into the valley of anguish to give the world its sons and daughters. And thus we support this measure because we believe it is based on justice, and that this power given to women is the recognition of their right to share in the protection of their children, not only within but beyond the boundary of the garden gate.

I have been told that when the yellow fever was raging in Memphis, Tenn., some years ago, and there was one dead behind almost every door in that beautiful city of the South, the cry of the people in prayer-meetings, that were held alike within the walls of church and home, was, "Oh, God, send us the white gift of Thy frost." For they knew that when the cold, clear frost swept down from the North it would kill the fever germs. But winter set in late that year, so they watched long, and hope had well-nigh died, when, as the city looked out one morning from its awful vigils, behold, like a cool and soothing hand, the crisp, white frost lay over the earth, which, when they saw it, made the people weep as they fell upon their knees with thankful prayers. What need is there, my brothers, that any should tell us of the fever fires that burn in the veins of England's body politic? What need to say more about the piteous vigils kept by the weak, the wretched and oppressed who listen for the steps so welcome once, so dreaded now? The epidemic widens with every passing hour, the fever reports itself in crimes that are the necessary outcome of the alcohol delirium; it lights the incendiary's torch, deals the random knife stroke, fires the promiscuous bullet, causes the destruction of the defenceless and wreaks its most relentless cruelty on those it loves the best—and the voices of the people, hardly knowing what they ask for, cry out to heaven, "Grant us the white gift of the frost."

I thank God, I believe, that the shower shall soon descend like snowflakes from the sky, noiseless and steady, from the gentle hands of women, and shall bring healing to the nation's fevered heart. The corn law rhymer, Ebenezer Elliott, sang in those days when hunger held the people in a grasp not more cruel than the vice which enslaves them now:

"When wilt Thou save the people?
  Oh, God of mercy, when?
The people, Lord, the people,
  Not thrones nor crowns, but men!
God save the people: Thine they are,
  Thy children, as Thine angels fair.
From vice, oppression and despair,
  God, save the people!"

How does God save the people? The miracle of history teaches us that He does this by giving them the power, through the machinery of government, to save themselves. On the magnificent triumphal arch that opens the center of the exquisite peristyle that girds the Court of Honor to the great Lake Michigan in that fair White City—the most matchless dream of this century, a vision of all the glories of Greek art and the splendor of the Renaissance—are inscribed these words: "To the bold men, their names remembered or forgotten, who first explored, through perils manifold, the shores, lakes, rivers, mountains, valleys and plains of this new world. A few dared, toiled and suffered; myriads enjoy the fruits." It shall be written in the pages of history, in the golden characters of a people's gratitude, that a few dared, toiled, suffered, in this as in all reforms, and over the triumphal arch that leads ever to the wider outlook of a nation's weal, shall be inscribed the names of all great statesmen, loyal to the people's cause and to the eternal principles that govern the welfare of humanity.

Eastnor Castle, Eng.

ANOTHER LITTLE SERMON.

Macaulay, Penn and Whittier.

BY SAMUEL JAMES CAPPER.

During the night watches I have been reading a file of the Echo, and my eye and heart were arrested by the lovely passage from Macaulay about his mother. It may not be known to all your readers that she was a Quaker lady whom his father, Zachary Macaulay—the veteran enemy of the slave trade and slavery—married when he was somewhat late in life.

A whole generation of men has passed away since the versatile statesman and brilliant historian was a central figure on the stage. Though he was only born in 1800, nine years before Mr. Gladstone, he was a leading Whig statesman when Mr. Gladstone was still only the "rising hope of the Tory party," and was making his first speech in Parliament. As is well known Macaulay's wonderfully brilliant history is disgraced by virulent personal attacks against several distinguished men, notably against the reformer and statesman and saint, the founder of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania—William Penn. The absolute baselessness of those charges was first pointed out in a modest brochure by a young man then unknown to fame, who lived to become the Rt. Hon. William Edward Forster.

They were subsequently dealt with, with legal acumen, and proved to be absolute lies by T. E. Paget, who, if I mistake not, married one of the Rathbones and is still a metropolitan magistrate.

Soon after the appearance of the famous history, alas! some of us are old enough to remember the enormous sensation it occasioned throughout the nation—a young man came over from Philadelphia with a letter of introduction to the historian. Macaulay with ready hospitality invited him to breakfast, and the two sat and chatted long together in the library. In the course of the conversation the visitor said: "En passant, Mr. Macaulay, you deal out hard measure to the founder of our state."

"Do I?" replied the historian; "well, there is my authority," reaching down from one of the shelves a volume of political tracts of the period of the reign of William III.

The visitor opened the volume, and his eye was at once arrested by a prefatory notice by the editor that although interesting as throwing a sidelight upon the history of the period, these tracts were so defaced by party spirit as to be utterly untrustworthy.

When confronted with this very startling evidence from his own witness, Macaulay said laughingly: "Ah, well, you know Penn was a Quaker and I hate the Quakers."

The full authentication of this story with the name of the Pennsylvanian and the date is to be found in an early work by Mr. William Tallack, the well-known and distinguished secretary to the Howard Association.

My beloved friend, John Greenleaf Whittier, my friend of thirty years, who has so recently gone from us, in his "Quaker Alumni," which appeared within a twelvemonth of the death of Macaulay, combines a magnificent tribute with a tender reproach:

"He who lies where the minster's groined arches curve down
To the tomb-crowded transept of England's renown,
The glorious essayist by genius enthroned,
Whose pen as a scepter the muses all owned,
Who through the world's Pantheon walked in his pride,
Getting new statues up, thrusting old ones aside,—
And in fancy the pencil of history dipped
To gild o'er or blacken each saint in his crypt,—
How vainly he labored to sully with blame
The white bust of Penn in the niche of his fame.
Self-will is self-wounding, perversity blind,—
On himself fell the stain for the Quaker designed.
For the sake of his true-hearted father before him,
For the sake of the dear Quaker mother who bore him,
For the sake of his gifts and his works that outlive him,
And his brave words for freedom—we freely forgive him."

For the sake of the facts so little known and for these noble lines, which ought to be a monument more durable than brass, I hope you will find room for this little sermon.

Strasbourg, Germany.

"MOTHER'S DAY."

BY H. A. DELANO.

We celebrate many days and events now, and what could we with another?

Special days! In common with thousands of people I have prayed for exemption from others, and would fain let go one-half of those we have. But if another calendar day could be added to the saints' memorial, I would like it to be a mother's day.

First, I can think of none in which humanity might so universally, so heartily and consistently unite. Every good mother has been to her child the most tangible saint, the most heroic martyr, and the highest, dearest embodiment of living virtue. No memory is so precious, no posthumous influence so vital, no history so interesting as those of a good mother.

The anniversaries of the saints, the days which commemorate the daring and bravery of military leaders, the sacrifices of philanthropists, the birth of poets, artists, statesmen and inventors, are all sacred and impressive. We need to remember the Washingtons, the Lincolns and even the "Saint Patricks," if the latter would only keep off the snakes. But we cannot all agree about these, nor find equal interest in any one of them. A mother's day however, would—might—unite us all.

Secondly, a mother's day would be in itself a tribute to the forces which are so often found to be the forces of motherhood back of great men. Does the world desire to pay a tribute to its Napoleons, its Cromwells, Luthers, Goethes, Cowpers, Augustines, Jacksons, Newtons, Wesleys, Moodys, and hundreds of others, it might veritably do this in keeping mother's day.

Thirdly, think of its influence upon the school, upon homeless boys and girls, upon the wayward, wandering and wicked daughter, upon the outcast and tramp; indeed, upon all classes and conditions of people. What a day for home-going or home letters, letters to and from mothers. More sacred than any other anniversary, because more personal and real to the millions.

How celebrate? Celebrate in the home. Sometimes by public service, of an evening, in the church. Sometimes by an old-fashioned gathering in the old home or in the home of one of the surviving children—all in memory of mother.

Would it not tend to exalt motherhood, keep its sanctity and preserve its obligations?

Who shall start it? Who launch the new craft, and beautiful upon the sea where already so large a fleet of extra days demands special attention? "Those who have most to do can do the most," goes the proverb, and, of course, that means Frances Willard. I saw her photo the other day, on a news-stand, lying near a picture of Robert G. Ingersoll. "Who maketh us to differ?" Who struck the mighty difference between these two great intellects and wills? Unquestionably a Madam Willard. Her mother! How I wish the ever-enlarging and earth-encompassing W. C. T. U. could and would afford to be hospitable to an idea that has thrilled my heart ever since I thought of it, and my own mother's memory has burned anew.

Evanston, Ill.

MEMORIES OF THE WHITE CITY.

III.

BY ELIZABETH CUMINGS.

At first glance it is wonderful that men with erratic ideas gain a following. We are prone to ascribe a selfish, and even an evil motive to their followers, when after all there may be deep down in human kind a following instinct, a something which impels us to tag, without reason. We fancied the day after Chicago day would be thin, and set out for the Fair in the belief that we were to have it very much to ourselves. A great throng of people set out with the same idea and we crowded one another, swayed and jostled each other, all good-naturedly, but it wore upon the nerves. Toward nightfall being caught in an eddy of sightseers upstairs in the Liberal Arts Building I had a glimpse of the peaks of the Japanese pavilions, and hastily going to a bit of secluded gallery looked over hoping to pull my scattered wits together. In an instant a tramp of following feet told me I had been noted. Moved by mischievous curiosity I bent far forward over the rail and looked down absorbedly. In far less time than it can be told as many men as could stand beside me stretched their necks far out and gazed anxiously at the quaint gables below. The press behind put their chins on the shoulders of the more fortunate ones in front. There was an audible sound of breathing, when some one in the rear demanded: "What's there, Uncle Billy?"

"Well, I dunno's I know," admitted Uncle Billy as I slipped away.

. . . . . .

I had been gloating over the airy elegance of the Brazilian building till my eyes ached. In its quiet coffee-perfumed interior, so cool, so delicately shaded, I had tried to fancy what it would be like to visit what I heard an old gentleman call, "Braz-ill." Timotheus had not explored the Turkish building, so I went out doors and choosing a sunny stump I composed myself to wait while he enjoyed the twinkling embroideries, the leather, the impossible slippers and boots, the beautifully made arms, and the portfolios of views in Constantinople. A friendly tree behind the stump afforded me a back. I closed my eyes, and continued to dream about "Braz-ill." I heard approaching footsteps. They paused. I opened my eyes. Three dear old ladies, so evidently from the country they seemed to bring the smell of clover in their garments, were before me.

"You're all beat out, poor thing, ain't you?" said one.

I admitted I was tired.

"Don't you want some lunch?" asked another, "or,—some cold tea?" and she produced a bottle and shook it at me in the most friendly way, the leaves floating in the liquid proclaiming it was cold tea in fact, and not Mrs. Gamp's substitute for that fluid.

"No," I said, and thanked them all, but it was not till I said, "I do not like tea," that the good soul would put up her bottle.

"You do hear the strangest things," she said, as the three trotted away. "Not like tea! Well, there's all sorts of folks in the world. I wish we could a-done something for her."

Again I closed my eyes. In a breath feet again approached, paused and went slowly on. When I opened my eyes I saw a lad of twenty twisting his head about to look at me. Again I devoted my mind to Braz-ill. But not for long. Four men, two old, two middle-aged were going by. I tried to assume an expression of supreme comfort, and kept my eyes shut, but one old man paused, while the others halted a short distance off.

"You hain't lost your folks, have ye?" he said, with much sympathy.

Timotheus was coming out of the brown octagon, or polygon, of the land of the crescent. "No," I said cheerfully.

"Well, I'm glad of it," he replied, as he moved on. "You looked kind of tired and lonesome. I lost mother, that's my wife, yesterday, and I was dreadful sort of flustered."

One day a quickly gathered shower made me a prisoner at the India building. After a time the carved ivory, the hammered brass and exquisite silver, the soft and lovely combinations of color everywhere, and even the placid gods, failed to divert me from an all-absorbing sensation of hunger and chill. Attar of rose, sandal wood and tea each smell deliciously. I fancied tea served by a Hindoo person wearing a white turban and white linen draperies, would taste better than it usually does to my palate, so I tried tea, and imagined that by giving strict attention to the perfume and the heat I would be refreshed. But my stomach was not to be deceived. Feeling quite as in my youth after a dose administered by the family doctor, I went out on the bit of porch and sat down on one of the boxes with which the place was yet littered. Two ladies were there partaking of luncheon. Very neat and nice it was, too. I closed my eyes, and endeavored to try the mind cure on my tea feelings. I wondered if the models who sit to the god manufacturer in India do not weary of having their knees flexed at the peculiar angle convention has decreed shall be correct for gods. I tried to recall the pattern of some of the draperies and rugs, but only succeeded in seeing with my mind's vision stretches of bits of overlapping, exquisite color. But I was not left to my reflections long. A gentle voice offered me biscuit, cake, fruit, all sorts of things, and it was not till I showed my own box that she would take no for an answer. Among all the memories of the Fair none are dearer than the clouds of bright, intent, intelligent faces that float before me as I think of it, none more treasured than the countless little acts of courtesy received and kindnesses offered. With all the rest one saw one's kind at the White City.

. . . . . .

There was a peculiar originality about the Venetian glass, as if the craftsmen who make it had studied the tints and forms of clouds and of water, and with a quickness of eye and delicacy of touch and sense of artistic beauty inherited from generations of artisans who were also artists, had reproduced what they saw in glass. The Austrian glass suggested frost and flame, but not the etherial quality of sky and wave. More than one vase, tazza or chalice suggested the very ripples that tremble up the sands of the seashore when the day is sunny. I forgot about the tenth commandment. To be sure it does not mention glass, but that comprehensive clause, "anything that is thy neighbor's," is an omnibus. I was consoled by the recollection that glass will break, and that what one does not own one will not have to pack up to move.

. . . . . .

They could not cackle, or crow, or pick up corn, but for the rest they were alive, those painted chickens in the Japanese exhibit in the Art Building. I wished I could read Japanese as I gazed upon them and the hieroglyph that, perhaps, gave the artist's name. "Ever since the age of six I have had a mania for drawing the forms of objects; toward the age of fifty I published a very large number of drawings, but I am dissatisfied with everything I produced before the age of seventy. At the age of seventy-three I had nearly mastered the forms of birds, fish, plants, etc. Consequently, at the age of eighty I shall have got to the bottom of things, at a hundred I shall have attained a decidedly higher level, which I cannot define, and at the age of one hundred and ten every dot and every line of my brush will be alive. I call upon those who may live as long as I to see if I keep my word. Written at the age of seventy-five by me, formerly Hokusai, now Gwakio Rojin." (Gwakio Rojin means "man mad about drawing.") I find this copied into a notebook from some quarter unknown, only that it must have been a sketch of the artist whose name it bears, and who is one of Japan's great names. I was sure as I looked at the chickens that either the renowned Hokusai had painted them at the age of eighty, or some one his equal in seeing "to the bottom of things," and whose name I did not know, had done the work. In that little section one felt as if peeping over a high-board fence, beyond which lay delightful objects.

There were fascinating suggestions about the art and artists of the Cherry Tree Kingdom, and nowhere was ntuare pictured with more reverence, or quite such tireless patience. The mystery of spring, the sweetness of opening leaves and blossoms, the secret charm of winter, the cold, opalescent lights of her mists, and the very movement of the snow were there with absolute fidelity, recalling the words of Bastian Lepage: "There is only one thing to be admired, and that is nature. There is only one art, and that is to reproduce nature." Close at hand the Japanese and Chinese finds his inspiration. A gourd, the twin of the sort converted into dippers in our own South, furnishes him with an exquisite form for a vase. On another vase he reproduces the panels of his screens, and in still another, it seems as if he suggested one of his own country women, her plump, short person enveloped in the national costume.

. . . . . .

Each art has its limitations. As told by Tennyson, the story of the Lily Maid of Astolat is tenderly beautiful, and a great tone poet like Schumann, might, perhaps, tell it far better. But the painter who pictures the black "barge decked with blackest samite," and her "who did not seem as dead, but fast asleep," has at the best but the picture of a corpse. A sight-seer of the common type stood for some moments before the large canvas portraying the dead Elaine in the Woman's Building, as I came near. "I can't make it out," he said to his companion, "but I guess it's a corpse. I don't see any sense in painting a corpse." But "Left Alone in the World," by Josef Israels, though it held death, left no one in doubt as to its intent. Perhaps it is the secret of great art that it speaks directly to the heart and mind, that it belongs, not to one land or time, but to the world, and every time. I was most absorbed by the hands. How wonderful was the contrast between the once busy, but now helpless, hands of the dead wife, lying still upon the poor bed, and the anguished, living hands of the husband turned away to his strange, bereaved solitude and loneliness! The hands, too, were eloquent in Herkomer's "Last Muster." The old soldiers are at Sunday service. It is morning light that streams in through the quaint windows. But to one in swift silence has come the "last call." Unnoted he has been "mustered out," and the hand upon his sleeve of his kindly comrade who fancies this last sleep the sleep of weariness, is in strange contrast to the hand from which life's cunning has fled. Aged hands both, but how subtile is the difference. "Breaking Home Ties," the American picture of which every one spoke who saw it, and before which so many eyes dimmed, was quite as wonderful for the mother's hands as for the expression of her face. Capable, work-worn hands they were, and unutterable love and boding were in their grasp. "You must see it," I heard one young man say to the older man with him. "It—well it got away with me. Somehow the hand on the boy's arm made me think so of mother's hands."

South Evanston, Ill.

PENELOPE TAKES EXCEPTIONS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Miss Lilian Whiting is one of the writers whom I most admire, and I have much appreciated her clear and philosophic thought; but I cannot go with her in the position she takes in the recent article in which she joins with sundry women who have never done a stroke of work to help our cause, but who in these days, when that cause is becoming a success, are moved to call a halt. This they do by taking the high and mighty position that nothing should be said about the work of women as women. They affect to believe that every bit of work done in the world is to be judged solely upon its merits without at all taking into the account the disadvantages under which it was wrought; but to do this would be not only untrue but unjust and unphilosophical.

In the first place it would be untrue. The absolute is something quite unattainable in this life; relativity is about all there is in the world as we know it. Not to study a subject in its relations is to betray one's ignorance. There is nothing concerning which the public is so steadily interested as the personality of those who do remarkable things, and this is because, among other reasons, the mind loves to know the relationship between the doer, his gifts, opportunities and environment and the work that he has wrought. Doubtless we are glad to study the achievements of those about us partly that we may ourselves gain an inspiration to go and do likewise, and in order to have any proper idea of what they have done, we must be informed as to the conditions under which they have done it. There is not a boy in America who is not inspired by the fact that General Grant was born and bred on a country farm in Ohio; nor is there one who does not take heart of hope because Abraham Lincoln fought his way out of adversity and ignorance to the highest place in the nation's gift. Nor is there a girl of intelligence who is not helped by knowing that Mary Lyon, the founder of Mount Holyoke College, educated herself while teaching a district school at a few dollars a month wages. There is not a blind man who has not been helped by the knowledge of the heroic career of Professor Fawcett, late Postmaster General of Great Britain, nor a negro who does not take a more hopeful view of life when he contemplates the success of Frederick Douglass, who was born a slave.

By parity of reasoning, I hold that it is a help to women, everywhere, to know what women are accomplishing as women; they need the incentive of example, and numerous object lessons in their effort to overcome the obstacles that sex-subjection, during thousands of years, has built up around them on every side. The time may come—I devoutly hope and believe it will within the next century—when we can speak of what our sex has done without emphasizing the fact that success was wrought in spite of severe odds; for as a matter of fact these odds will not then be so heavy; indeed, as they were largely artificial, they will largely have disappeared. But it is a little early yet, in view of the fact that as a class we have no voice in making the laws by which we are governed, or the creeds and ecclesiastical system under which we are to work out our soul's salvation, to climb a pinnacle of pride and from thence to assert a law whose fiat is: Say nothing about what women have thought or done; have no more women's papers, women's societies, women's guilds of help, women's expositions, women's clubs, women's anything, but fling your banner to the breeze inscribed: "We compete with men on equal terms."

The whole crux of the situation is that the terms are not equal, and until they become so we must encourage, educate and inspire by special efforts and associations that half of the human race which has so recently come on the stage of public action, and is working rather with the left hand than the right owing to its lack of hereditary endowment, favorable environment, and the mighty impetus of public opinion that says that to succeed is as natural to your kind as is the breath in your nostrils.

Yours for the development and perfection of womankind. PENELOPE.

Blackheath, Eng.

[Anybody who feels a "concern" may send twenty lines pro or con to THE UNION SIGNAL on this subject.—EDS.]

THE SUFFRAGE QUESTION IN COLORADO.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Your editorial of January 4, "Opportunities in Colorado," has suggested some thoughts that may be of interest to your readers and throw some light upon the situation here. We, the women of Colorado, are deeply conscious of the fact, so frequently iterated in the press, that the eyes of the world are upon us to see how we use the ballot. This consciousness of almost overwhelming responsibility has tempered the exuberant expression of our joy, and has sent earnest white-ribboners all over the state into the silence of their closets, where, upon bended knees, they are asking: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

The words of cheer and "God-speed" which come to us from every branch of the white-ribbon army are grateful and inspiring. The fact that Colorado has a local option law increases the magnitude of our opportunity, and hence, the weight of our responsibility. Encouraging, too, is the news that already comes to us from some of the towns where our unions are most active, that the saloonkeepers are openly expressing their fears as to the overturning which may take place at the spring elections. But forewarned is forearmed, and we may be sure that they are already in league with the prince of evil who is calling forth,

"Out of deepe darkenesse dredde
Legions of sprites, the which like little flies
Fluttering about his ever damned hed,
Awaite whereto their service he applyes
To aide his frendes or fray his enemies."

And these "legions of sprites" will assume legions of forms, many of them arrayed in the enticing garb of angels of light. There will be the "policy" sprites, who, by the way, are already fluttering about the heads of some of our intelligent women, whispering in their ears: "Do not be too radical;" "Remember, reforms must come slowly," etc. There will be the "old party" sprites, the sprites of indifference, and so on.

Perhaps, however, the darkest side of the picture to us just now is the financial side. The W. C. T. U. did loyal work in the campaign, not only in the centers, but in the outposts, and this work cost much, both in personal effort and money. The financial crisis has affected the state W. C. T. U. work in two serious ways. The small reserve fund which was in our treasury to meet the always heavy expenses of the first half of the year is "tied up" in a bank, which is in the hands of a receiver, and is unavailable to us for an indefinite period; also, the crisis has so affected our local unions that they find it impossible to collect dues promptly, and equally difficult to secure outside pledges for either state or local work. We ought to have good lecturers and organizers in the field all over the state until the spring election, who should pierce the hearts of indifferent or thoughtless women with sharp arrows of conviction concerning their political responsibility. Gladly would we say to our National speakers, "Come over and help us," but alas! we cannot follow the invitation with the cash.

We do not give up the struggle or sit in idleness bewailing the situation. We are carrying on a hand-to-hand fight against that arch enemy of progress—a "state debt." We have been obliged to surrender our state organ, The Bulletin, and the enemy threatens our beloved Cottage Home. But we are working "each one over against his own house," and the Lord of Hosts is on our side.

Our Mrs. Telford, who sacrificed so much for us and did such efficient work for suffrage last fall, and who is now our strongest state lecturer, stands by us loyally, having refused flattering calls from New York, which would be remunerative as well as pleasant for her. We honor her for this and pray that her strength fail not.

We believe that "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," and that He will show us a way out of our present straits. ELLA BEECHER GITTINGS,

Cor. Sec'y Colorado W. C. T. U.

Colorado Springs, Col.

A LOVING, PRAYERFUL REQUEST.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Send out on your white wings of truth and helpfulness this request to every reader in the United States. Will each brother copy the following estimate from one of the most accurate and conservative papers in the country, and with suitable words of address, request and interest, send it to each of his two United States senators and to his representatives from his own congressional district; and will each sister see that one or two voters do the same for her at once; except in the states of Wyoming and Colorado, where every W. C. T. U. woman will please write for herself?

And dear comrades in God's great army of reform, enforce your request—after copying this estimate of the awful statistics of the drink traffic in our country—by asking that your senator and representative use his influence and vote for the enactment of a law prohibiting the sale of arms and intoxicants to natives in the Independent states of the Congo and adjacent zone of Central Africa; and add your prayer to each one that after passing that law, that law also be enacted prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the United States, after the close of the year 1894.

The following is the estimate to be copied and mailed:

"ESTIMATE OF THE DRINK TRAFFIC.

"God's goodness gives natural blessings. Man's corruption converts some of them into artificial curses. About five hundred thousand makers and sellers of fermented and distilled liquors in 1892, and not less in 1893, manufactured and sold 31,856,620 barrels, or 987,496,223 gallons of beer—nearly sixteen gallons for every one of our population. They also produced and sold 118,436,506 gallons of distilled spirits, or one and one-half gallons to every citizen. Add to these averages of individual consumption 44-100 gallon of wine for each, and the appalling total per capita consumption of intoxicants is at least 17.04 gallons. In this estimate no account is made of imported liquors. We cannot add the incalculable cost of the nation's drink bill, or of the poisons indicated by its contents, to the people's income. It is an exhausting, maddening, destructive drain. Vast quantities of cereals are worse than wasted in brewing and distillation. Misery, pauperism, vice, crime, ruin, and hell are waiters upon use and sale, and rob and murder drunkards, drunkard-makers, and their friends with equal greed and cruelty."

And may the mighty God who has had mercy upon our country and delivered us from other enemies in the days of our distress, when we cried unto Him, hear us now and help us, and deliver us, by His own right arm, from the most diabolical foe that has yet menaced us as a people.

As Congress is now in session at Washington, District of Columbia, let all your letters be addressed to your senators and representatives there.

If you find that our brothers, the voters, are not inclined to take the time or trouble to write to their senators and representatives, write yourselves, and get a voter to sign the letter. H. A. HOBART,

Red Wing, Minn. Pres. Minn. W. C. T. U.

NO DOUBLE STANDARD.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Miss Willard's paper, read in the World's Congress, entitled "A White Life for Two," contains truths that every man and woman in America should know and appreciate. I am glad to hear her sound the trumpet on this subject, and I hope that her and your efforts will never cease until men and women are placed on precisely the same plane in this world. A Christian mother gave me, when a mere boy, the right thought on this question, and I have lived by it, and by the grace of God, I will die by it because it is the best thing for man in this world and in the next.

It lies in the power of the womanhood of America to make its manhood just as good, just as true, just as upright, and just as holy in thought and words, as the men require the women to be, and if it is done, all other reforms will be accomplished. Make a man pure in heart and soul, and reform is not necessary. In fact, there is nothing in him to reform. What the Christian religion has done for woman, woman may, by the same religion, do for man; and the Lord in Heaven only knows how he needs it. The highest ideal of purity and holiness should be the foundation of every Christian home, and it is just as necessary, in order for that home to be what God would have it be, to have a good man in it as to have a good woman in it. This is the law of pure morality and we will never be able to have the highest form of society or the most permanent form of statehood until we have all law and personal action founded upon a pure home.

A great deal has been said recently on this subject, and any movement in this direction has my most heartfelt sympathy, because I believe it the very best thing that can be done for the woman, for the man, for the state, for the nation. In the name of Jesus of Nazareth, let the work go forward. ONE OF THE MEN.

Chicago, Ill.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Cast not away, therefore, your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward. . . . Now the just shall live by faith; but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.—Heb. 10: 35, 38.

"Every loyal temperance woman and child in Iowa to the front! The clouds of debt still hang above the beautiful turrets of our Temple. What are you going to do this year to disperse them? You are to share the glory and benefits it will bring to the cause when those clouds are lifted." The above extract is taken from a circular lately sent out through Iowa by Mrs. M. Andres, state superintendent of Temple work for Iowa. The above pertinent question should be asked in every state through a like circular issued by a Temple superintendent appointed by the state executive.

Suppose all states should issue such a manifesto and send to the unions within their borders, giving instruction, as Mrs. Andres does further along in her letter, how the money might be raised without it necessarily coming out of the pockets of W. C. T. U. women. What an impetus it would give to the work; not only would the Temple be greatly benefited, but the entire temperance work. To have one great central object of equal interest for which all could plan and work is an untold blessing to any organization and cannot but build it up in strength and power.

***

If all our leaders would cultivate confidence in the Temple enterprise there would be no necessity to go outside our ranks to raise money to pay for it. Surely, my sisters, when you see what God hath wrought it should stimulate your faith—the building completed, paying a fair income over current expenses, every obstacle swept away which might hinder our coming into entire possession of it. These facts should entirely obliterate all doubt. I would say to you: "Cast not away, therefore, your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward."

***

Mrs. A. E. Bolles, president of the Hartford, Conn., W. C. T. U., sends a check for $70, which completes a $100 gift from this union. Mrs. Bolles writes: "I wish every union in Connecticut could have its name in the Temple." $100 comes from the Moline, Ill., W. C. T. U. This makes the second hundred this generous union has sent. In its president, Mrs. M. E. Metzgar, the Temple has a firm friend. The last hundred received is to place in Willard Hall in memoriam the name of Mrs. Sara Richards. The money is part of a bequest which Mrs. Richards left the union. The Morrison, Ill., W. C. T. U. sends through its able superintendent of Temple work, Mrs. S. A. Whitcomb, $50, which completes its pledge.

***

Mrs. Jane M. Swift, Warren, Pa., is one among hundreds who responded to the call of a dollar for the Temple, and received in return the beautiful Columbian souvenir. She writes Miss Johnson: "I was delighted when I opened my box and saw the souvenir—Miss Willard and Mrs. Carse on one side, and on the other the Temple. How natural it looks! I am very proud of my souvenir, and would not part with it unless I could obtain another." Mrs. A. M. Bond, Denver, Col., is another recipient of a souvenir. She writes: "This is the first moment I have had to acknowledge the little gem's arrival. It is so pretty. I wish I could purchase others for friends whom I know would highly appreciate them, as I do mine." Mrs. John Blackmer, Springfield, Mass., writes: "In response to your one dollar appeal for the Temple, I inclose $2, one for my husband and one for myself." If all our white-ribboners' husbands would only join their wives in sending a dollar, what a sum in the aggregate it would make, and most of them would never feel it. We promise all who send $1 or more to the Temple, to present them one of our exquisite Columbian souvenirs. This offer holds good until the supply is exhausted. We do not intend to have any more cast after those we have on hand are disposed of. This offer holds good to the members of all unions. Their dollar will be counted on the union's pledge, and they personally will receive the souvenir.

***

The Winchester, Va., W. C. T. U. sends $15, a second installment on $100. Mrs. Hattie R. Tomlinson, treasurer of the W. C. T. U., of Perry, N. Y., sends $8. She writes "This leaves us only seven dollars more to make the entire $100 paid. I cannot tell you how glad I am that we made the pledge." From the W. C. T. U. of Montoursville, Pa., comes $30, making $50 this union has paid on its pledge. The union's able superintendent of Temple work, Mrs. Grace C. Hutson, promises to send more money soon. New Alexandria, Pa., W. C. T. U. sends $5 toward the pledge of the W. C. T. U. of Westmoreland county. From Mrs. Tibbetts, for the W. C. T. U. of Ellendale, North Dakota, $70.50 has come to be applied on the Mrs. White tablet; $10 of the above was secured by a noble woman in getting up a full Baby Band, of one hundred names. The superintendent of Temple work, Mrs. C. E. Bently, for the W. C. T. U. of East Lincoln, Neb., sends $21.50 to be applied on the Mrs. Stoner tablet.

***

All who desire to secure a solid silver Temple souvenir tea spoon should enter their name at once and send to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, The Temple, Chicago, for a mite-box. Persons placing in the box $3.65 during the year 1894 will receive the beautiful Temple souvenir spoon. All drafts and money orders should be made out in the name of William D. Preston, and sent to our financial secretary, Miss Sara G. Johnson, The Temple, Chicago.

A PICTURE.

BY ELIZABETH F. MERRILL.

Yes, she was old, if age be counted by
How many times the flying years had told
Their rosary of months above her head,
For more than seventy times her eyes beheld
Hoar winter swathe the shivering earth with snow,
Blithe summer lead the pageant of the flowers,
And from her withered cheeks all furrowed o'er
With many a line of pain and care, so long,
So long, the rose had fled, and silvery white
The smooth locks lay upon her brow, Dear-Heart!
We never deemed her old, for age is poor,
Meager and querulous, like a fretting child,
And she was love itself, and love informed
Her very soul and shone from every line
And furrow of her faded cheek, and kept
The light of youth perennial in eyes
That years dimmed not. Men, looking in her face,
Forgot to doubt, repressed the cynic sneer,
And thought of God and heaven and holy things;
And little children nestled at her feet,
And crept within the shelter of her arms.
The pain that others suffered, that was hers,
And that she sought to comfort and to soothe;
Her own she told not, bearing all the load
In silence, giving not a sign, except
The tell-tale lines about the patient mouth,
That never murmured, though the gnawing pain,
Remorseless, racked her poor, worn frame,
Which, wasting, like an alabaster vase,
Polished and wrought, yet more revealed
The spirit's lambent light contained within.
She sleeps, may we not think, like him,
Who climbed the height of Pisgah, then lay down—
So say the rabbis—dying by the kiss of God.

Dorchester, Mass.

BABY SWEETHEARTS.

BY MARY WOOD ALLEN, M. D.

"Well, Floyd, have you seen your sweetheart to-day?" asked Mr. Germaine of his four-year-old son as they sat at the supper table.

"Yes, sir," answered the little fellow gravely.

"Did you take her out riding?" queried Mr. Germaine with a quizzical glance at his wife.

"No, sir, we just played I was her beau like Aunt Vi and Mr. Miller."

Mr. Germaine gave a knowing look at his young sister and asked, still with gravity, of the child: "Well, was Nellie as coy as Aunt Vi is?"

"Oh, Nellie isn't my sweetheart now. We had a quarrel. It is Bessie Brooks now that is my sweetheart."

"But. Floyd," said his mother, "you don't know what a sweetheart is."

"Oh, yes, I do," asserted the young gentleman stoutly. "You hug 'em and kiss 'em."

Mr. Germaine threw back his head in a peal of laughter that implied an enjoyment of his wife's discomfiture, of Aunt Vi's embarrassment, and of his son's precocity. But Mrs. Germaine, with no answering smile, turned the topic of conversation and it was not again alluded to until the husband and wife sat alone in the quiet of their own room."

"Will," said Mrs. Germaine, "it seems to me it is not right to tease Floyd so about his sweethearts."

"Oh, it doesn't tease him, the little rascal, but it seems to tease some people older than he is," was Mr. Germaine's jesting reply.

"But, Will, I am really in earnest. I think it is teaching him wrong things."

Mr. Germaine looked at his wife in evident astonishment.

"Well, now, Tender Conscience, what is wrong in laughing at him and calling Bessie his sweetheart, I'd like to know? I don't see anything wrong in the children's being fond of each other."

"Neither do I. That is not my point. It is quite natural and right that they should be fond of one another if we only let them be so in their own childlike way, the same way that Floyd is fond of Harry and Percy. You don't tease him about their being his sweethearts."

"Of course not, they are boys."

"You mean they will be boys by-and-by. At present they are only children."

"Don't you think, little wife, that you are straining at a gnat?"

"No, Will, I do not. It seems to me a very serious matter."

Mr. Germaine looked at his wife inquiringly for a moment and then asked, apparently apropos of nothing: "Where have you been this afternoon?"

"I have been at a W. C. T. U. meeting."

"I thought so. There is where you get most of your cranky notions."

"It is true, Will, that I received much enlightenment there. Yesterday I would have laughed with you at the foolishness of what now looks to me of such great importance."

"Well, I knew the W. C. T. U. was capable of a good deal of nonsense, but I really would like to know what great sin they can find in the sweethearting of two babies."

"It is the fact that babies cannot be sweethearts, Will, that constitutes the evil. It is the placing of the association of babies on the level of men and women, and teaching them to do the very things for which we will want to punish them after awhile. There is no harm in Floyd kissing Nellie and Bessie now, but how will it be in a dozen years if he grows up with the idea that girls are to be thus treated?"

"Why, it will be right for him to kiss them then, if they will let him."

A pained look passed over Mrs. Germaine's face, and for a time she was silent while her husband again became absorbed in his paper. By and by she asked softly, "Will, do you love our little Helen?"

"That is rather an idiotic question, Kate; what is the hidden meaning?"

"When Helen is grown up to young womanhood how will you feel if you learn that the young men of her acquaintance are treating her with undue familiarity?"

Mr. Germaine threw down his paper and began to walk up and down the room.

"The young man that treats my daughter with indignity will have to settle with me," he exclaimed at length.

"But, supposing they claim that it is all right because she permits it?"

"But she won't permit it. She will be too well taught."

"How? By teaching her at three and ten that the boys are her lovers and may caress her as they please, and then at fourteen teaching her that all young men must be kept at a distance? Can you do it? And, Will, if it is right for Floyd to kiss any girl that will permit it, why will it not be right for Helen to permit any young man to kiss her? You see it is not altogether a question of our son and some one else's daughter, but also of our daughter and some one else's son. Don't you see that it is just here that we lay the foundation of that double standard of morals which works so much mischief? If we teach our own boys that they may treat girls with familiarity if the girls permit it, we must accept the consequences not only to our boys but to our girls as well."

Mr. Germaine seated himself with a thoughtful mien, and his wife continued: "This subject was discussed at the meeting this afternoon, and it placed matters in a new light before me, though even while I listened I was not fully convinced. But when Floyd gave so clear an idea of his understanding of what a sweetheart is, it came upon me like a revelation, and I seemed to catch a glimpse of the future of our children that startled me. One of our members had a scrap cut from a newspaper which said that cards were out announcing the engagement of Master Willie Scott, aged four, and Miss Mabel Perry, aged six, and she said that no doubt the friends thought that it was only 'cute'; and the children would be taught to call each other husband and wife; and she asked, what idea could those little ones have of the sacredness of love and the dignity of marriage when they had played with them as toys in their babyhood. One member read from an article in Babyhood which said: 'If we would have a pure maturity we must have a sexless childhood.' That is, the child must be allowed to develop according to nature which does not develop sex until the individual approaches maturity. By putting into the minds of the children the thought of sentimental relations with each other, relations which have their foundation in sex, we awaken feelings, thoughts and emotions which would have no place in the consciousness of a natural child, and this precocity of development along this line is one source of the social evil which gives us so much anxiety. As I was walking home from the meeting, thinking over what I had heard, and not quite ready to accept it all, I chanced to pass two girls, one about ten, the other, perhaps, sixteen. Said the ten-year-old, 'Who is your beau?' 'Oh, I have none,' answered the older girl. 'Haven't any beau?' exclaimed the little girl in surprise, 'why, how do you get along without one? I have always had beaux, and it's awful fun.' I thought the dear child did not know how near she came to the truth in saying it was 'awful fun.'"

"Do you suppose there is very much of such nonsense going on?"

"A schoolteacher who was at our meeting told us we would be surprised to know how this foolish sentimentality pervades the school. The boys and girls are engaged, are writing love letters, are quarreling and making up, are holding clandestine meetings, and all to such an extent that study is interfered with, the children being in such a state of emotional excitement that they cannot do good, hard work at study."

"Well, wife, is not that an argument against co-education?"

"That matter was discussed too, and the members generally thought that if boys and girls were permitted to grow up in good, frank comradeship there would be less of the evil of which we have been speaking, and they seemed to think that co-education was one of the means to create this very comradeship. It is the girl, who in convent or girls' school, has no opportunity to judge of young men as they are, who invests them with ideal virtues, while the girl who sees young men every day and competes with them in study, learns to judge of them much more correctly."

"Doesn't your argument prove too much? It asserts that love is natural and you cannot annihilate it, however hard you may try."

"We have no wish to annihilate love. We only desire to dignify it and no longer make it a plaything for babies, who using it as a toy can never have a true appreciation of its worth. We believe that marriage will be placed upon a surer basis if it is founded on a thorough acquaintance. One of the ladies read a quotation from Malthus which I borrowed. Shall I read it to you?"

Mr. Germaine signifying acquiescence his wife read: "If violations of chastity were equally dishonorable in both sexes, a more familiar and friendly intercourse might take place between them without danger. Two young people might converse together intimately without its being supposed that they either intended marriage or intrigue, and a much better opportunity would thus be given to both sexes of finding out kindred dispositions and of forming strong and lasting attachments, without which the married life is more productive of misery than happiness."

After some moments of quiet thought Mr. Germaine asked: "Would you, then, have boys treat girls just as they do other boys?"

"I asked that question this afternoon, and the answer was that a boy should be taught to be polite to both boys and girls, and also to manifest a courteous chivalry toward women, because his mother is a woman. As the speaker enlarged on this idea she said that the child would not see all that this implies, but it means courtesy to all women and girls, because of the womanhood of the mother, and also because of the potential motherhood of the woman. The thought of motherhood should sanctify every girl and woman in the mind of man. Since we have been talking it has come to me that this foolish jesting about love and marriage degrades it in thought, and one reason why we have so much unhappiness in married life may be the fact that we began to undermine the foundations of morality in our teaching of our babies to play with the thought of the God-ordained relations of the sexes as with some trivial toy."

"I believe you are right, wife. At any rate, the boy that has been taught to honor womanhood and motherhood in this way will certainly be a worthy knight of the twentieth century and worthy of the hand and heart of the twentieth century woman."

Toledo, O.

TYPICAL LESSONS FOR LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION TEACHERS.

VI.

The Party.

BY MARY E. RUDD.

Opening Exercises. 15 minutes:—New song for to-day "Kindergarten Song," page 49, Marching Songs. Have it played softly while the children are getting quiet.

Prayer followed by hymn. Practice new song. Repeat Scripture texts and give time to any comments that may be brought out. Sing such song as the children may choose. Finger play "Piggie Wig and Piggie Wee." Rhythmical Exercises. Running and jumping over an imaginary brook, being careful not to fall in. The brook may be represented by a crack in the floor, a seam in the carpet, or a string laid down loosely, not fastened at the ends. If the floor is covered with matting substitute something else, as there would be danger of slipping.

Physiology, 5 minutes:—Sing "Raise Your Hands." Notice again with praise the clean hands, and disapproval for dirty ones. Review facts given last time, and give any child who wishes a chance to tell how much cleaner he has kept his hands and face this last week than before. Make suggestions for cleansing the little brown knuckles by scouring with corn-meal or a brush, using plenty of water. If the hands are chapped suggest the simple remedies, such as you have found of use yourself; and if the children are of a class who need it, stay after the lesson and apply the soap and water and the remedy yourself. It will pay you in the end. Caution against washing the hands and running out of doors before they are dry. Be sure to wipe the skin perfectly dry.

Lesson, 20 minutes:—Make it short to-day, for many things may be said during the play that follows as well as in the lesson proper. Going back to our story, tell of the party given by the twins. Make it a great pleasure to yourself and it will be so to the children. Almost all of them will be glad to tell of some party they have attended or given, and usually the eatables seem to have made the deepest impression on their minds. This being the case you will have an opportunity to review many things said in the last lesson, and also to make suggestions as to the best drinks for little folks, water and milk, never wine or beer. Then games, such as might be played at a children's party. For occupation play party. The children may use sticks and outline tables, chairs, etc., or they may use the small cubes and lay them to form the top of a table. This might be covered with a sheet of folding paper, and if there could be some cardboard discs for plates the table would be complete. A pile of balls in the center of the table might represent apples, while the cylinders could stand for bottles of water brought from the spring. Pleasant conversation may go on while the party is in progress, and some hints about greediness, founded on the "Piggie Wig" finger play will not be out of place. If you choose to pass around some animal crackers and water I am sure your party will be long remembered.

Closing.—Good-by and thank you for the pleasant time.

Chicago, Ill.

YOU CAN'T VOTE, AND I CAN'T VOTE.

BY MRS. EVALINA M. SMITH.

Boys, I'm feeling sad to-night—
For you can't vote, and I can't vote.
There's so much wrong, so little right,
And you can't vote, and I can't vote.
Our state is ruled by whisky rings,
The bloats and dirty kegs are kings.
And the voters bow to him that stings,
For you can't vote and I can't vote.

Did you see that vagabond staggering along,
Well, he can vote; yes, he can vote;
He was trying to sing a ribald song,
For he can vote, yes, he can vote.
He cannot read, nor write, nor think,
But he takes straight whisky without a wink,
And sells his vote for beer to drink,
For he can vote, yes, he can vote.

But cheer up, boys, we soon shall be,
Where we can vote, and we will vote
To send all demagogues out to sea,
When you can vote and I can vote.
We'll seek for honest men and true,
Who'll do as they have sworn to do,
And who know their duty through and through,
When you can vote and I can vote.

We'll take our lassies with us too,
When you can vote and I can vote,
To show what woman folks can do,
When they can vote and we can vote.
Our mothers like to have things clean,
So the nicest place that ever was seen
Will be the polling place, I ween,
When our mothers and girls and we can vote.

We mean to turn on all the light,
When they can vote, and we can vote,
To see what's just and pure and right
When they can vote and we can vote.
And on that morning we will pray,
"Lord, give us wisdom for this day
To put all evil things away,
With an honest vote, a Christian vote."

North Greenfield, Wis.

BUYING GOSPEL WATER.

BY MABEL GIFFORD.

(Concluded.)

She did not stop running until she was out of sight of the "shine" of the great glass doors. Leaning against the wet brick wall nearest her she sobbed and shuddered and could think of nothing but the terrible face that had leaned toward her so spitefully, until she heard a kind voice say, "Don't cry, little girl."

Looking through her fingers she beheld a kind, big-whiskered face, red and smiling. She was so glad they were not black whiskers.

"I saw you in the saloon, and followed you, because you were alone. Are you lost?"

"Yes'm; no'm; no, sir;—I guess I don't know. I haven't thought so far yet." Katrina smiled up at the red whiskers, making an April sky of her face in the dreary autumn twilight.

"It is late for a little girl to be out alone. I want to take you home."

Then Katrina remembered her errand. "I can't go home yet, I want to find some more stores. P'raps you can tell me where they keep it, the Gospel-water, you know."

The big man looked at the little mite a moment, rather puzzled, then he brightened up—he was so cheerful to look at out in the lonesome street. "They don't keep Gospel-water at the stores, my dear, but I know just the place where you can get all you want. Come right along with me."

They soon stopped at one of the doors that opened into the endless wall of bricks, and after climbing two flights of stairs in the dark, they came to a dim landing and found another door that had big gilt letters on it.

"What does it say?" asked Katrina.

"Welcome," replied her companion, pushing open the door and leading his little charge into a dimly lighted room, where Katrina made out a few tables and a good many chairs. There were papers on the tables and a bookcase against the wall. It was a dingy, bare, lonesome looking place.

Katrina looked up to ask another question; but the big man was not there. She was going to be frightened, when a tired-looking woman stepped out from somewhere and looked in amazement at the drenched and dripping little brown figure standing still as a statue in the middle of the room.

"Look here; do look here, quick!" she called; and some one else began to come out from somewhere; this one was a man, and after a sudden look of recognition, and a sharp squint through the uncertain light, to make sure, Katrina sprang into his arms.

"My min'ster, my min'ster!" she cried; "I never fought how you might keep it."

"Why, my dear—my dear—my dear," stammered Minister Records in bewilderment.

Katrina hurriedly told her story, and out of her damp little fist dropped the precious pennies. "Will this be enough?" she asked anxiously.

Minister Records blinked and rubbed his eyes and put on his glasses, took them off, rubbed them, held them up to the dim light swinging in the center of the ceiling, and put them carefully on again before he said with considerable "a-hemming":

"My dear, my dear! keep your pennies; it don't cost anything, it's free." Then, as if thinking to himself, he muttered, "If I did not have so many engagements for this evening." Then to Katrina, "My dear, I am going to send you home immediately with a friend of mine, and I will send the directions to your father, so that he can get all the Gospel-water he wants. I hope you haven't caught your death, my dear."

A slip of paper was put into Katrina's hand, and she was put into a hack, and, fifteen minutes later, a little, limp, brown heap was taken out of the hack and carried up a flight of dark stairs by the Kilpatrick's door, up another flight, right into Mother Kipley's neat little sitting-room.

Mother Kipley gave one look, and, throwing up her arms, shrieked such a heart-broken shriek that Father Kipley, who had been sleeping himself sober all the afternoon rushed out very pale and frightened, and Katrina aroused, and, sitting up very straight, cried out joyfully: "I've got the d'rections, farzzer."

The hackman hurriedly dumped the little brown passenger on the black haircloth sofa and disappeared. Mother gave another shriek, of joy this time, and seizing the spongy heap on the sofa proceeded to disrobe and bathe and rub until the chilled little body was all in a glow, and a very sleepy, comfortable voice murmured,

"I've got the d'rections, farzzer."

"She's wandering," said mother, and her tears fell thick on the crumpled bit of paper as she smoothed it out, and with father looking over her shoulder, read:

"Ask, and ye shall receive. Seek, and ye shall find."

The heavy eyelids lifted once more. "It's how to get the Gospel-water, you know. Now, farzzer'll be all well."

All that night they sat by Katrina's bedside and listened to her mutterings, and with fear and trembling thanked God for bringing their darling safely back to them. And before the gray light of dawn lifted the black pall that smothered the huddled brick walls, Katrina's father went to the curtained shelf where mother always kept the Bible, and carrying it to Katrina's little bed held one of the restless, hot hands over it and said solemnly:

"God give me strength never again to touch the cursed stuff."

Katrina fell into a sweet sleep. In the morning her first words were,

"Did you find some, farzzer?"

"Yes, Katrina."

A beatific little face shone from the white pillow for a moment, then another thought came.

"Farzzer, what made the wicked man's parlor so beautiful and bright, and the dear minister's so lonesome?"

Father hesitated; "The children of darkness are wiser in their generation than the children of light."

"I don't hear that well," said Katrina in a troubled voice, "and I'm 'fraid they'd never find the 'welcome' 'way up there in the dark."

"It means, Katrina, that the wicked folks take more trouble to shine out bright than the good folks do."

"Can't we 'splain things so the good folks will shine more?"

"We'll try, Katrina, you and mother and I."

And they did; and the "welcome" has come out to the street door where every one can see it, and it's very bright inside and pretty and pleasant. The wicked clerk and the black-whiskered man cry "S-s-s-s-scat!" hard as ever they can, but it doesn't scare any one now, and the "Welcome parlor" grows bigger and brighter all the time.

"If you want your farzzer to be like my farzzer," says Katrina, "you must get him some d'rections for Gospel-water."

Abington, Mass.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—I had been reading in one of the big Chicago papers of the great need all over our country; of how many find themselves poor who never knew what the word meant before, because the father has been out of work so long and cannot find employment; and my eye fell upon an article which told of the efforts being made to help these worthy and suffering ones by each person contributing a day's salary to the relief fund. At this point the following little letter was laid on my desk:

I am a little New Jersey girl, seven years old. I want to tell you something about our L. T. L. A week before Christmas our superintendent asked us if we would like to give something to the poor this Christmas, instead of having our treat of oranges and candy we always have. We were very glad to do it, and gave the money it would cost (ten dollars) to buy things for the poor, hungry little children, whose papas haven't any work to do. The superintendent told us we could have a magic lantern entertainment the next Friday. She asked us to bring potatoes, or something to eat, and give at the door instead of money. Seven baskets of potatoes and a lot of rice and sugar and oatmeal, etc., were given, and taken to the poor. It made us feel very happy to do something for others.

MABEL CRETH SULLIVAN.

Moorestown, N. J.

As I read it, the words of the last sentence lingered in my thoughts most pleasantly. Don't you think so, too, dear boys and girls? If each one of us will give a little help in these times of need the burden will be lifted for others, and we will be made happy ourselves. Help? Of course we will, every one!

Your

Aunt Jane

NEPHEWS AND NIECES.

We are going to carry out the program the 23d that was on our Children's page. I will be thirteen next Sunday.

EDNA D. AUSTIN.

Zimmer, Neb.

Won't you write us an account of your entertainment little niece?

I do not belong to the L. T. L. for there is none anywhere round here. I would like to, though. I would like the Cozy Corner boys or girls to write to me. Will you?

EMMA POMEROY.

Northcott, Anderson Co., Kan.

Here, L. T. L's, is a little correspondent who will be glad to hear from some of you.

I am a temperance boy, nine years old. I go to school every day, and love to study my books.

Pocahontas, Ill. JOHNNIE T. G. SHAFER.

Those statements mean that you want to be a good and intelligent man, don't they, John?

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

264.

ACROSTIC RECTANGLE.

```
  1 3
1 * * * *
2 * * * *
3 * * * *
4 * * * *
5 * * * *
6 * * * *
7 * * * *
```

Down: 1, A noted woman who is often called "America's queen of homes." 3, A state and National leader in our noble cause.

Across: 1, A well-known W. C. T. U. worker who passed away in a distant land about a year ago. 2, Within. 3, Willingly. 4, To exist. 5, A loved young white-ribboner recently promoted. 6, Station. 7, What our bodies will become.

J. A. S.

265.

WORD SQUARES.

1.

1, Within. 2, Not far. 3, A story. 4, Metals.

GEORGIA CHRISTIAN.

2.

1, A city. 2, David's grandfather. 3, Only. 4, Paradise.

3.

1, The sign of an idea. 2, A preposition. 3, To trust in. 4, Loses moisture.

ROYAL J. DAVIS.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JANUARY 4.

258. W-his key.

259. Touch not, taste not, handle not.

Correct answers: Daisy E. Martin.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
MANAGING EDITOR—MARGARET A. SUDDUTH.
OFFICE EDITOR—MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—JENNIE A. STEWART.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS { LADY HENRY SOMERSET. MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Secretary.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U

President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, In Extremis. By Joseph Cook 2
The Member-at-Large. I. By Helen Campbell 2
Victory for the Veto. By Lady Henry Somerset 2
Another Little Sermon. By Samuel James Capper 3
"Mother's Day." By H. A. Delano 3
Memories of the White City. III. By Elizabeth Cumings 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Penelope Takes Exceptions 4
The Suffrage Question in Colorado 5
A Loving, Prayerful Request 5
No Double Standard 5
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 5
THE HOUSEHOLD:
Poem, A Picture. By Elizabeth F. Merrill 6
Baby Sweethearts. By Mary Wood Allen, M. D. 6
Typical Lessons for Loyal Temperance Legion Teachers. VI. By Mary E. Rudd 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, You Can't Vote and I Can't Vote. By Mrs. Evalina M. Smith 7
Buying Gospel Water. By Mabel Gifford 7
AUNT JANE'S COZY CORNER:
Soft-Shelled Nuts 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Our Financial and Social Systems 8
A Temperance Island 9
THE WATCH TOWER 9
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
State Reporters—Massachusetts—Kansas 10
Crusade News in a Nutshell 11
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Promotion of Purity in Literature and Art—Work Among Railroad Employes—State Superintendents of Literature 12
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 12
TREASURER'S CORNER 12
A Card 13
OUR LIBRARY TABLE 13
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. —Eph. 6:2.

OUR FINANCIAL AND SOCIAL SYSTEMS.

The financial depression and consequent want and suffering continue unabated throughout the world. Our own country is not the severest sufferer, yet here the distress is unprecedented.

We have gone through periods of financial disturbance before, but the present situation is without a parallel in our history. Never before did business remain so long paralyzed, never was the army of unemployed so great. As the result of a careful inquiry, Bradstreet's gives the number of unemployed in 119 cities as 801,055, with nearly two millions of persons dependent upon them. It reports that the failures of the last year exceed in numbers and in the amount of property represented anything known in our previous commercial history. In all our cities charity has become the business of the winter. The wealthy are giving into the hundreds of thousands, Andrew Carnegie alone pledging to double all gifts of the city of Pittsburg for two months, the total of his gifts not to exceed a quarter of a million. Gigantic eating houses feed thousands of persons daily, and multitudes who never before engaged actively in charitable work are organized into societies for relieving the widespread distress.

Scenes from which we had fondly dreamed ourselves forever exempted by virtue of our institutions are reported throughout the length and breadth of the land. Around the Armour packing-houses in Chicago is daily enacted the scene represented in the plaster group at the World's Fair, entitled "The Struggle for Work." Most of the large packing-houses are closed altogether. Many of the departments of Armour's are closed, but it still employs a limited number of workmen steadily, while for a few hours every day extra help is called in. Large numbers of men begin to gather at five o'clock in the morning, the number rapidly increasing until seven o'clock, watching for a chance to obtain the coveted employment. The moment the foreman appears, a rush is made towards him, the men push the others aside, knock one another down and trample over each other in their frenzy. Those who fail to get work sometimes attack the successful ones and rob them of their dinner and money if they have any. At night men and children stand around and beg for the remains of the workmen's lunch.

In Cleveland, O., the mob marched with their wives and children demanding bread or work, and so, throughout this entire land, which so long has afforded an asylum from the bitter poverty of the old world, the fearful scenes of that old world are being enacted.

Taken in connection with past experience, with similar financial disasters, with the evils which exist in the most prosperous times, the present appalling situation arouses in the minds of thoughtful people at least a suspicion that we are dwelling on the verge of a volcano, whose periodic eruptions shake our society to its very foundations and threaten us with ultimate ruin. Surely, intelligent people can be induced now to examine candidly the foundations of the social structure in which we live with a view to finding the cause of our present troubles, and therefore something more than mere temporary relief from them.

To do this, it is necessary to inquire, What is our present system, what its evils? Are those evils inherent in the system or merely incidental? If the latter is the case local treatment will solve the problem, and we may hope that "tariff reform" or an improved monetary system will lead us out of our troubles. But if the former, then a radical change in our social system itself alone affords any prospect of permanent relief.

The evils attending the present conditions are patent to all. Rainbow-hued pictures of the prosperity of the laboring classes, such as excessive admirers of the nineteenth century civilization delight to paint become ghastly mockery in the light of Booth's "Darkest England," whose scenes of misery are reproduced in every city of our own land. Even in times of the greatest prosperity, sweaters' dens flourish, women support (?) themselves and their children by making men's drawers at fifty cents per dozen; others go out to work by the day, leaving two or three or more young children alone from early morning until late at night; shop girls work at starvation wages, and are often compelled to keep their poor position by the sacrifice of their virtue; strong men, industrious, temperate, frugal, are unable to provide for their families, and walk the streets at night that they may not hear their little ones cry for bread; worse still, children ten years of age are kept at work in coal mines, and those of four sent to factories to pull out basting threads under the eye of an overseer.

These are not exceptional cases, they are simply examples which show with what excessive toil, at what utter sacrifice of the mental and spiritual faculties a large mass of our population, even in the most prosperous times and in this exceptionally favored land, sustain mere physical existence. At the opposite extreme are a few enormously wealthy capitalists who spend more daily in their luxurious living than many families of worn and fainting toilers can command in a year. And there seems no tendency to a more equitable distribution of riches. On the contrary, the wealth of the wealthy increases at a rate that puts to blush the tales of the Arabian Nights, while the rapidly growing trusts and monopolies are crowding more and more of the comfortable, middle class of tradesmen and merchants into the ranks of the starving laborers.

One of the most anomalous yet constant features of our present system is that of thousands of human beings suffering for want of the necessities of life—food, clothing, fuel, while on the other hand, agriculturists are forced to the hardest toil, mines and manufactories are compelled to suspend work, and merchants fail because of the overproduction of the very commodities, for lack of which, their fellow men are dying.

Another incident of the system is its wastefulness. Business enterprise, which consists very largely in getting ahead of one's competitors, has resulted in methods incredibly wasteful. Expensive advertisements, commercial travelers and the like, increase enormously the price of every commodity used. It costs half the price of a sewing machine to sell it, and the same holds true of agricultural and other machinery, as well as of many other articles. Surely, a system thus ruinously wasteful cannot be the best financial product of the highest civilization.

The great evil, however, with which we have to deal, is the abnormal and unjust inequality in the distribution of riches and labor. Is it an inseparable feature of our social organism?

Our social system is known as the "competitive." Its ideal workings are presented by the political economies substantially thus: Laborer competing with laborer keeps wages down to a reasonable point, while on the other hand, capitalist competing with capitalist prevents wages being forced below the point where the wage-fund ceases to be a fair proportion of the profits. Such, in brief, is an outline of the way in which the competitive system theoretically maintains an equitable distribution of the wealth of the world and competition becomes "the life of trade." The theory seems reasonable, why is it that in actual practice the competitive system, measured by its actual results in accomplishing the very things claimed for it, has never at the best been more than an indifferent success, and during the last quarter of a century, has been rapidly lapsing into utter failure?

The fact that strikes us at once upon investigation is that competition does not operate freely. If it did, it is hard to see why the actual results might not correspond to the theories of political economy. As it is, however, laborers compete with laborers until wages are reduced to the starvation point, while the counter competition on the part of capitalists which should prevent this unfair reduction of the wage-fund, is practically wanting. Of course, say the political economists, where competition is thwarted for any reason, we cannot have the results of competition. The difficulty is, however, that a farther examination reveals the startling fact that the free operation of competition cannot be secured. In other words, centuries of experiment prove to us that the competitive system is impracticable. As soon as competition becomes the basis of business, all classes attempt to thwart it. Each trade limits its members as to the number of apprentices each may take in order that prices may be kept up in that trade. By various devices, combinations of laborers seek to push wages up to the highest possible point, and combinations of employers to lower them.

At just this point the theory of the political economists breaks down. They have utterly failed to take into account one factor upon which the fate of the competitive system rests, and that is the unavoidable inequality in the opposing forces. Forces absolutely equal acting in opposite directions will produce equilibrium whether those forces be physical, financial or moral, but the slightest excess of power in one destroys inevitably the equilibrium. Capitalists and laborers have not and can never be equal. The laborers are the weaker vessel and are inevitably pushed to the wall. Wealth, greater intelligence, and smaller numbers give the capitalist class enormous advantage. A strike or lockout, however prolonged, to them does not mean so much as the curtailment of personal expenditure; to their antagonists it often means destitution. Even when victors, the victory is too dearly bought by the laborers to be of more than doubtful advantage. As our competitive civilization has developed, the contest has but grown more and more unequal. The rapidly increasing wealth and mechanical inventions have acted as both cause and effect of trusts and monopolies which have become such a feature of our civilization. For the immense resources of the earth can be developed and mechanical inventions can be applied on a grand scale only by the concentration of enormous wealth.

Lieber says that ours is a costly civilization and great wealth is an absolute necessity. It is further true that concentration of wealth is necessary. The difficulty is that under our present system, all the sources of power gravitate inevitably into the hands of a single class and a class which becomes smaller and hence more powerful as the trusts and monopolies steadily crowd the smaller capitalists into the ranks of labor. Not less wealth nor less concentration of wealth is the demand of the times, but a system by which all men are unitedly the guardians and direct the use of the world's resources.

The present unfortunate condition of things is not a mere accident. Necessarily, by the law of its development, the competitive system tends toward a state of universal serfdom. An examination of its foundation principle serves only to strengthen the conclusion reached by investigation into the facts of history, and the necessary tendency of the system. Selfishness, pure and unadulterated, is the foundation upon which our social structure is built, and of thorns men do not gather figs. Under the law of competition, classes and individuals can succeed only in proportion as others fail. Every yard of calico that A sells is a loss to his fellow merchant, B; necessarily one's own success is always accompanied with the failure of others. Some one has said that competition is war, and war to the death. Whether he will or not, the successful business man rises to success over "the wrecked lives and fortunes of other men." Competition logically results in a society of Ishmaelites. That it does not actually bring about this state in its fullest degree is due not to any unrecognized factor in the system itself, but to counteracting influences entirely foreign to the system.

But God reigns, and the divine can never be wholly eradicated from the nature which was created in His likeness. Hence, Christianity has introduced into our system the two principles of faith in one another, and brotherly coöperation with one another, which have both modified the workings of competition and preserved our social structure, Competition is disintegrating in its nature, and could never have held society together without the and of Christian principles which have neutralized its effects. But its days are numbered. Not more unmistakably did the signs of death manifest themselves in the effete civilizations of the past than they manifest themselves in the competitive system of the present.

Whatever may be the form which society is to take, by whatever road we reach it, one thing is certain, the civilization which is to survive must be built upon the rock of Christ's teaching. We have His word for it that any other will go down when the storm beats upon it. Selfish competition, every one for himself, must give place to Christian coöperation, all for all. In the new civilization each one's loss must become in actual fact every one's loss, and the gain of each must be the gain of all.

The earth is abundantly able to support in comfort the entire population now existing. Were society so organized that each member were working in coöperation with all the others, there could be no such contradictory state of things as produce wanting consumers while starving, freezing laborers seek in vain for work. It is very easy to scoff at such a consummation as impracticable. But nothing can be more impracticable than the competitive system has shown itself to be, and we need not fear to make experiments lest we fly to direr evils than we already experience. It is easy to cry out against "calamity howlers," but he is not wise who shuts his eyes to the signs of the times, however threatening they may be. Disorders so serious, so deep-seated and long-continued portend either death or the bringing forth of a new life. We have no doubt as to what the outcome will be. Society is in the throes of birth, not of death; in its ceaseless evolution it has reached the verge of a revolution. The unrest and disorders of the present are but the expanding Christ life within bursting its outgrown shell. The result will be a reorganized social system, animated by the spirit of Christian brotherhood.

A TEMPERANCE ISLAND.

We are indebted to the Japan Mail of Yokohama for a very interesting and valuable editorial on "A temperance island in the Pacific," and confident that our readers will be glad of the information, we give herewith a resumé of the article.

In the little Sea of Japan lies a tiny island, named Okushiri. It is only thirty-five miles in circumference and contains less than one thousand people, who are in no wise remarkable except for a determination to rid themselves of the drink evil. Fishing is the chief occupation of the island, and so profitable is it and so simple the wants of the people that it suffices for all needs. Their comparative prosperity and the introduction of saké onto the island soon led them into the vice of drunkenness, and in 1884 the people awoke to the fact that they had consumed their year's products and had none of the usual provision of rice for the approaching winter. Their love of strong drink had led them to neglect necessary repairs on their houses and to replace their worn-out fishing nets with new ones. They who had formerly enjoyed plenty saw starvation facing them and finally agreed to the proposition of one or two leaders to give up the use of saké, chochu and other strong drinks and appropriate the money thus spent for the necessaries of life. After prolonged and wavering discussion the inhabitants were induced to enter into an agreement, which, because of its novelty and directness we give entire:

COVENANT MADE BY THE PEOPLE OF OKUSHIRI ISLAND CONCERNING THE SALE AND PURCHASE OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES AND THE USE OF THE SAME IN THE ISLAND OF OKUSHIRI.

This land which we inhabit is a lonely island in the Pacific Ocean. Its inhabitants, numbering ninety families, find almost their only means of amusement in drinking alcohol. Nine out of every ten are addicted to saké, the sums annually spent upon which aggregate a heavy amount. In 1884 we imported about eight hundred and eighty tubs of saké, costing $3.50 each, in addition to other alcoholic liquors, yet a scarcity of such beverages was felt in winter, as is often the case. Our governor, when last he visited the island, urged upon us the importance of coöperating to make provision against a famine, signs of the advent of such a calamity being more or less apparent. Impressed by what he said, we did and are doing everything in our power to induce others to join us in this work of making provision against impending calamities. But the take of herrings having been unusually bad this year, the people have little or nothing to devote to such a purpose. Debtors are unable to meet their engagements, and some are even compelled to depend on official aid for supplies of food. We are threatened with misery and some extraordinary measure is necessary to save us. Frugality must be the rule of our conduct, and every kind of excess must be avoided. We, therefore, hereby resolve to abstain from the luxury which we relish above all others, namely, saké, so as to terminate the importation of the liquor into the Island. The money hitherto devoted to the purchase of saké shall be applied to lay in stocks of rice and other grain as a provision against future want, on the one hand, and to increase the capital available for fishery purposes on the other. No other method offers for solving the difficulty without increased physical labor. We have therefore drawn up this covenant, so that the prosperity of the Island may be secured and its interests furthered by mutual encouragement. Those who desire to share in this effort of abstemiousness for the sake of future benefits, are invited to sign this covenant with all speed.

SIGNATURES OF THE PROMOTERS.

Dated, July, 1884.

ART. I.—We, the inhabitants of Okushiri Island, jointly and severally, in accordance with the Covenant hereby signed, do pledge ourselves to abandon wholly the sale, purchase and use of alcoholic beverages.

ART. II.—Any islander refusing to sign this Covenant, and engaging in the sale, purchase or use of alcohol, shall not receive sympathy or aid from his fellow-islanders as a whole no matter what circumstances he may be placed in.

ART. III.—Any islander, whether a permanent or a temporary resident, who, having signed this Covenant, shall nevertheless violate its provisions by engaging in the liquor business, shall be fined as follows:

	Yen.
For every tub of Osaka saké sold.....	30
For every tub of Echigo saké sold.....	15
For every measure of saké sold.....	10

[A yen is nearly equal to an American dollar.—ED.]

ART. IV.—The alcoholic stock in trade of any one violating this Covenant shall be confiscated.

ART. V.—The proceeds of all fines collected under this Covenant, and of all confiscated liquors, shall be devoted to the purchase of rice for storing in the common granary. The liquors thus sold must be exported at once to other provinces under the inspection of the proper authorities.

ART. VI.—Any islander, who in violation of this Covenant, shall be detected purchasing saké from a seller whose business is conducted either in violation of, or without reference to, this Covenant shall be fined one-half of the sums mentioned in Article III.

ART. VII.—Any person giving information of the above offences to the committee of supervision, and furnishing full evidence, shall receive one-third of the fine.

ART. VIII.—Any person immigrating from another province shall be fully instructed in the terms of this Covenant, and only upon his thorough understanding of them, as certified by the examiners, shall he be allowed to settle in the Island.

ART. IX.—Should a ship or junk anchored in the waters adjacent to the Island, sell alcoholic liquors to an islander, the purchaser should be regarded as an importer and fined according to Article III.

ART. X.—This Covenant shall remain in force for five years, and when provision against times of scarcity shall have been fully made, and when all the islanders are in a position to lead independent lives, suitable changes may be made in its provisions after due deliberation.

(Signed) 117 OKUSHIRI ISLANDERS.

The results are so tersely told by the Japan Mail that we quote its closing paragraph as follows:

"The consequences of this covenant were very marked. It was rigorously observed. Even government officials, whatever their rank, had to give up saké drinking when they visited the Island, and as a matter of course, every dramster who could not reform was compelled to take his departure. Order thenceforth reigned completely and prosperity came with rapid strides. The population increased five-fold in five years and the capital invested in the fishing industry, ten-fold. Reed-thatches were replaced by shingles. Four large granaries were kept full of rice, and in addition, each house had a store of its own. It is stated that there is now stored in the Island rice sufficient to support the people for three or four years, even though the herring fishery should fail entirely. Roads have been constructed in places where nothing of the kind existed before. The principal school has been greatly improved, and several branch schools have been established. New lands have been brought into cultivation, and hemp to the value of two thousand dollars is grown annually for the manufacture of fishing nets, which, before the signing of the covenant, had to be imported entirely from the main land. Statistics also show a marked decrease of crime and so famous did the success of the experiment become, that a large community of settlers in the neighboring island of Ezo pledged themselves to a covenant similar to that of Okushiri and with similarly happy results. Finally, we may add that when the five years originally contemplated by the covenant expired, it was renewed for another term of five years, despite the opposition of an influential local official."

We recommend one sentence as particularly applicable to our own hard times, and that is: "Frugality must be the rule of our conduct, and every kind of excess must be avoided." Never was there a more opportune time for abstaining from alcoholic beverages than now, and to continue to abstain as these sensible islanders have done.

A NATIONAL mutual aid and benefit association to meet the needs of a certain class of American citizens who find themselves "discriminated against" by other fraternal and protective orders was formed in Indiana last week. This peculiar class are termed "brewers and saloon-keepers," who, concluding not to wait longer for relief from those on whom they are so constantly imposing burdens of taxation, and other concomitants of their craft, have formed for themselves an insurance organization. We are interested to learn that, though "not deeming their risks more hazardous than those engaged in many other occupations not classed as hazardous," this association will use the extra hazardous table of rates!

It was a pathetic incident brought to our knowledge by a relative that as Henry Blackwell and his only child, Alice Stone Blackwell, left the room in which their wife and mother, Mrs. Lucy Stone, had just expired, and went down stairs together, Mr. Blackwell said to Alice, "We must try and keep mamma's flag flying," and went on to say that he meant to work more earnestly in woman's cause than he had ever done before. That is what I call real chivalry, as distinct from the mawkish, mediæval, regulation sort now happily passing off the stage to give place to something infinitely nobler and more worthy of man and woman both.

***

Too late for our Crusade number came this tribute from Joseph Cook, which On Duty is glad to place in her column: "The straightforward Christian aggressiveness which lighted the fires of the woman's temperance Crusade a score of years ago ought to burn in all the forty departments of the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, national and international. I rejoice in all that these departments are doing, but I take occasion to congratulate you especially on the success of Mrs. Hunt's department of scientific temperance instruction. Within fifteen years some thirty-six of our states and all our territories have been brought under laws making such instruction in the common schools mandatory. This is a great step in advance, and a good omen for the temperance cause in the twentieth century. No American political party can be permanently preserved in whisky."

***

It is delightful to see the ribbon white unfolding round the world. Knowledge of this comes to us in many ways. Sometimes it is by the study of our World's W. C. T. U. directory, with its forty odd stations, sometimes by the reports of our World missionaries, with their thrilling experiences, but this time it has come to On Duty through the medium of a private letter from the far-off West Indies. It is written by a French woman, Miss Alice Titi, of Martinique, and encloses a signed pledge card. A few of the quaint sentences I will share with my readers: "I have read with delight the addresses of the great World's W. C. T. U. Convention, especially those of Mrs. Andrew, Dr. Bushnell and Miss Ackermann. What a difference between the French women and your countrywomen! While we are educated in the cage like the parrots, you travel in the world, accomplishing some wonders of activity and energy in behalf of mankind. My American sisters, I understand you! I admire you. Perhaps one day I shall have the happiness to view Chicago and visit the temperance palace built by a woman." I hope some day to have the pleasure of showing this new ally through our beautiful Temple, which she appropriately calls a palace.

***

Here is a rich fragment, hitherto unpublished, from the Bible reading which Mrs. Andrew gave at the opening of our last World's Convention. The lesson was upon Jacob's wrestling with the angels. Mrs. Andrew continued: "Mr. Moody said years ago, 'God cannot make use of a man until he gets to the end of himself, and the sooner he comes to it the better, where he can say, I know my helplessness, for that is the time when the divine power works in man.' I remember hearing Josephine Butler say in England, 'The hour of our utter helplessness and the consciousness of that utter helplessness is the very hour of God's power in the soul.' I remember such an hour in India, when Dr. Bushnell and I had closed our doors and shut ourselves up with God, and, oh, the realization of utter helplessness. We had had a month in which we had accomplished nothing; the great secret system seemed impregnable. We realized that no human power would ever open those closed gates, but we waited upon God, and as the time wore on, I remember how that sense of utter helplessness increased upon me, my soul bowed itself more and more deeply at the feet of divine Omnipotence, and then there came light, God could make himself heard in the utter silence of our souls before Him. And so I ask you this morning, has the angel touched you and have you realized that your strength is gone before God? Then that is the hour that brings power. Don't be troubled if you have a deep sense of your helplessness, but wait upon God until you hear the heavenly voice, and then there will be no mistakes and no difficulty about your future actions. It was after this that the angel said to him, 'Thou hast prevailed with man and with God, and henceforth he should bear a new name; he should be called Israel, a prince among the princes of the earth.' And then Jacob said: 'I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.' The sun rose upon him."

ON DUTY.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

STATE REPORTERS.

Alabama—Mrs. Julia H. McBryde, 308 St. Louis St., Mobile.
Arizona—Mrs. L. C. Hughes, Tucson.
Arkansas—Mrs. H. P. Edmonson, Little Rock.
California—Mrs. Dorcas J. Spencer, 826 Waller St., San Francisco.
California (S.)—Miss G. T. Stickney, Temperance Temple, Los Angeles.
Carolina (N.)—Mrs. S. V. Tomlinson, Greensboro.
Carolina (S.)—Miss Nettie P. Farrow, Spartanburg.
Colorado—Mrs. S. L. Teetor, Denver.
Connecticut—Miss M. Belle Smith, Rockfall.
Dakota (North)—
Dakota (South)—Miss Clare Williams, Watertown.
Delaware—
District of Columbia—Miss Lizzie Kessler, 802 North I Street, Washington.
Florida—Sallie J. Glenn, Tampa.
Georgia—
Idaho—Mrs. Mary E. McGee, Nampa.
Illinois—Mrs. G. H. Read, 412 E. North street, Bloomington.
Indiana—Mrs. Cornelia Meadows, 114 Line St., Evansville.
Indian Territory—Mrs. Sarah Ford Crosby, Muscogee.
Iowa—Mrs. Clara P. White, Volga.
Kansas—Mrs. S. S. Weatherby, Le Roy
Kentucky—Miss Nellie Sloy, Lebanon.
Louisiana—Mrs. S. A. Knapp.
Maine—Miss Mary French, Auburn.
Maryland—Mrs. Margaret A. Lake, 2231 St. Paul St., Baltimore.
Massachusetts—Dr. Louise Purington, 23 Allston St., Dorchester,
Michigan—Mrs. C. H. Johnson, Flint.
Minnesota—Mrs. Amy A. Green, 2208 Oakland avenue, Minneapolis.
Mississippi—Mrs. Annie E. Harper, Fayette.
Missouri—Miss Eva Jones, Clinton.
Montana—Maggie E. Templeton, Helena.
Nebraska—Mrs. Dora V. Wheelock, Beatrice.
Nevada—Mrs. Lena M. Westlake, Reno.
New Hampshire—Mrs. F. H. Bailey, Hopkinton.
New Jersey—Mrs. N. L. Caminade, Trenton.
New Mexico—Mrs. Ada Morley Jarrett, Socorro.
New York—Mrs. Frances Graham, Lockport.
Ohio—Mrs. Antoinette Clevenger, Wilmington.
Oklahoma—Mrs. Sue Brown, Oklahoma City.
Oregon—Mrs. L. A. Nash, Corvallis.
Pennsylvania—Miss Adda Burch, Greenville, Box 194,
Rhode Island—Miss Miriam Earle, Valley Falls.
Tennessee—Mrs. T. P. Holman, Fayetteville.
Texas—Mrs. Cornelia Keith Carter, West End, San Antonio.
Utah—Mrs. Caroline H. Reid, 218 S. 9th East St., Salt Lake City.
Vermont—Mrs. E. S. Farr, Bristol.
Virginia—Mrs. Thos. Whitehead, Ashland.
Virginia (W.)—Mrs. Mary Cartwright, 1007 Main St., Wheeling.
Washington (East)—Mrs. Lucy A. Switzer, Cheney.
Washington (West)—Mrs. Etta Jones, Kent.
Wisconsin—Mrs. Maria F. Hanchette, 322 W. Washington Ave., Madison.
Wyoming—Mrs. F. A. Jones, Green River.

Canadian Reporter—Mrs. Margaret G. Ure, 772 Palace St., Montreal.

MASSACHUSETTS.

LATEST FROM THE OLD BAY STATE.

People say in the west sometimes, "Yes, Massachusetts is a good place—a good place to emigrate from." This sounds like slander about the "state of the beautiful Blue Hills"; or it would if it did not so often come true. Our corresponding secretaries emigrate; ditto our state reporters and much other valuable W. C. T. U. material, so that many have to be duplicated. From Cape Ann to Cape Cod, from the ocean to the Berkshire Hills, each W. C. T. U. woman must count at least for two. Even then, Boston goes for "license" by a considerably increased majority at the recent municipal election, and the record for temperance is not flattering in the cities of the commonwealth.

It all seems to have been said when our Massachusetts governor rounds out his Thanksgiving proclamation with the sonorous words, "God save the commonwealth of Massachusetts!" The ministers reiterate the cry, and the pews respond, "Amen!" Yes, it is all said, but how few realize that it remains to be done.

"Why not get new workers?" you say. We do, but they are not all labeled W. C. T. U. For instance, 10,300 women registered in Boston to vote in the matter of school suffrage, their modest prerogative in the election. The women held the balance of power and their candidates were elected. Much more is involved, however, than electing the candidates, as our scientific temperance instruction workers well know. Better men and women (not politicians) are secured, and this means better enforcement of law, better text-books, and a higher regard for vital questions pertaining to our public schools.

Not all the independent women voters, neither the committee of one hundred, neither the equal suffragists who celebrated the 120th anniversary of the Boston Tea Party in Faneuil Hall the other evening, are W. C. T. U. workers. All these and many more, however, are allied in the sense of cleanness, pureness, reform. And then, praise the Lord! the church is coming to be more of an ally. The ministers, not a few, took hold with a will in the no-license campaign, so that in one community the work of the W. C. T. U. was practically done by the church. Notably in Chelsea, also, they were specially active.

The press cannot be said to be on our side. Note the following from one of the cleanest dailies of Boston:

"It is impossible to avoid noting, by the way, that notwithstanding the large gains made by the Republicans in both branches of the legislature and in face of the prominence that was given to temperance in the speech of the presiding officer, and in the platform adopted at the state convention of the party, the trend of public sentiment is apparently opposed to radical temperance measures, or perhaps it were nearer correct to say that the people think the liquor laws now in force are sufficiently restrictive. Possibly the people think that the constant stirring up of the liquor cauldron only poisons the atmosphere with an effluvium that whets the appetite for the very thing from which it is sought to wean it."

The Massachusetts union sends in, as usual, its plea for municipal suffrage; but there are many who feel like the Colorado man who wrote, "Will not Massachusetts, with Governor Greenhalge as chief executive, follow Colorado? Wyoming and Colorado lead, and from these lofty mountains ask their sister states to come up to their lofty height in matters of common justice and political right." The same writer promised that Mrs. Fessenden, who helped in Colorado, should be sent to Congress if she would settle there; but of course we prefer to send her from Massachusetts. When Lucy Stone was dying, a member of the legislature said to one of our workers, "I wish we could go up to the state house and enact a law for municipal suffrage for women before she passes away." Lucy Stone "being dead, yet speaketh"; and better than a statue, a bust, or a monument, would be the establishment of woman suffrage in Massachusetts as a memorial to her consecrated life.

Crusade day, December 23, was quite generally observed by the Massachusetts unions. We have a few of the original Crusaders in our midst, and these give an historic flavor to these anniversaries. They realize, as well as the moderns, that women could not stay on their knees on the sidewalks and in the saloons. Crusades to the Holy City were not kept up, and no wonder those to the saloon came to an end. This sepulchre is too vast and deep to stay in and neglect their homes! Besides, prayers do not seem to avail against votes. The Crusade was a voice crying in the wilderness, ushering in the calm afterthought of persistent, Christian endeavor. The lessons are not being lost in home and church, in school and state.

Massachusetts has probably not been behind in the ten cent collection. We are wonderfully loyal to that brave will—over the sea, knowing that it is foreordained, and for her to say it is for us to do it.

The Crusade meetings were the principal meetings of December. There is a lull in county conventions and public meetings the last of the year,—a hush of work and a renewing of one's self in the Divine Worker, and His advent and mission. What next? we say. What new life and spirit for 1894? On New Year's morning our head official walked into one of our homes and said: "No life shall be the heavier, or more sorrowful, for any word I shall say this year." Whereupon one of our poets, W. C. T. U. and otherwise, added the following verses to her New Year's hymn, and I abstract them for you, dear women of the New Crusade:

"No earthly morn,
No day unborn
Shall clouded be by act of mine;
No gloomy lot,
No darkest spot
In all God's earth shall fail to shine.

"Yet pause, my soul!
The lofty goal
Of fruitage is beyond thy power;
Oh, rather dare
To breathe a prayer
That God will make thy purpose flower."

LOUISE C. PURINGTON,
State Reporter, Boston.

KANSAS JOTTINGS.

Crusade Day in Kansas was warm and pleasant, hardly the counterpart of that day so long ago, whose deeds of moral heroism we were called upon to commemorate.

Burlington union held a public meeting with an appropriate program, on Friday, December 29. Several clergymen were present and took part in the exercises, and recommended the unions to make "a new crusade" against the drug stores. Mrs. Woodworth, a member of the local union, gave her experience in the Crusade in Burlington twenty years ago. The meeting was held in the Methodist church, with a good attendance, and must have been productive of good results.

Waverly union held a special service on Sabbath afternoon, December 31, with a good congregation present, and felt that much good was done, though no new names were added to their membership roll. They have lately lost two most excellent members by death, and they feel a sadness that is difficult to overcome, even though they "mourn not as those without hope." The union holds gospel temperance meetings on the last Sabbath of every month, thus reaching many who would not come out to the regular meetings of the W. C. T. U.

Morse union, in Johnson county, observed Crusade Day in an appropriate manner. The president, Mrs. Terrell, read the Crusade Psalm; prayer was offered by a number of the members, and suitable music rendered. The president having been a "Crusader" gave her experiences of the Crusade at Shawnee town, which was full of interest. Sketches were read from the Crusade number of THE UNION SIGNAL, and a thankoffering of ten cents was given, with appropriate Scripture texts recited by many of the members, and a neat sum was in this way added to their treasury.

The three unions of Coffey county each held Crusade services. Rastall union, composed of county members, gave its regular meeting, December 14, to the Crusade work. They read Crusade selections and sang the old Crusade hymns. There were but three members and three visitors present, but before the close of the meeting the visitors had each put on the white ribbon of the W. C. T. U., and we felt we had a right to sing the doxology. Previous to these new additions the union numbered but seven paying members. On December 23, Crusade Day proper, the members of this union, assisted by other friends, gave your "reporter" and her husband a genuine surprise, it being their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. They brought well-filled baskets for the "wedding feast," one basket being filled with good wishes only, was left as a souvenir of the day. It was of silver lined with gold, "a thing of beauty and a joy forever," and was fully appreciated by the recipients.

The Topeka W. C. T. U. held Crusade anniversary, January 1. Mrs. M. E. Perine, press superintendent for the fourth district, writes concerning it: "We were honored by the presence of Mrs. Drusilla Wilson, the first state president of the W. C. T. U. of Kansas, and several other Crusaders, whose reminiscences were very interesting. We met in the first Presbyterian church, whose pastor, Dr. Alderson, was pastor of the church at Washington Court House previous to his coming here, and he gave a graphic review of the Crusade, from the traditions he had learned while there. One thing we heard with regret, that there are now liquor saloons open at Washington Court House.

Royal Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure
A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.
Royal Baking Powder Co.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

"Mrs. Drusilla Wilson said she was also a Crusader, but when she learned that the liquor dealers (in Lawrence) had paid their money and held licenses from the city to carry on their business she concluded that the first thing that ought to be done was for the women to go home and 'crusade' their husbands until the licenses were revoked and a prohibitory law enacted. To this end she worked, and she never crusaded the liquor saloons again. Judging by results, it was a very good move to make, and one we would like to see tried by the sisters of Ohio, and all other states where a prohibitory law is not in existence.

"Topeka held a special election for city mayor last month. Over four thousand women registered, but only one thousand four hundred voted. The man elected was so universally approved that many felt there was no use in their taking the trouble to vote. He is a Christian, and a temperance man. A pledge-signing Crusade is being inaugurated. The W. C. T. U. has done all the pledge work here for a long time. We secured a great many pledges in Sunday-schools in the county last year. One woman took fifteen hundred pledges of Sunday-school scholars. I presume we secured not less than three or four thousand signatures in Shawnee county.

"Albert Griffin's idea of moral suasion and pledging is good as far as it goes, but one of our papers aptly headed a notice of one of his meetings, 'Dropping the club, prohibition, and taking up the switch, moral suasion.'

"Jailer Disbrow paid the W. C. T. U. the following deserved tribute: 'The real kind of Christian work in the jail that bears good fruit is the Thursday afternoon gospel meetings held in the cells by the women. All of the prisoners are treated alike at these meetings, and I can see the good results of them.' The W. C. T. U., under the supervision of Mrs. Jenkins, has kept up these meetings continuously for fifteen years. We have had a police matron about three months. The W. C. T. U. and the Equal Suffrage Association worked long for her appointment, and now she is so indispensable that they would not be without her on any account. She is a sensible, Christian woman."

The W. C. T. U. women of Wichita, sixteen in number, went on a real crusade and visited places where liquor is sold in violation of the prohibitory law, singing and praying as was done in the Crusade they commemorated. They were treated civilly in each case. Their visits were wholly unexpected, and attracted large crowds of men, and caused no little comment. One paper said of them, "The sixteen Wichita women, who marched into the saloons at Wichita, and prayed, ought to have more courage. The days of praying with insolent violators of the law are past. The sixteen women could have accomplished more by having the keepers of the joints arrested, tried and convicted. Of course the plea is made that this is impossible in Wichita, but with sixteen determined women pushing it, we believe the law could be enforced in this instance."

To which I would emphatically say, Amen! We have the law on our side, and armed with no more moral courage than it would take to hold prayer service in a saloon, we can answer our own prayers, and surely God is not going to do for us what we can do for ourselves. We need not expect it, and should not ask it of Him.

At the recent convention of the second district, held in Ottawa, Mrs. Fannie Holsinger, of Rosedale, was elected president to succeed Mrs. L. B. Smith, who had been elected state president, and Mrs. J. C. Reed, of Garnett, was elected treasurer, to succeed Mrs. Holsinger, the

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

former treasurer. The election seems to have given general satisfaction.

It is said that there are now seven hundred and ninety-seven prisoners in our state prison, and that of that number there are only fourteen women. And yet women are such a dangerous class they cannot be trusted with the ballot.

Quenemo, Osage county, has lately held a medal contest. The contestants were all young men and young men furnished the music for the occasion.

With the exception of a few flakes of snow about Thanksgiving time we have been living under Italian skies, with mercury well up to seventy degrees day after day. This has given the W. C. T. U. a fine opportunity to do a good winter's work, and I feel sure it has been improved, though but little of the precious time has been taken in reporting the results to me.

MRS. S. S. WEATHERBY,
State Reporter, Le Roy.

WYOMING

IN STATE CONVENTION.

The eleventh annual convention of Wyoming W. C. T. U. met at Cheyenne, with an attendance larger than usual, but with fewer delegates. None of the northern unions were represented although several of them sent interesting letters of greeting. In the absence of the president and corresponding secretary, and by request of the executive, Mrs. S. A. Bristol, the local president, presided during the entire session. Mrs. Jennie Nevins Day, in the absence of Miss Ege (who has removed from the state) was elected recording secretary pro tem.

The state officers elected and reëlected for the following year were: For president, Mrs. Wilhelmina Brown, of Laramie; recording secretary, Mrs. J. N. Day, of Cheyenne; corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. A. Jones, of Green River, and treasurer, Mrs. Mary M. Lights, of Evanston.

The corresponding secretary reported an increase in membership of about fifty. There were very few lectures given during the year. Mrs. Bailey, of Iowa, gave several talks in the northern part of the state, which helped the cause very much. Several new members were added to the unions that she visited, and the temperance people were much encouraged. Mrs. Bailey was sent into the state by the Prohibitionists of New York, if I remember correctly, and our state is truly grateful to them and her for her good work.

Mrs. Unruh spoke a few times in the state and was in attendance at the convention. The Loyal Temperance Legion of Cheyenne came in during the evening session and sang some very pretty songs. Our superintendent of railroad work, Mrs. Mary Lee, sent a pretty gavel, which was presented to the president by Mrs. Day, who made a neat and witty speech expressing our absent sister's good will, and regrets at not being able to be with us longer. She, Mrs. Lee, has left the state to make her home in Nebraska. An hour was devoted to memorial services.

Many tender words were spoken of our promoted president, Miss Northup, and several letters were read, in which absent members expressed their love for her and sorrow for our loss.

Mrs. Therese A. Jenkins, at the last session, delivered a very interesting lecture on "Two Gifted Women" (Miss Willard and Lady Henry Somerset). The convention closed by singing, "God be with you till we meet again."

F. A. JONES,
State Reporter, Green River.

CRUSADF NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

AN afternoon praise meeting and Crusade campfire were held by Ashland, Ore., W. C. T. U.

FOR the first time in its history, Greenville, Miss., W. C. T. U. enjoyed the inspiration of a Crusade celebration.

A GOODLY number were present at Cameron, N. Y., Crusade anniversary, and two interesting addresses were made by pastors.

AN all-day Crusade gathering and mass-meeting at night were held by Ridge Farm, Ill., white-ribboners. Ten new members were received.

A VERY profitable Crusade meeting was held at Wellsville, O., where for the first time the churches granted the W. C. T. U. the privilege of conducting a public gathering.

BERKELEY, Va., met in beautifully decorated church parlors, December 28, and listened to talks on practical temperance work by two pastors, and by the district president. Ten new members were secured.

THE local clergy at Montgomery, N. Y., attended the Crusade meeting on December 23, and added their evidence to the side of temperance in words of cheer and encouragement. Three new names were added to the union.

NEW WHATSOM, Wash., W. C. T. U. was greatly encouraged by the presence and helpful words of the pastors at its Crusade Day exercises. One new member was received, with promise of more to follow.

A DELIGHTFUL Crusade Day was observed at Bucoda, Wash., in the headquarters of the W. C. T. U. by an afternoon social and evening public meeting. All were inspired for new work.

A HELPFUL observance of Crusade Day occurred at Deer Lodge, Tenn., a physician gave facts from his knowledge of the famous Crusade, and his relations to it as a former county inspector of liquors. The program in THE UNION SIGNAL was followed.

SPECIAL and personal invitations were given by the members of Belleville, Ill., union for their Crusade gathering, at which a very instructive program was rendered. Although the audience was not as large as they hoped, good seed was sown.

HOLDEN W. C. T. U. observed Crusade Day by a prayer and praise service characterized by spiritual power and great interest. At a temperance mass-meeting held on Sunday, December 24, special prominence was given to the Crusade in temperance work. Short addresses and papers, earnest and able, made it one of the very best of temperance meetings.

THE old W. C. T. U. organization in Steubenville, O., now known as the Steubenville Central, observed Crusade Day in the church where twenty years ago their first Crusade meeting was held and their organization was effected. Two interesting papers were read, both prepared by Mrs. Dohrman—the one a history of their first ten years' work read at the anniversary of '83, the other a history of the second ten years' work, written for the anniversary of '93. Crusade camp-fire was engaged in by about twenty Crusaders.

THE program given for Crusade Day was carried out on December 22, by the Idaho Falls, Idaho, union. Every home in town was visited on December 20, papers distributed and the people invited out to the meetings. On Sunday evening the state president, Mrs. Mitchell, delivered an able address. Pastors of the churches assisted in the meetings. Fifty copies of the Crusade number of THE UNION SIGNAL were distributed. Six regular and ten honorary members were secured and two subscriptions for THE UNION SIGNAL.

UNION of unions, comprising the local unions of the city, observed Crusade Day by an all-day meeting at Toledo, O. Portions of THE UNION SIGNAL program, with topics of local interest, furnished a rich feast. The attendance was even larger than was anticipated and a good interest was maintained throughout. There was a sprinkling of "Crusade brethren," and their words were helpful. The spirit of Crusade days seemed to be upon many who prayed and spoke, and the old hymns were as inspiring as twenty years ago. Old workers were revived, some new ones enlisted, and prospects for future work are brightened.

Official Communications.

PROMOTION OF PURITY IN LITERATURE AND ART.

IN THE HOME.

Every W. C. T. U. member should be a vigilance committee, to see that nothing that defiles enters the home—either by thought, deed or act. Intemperance, evil reading, and bad pictures form a combination more to be dreaded than small-pox, scarlet fever, or Asiatic cholera.

THE CHURCH.

The most powerful agency for converting the world to our King and Saviour is the church of Jesus Christ; we coöperate with it in every branch of our work.

Influence pastors to preach, teach and educate their congregations as to the good and pure in literature and art, and to denounce and condemn all that is bad and soul-destroying. Warnings, restraints, guidance and sympathy can save the young and help older persons, and what agency or organization can compare with the church to do this work of reform; let each individual member do his duty.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Try and secure in every school a committee whose duty it shall be to examine the books in the library, and purge them of everything that gives a wrong impression.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

Principals and teachers should be informed that the names of their pupils are procured through catalogues and otherwise, to whom are sent through the United States mails all kinds of vile reading and obscene pictures.

Advise that those who have in charge the young should speak with no uncertain sound as to the dangers that surround them. Endeavor to have the coöperation of teachers, parents and friends to ferret out those cancer planters and have them driven out of their vile business.

THE PRESS.

We most earnestly and respectfully petition the press at this time to make a concerted effort to elevate the moral tone of their columns, and to give us newspapers free from the evils we deplore, feeling confident that the majority of the public will encourage such an effort.

NEWS AGENTS AND BARBER SHOPS.

Give attention to the kind of reading matter handled by the train news agents. If newsboys are selling books, papers, or anything that is obscene or objectionable, and the facts are made known to the heads of the news agencies, they will remove boys and blacklist them for offering such things for sale on trains. It will be well to notify the officers of the road when news agents do not give prompt response to appeals.

Hotels, barber shops and reading rooms can be cleaned from vile and filthy publications if the husbands, sons and friends who patronize these places will call attention to the proprietors or managers that such papers are objectionable.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISEMENT.

For decency's sake there should not be sent into the homes of our land advertisements of matters which cannot be discussed at the family table, and which are not admitted into polite society. Why should an editor send into the home matters which we would not be permitted to personally discuss in the presence of the family assembled about the table at a meal?

Suspicious advertisements need to be investigated. Such advertisements should be sent to either Anthony Comstock or Mr. McAfee. If they are not within their individual jurisdiction they can get them before the post-office department and through the post-office into the right hands for investigation.

NON-MAILABLE MATTER.

In a recent interview with the first assistant postmaster general, I was assured that all "obscene, lewd and lascivious books, pamphlets, pictures, papers, letters, writings, prints, or other publications of an indecent character," etc., etc., would be declared non-mailable matter and excluded from the United States mails, whenever the same was brought to his notice. This is a proper construction of Section No. 3893 of the Revised Statutes governing the Postal Laws of the United States, and your superintendent has been trying to have this section strictly constructed and enforced. I urge every W. C. T. U. and all who are interested in the great work of purging the United States mail service, to send information and complaints to Hon. Frank H. Jones, First Assistant Postmaster-General, Washington, D. C.

POSTING OF IMMORAL SHOW BILLS.

In the absence of a specific law in any state, county, city or borough upon this subject, or if the laws enacted are defective, the common law would be applicable. It is held that "An indictment at common law may be maintained for any offence which is against public morals or decency," also "what tends to corrupt society is indictable at common law."

The district or state's attorney is the law officer or prosecuting attorney for the city or county and he should be consulted freely upon all matters of a questionable character. He will direct what steps to take to bring the offenders to justice.

If any prosecuting attorney has not the authorities upon the question at hand, if he will write to Mr. Comstock, a brief will be prepared upon any subject that may be desired. This, you will notice, removes the objections that law offices frequently make, "that there are no laws on the subject, etc." There is common law enough to punish the vilest offenders.

PROSECUTIONS.

I do not suggest that W. C. T. U. women should institute criminal prosecutions; but if they are vigilant they will find many cases brought to their attention that ought to be prosecuted. The thing then to do, instead of being shocked or overwhelmed, is to bear in mind that there is a moral ulcer that has to be removed from the community. And then take steps to remove it by due process of law. This can be done by securing some good, earnest man to purchase the thing that is an offense under the law for any one to sell; then have that matter marked and a detailed report written out, with the conversation that occurred between the seller and the purchaser, then whenever this transaction comes up the witness is qualified to give his testimony.

I would add that there should be no prosecution instituted until they first secure the Increased Appetite

is one of the first good effects felt by users of Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with Hypophosphites. Good appetite begets good health.

Scott's Emulsion
is a fat-food that provides its own tonic. Instead of a tax upon appetite and digestion it is a wonderful help to both.

Scott's Emulsion arrests the progress of Consumption, Bronchitis, Scrofula, and other wasting diseases by raising a barrier of healthy flesh, strength and nerve.

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All druggists.

A Thinking Machine
Is what the brain is. It needs the nourishment of a stimulating and natural food. There is no product that contains more phosphorus, lime and sodium—food for the brain and nerves—than

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON.

This claim is based on physiological facts. Thinking men and women should use it at least twice a day.
Never buy Bouillon for the sick, except in Glass Bottles.
Grocers and Druggists.
Six ½ pint bottles expressed for $1.50. Send stamps for book, "Household Hints."
E. S. Burnham Co., 120 Ganesvoort St., N.Y.

Knox's Sparkling Calves' Foot Gelatine
THE PUREST MADE

Received the only Medal and Diploma at the World's Fair, Chicago, on Package Gelatine for table use, for STRENGTH, PURITY and GOOD FLAVOR.
The only Gelatine positively free from odor or taste. Our new package has Rose Gelatine in top of each package to make fancy desserts. Your grocer has it if he keeps the best.
CHARLES B. KNOX, Johnstown, N. Y.
Send a 2-cent stamp for little book. "DAINTY DESSERTS FOR DAINTY PEOPLE."

Patient suffering is no virtue if there be a remedy.
Beecham's Pills
WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.
(Tasteless)
positively cure Indigestion, Biliousness, Sick Headache. Why endure continued Martyrdom?
25 cents a box.

DON'T WEAR STIFF CORSETS.
FERRIS' GOOD SENSE WAISTS
Fit all ages and shapes—infants to adults.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS,
But save you money on everything you eat, wear or use. Send 8 cts. for full catalogue.
H. R. EAGLE & Co., 68 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

SEND TO GOOD & REESE, SPRINGFIELD, OHIO for their beautiful catalogue of roses and shrubs coöperation of the prosecuting attorney of the county. Bear in mind that it is easy to make a complaint before a magistrate but you must have the evidence to convict. If the prosecuting officer will not do his duty because of sympathy or complicity with offenders, then any reliable attorney will advise you how to act.

SEIZURE CLAUSE.

I would recommend that all state laws should have the seizure clause added if it is possible. It is as imperatively necessary as the law itself. It is the utmost folly to attempt to punish a man for having matter in his possession and leave the matter still in his possession to be used as he may see fit when he returns to his business.

In framing laws care should be taken not to call them "articles" or "things," but to give the names of the articles or things that it is desired to legislate against.

PROMOTION OF PURITY.

The great aim of this department is to stimulate and encourage work for the promotion of purity in literature and art, and to this end I most heartily recommend as among the many good helps, the C. L. S. C. (Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle). It aims to promote habits of reading and study in history, literature, science and art. For information address, John H. Vincent. Buffalo, N. Y. Copies of this plan of work will be furnished free to state presidents and superintendents by application to

EMILIE D. MARTIN, Nat. Supt.
85 Times Building, New York.

WORK AMONG RAILROAD EMPLOYES.

(Continued from former issue.)

VI.—EVANGELISTS.

An open, needy, and constantly enlarging field, calls imperatively for a force of railway evangelists, to be recruited, accredited and sent out under the auspices of the state and National departments.

1. It is recommended that women of mature years and established Christian character, who may realize the divine call to the work of railway evangelist, and who give evidence of the same by ability and faithfulness in local work, and who shall receive endorsement for the position of the general officers of the local union in which membership is held, and where the applicant resides, and of the general officers of the state union, shall be appointed division or state railway evangelists by, and with the concurrence of the state superintendent of railway work, as she may consider the needs of the work demand, and who with the department board shall assign the field of evangelists, direct and carefully overlook their work.

2. A state evangelist having given proof of her gifts and adaptability in state work, whom it may be desirable and for the interest of the general work to promote, credentials as before stated may be forwarded to the National superintendent by the superintendent of state, accompanied by request of such state superintendent and of the general officers of the state that the candidate be appointed an evangelist of the National railway department, which appointment shall be made by, and according to the judgment of the National superintendent, as relating to the welfare and development of the work, who with the department board shall direct such effort.

3. The term of office of any evangelist shall not exceed one year.

4. Any worker not receiving unanimous endorsement of local and state officers may have the privilege of referring her case to the National department, through her state superintendent, for examination and final action.

VII.—RAILROAD READING-ROOMS.

Where not already maintained, establish these in depot or division headquarters buildings—if adequate, and consent can be gained from the corporation; otherwise, conveniently near, remembering that a well located, well regulated reading room will command approval, and gain substantial aid from railroad companies, their employés and the public generally.

VIII.—RESTAURANTS AND LODGINGS.

1. Workers will note carefully but quietly, surroundings of men. Good meals and lunches often prevent recourse to intoxicants. Clean, comfortable rooms and good beds have direct moral influence. If these are lacking call attention of the proper corporation representatives to the fact and courteously urge provision for the physical needs of employés. Also suggest to local unions the establishment of restaurants with lodgings as an adjunct to the reading-room, which well managed, will be amply remunerative, and whose pure and homelike atmosphere will be appreciated.

2. Saloons and houses of gambling and of ill-fame are too often found in dangerous proximity to railway shops, yards and stations. Call attention of officials to the demoralization of business, and of the employés, as the result of such deadly influences, and urge removal of the same.

IX.—FLOWER MISSION.

1. Visit with flower mission service, the sick and disabled in hospitals and in homes. Appoint regular visitors for railroad wards in hospitals.

2. Show sympathy and respect by presence at funerals and in care for bereaved families.

3. Floral emblems at funerals, tied with white ribbon.

X.—CO-OPERATION.

Superintendents and workers are recommended:

1. To form the acquaintance and invite the coöperation of the Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brakemen's and Firemen's organizations, etc., through their officials and leading men.

2. To form the acquaintance of railroad employés, recognize and address them by name; to aid those away from home, when possible, in finding boarding places where influences are homelike and pure; to have especial thought for men when "laid off" duty, knowing that to be a time of loneliness and discouragement, and therefore of increased temptations; and if a "discharge" come—a thing often not to be avoided by either the corporation or the employé—endeavor to ameliorate the conditions ensuing, with tact and delicacy. Wisely refrain from commenting upon any transaction between the corporation and the employé. Such is not the mission of this department.

3. To cultivate acquaintance, socially, with families of railroad men; to hold, when invited, parlor and "mothers'" meetings in their homes, inviting the women to meetings of the local union, and the children to meetings of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

XI.—WORK AMONG YOUNG WOMEN EMPLOYES.

1. Appoint a refined, motherly woman, who shall gain permission to visit such employés, and who shall endeavor to learn as to antecedents, associates, environments and church relationship or preference.

2. Introduce them to helpful social and religious surroundings, care for them in sickness, and wisely encourage their aspirations and efforts to improve their conditions.

XII.

Work among traveling men, street-car men, policemen, firemen, express and hack men is, at present, placed in this department, and should include lines of effort already recommended.

XIII.—HOUR OF PRAYER.

Each day at noontide.

XIV.—FINANCE.

In each state a fund should be gathered, local and division superintendents coöperating, especially at division stations, one-half of the same to be returned to such railway divisions in work by some accredited and acceptable worker, and in literature, the remaining one-half to be divided equally between the state and National departments, for development of work in new and needy fields, and for necessary expenses. All accounts shall be in book form, which shall be carefully itemized and audited and incorporated with each annual report.

XV.—REPORTS.

1. All superintendents are instructed to keep accurately a book account of all work done, classifying the same, and from which annual reports shall be drawn, no report to be considered authentic and official unless taken from such daily or weekly record.

2. Local, county and division superintendents will gather reports of meetings and work, with incidents worthy of preservation, and forward frequently to the state superintendent, who will send items of work to state reporter of THE UNION SIGNAL, and to the press, and other matter, deemed suitable, to National superintendent to enlarge and enrich literature of the department.

CAROLINE M. WOODWARD, Nat. Supt.
Seward, Neb.

STATE SUPERINTENDENTS OF LITERATURE.

DEAR SISTERS:—More than a month ago I appealed through THE UNION SIGNAL for names of state superintendents of the literature department. The responses have been few. My circular letter and list of questions are now ready for mailing, and I know the addresses of just ten state superintendents:—North and South Dakota, District of Columbia, Illinois, Iowa, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Texas. Will the remaining thirty-nine states and territories please take note and let me hear from them at once?

Yours very sincerely,
KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON,
Nat. Supt. Literature.
The Temple, Chicago.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

The Walla Walla union gave a delightful reception a little time ago to Mrs. Julia B. Cole, the honored president of the W. C. T. U. of that state, and wisely, while extending greeting to their leader, made the evening memorable to all through a most pleasing program, the opening hymn of which was "The Crusade Psalm," and the closing, "For God and Home and Native Land." Mrs. Cole responded to the greeting extended her with echoes from the late annual Conventions of the World's and National W. C. T. U.

A pardonable pride possesses us when we read words like the following from the Iowa Prohibitionist, of our National evangelist: "Mrs. Annie M. Palmer, our National and state evangelist, has been doing excellent service in the seventh district, leaving a blessing and hopeful activity wherever an invitation has been extended and appointments made for her. It is our opinion that she ought to be kept busy in Iowa the entire year of 1894." We have no doubt great good would result from such stay in her own state, but such women are needed all over the land.

I presume all who attended the National Conventions remember Madame Hanna Korany, a Syrian, whose silver tones and persuasive words charmed our ear and heart. She came to our country to attend the Exposition, and take her part in its Congresses. And we find it stated, that "she is the first Syrian woman to speak in public." We welcome Madame Korany most heartily, but cannot fail to remember that for several years, Americans, especially in temperance and mission circles, have listened to the rare logic and charming eloquence of Layah Barakat (from the same land) to whom our Saviour has spoken as clearly as long ages ago to the woman at the well, and who a few weeks since at Willard Hall made her arguments for prohibition mighty through the gospel.

Many have pleasant memories of Mrs. Letitia Youmans, the first president of the W. C. T. U. of Canada. Though a long time invalid she sent her greeting to the late National Convention which was mislaid during its session, and in honor to her and because of the response which her letter will meet in the hearts of our membership, we publish it at this time:

DEAR SISTERS:—Canada sympathizes deeply with you in the illness of your beloved leader, and prays for her speedy restoration to health. Yours for God and Home and every Land,

LETITIA YOUMANS.

Mrs. M. A. McGonegal, president of the seventh district W. C. T. U. of Iowa, has sent out a most helpful circular, some features being so unique we can but present them. She exhorts unions to make their meetings attractive, and suggests the presentation of two departments of work at each meeting, but that which particularly impresses us and we believe would be admirably adapted to unions in country places, is as follows:

"To overcome the frequent excuse, 'cannot afford the time,' urge the women to bring work, sewing, mending, darning, knitting, the very same work that they would sit down to at home. We can listen and work and talk and work if we try. And that every one may contribute to the profit of the meeting, have the roll called, each one to respond by giving a fact or item connected with the subjects of the day or bearing upon some phase of temperance.

"To insure against failure make out program at the beginning of the year, and appoint those who are to present departmental work months in advance, giving time for ample preparation. To keep in touch and get the inspiration of current events, let it be the duty of some one to briefly give the most important happenings since the last meeting that have not been given at roll-call.

"Above all, for good cheer have some bright music. Every union should own a few copies of 'The White-Ribbon Hymnal.' The monthly readings and Bible readings of the W. T. P. A. are very profitable and inexpensive, and should be read regularly. Buy a few of our valuable W. T. P. A publications, and charge each member ten cents for a book to take home, read and return at the next meeting, thus establishing a circulating library, and permeating the neighborhood with good, wholesome temperance truth, and creating a fund to pay for books purchased. These hints embodied in a bimonthly program, put through on the minute, would make live unions that would be able to have a state or National superintendent visit them occasionally, and they would be able to reach out into surrounding territory and become the leaven that would result in an active county organization."

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

Complexion Preserved.
DR. HEBRA'S VIOLA CREAM

Removes Freckles, Pimples Liver-Moles, Blackheads, Sunburn and Tan, and restores the skin to its original freshness, producing a clear and healthy complexion. Superior to all face preparations and perfectly harmless. At all druggists or mailed for 50 cts. Send for circular.
G. C. BITTNER & CO., TOLEDO, O.

THE SIGNAL DID IT!

WHAT? Made hundreds of homes of its readers happy with our "Modern Bath." The thousands who saw them at the World's Fair indorse their merit, for which HIGHEST PRIZE was awarded.
Send 2c. for catalogue illustrating 18 styles.
THE MOSELY FOLDING BATH TUB CO., 181 K. S. Canal St., CHICAGO.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

FOR MAN AND BEAST.
Manufactured by
THE J. L. Mott Iron Works
84 to 90 Beekman Street, NEW YORK.
311 & 313 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO.
Catalogue on Application.

THE WONDERFUL MECHANICAL SPELLER.
PIANO MOVEMENT
BEAUTIFULLY FINISHED.

The Child's Best Teacher. Have you seen it? Older folks will find it very amusing. Would you like one? For $1.00 we will send it to your address, charges paid.
KINDERGARTEN MFG. CO. 925 Sansom Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

GLOBE SAVINGS BANK
Corner Dearborn and Jackson Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.
UNDER STATE CONTROL.
INDIVIDUAL AND SAVINGS ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.
SAFETY ▲ DEPOSIT ▲ VAULTS.

FAT PEOPLE YOU can reduce your weight permanently from 10 to 15 lbs. a month at home, secretly, without starving, sickness or injury, by the use of Dr. Clarke's Home Treatment. Perfected in many years' practice. Causes no wrinkles or flabbiness. Stout abdomens, difficult breathing, relieved by sure scientific methods. No experiments. Guaranteed. Best references. Price within reach of all. Write today. Positive proofs and testimonials free.
Dr. F. B. CLARKE, Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

Bickford Family Knitter.
Knits everything required by th household, of any quality, texture an weight desired. A. M. LAWSON, 783 Broadway, N. Y.
Beware of cheap and worthless knitters.

A Swell Affair.
Did You Ever Look Like This?
DENT'S TOOTHACHE GUM
STOPS TOOTHACHE INSTANTLY
DON'T TAKE IMITATIONS
Sold by all Druggists, or send 15c to C. S. DENT & CO., Detroit, Mich.
THIS IS NOT A CHEWING GUM.

BAKER'S COCOA.
ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used.

RUBIFOAM FOR THE TEETH
SAMPLE VIAL FREE.
E. W. HOYT & CO., LOWELL, MASS.

ALASKA STOVE LIFTER
will not get hot even if left in the lid. Heavily Nickel Plated. Price by mail, postpaid, 30 cents.
TROY NICKEL WORKS, Troy, N. Y.

SALESMEN WANTED to sell our goods by samples to the wholesale and retail trade, sell on sight to every business man or firm; liberal salary, money advanced for advertising and expenses. Permanent position. Address with stamp, KING MFG. CO., M 55 Chicago, Ill.

FREE MUSIC 44 pieces, latest Sheet Music and charming illustrated Magazine 3 months; all for 10 cents; send silver dime. American Nation, Box 1729, Boston, Mass.

DOUBLE Breech-Loader $6.00. RIFLES $2.00 WATCHES GUNS BICYCLES $15 All kinds cheaper than elsewhere. Before you buy, send stamp for catalogue to POWELL & CLEMENT CO. 166 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

Mrs. Helen M. Barker, the National treasurer, has been closely confined to office work for two years, and feels the need of change. She is planning a vacation trip to her old home in northern New York about the middle of February, and would make a few appointments en route if desired. Any unions wishing to arrange for a lecture will please write at once to her secretary, Mrs. Minnie B. Horning, 1115 The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

MARY A. WOODBRIDGE.

Treasurer's Corner.

Believing that the rank and file of any great organization are interested in the exact status of its finances, and of all other features of its work, and also that they have a right to know all about its affairs, it gives me pleasure to present to our white-ribboners a report by states of the receipts from the appeal of Miss Willard for a ten cent thankoffering fund up to January 15. There was a little doubt as to where the $100 sent us by a good friend should go. Her home is in Massachusetts but her check was sent from New York where she is sojourning for a time, yet it seemed that to her home should be given the credit for her generous gift, and I have placed it with the Massachusetts contributions.

Ala.	$ 2.85	Minn.	$41.55
Ariz	2.00	Mo.	78.39
Ark.	8.95	Miss	2.40
Cal.	40.95	Mon	5.05
Car. N.	2.81	Neb.	33.64
Car. S.	3.05	Nev.	.30
Col.	24.11	N. H.	27.80
Conn.	61.20	N. J.	48.74
Dak. N.	17.67	N. Mex.	2.30
Dak. S.	23.60	N. Y.	212.44
Del.	11.10	Ohio	108.02
D. C.	6.95	Okla.	1.75
Fla.	17.48	Ore.	10.60
Ga.	2.40	Pa.	119.61
Idaho	1.40	R. I.	55.75
Ill.	190.92	Tenn.	10.50
Ind.	36.15	Tex.	15.35
Ind. Ter.	1.60	Utah	1.20
Iowa	23.95	Va.	4.50
Kan.	41.23	Vt.	22.75
Ky.	14.30	W. Va.	2.60
La.	14.40	Wash.	4.77
Mass	219.77	Wis.	52.85
Md.	17.65	Wyo.	1.58
Me.	40.70	Foreign.	13.88
Mich.	60.95

Please note that every state and territory, save Alaska, has contributed. We will itemize the foreign gifts later.

I desire again to call attention to the necessity of giving the state. I have $1.20 from Penfield W. C. T. U., no state given. Post-office directory gives five states with a Penfield, and I am utterly at a loss where to send the receipt. Again may I call attention to the fact that the appeal of Miss Willard for the ten cent offering had no reference to the Temple debt, but to the National W. C. T. U. treasury. When I get a letter that reads, "In response to Miss Willard's appeal in THE UNION SIGNAL of November 30, I send you one dollar for the Temple debt," I am in doubt whether that money is meant for National debt or for Temple debt, as the two objects are both referred to. In sending money you cannot be too explicit in details.

I wish all our young women would emulate the example of a district president in Illinois who says: "Please find $1 toward paying the National debt. Ten cents for me, ten cents for my other half (that I have never found) and eighty cents which I have collected from Casey union." A generous contribution came from the Columbian Y of San Sebastian, Spain, as the result of their Crusade meeting of which the Gordon trio (Anna, Bessie and Mrs. Gulick) was the inspiration. I wish I could give the letter that accompanied it.

I am sure all friends of our great work will rejoice at the continued flow of helpful dimes into the treasury.

HELEN M. BARKER.

A CARD.

To the many friends who have written me since the late National Convention, I wish to say, that pressing business called me away from Chicago sooner than I anticipated, and since arriving in the East I have been so engrossed with important business matters that it has been impossible for me to reply to the numerous kind letters I have received from all parts of the land.

I appreciate the kind thought of me which prompted them and all the expressions of confidence and trust they contain and each will receive reply in a short time.

My permanent address is East Hampton, Connecticut. I do not expect to spend all my time there, but letters thus addressed will be promptly forwarded.

For nearly twenty years I have been a member of the W. C. T. U., and for all that time have been officially identified with its interests, both state and National.

In these years, and especially the last thirteen, many of the tenderest attachments of my life have been formed, and in some instances the past has been linked with the present in a way that only those who were a part of that past can at all understand. These attachments will remain, notwithstanding the storms of brief official service and change, as nothing else in this life can.

I have been welcomed into many of your homes and made to feel that I had a place, not only in the home, but in the heart also.

When the spring-time comes, God willing, there will be a home on the Connecticut hills where the latchstring will always be out for those who have been so kind in the past and who are now so appreciative.

I resume some of the old, and take up some new lines of work, with a consciousness that the interests of the W. C. T. U. and the temperance reform rather than personal desires or ambitions have always been uppermost in my thought.

With the season's best wishes and with tenderest affection, I am

Faithfully yours,
CAROLINE B. BUELL.

New York City, Dec. 29, 1893.

Our Library Table.

NEW BOOKS.

LA POLD AND EURIDICE. A poem in twenty-two cantos. By Washington A. Engle, M. D., Hartford, Mich. Published by the author.

GOLDEN MEMORIES OF OLD WORLD LANDS, by Maria Ballard Holyoke, is an interesting volume of travels in Europe, Egypt, Palestine and Greece, covering a lengthy period of time and elaborate as to details in description. Mrs. Holyoke evidently traveled with her eyes open and her judgment clear, as the results are so interesting and instructive.

Published by Charles H. Kerr & Co., Chicago, Ill.

THE NEW MODEL FIRST READER, published by Geo. Sherwood & Company, Chicago, is indeed a "model" book. Every word is illustrated by representations of the articles named that the child cannot fail to recognize (a feature not always preserved in readers). The teaching is all by words and sentences, associated with pictures, color being introduced and taught in the same way, an improvement on many ancient methods.

IN PARADISE. By Charles H. Strong, A. M., rector of St. John's church, Savannah. This interesting volume considers "things spiritual," or "The State of the Faithful Dead: a Study from Scripture on Death and After-death." There is a "sweet reasonableness" about the author's statements and reasoning that the reader can hardly resist, and though it conflicts with many firmly-planted theories on the future state, its teaching is more wholesome than that of many creeds and it is full of comfort and cheer to those who so shrink from the last scene of this life and the unknown beyond.

Thomas Whittaker, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York City.

A weighty volume of more than common value lies upon OUR LIBRARY TABLE. It bears the magic name of THE WHITE CITY, significant of its connection with one of the most stupendous events of the world's history—the lately closed Columbian Exposition. Illinois, the home state of "The White City," is the theme of the book. In its nearly two hundred pages it comprehends the history of the state, its resources and industries, statistics, politics, important societies and charities. The book in hand is one of a series of thirty volumes "in which the states and territories find representation—the larger and older commonwealths occupying a volume each." Of these, the preface says:

"A chapter is devoted to its connection with the World's Fair, the authors being well-known writers, and capable of presenting the subject in a most comprehensive and attractive manner. Then follows a brief sketch of the District of Columbia, with which each state and territory is connected through its representatives in Congress; this is in turn, succeeded by the biographies of the Presidents of the United States, setting forth in addition to the life, the most important events of each administration."

But space forbids further description. With their mass of valuable information made attractive by the thirty full page illustrations that appear in each state history, the books form a most valuable reference library. Prepared by John Moses and Paul Selby.

Published by the Chicago World Book Company, Chicago.

WOMEN WAGE-EARNERS. By Helen Campbell, author of "Prisoners of Poverty," "The Problem of the Poor," etc. Published by Roberts Brothers, Boston.

This book should have a careful reading by every man and woman interested in "the woman question," and especially by girls and women who wrestle seven days in the week with the problem of scant incoming wages, incessant labor and relentless expense. With dispassionate deliberation, Mrs. Campbell has turned the matter this way and that, studied statistics, investigated for herself, gathered facts from reports, and gives in this pithy volume the results of her painstaking. The proper study of womankind is—woman. When she understands her own relation to and position in the intricacies of social science, then, and then alone can she help to better her condition. Helen Campbell ranks among the first as authority on this question and her information is reliable.

PHILANTHROPY AND SOCIAL PROGRESS. Seven essays by Miss Jane Addams, Robert A. Woods, Father J. O. S. Huntington, Professor Franklin H. Giddings and Bernard Bosanquet, with introduction by Professor Henry C. Adams.

It was a significant move on the part of the directors of the school of Applied Ethics at Plymouth, in the summer of 1892, when they devoted a number of their sessions to a discussion of these important subjects. The various essays there read, and presented to the public through the medium of more or less complete reports in the press, created a widespread interest. The necessity for coöperation in dealing with the needs of great communities in our cities, the carefully-elaborated details of experiments which have proved so successful as to be no longer regarded as experiments, such, for example, as Hull House in Chicago, Andover House in Boston, the new methods of charity organizations in London and elsewhere, the frank and outspoken criticisms on the common apathy in regard to wise charity, and the immense amount of valuable suggestion certainly make these essays worthy of preservation in permanent form. The titles of the seven essays are as follows: "The Subjective Necessity for Social Settlements," and "The Objective Value of a Social Settlement," by Miss Jane Addams. "The University Settlement Idea," by Robert A. Woods. "Philanthropy—Its Success and Failure," by Father James O. S. Huntington. "Philanthropy and Morality," by Father James O. S. Huntington. "The Ethics of Social Progress," by Professor Franklin H. Giddings. "The Principles and Chief Dangers of the Administration of Charity," by Bernard Bosanquet, M. A., LL.D.

T. Y. Crowell & Co., New York and Boston.

PAMPHLETS RECEIVED.

BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL, 1894. A carefully prepared friend of farmers and gardeners. W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE HARMONY OF THE CIII. PSALM. By Eloise E. Laquer. Thomas Whittaker, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York City. A nutshell full of joy and comfort.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE, 1894. Contains practical gardening instructions and advantageous offers for plants and seeds. James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y.

Two temperance tales: A FRAGMENT OF ONTARIO'S SCOTT ACT, and LAWYER ROBERT STREIGHTON'S DISCOVERY AT A MINERAL SPRING. Published at 148 High St., Boston.

WORKING TOGETHER FOR GOOD. By Rev. Llewellyn Caley. Published by Thomas Whittaker, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York City. Forty-two pages of excellent reading matter.

THE LEGEND OF ST. CHRISTOPHER AND THE CHRIST CHILD. By Andrea Hofer. Published by the Kindergarten Literature Company, Woman's Temple, Chicago. LEGEND OF ST. ANTHONY. By same author. Dainty booklets in covers of white and gold.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES AND PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS. By Geo. T. Angell. This volume of thirty-five pages will find many interested readers, as the good friend of the animal creation has himself many friends. Published at 19 Milk St., Boston.

SELECTION IN SEED GROWING, comprising papers read before the seedsmen's session of the World's Auxiliary Horticultural Congress, Chicago. Bound with same, "The Seedsman's Trial Grounds," by W. Atlee Burpee. Published by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CALENDAR. Not a pamphlet, though included in this column. This neat publication contains the list of the subjects of the International Sunday School Lessons, with daily Bible readings, golden texts, and the authorized Y. P. S. C. E. topics. Prepared by Rev. E. S. Lorenz, Dayton, Ohio.

OUR NEW CATALOGUE

Is an elegant book of 200 pages, composed of three distinct Catalogues bound together—one each of

SEEDS, BULBS & PLANTS, NURSERY STOCK.

A work of unexcelled beauty and merit, rewritten and reconstructed in every particular. Every cut new, every line fresh. Printed on fine paper and in lovely bronze violet and brown colors. Many charming colored plates. Nothing like it ever before seen. We offer new and special strains of Flower and Vegetable seeds, all the standard new and rare Plants and Bulbs of every kind. Millions of Gladiolus, choicest Shrubs, Trees, Vines; also new and rare Fruits—some wonderful introductions from Japan. The greatest collection of rare things for the garden ever presented, and all at moderate prices. Do not fail to see this wonderful book catalogue. Sent, post-paid, for 25 cents, with check for valuable new Pansy seed gratis, or sent FREE if either of the following new plants are ordered.

THE LITTLE GEM CALLA.

A perfect miniature Calla, growing 8 or 12 inches high and producing perpetually very large snow-white blossoms. It begins to bloom when only a few inches high in a three-inch pot, and is never without flowers, summer or winter, and often shows a dozen at once. The greatest plant novelty of late years, and a perfect little beauty. 30 cents each; 2 for 50 cents, post-paid.

CHILDS' JEWEL ROSE.

The greatest sensation among noveltics. A perfect ever-blooming Rose, which bears at the same time flowers of several different colors—pink, yellow, buff, crimson—also variegated, mottled, striped and blotched. The most wonderful and beautiful Rose in cultivation. Strong plants for immediate blooming, by mail, post-paid, 30 cents each, 2 for 50 cents, 5 for $1.00.

Special Offer.—For 30 cents we will send either the Calla or Rose and our great Book Catalogue described above. For 50 cents we will send the Book, Calla, Rose and a lovely Flower-seed novelty; all by mail, post-paid, guaranteed to arrive in good condition. Address

John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y.

D AND C ROSES

DON'T think because you have failed in the past, that you can't grow roses, successfully. There will be no failures in the future, if you get the famous D. & C.

Our new Guide to Rose Culture gives you explicit directions for selecting and growing the very choicest flowers of every kind. We send it Free, if you request it, also a sample copy of our interesting Floral Magazine, "Success with Flowers."

The Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa.

What a wonderful thing is a live seed. Immature, old or dead it may look the same. How to know? Old gardeners say that Burpee's seeds grow.

This is the proof of life. When grown we give our word you will be satisfied—your success is ours. BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL for 1894, 172 pages, tells all about the Best Seeds that Grow. The newspapers call it the Leading American Seed Catalogue. Yours free for the asking if you plant seeds.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia.

SEEDS BULBS

Flower-lovers who wish to grow their old favorites in improved forms and greater variety should send for my catalogue, Popular Seeds and Bulbs for Spring Planting. Handsomely illustrated. Catalogues all the best and most esteemed sorts, and offers them in variety no other dealer attempts. Several novelties of rare merit. Stock mostly imported from such growers as LEMOINE of France and ROEMER of Germany. Catalogue free, if mention is made where this advt. was seen. L. R. BENEDICT, Ellenville, Ulster Co., N. Y.

At ¼ Price Watches, Guns, Buggies, Harness, Sewing Machines, Organs, Bicycles, Farm Tools, Safes, etc, List FREE. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL

Subscription Rates for 1893.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly. Price per year	$ .25
Young Crusader, monthly, one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago.

"THE GLORIOUS CAUSE."

A Collection of Songs, Hymns and Choruses for Earnest Temperance Workers.

By George F. Root.

Suitable for gospel meetings and Sunday-schools. All who believe in the wonderful power of song should send for one.

Price, each, - - $ .35 per dozen, - 3.50

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE COMPENDIUM AND QUESTION BOOK of PARLIAMENTARY LAW

By Mrs. Lilian Cole Bethel

Meets exactly the needs of the vast constituency of the W. C. T. U. It is plain, simple, yet comprehensive enough to cover all the points that could possibly arise in any of our conventions.

Neatly bound in leather, - - - 40c.
Imitation " - - - - 25c.

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ATTENTION! BOYS!

See our display advertisement which cannot fail to interest you. This opportunity is not for your mother or sister, but for you only. We do not offer many premiums but we are confident this nickel watch is just what you need, just what it claims to be, and for the effort it will cost, you can not obtain a better time-keeper. It is really a clock movement in a nickel case, manufactured by the Waterbury Clock Company, small enough to fit in your vest pocket. The smallest boy can wind it and tell accurate time by it. It is not a toy watch nor as small and delicate as your father's, yet will keep perhaps better time than his. Read our offer and notify us at once that you wish to work for one of these watches and we will be ready to fill your order as soon as it reaches us.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

SIGN YOUR NAME.

When you send an order please sign your name and give your post-office address. If you do not have your orders promptly filled it may be you have forgotten to give your post-office address.

Daily we receive letters containing money and orders without signature to the letter or post-office address. Please read your letters carefully before sending, and see if the name and address is plainly written.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER.

A TEMPERANCE EIGHT PAGE MONTHLY.
What the Children Need.
LOW RATES.

Send for samples of the JANUARY number. Sunday-schools are ordering in large packages. L. T. L. superintendents say they cannot do without it. The children express themselves as delighted with it. We are making special terms to agents, and the boys and girls can earn pocket money in this way. Urge them to write to us for information.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

BRILLIANTS from PHILLIPS BROOKS

is the title of a dainty volume in which are compiled the choicest thoughts of that gifted man. The book contains twenty engravings, which make it attractive as well as helpful. Board covers in white and gold, 60 cents; white vellum, 35 cents.

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MRS. C. E. SMITH, of Dexter, is appointed president of thirtieth district of Missouri.

MISS E. D. MORRIS, Kansas City, is appointed president of Missouri twelfth district.

DAINTY white ribbon almanacs are those of the Y's with a Bible verse for each day of the year.

MISS EVA JONES, Clinton, Mo., is state reporter for THE UNION SIGNAL. Local unions are requested to send all items of news to her promptly.

THE body of Miss Mary Yeargin, of South Carolina, whose young life reached so tragic a close by drowning in Cayuga Lake, New York, two months ago, was recently recovered.

"THE Flag Festival" helps unions to raise money and can be procured by sending twenty-five cents and a postage stamp to Mrs. W. A. Ingham, 203 Franklin avenue, Cleveland, O.

THE annual Y. W. C. T. U. report is issued and the Y almanacs are ready. These can be procured of assistant Y secretary, Mrs. F. S. Evans, 161 West Eighty-fourth street, New York City, enclosing five cents for each.

MAJOR and Mrs. E. T. Scott occupied the pulpits of the M. E. and Congregational churches in Ridgway, Pa., during December. During the last decade, Major Scott has given forty-two full addresses in Ridgway, and continues to draw as large audiences as ever.

GENERAL JOHN BIDWELL, who was prohibition candidate for president last year, and Mrs. Bidwell, a prominent W. C. T. U. worker and former National superintendent, called at THE UNION SIGNAL office on their return from a recent eastern trip. They spent the holidays at their home in Chico, Cal.

A NEW oratorical bureau has been recently inaugurated and put into active operation by Rev. M. M. Cooper, Jerseyville, Ill., in behalf of woman's suffrage. The plan is similar to that of the Demorest medal contest, aiming to instruct and interest the public in political equality by means of the popular oratorical contests, and will no doubt meet with a cordial reception.

THE Amboy W. C. T. U. duly observed Crusade day, January 6, by carrying out the program given in THE UNION SIGNAL. A very interesting meeting was held, four new members added. Sunday evening following they held a union meeting of all churches. A very able paper and address on the Crusade by two members of the union were features of the occasion.

BROADALBIN W. C. T. U. of Fulton county, N. Y., observed Crusade Day by carrying out the program arranged by our National superintendent as far as possible. The meeting was well advertised and a good attendance the result. A paper by Miss Annie Robertson upon the "Outlook for the Nation and the World," was a fine feature of the program. The editorial in the Crusade number of THE UNION SIGNAL, "Our Sober Second Thought," was read, and two new subscribers were secured.

MISS WILLARD'S picture never looked down upon a stranger scene than that at New Town, N. Y., an Indian settlement near Lawton station, at its Christmas celebration. Two hundred or more Indians were present and received bountiful gifts sent by friends in Buffalo. Through the efforts of Erie county's president, an L. T. L. of thirty-five Indian boys and girls is taught to beware of the alcoholic drinks which so debase the Indian and which he seems unable to resist. On this occasion an Indian shed tears as he earnestly beseeched the audience in his native tongue, to refrain from the drink and urged the W. C. T. U. workers to continue their efforts for his people and to stop the selling of liquor to them.

HARVEY, Ill., boasts a new Y union, which started with thirty active charter members. An enthusiastic and popular leader is at its head and the success of the new organization is assured from the beginning. Among its members are two devoted workers who have, besides their interests in social purity work and the department of the press, a plan for making "Hope Cottage," as they call their home, a place to which motherless children may be sent for home care and instruction. One of the young women, Miss Clara Fleharty, is an accomplished kindergartner. As their home is not yet paid for, a reasonable charge is made to cover necessary expense, but in time they hope to do a charitable work. With such practical workers as these in the midst, the Harvey Y bids fair to become the banner union in the state.

WEST Side Y, Chicago, has taken new life since the National Convention, and is holding fortnightly meetings under the leadership of Miss Grace Greenlee. It is planning to coöperate with efforts to aid unemployed young women and girls in Chicago. A pleasant reception was given recently at the home of a member.

AT New Haven, Conn., a plan to give a free turkey dinner to the poor, New Year's day, was started, and tickets were sent to the pastors of various churches for distribution among the needy of their respective parishes. One peculiarity about the effort was that the dinner was to be served in a saloon café. Much open criticism has been aroused by the refusal of one stanch temperance pastor to distribute the tickets, declining in the following words: "The standing committee of the Humphrey street Congregational church returns herewith the tickets handed its pastor, with the following explanation. While they appreciate the generous motive prompting you to give a free dinner to the needy of our community on New Year's Day, they do not approve of such a dinner given in connection with an open bar, where intoxicating liquors are sold. They believe that were that open bar everywhere abolished there would be no need for free turkey dinners." Prohibitionists heartily endorse this action of the pastor—the only one—believing the free dinner plan nothing more than a scheme to advertise the saloon. The liquor problem would receive a vast amount of light if more pastors would view it from the prohibition standpoint and show their colors on all occasions.

JANE E. WEEDEN, the well-known Temple helper, was in the vicinity of Chicago during December, and attended some interesting meetings, concerning which she writes, in part, as follows: "I attended the convention of the fourth district at Evanston on the 7th. Two interesting day sessions were held, and a most edifying and delightful lecture was delivered in the evening by Mrs. Mathews, of London. The plans proposed by Mrs. Carse, in her circular letter and leaflets, lately sent out to the unions of this country, were favorably considered and mite-boxes distributed. One woman said she would keep filling her mite-box till the Temple was owned by the National W. C. T. U. A sleighride was enjoyed at the noon hour and we passed by Rest Cottage, where a pause was made and silent prayer offered for Miss Willard's recovery and speedy and safe return to her native land. On the 12th I attended, by invitation, a parlor meeting in Austin. There was a large attendance and a number of interesting papers, including 'A review of the year.' Several appropriate pieces were rendered, vocal and instrumental. The Temperance Temple was favorably spoken of. The W. C. T. U. has a headquarters where there are rooms to rent and an employment bureau and reading room, and from which just now clothing is being dispensed."

Weak Stomach strengthened by BEECHAM'S PILLS.

A WORLD'S FAIR CALENDAR.

Any one who has ever seen one of the "Keeping Everlastingly At It" Calendars issued by N. W. Ayer & Son, Newspaper Advertising Agents, Philadelphia, is ever afterward very hard to please.

That for 1894 is a rare combination of beauty and utility—large enough to be seen, handsome enough to be admired and sensible enough to be respected. He would, indeed, be a queer person who would be unwilling to "keep steady company" with it for a year.

We would call this "a World's Fair edition" because of its numerous references to that wonderful event. Its ingenious suggestions on this subject will doubtless be helpful to many who visited "The White City."

It is easy to credit the statement that an increasing number of these calendars is sold each year. The price delivered (and well delivered), postpaid to any address is 25 cents—evidently a tariff for protection only, as at this figure there can be no profit in it for the publishers.

CONVENIENT FOR WEST-SIDE RESIDENTS.

The new PENNSYLVANIA LINES' STATION, at West Madison and Rockwell Streets, Tickets to all points East—to Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati and the South at lowest rates. Baggage checked to destination. All trains stop to take on and discharge passengers. For particular information call upon D. J. Shine, Agent, Penna-Lines' Passenger Station, West Madison Street, or H. R. Dering, Ass't Gen'l Passenger Agent, 248 South Clark Street, Chicago.

NEELY'S History of The Parliament of Religions
Chicago Tribune: "Editorially it is beyond criticism, being impartial, non-sectarian, authentic and reliable. Lever, Chicago: "There is no question about its reliability or authenticity." Complete in one vol. of 1,000 pp. Cloth $2.50, sheep $4 prepaid. Best terms to agents.
A. B. STOCKHAM & CO., 277 Madison-st., Chicago.

OUR NEW "Blue Book"
Giving Full Directions for embroidering fifty different flowers, showing the colors of silk to be used for each.
Sent FREE for a Stamp.
ADDRESS
THE BRAINERD & ARMSTRONG SILK CO., 137 a Union St., New London, Conn.

World's Fair Highest Awards
Medal and Diploma on our INCUBATOR and BROODER Combined.
"Old Reliable" Leads them all.
If you are interested in Poultry, it will pay you to send 4 cents in stamps for our 72 page catalogue, giving valuable points on Poultry Culture. Address
Reliable Incubator and Brooder Co. Quincy, Ill.
45 yards High Class Fowls.

High Arm
FREE TRIAL in your own home for 30 days without paying one cent in advance; machine to be returned at our expense if unsatisfactory. We take all risks, pay freight, ship anywhere, to anyone, in any quantity at wholesale prices. $65 Kenwood machine, $24.50; $55 Arlington, $20.50; $45 Arlington, $17.50; $35 High Arm Gem, $12. We sell all makes and styles, from cheapest $7.95 to best "Kenwood," $24.50. All attachments free. THREE HIGHEST WORLD'S FAIR MEDALS AWARDED. Over 100,000 now in use. Buy direct from factory. Save agents large profits. Catalogue and testimonials free. Write at once. Address (in full) CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 W. VanBuren St., Dept. A 151, Chicago, Ill.
Warranted Ten Years.

HATCH CHICKENS BY STEAM
With the Improved Excelsior Incubator.
Simple, Perfect, Self-Regulating. Thousands in successful operation. Guaranteed to hatch a larger percentage of fertile eggs at less cost than any other Hatcher. Lowest priced first-class Hatcher made.
Circulars free. Send 6c. for Illus. Catalogue.
GEO. H. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

Nerve Tonic — Blood Builder
DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR PALE PEOPLE
Send for descriptive pamphlet.
50c. per box. 6 for $2.50.
Dr. WILLIAMS' MEDICINE CO., Schenectady, N.Y. and Brockville, Ont.

AGENTS CAN MAKE FROM $25.00 TO $100.00 a week by canvassing for the best specialties ever offered. No competition. Address, N. Y. & LONDON ELECTRIC ASSN., Kansas City Mo.

Don't Cost You a Cent!
BOYS AND GIRLS who want an elegant high grade SAFETY BICYCLE FOR NOTHING, send your name and address to H. M. CO., 358 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

PILES Electrobole gives instant relief, final cure in a few days, and never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. Mailed free. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 695, New York City, N.Y.

$2.75 14 KARAT GOLD PLATE
CUT THIS OUT and send it to us with your name and address and we will send you this watch by express for examination. A Guarantee For 5 Years and chain and charm sent with it. You examine it and if you think it a bargain pay our sample price, $2.75, and it is yours. It is beautifully engraved and warranted the best time-keeper in the World for the money and equal in appearance to a genuine Solid Gold Watch. Write to-day, this offer will not appear again.
STEM WIND STEM SET
THE NATIONAL MFG. —AND— IMPORTING CO.
334 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO. ILL.

PREMIUM OFFER FOR 1894

A GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY

To help us swell THE UNION SIGNAL list to ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND, and to avail yourself of this unequalled opportunity to secure some of our best books and specialties for almost nothing.

OFFER A
JOSEPH COOK'S
Portrait on satin, 25c.

OFFER B
PROF. DRUMMOND'S
Portrait on satin, 25c.

OFFER C
TEMPERANCE SOUVENIR
An artistic book of poems from American authors, 35c.

OFFER D
POET'S SOUVENIR
Choice selections of poems and real etchings, 35c.

OFFER E
POPULAR POEMS
By American poets. Illustrated. Padded covers, 50c.

OFFER F
FRANCES E. WILLARD'S
Picture. A life-size water tint. Pronounced excellent by her friends. 50c.

OFFER G
CROSS AND GRAIL
By Lucy Larcom, and other poems. 75c.

OFFER H
LIFE'S EVERYDAYNESS
By Rose Porter. A volume of short essays on Christian and home themes. 75c.

OFFER I
MY GUEST CHAMBER
For the Master's Use. Gift Edition. 75c.

OFFER K—Exceptional

The Standard Classics, bound in hand-painted parchment and in brown and gilt cloth.
Any one with artistic taste will appreciate these books.
Whittier's Poems, Vols. 1 and 2.
Voices of the Night, and Other Poems. Longfellow.
The Princess, and Other Poems. Tennyson.
Sesame and Lilies. Ruskin.
Evangeline. Longfellow.
Idylls of the Kings. Tennyson. 90c.

IT IS A PLEASURE TO US TO BE ABLE TO MAKE THE FOLLOWING

ANNOUNCEMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL	to	One	NEW	subscriber	and Offer	A, $1 05
"	"	"	"	"	"	B, 1 05
"	"	"	"	"	"	C, 1 10
"	"	"	"	"	"	D, 1 15
"	"	"	"	"	"	E, 1 20
"	"	"	"	"	"	F, 1 20
"	"	to Two	NEW	subscribers	"	G, 2 05
"	"	"	"	"	"	H, 2 10
"	"	"	"	"	"	I, 2 15
"	"	"	"	"	"	K, 2 25

BEFORE ORDERING READ CAREFULLY THE FOLLOWING

1. When sending for any of the above special offers, don't fail to designate by Letter A, B, etc.
2. In order to take advantage of these offers the subscribers must be NEW.
3. Cash MUST accompany order in every case.
4. You may send in several NEW names, and claim a different premium with each.

We feel that we are offering something worth working for, added to the satisfaction you will feel in sharing in this grand effort to swell the list of subscribers to the ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND mark.

Let us hear from YOU!

ADDRESS
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N
...The Temple, Chicago...

Attention Boys

We want Every Temperance Boy

To work on time during 1894 and to this end we give the opportunity to secure a first-class time-keeper....Just a few hours' work daily and this fine Nickel Watch will be yours....

This Offer is for Boys only

For Six New Subscribers
to THE UNION SIGNAL we will send it to your address, postpaid.

For Four New Subscribers
and Fifty Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

For Two New Subscribers
and Seventy-five Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

Boys who will thank us for this generous offer to own the best pocket time-piece yet made by any Clock Company. Extreme diameter of case 2¼ in.

We believe in an honest thing and so offer Nickel Watches, but if you prefer gilt, which resembles gold in appearance but is likely to wear off, we offer it on the same terms.....As soon as your mind is made up to secure one of these Watches, write to us. This will insure prompt delivery when your order reaches us....Address

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO.

OUR DAY FOR 1894

This leading American Journal of Reform will be issued in 1894 as a BI-MONTHLY, and mailed to all subscribers, including clergymen and students, at the uniform price of

..ONE DOLLAR PER ANNUM..

Remit by money order, express order, draft or postal note to

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
...The Temple, Chicago...

Signal Notes.

DR. BODE, of Heldesheim, declares that the manufacture of intoxicating liquors in Germany robs the country yearly of four and one-half millions of acres; it plunges thirty-two thousand into such poverty that they must be supported by the state or by friends; it sends four thousand two hundred and fifty into compulsory confinement in labor colonies; it has robbed thirty thousand of their reason and it has raised an army of criminals, one hundred and fifty-nine thousand strong.

AN English missionary on furlough from China was recently asked some questions by a bright Chinese convert of Dr. A. J. Gordon's church in Boston. No. 1 was, What for you English make opium? No. 2. What for your Queen not stop? No. 3. Queen no can, what for citizens not stop? No. 4. Why think England belong great Christian nation? No. 5. Then why not stop? The gentleman said there seems to be but the one brutal reply to make, "It pays."

THE New York City Mission Tract Society is doing a larger work among the poor and neglected classes of that city than almost any other religious organization. It supports three English, two German, one Italian and one Hebrew church, besides four Sunday-schools with three thousand five hundred pupils. Beside the regular ministers, forty-five women are employed in the woman's branch of the society. Some are trained nurses. Three day nurseries and a home for nurses and missionaries are supported.

THE revised contest rules and constitution of the Inter-Collegiate Prohibition Association are ready for distribution, and clubs are requested to send for them at once. According to the report of ex-Secretary Augir at the Harvey convention, the association had at the close of the college year over four thousand members. To furnish a means of advancing our cause the National association began, December 1, publishing a small paper, called The Collegiate Prohibition Bulletin. It will be issued monthly, at 25 cents per year. Address Charles A. Cale, Secretary, 211 N. Fifth, Terre Haute, Ind.

PROF. CLIFFORD ALBUTT, of Cambridge University, England, in testifying before a British commission to investigate drunkenness and its treatment, said: "The curious thing about drunkenness is that it is generally hereditary in that particular form—as drunkenness. . . . Drunkenness generally comes in the same form and manifestations; it appears not merely as a general tendency to insanity, but as a special form of it." He also adds that public opinion, education, physiology, and so on, are having such a strong effect that the thing will die out of itself in large measure. Would this were true!

ONE of the most valuable of American charities is the Children's Aid Society of New York. Over one hundred thousand children have been taken from homes of vice and been given good homes in various parts of the country. It maintains twenty-one industrial schools, thirteen night schools and six lodging houses in New York. A new school to reach Polish, Russian and Bohemian immigrants has just been opened, and already three hundred and fifty names are enrolled. In addition to the schools are the evening classes. A farm school has been established, which is helping to assist in the problem of vagrant boys. Six cents for lodging and six cents for a meal are the charges and thousands of children have been sheltered.

THE Boston Seaman's Friend society has removed its headquarters from Woods Hall to Vineyard Haven, Mass. For its various departments of work, among which are cruising with mission launch, visitations on shipboard and to marine hospital, services on shipboard and on shore, care of shipwrecked crews and destitute and convalescent sailors, it solicits the bounty of those friendly to its cause. Aside from money, room furnishings, books, comfort bags, clothing, standard, religious and secular papers and magazines are acceptable. A similar work with similar needs is being carried on for the men-of-war's men from the Mare Island Navy Yard, who frequent Vallejo, Cal., being in charge of a young man who has left the navy for Christian work.

Advance in Price of Coal need not increase the cost of other necessaries. Housekeepers and mothers can still obtain the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk at a reasonable price. Its quality has been maintained for over thirty years without an equal.

IVORY SOAP

99 44/100 % PURE

DON'T ACCEPT IMITATIONS.

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CIN'TI.

"Who wins the eyes, wins all."

If you regard APPEARANCES you will certainly use SAPOLIO in house-cleaning. Sapolio is a solid cake of scouring-soap. Try it in house-cleaning.

YOU ARE JUDGED

by your house just as much as by your dress. Keep it neat and clean and your reputation will shine. Neglect it and your good name will suffer. Do not think that house-cleaning is too troublesome; it is worth all it costs, especially if you reduce the outlay of time and strength by using SAPOLIO.

A PIANO —AND— ORGAN BOOK FREE.

Send us your address on a postal, and you will receive the finest and most elaborate Catalogue of Pianos and Organs ever published. It will show you the latest and best styles, and how to SAVE $100. Send for it to-day. It will more than please you. Write and see how little it takes to get an instrument when you begin right. (ORGANS from $27.50 up.) (PIANOS from $175.00 up.)

CORNISH & CO., Established 27 Years. Washington, N. J.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

THE PRESS CLAIMS COMPANY,
618 F STREET, NORTHWEST, WASHINGTON, D. C.
P. O. BOX 463. JOHN WEDDERBURN, Managing Attorney.

Cut this out and send it with your inquiry.

6 tubs in one. BATH TUBS, Wholesale & Retail. For "Bath Room" & "Portable." Durable, many long used renewed, light, little water. Agents and others send for circulars. E. J. Knowlton, Ann Arbor, Mich.

$3 a Day Sure. Send us your address and we will show you how to make $3 a day; absolutely sure; we furnish the work and teach you free; you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully; remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 for every day's work; absolutely sure; don't fail to write to-day. ROYAL MANUFACTURING CO., Detroit, Mich.

AGENTS MAKE MONEY

Selling the New Moon Embroidery Ring, for all kinds of fancy work, darning and mending. Good profits and a clear field. Sample and full particulars mailed for 25 cents. The Ohio Novelty Co., D35, Cincinnati, O.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$10.50 Buy the Oxford Improved SINGER Sewing Machine, with a complete set of attachments and guaranteed for 10 years Shipped anywhere on 30 days' trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded. Buy from factory, save dealers' and agents' profit. Write to-day for our LARGE FREE CATALOGUE. Oxford Mfg. Co., 342 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

BICYCLES FREE Organs, Watches, Guns, Etc. TO BOYS and GIRLS Devoting a few minutes after school-hours to our interests BOORMAN & PARKER, 173 5th Av., Chicago, Ill. Cat. full instruc. 1c stamp.

AGENTS clear $100 monthly. 100 New Ladies' Specialties for Old and Young. 64 page Illust'd Catalogue FREE. G. L. Erwin & Co., Chicago, Ill. LADY

CARDS Send 2c. stamp for Sample Book of all the FINEST and Latest Style Cards for 1894. We sell GENUINE CARDS NOT TRASH. UNION CARD CO., COLUMBUS, OHIO.

Kernels.

A CHANCE to rise.—Butcher: "I need a boy about your size, and will give you $3 a week." Applicant: "Will I have a chance to rise?" "Yes. I want you to be here at 4 o'clock every morning."—Life.

KIND words produce their own image in men's souls, and a beautiful image it is. They soothe and comfort the hearer. They shame him out of his unkind feelings. We have not yet begun to use them in such abundance as they ought to be used.

FAIR Visitor: "So you have really decided not to sell your house?"

Fair Host: "Yes. You see we placed the matter in the hands of a real estate agent. After reading his lovely advertisement of our property, neither John nor myself could think of parting with such a wonderful and perfect home."

WIFE: "I'm tired to death. Been having the baby's picture taken by the instantaneous process."

Husband: "How long did it take?"

Wife: "About four hours."

DENTIST: "With or without gas? With gas fifty cents extra."

Mr. Hardacre: "Ef you can't see in this glaring sunlight, I ain't goin' to pay you extry for gas, that's sartain."

"Do you preach extempore, or do you take notes?" "Well, sah, thar was once a time I took notes, but I've found it safest down in this deestrick to insist on habin' de cash down!"

NERVOUS PASSENGER (on Southern Railroad)—Conductor, why are we running at such a frightful rate of speed? Conductor (reassuringly)—There's a rotten bridge, madam, half a mile ahead, and we want to get over it with as little strain as possible. —Brooklyn Life.

A LITTLE girl, visiting a neighbor with her mother, was gazing curiously at the hostess' new bonnet, when the owner queried, "Do you like it, Laura?" The innocent replied: "Why, mother said it was a perfect fright; but it don't scare me!"—Exchange.

MARGIE.—The scales are fastened on fish just like the shingles on a house, aren't they?

Mamma.—Yes, Margie, dear.

Margie—I suppose they are put on that way, mamma, to keep the fish from leaking, aren't they?—Harper's Young People.

A REPORTER, who once "pulled a hand-press" on a country weekly, tells this story: One day while the paper was being worked off, a man from the country came in and walked all around the room, finally stopping near the press and watching the work very earnestly. "Anything I can do for you?" asked the man at the lever, pausing between impressions. "Naw," was the reply: "I don't want nothin'; I jis come in to see ye edit."

EDITOR: "I think I write better than I used to."

Editor's wife: "You write less. That's better."

LADY (to her legal friend): "You won't charge for a question, I hope?" Lawyer: "Oh, no; only for the answer."

WE have noticed that when a woman asks to be taken to the silk counter she speaks in a much louder voice than when she asks to look at the calico remnants.

HAVE YOU ASTHMA?

Dr. R. Schiffmann, St. Paul, Minn., will mail a trial package of SCHIFFMANN'S ASTHMA CURE free to any sufferer. He advertises by giving it away. Never fails to give instant relief in worst cases and cures where others fail. Name this paper and give your name and address for free trial package.

GOOD NEWS FOR ASTHMATICS.

We observe that the Kola plant, found on the Congo river, West Africa, is now in reach of sufferers from Asthma. As before announced, this new discovery is a positive cure for Asthma. You can make trial of the Kola Compound free, by addressing a postal card to the Kola Importing Co., 1164 Broadway, New York, who are sending out large trial cases free by mail, to sufferers.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail, by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XX.—No. 5.] CHICAGO, February 1, 1894. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance

Mrs. Ursula Henrick 1029 15th st. Feb 9

OUR COMING SPECIAL.

Look out for the Neal Dow Prohibition number, which will be issued February 22. It will contain strong prohibition doctrine, as well as sketches of Neal Dow and the Maine law, also a program for the celebration of the birthday of the "father of prohibition."

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Ex-governor William Gilpin, a noted western pioneer, is dead.

The Parish Councils bill passed its second reading in the House of Lords, January 25.

January 25 was college day of prayer, and was generally observed by higher institutions of learning in this country.

The cigar and fortune telling nickel-in-the-slot machine has been declared an illegal, gambling device, at Everett, Mass.

One thousand four hundred New York policemen are engaged in taking a census of the unemployed poor in that city.

The apparent reconciliation between Bismarck and Emperor William is a cause of rejoicing among the German people.

Mercury ranged from twenty to thirty degrees below zero in the northwest last Thursday, causing much suffering among the poor.

A monthly deficit of 100,000 francs in the papal revenue, due from decrease of donations from France, is being met by increasing gifts from America.

President Diaz, of Mexico, and Governor Northen, of Georgia, have declared that prize fighting should not take place in their respective territories.

At the National conference for good government in Philadelphia, January 26, a resolution was passed, proposing a National Municipal League of associations in different cities.

A citizens' meeting was held Sabbath evening, in the M. E. church at Evanston, Ill., at which a fund was raised to prosecute the violators of the prohibitory law, which is looked upon as a test case.

The formal opening of the California Midwinter Fair took place in Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, January 27. The grounds and buildings are declared to be in perfect readiness for inspection.

Judge Emory Speer, of Savannah, a native Georgian and ex-confederate soldier and Congressman, caused a sensation before the United States district court last week by delivering an address in which he felicitated upon the advantages of our government and the harmony between North and South.

Jacksonville, Fla., gave itself over to gambling, prize fighting and law-breaking last Thursday, the governor having been foiled in his attempts to enforce the law by the surprising act of Judge Call of the circuit court, who issued an injunction restraining the governor from interfering. The principals and everybody connected with the fight were arrested.

Among the bills introduced in the Iowa House of Representatives were a local option liquor bill, one to discourage saloon-keepers and impose a tax on the sale of intoxicants, and another to establish the Gottenburg system, granting franchises to incorporated companies for the sale of liquors. Other provisions for restriction prohibit screens, gambling devices, etc. All of these were presented Friday for the consideration of Iowa legislators, who will have a tortuous task to avoid inconsistency by the adoption of any of these propositions.

OUR Prohibition number, the preparation of which is progressing nicely, will be issued February 22. It will contain much matter not to be found elsewhere, although many of the prohibition journals will celebrate Neal Dow's birthday with extra good numbers. The "Father of Prohibition" will himself contribute a fresh and valuable article, his son furnishes a biographical sketch and such well-known writers as Mrs. Lathrap, Miss Lathbury and Mrs. Stevenson are sharpening their pencils for the benefit of our readers. There will be a reproduction of the original Maine Law and a symposium by thirty prohibition leaders.

IN order to insure our readers their copy of THE UNION SIGNAL of the current week for Sunday reading, we have decided to close the forms on Saturday instead of Monday or Tuesday, as heretofore. Our list is so large that in no other way can we reach our extreme Western subscribers by Saturday of each week. This may at times slightly decrease the news in Since Our Last Issue, but in no other respect will the best interests of the paper suffer, and we are confident that our readers will count the comfort of having the paper for Sunday reading far greater than the addition of a few news notes. The copies of distant subscribers are mailed Monday evening, and if in any case they fail to reach their destination by Saturday evening we would consider it a great favor to be notified of the fact that we may ascertain the cause.

THE liquor dealers in Chicago are growing uneasy because of the Wilson tariff bill, which proposes to raise the government tax on whisky from ninety cents to one dollar a gallon. They have organized a protective association and propose to send a delegation to Washington to "influence the legislation." The president says, "As it is, we are being imposed upon on all sides. We are told that we are disreputable and have no standing in society, while the landlord, the city, the state, and the general government all feel it to be a duty to levy tribute on us. We will organize to fight all these tendencies individually and collectively." Never have the liquor men been so outspoken in their defiance of law and taxation. In this we rejoice, for so long as their plans and threats are confined to secret societies or liquor organs (which good people seldom read, alas!) so long will the public generally be indifferent. Hence we call all such moves fortunate for Prohibitionists.

"WE will not license but we will tax," seems to be the burden of the new liquor bill which is now before the Iowa legislature. The bill is a long one, with eighteen separate sections, seventeen of which specify minutely the amount of "tax" (not fine) to be levied, the officers and the manner of collecting the tax, the disposition of it and the penalty for non-payment. But the eighteenth section is supposed to redeem the whole by declaring: "Nothing contained in this act shall be in any way construed to mean that the business of the sale of intoxicating liquors is in any way legalized, nor is this act to be construed in any manner or form as a license, nor shall the assessment or payment of any tax for illegal sale of liquors, as aforesaid, protect the wrong-doer from any penalty now provided by law. The meaning and intent of this act is that the taxes to be assessed and paid shall be an additional penalty to those now provided by law for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors." The long and short of it means that the Iowa Republicans fear to come out boldly for high license, so long as there exists the faintest memory of the people's vote for prohibition in 1884, which has never been annulled. By what right has a governor in his message, or a legislature in its acts, to ignore the sovereign vote of a great commonwealth, even if there be a quibble over a technicality in the law? We can see in this proposed "regulation bill" only a sugar-coated high license Republican pill.

MRS. SAKURAI, our "little Japanese sister," reports four dollars received for the Mary Allen West memorial building in Tokyo. Although the contributions so far are small, doubtless owing to the prevailing hard times, she is much encouraged with the little she has received, and asks that hereafter all such contributions be sent to Miss Alice Briggs, The Temple, Chicago, as she expects to travel most of the time until she returns to Japan. The little woman stepped into our office a few days ago with a Japanese paper in her hand, and with the tender look upon her face which is always there when thoughts of our promoted editor are in her mind. "Would you like to know how much we Japanese spent in Tokyo for Miss West?" On replying in the affirmative, she opened the little pamphlet, for Japanese papers are small, and proceeded to read the figures, which she had carefully translated from Japanese to American values. After enumerating the several items (advertising, carriage, postage, funeral expenses, etc.), she said: "That makes only one hundred and ten dollars, but that is much money with us, and it was given by poor individuals and poor societies, so you can see how much we loved Miss West." Again was all the wonderful kindness shown our brave comrade by these Japanese friends brought forcibly to mind, and our gratitude was further quickened. We feel sure there are many more who will help to build the Mary Allen West Temperance Temple in Tokyo as a memorial to as unselfish and heroic a woman as ever wore the white ribbon.

THE University of Minnesota is to be credited with the first systematic and energetic canvass for signatures to our Polyglot Petition. Dr. W. X. Sudduth, Dean of the dental college, has the matter under his personal supervision. President Northrop was the first to sign and was quickly followed by almost every member of the faculty. The students are taking an enthusiastic interest, for, "Minnesota to the front," is their watchword in every forward movement. It is expected that fully one thousand names will be secured, as the canvass is only just begun and the signatures already number in the hundreds. Which will be the next college to fall in line? Now is the time. The eighty thousand young people in the colleges and universities of this land would gladly give their names to this Petition to the governments of the world for the abolition of the traffic in strong drink if they were asked for it. There is no more fertile ground for agitation of the temperance question than our schools, and this is the opportune time, for before another winter, in all probability, a commission will be on its way around the world with the great Petition to the governments of the nations, to whom it will be personally presented. When our friends read of this unique and momentous journey, how many will be obliged to say regretfully, "I do wish my name were on that great roll, so that my signature might see the light of those distant lands and help, in its small way, the holy cause of temperance." Now is the accepted time. If you have not time to send for the regular blank forms (to Miss Alice Briggs, The Temple, Chicago) cut out the Petition as found on page 14, paste it on large foolscap paper, with plenty of margin for long names, and start it on its rounds at once. Be sure to carry two petition blanks, one for women and one for men. This is very important, as men sign as indorsers only, it being a woman's petition. It makes no difference where it is circulated, in college, shop, home, public meeting, Sunday-schools or among your friends privately. What we want are honest names, each one standing for an individual, and representing collectively the sentiments of the people. Few, almost none, will refuse. It is not asking for a pledge, ten cents, or valuable time. It is simply the writing of a name to a petition that has already the largest number of names ever collected for one purpose, and which will soon start upon a phenomenal, and we trust, a successful journey.

MY NEW NAME.

BY ADALINE HOHF BEERY.

In vision I part the curtain
  Star-spangled and spun with mist,
Whose drapery blue and crimson
  Earth's last loyal sun has kissed;
I catch from the upper convex
  A shaft of a far sweet light;
And up on the milky ladder
  I climb to its centered height.

The splendor is falling o'er me,
  As pausing with timid feet
I gaze through the jasper doorway,
  And up the long, burnished street.
I wonder if He will know me?
  And whether He'll ask me in?
I tremble, and wait, and listen,
  And doubts in my faint soul spin!

"My servant that overcometh"—
  The promise I've often read—
"I give as a friendship token
  A precious white stone," it said;
"And deep on its face engraven
  A beautiful name and new,
And sweet with a secret meaning,
  Spelled out with affection true."

Oh, what will He write on my stone?
  "Faith," "Charity," "Joy," or "Trust"?
Or "Patience," or "Loving-Kindness,"
  Or "Peacemaker," or "The Just"?
I wait still—how long one minute!—
  Perhaps I am not enrolled!
And nameless I'll haunt the portal,
  And sit in its shadows cold!

In terror to earth I'm falling;
  I wake, and I'm sitting here,
But after me calls my Master
  With comforting voice and clear:
"The name I shall keep for you, dear,
  When here at the throne you bow,
Will be but the fitting sequel
  To that you are bearing now."

Huntingdon, Pa.

THE MEMBER-AT-LARGE.

II.

BY HELEN CAMPBELL.

It was the social committee this time who waited upon the member-at-large, in the person of the chairman, an anxious little lady with a nervous manner and the gentlest of eyes, which seemed an appeal to the world to deal as tenderly as possible with feelings that had always been too susceptible.

"We have made the subject, 'Hospitality in the Olden Time,'" she said, "for if we had taken any phase of to-day it certainly would have made trouble."

"Trouble," repeated the member-at-large, "how could it possibly make trouble?"

The chairman smiled half pityingly.

"You would not ask that if you had been here a trifle longer," she said. "But I'm glad you do not know. That is the rock on which we split. There are very few rich people here, as must be quite evident. And between you and me I am glad of it. But those few have ruined all our old-fashioned ways. We used to have the most informal sort of lunches and teas. One house was famous for its scalloped oysters, you know, even in the days when we had to depend entirely on cans, and most of the old housekeepers had special dishes, which made the chief feature of the entertainment. But now, what with pink and blue and yellow lunches, and the house topsy-turvy with preparations, nobody dares try to entertain, or if they do, they have to go to bed directly afterward worn out with the strain of trying to do things in the same way; which you simply can't, you know, with only one girl, and she perhaps on the rampage, and threatening to leave. It is silly, of course, but it seems to have affected everybody, and I thought if we had this paper on old-fashioned ways of doing things, it would bring about a discussion. We need it, for nobody says a word but just keeps up the most terrible thinking, and of course something will happen if there isn't an outlet somehow. And what we want of you, you know, is just a general opinion about things in general—I mean in the way of hospitality."

"Having dammed up the stream that you know ought to flow freely you are all waiting for the break and whatever damage is to come," said the member-at-large, after a pause for consideration. "Well, I may as well do the deed as anybody, though I should really like to understand why you have not long ago talked it out and settled what ought to be done."

"We were waiting for you," said the chairman, and hastened away as if fearful that she would reveal family secrets. And the member-at-large first laughed and then shook her head, for it was impossible to understand why a community should be bowled over by a pink tea or any other color. She laughed again as she seated herself at the pretty desk in the corner, and jotted down a hasty note or two, on a narrow slip of paper.

"It is as preposterous as a good many other bugbears in daily life," she said half aloud. "Altogether too preposterous to make a paper worth while. This time we will talk it over."

"Why the old methods have passed," the speaker for the day ended, "it is not difficult to say. Times have changed. Society is far more exacting. The meal that satisfied our forefathers, or even a generation ago, no matter how elegantly served by the standards of that time, would seem to-day a makeshift, when compared with the daintiness and perfection of modern methods. In short, till we have attained trained servants, and the other necessities of modern hospitality, we are likely to renounce entertainment of any but the nearest and most familiar friends, and even they wax critical. Hospitality in the old sense is dead, nor is there likely to be resurrection."

A little wave as of applause went through the assembly, and here and there one nodded approval. It was good to have the reasons clear at last, and to settle definitely that the old ways were pleasant enough perhaps, but by no means to be perpetuated. But from the background uprose an old lady, with a frame of white curls about her energetic old face, and her black eyes sparkling with indignation.

"Be not forgetful to entertain strangers," she began. "If the words are not too old-fashioned to meet the views that it seems we are to be made to adopt, I would like to suggest that hospitality in my day counted as one of the most necessary virtues, and that I have always felt that if I had nothing but a cold potato and anybody cared enough for my society to share that potato with me, I should offer it to them."

"That certainly is the true principle," said the chairman feebly, but at this point the member-at-large rose in her place, with a bow to the old lady, whose cheeks were pink and whose eyes still a little fiery.

"The potato theory is a true one," she said. "The title I hold in my hand is the secret, or part at least of the secret of the decay of hospitality. That it has decayed, we who remember how the stranger was welcomed in our youth must admit, though in justice to the present generation we ought to add that where our grandfathers saw one stranger we face a hundred, the invention of the steam-engine having complicated entertaining as it has complicated everything else. This spirit of invention as well as of complication is in the air, and so it is perfectly in order that the latest cookery book should bear the title, 'One Hundred Ways with Potatoes.'

"Now Heaven forbid one hundred or half a hundred ways with potatoes! It is simplification that we want, not further complication. The chief trouble in this most transitional of times, is that with the growth of riches, and the fact that many who come into them have no real cultivation or social training, entertaining becomes simply a question of the amount of flowers and the sum paid the caterer per head. Half the people whose names figure in the papers have not really entertained and could not if they would. In the crush of a fashionable reception or afternoon tea who talks? Nobody; and then we wail that conversation is a lost art, and, as in a club or so of which I know, have conversation classes to teach bright women how to put themselves. We all go on the general basis that we all have as much money as our neighbors, and that all must entertain on the same scale. In the town where I spent some weeks before coming here I watched the results of the change in ideals with the same conviction that we have got to have a fair and square understanding with one another, we who are neither rich nor poor, but who certainly have neither time nor money for 'one hundred ways with potatoes.'

"A cultivated foreigner looks with actual horror at the methods of dining in an American hotel, even of the best. The American considers that he is not getting his money's worth unless he sees before him as many of the dishes on the bill of fare as his share of the table will hold. Whether they have any natural affinity or not he does not stop to think. A teaspoonful of each may be all he takes, but he likes them before him, and carries the same liking into his theory of housekeeping. The best housekeeper is she who has the greatest variety on her table, and from the babies, up and down, this principle rules.

"Now the fact is that the genuine epicure is never one who demands quantity, but who has so cultivated the palate that the flavor of each article of food at its best is what is sought. A potato to the epicure is at its highest point of perfection when boiled and served at the instant when done, a white, mealy, neutral accompaniment to the more pronounced flavors of fish or meat whose business it is to accent. To mash it is well at times, and there are other methods in frying and stewing that have their own place and right. But simple baked and boiled, perfection accomplished, are the standard ways of which one never tires, and all the ninety other ways set down in this pernicious little book are simply ways of consuming the housekeeper's time and making her feel still more the stress that is in the air, the feeling that unless she serves her potatoes in one hundred ways her guest will be unhappy and her husband know that he has made a mistake in his choice of a helpmate.

"Do you think I want to underrate dainty serving, and all that goes with the higher aspects of this necessity of eating? Not I! But I do insist that we think far too much about it; that health is ruined and temper with it; that we leave undone myriads of pleasant things because 'one hundred ways with potatoes' consumes all spare time, and that if the rich people who have trained servants don't mind taking their time for this sort of thing, the great mass who are not rich nor very likely to be, must arrange life on another basis, and decide as to the relative value of things. Why should Mrs. B. with only fifteen hundred a year be wretched because Mrs. C., with perhaps as many thousands, gives a pink lunch or a solid gold and silver lunch, in which nobody really sees or talks with anybody but is entirely occupied in taking in 'one hundred ways with potatoes'? What is wanted in entertaining is entertainment; not bewilderment and confusion and the sense that things are all in a mix and going as wrong as possible. It is true that a simple feast must be eked out with brains, but if people would only be natural and themselves there are brains enough. One of the most brilliant and successful clubs in the country made a rule in the beginning that no entertainment given by it should exceed twenty-five cents a head. It owns its club house to-day and is the heart and soul of the best life in the city, while a sister city not three hours away, that has chosen to pay always two dollars a head for lunches, and three for dinners, has neither club house nor large activities nor anything but name to show. That is never likely to be the case here. I look into your faces and see sensible, considerate eyes, eyes that hold sympathy and understanding, and that know the difference between the sham and the real. And so you are certain to understand, far better than any words can make you, all that is involved, and to try again the simple ways of our mothers and grandmothers, adding to them all the beauty that is our right, and that we may well claim in full; but remembering that the one thing we are to leave out once for all is, 'one hundred ways with potatoes.'"

Madison, Wis.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA DISPENSARY.

BY B. ODELL DUNCAN.

There is little doubt but that eventually our federal if not our state courts will rid us of the entire abomination of the dispensary as something quite outside the legitimate sphere of state legislation. The result depends upon the litigations pending now in federal and state courts; but the delays of law are long, especially in constitutional issues, so the final decision may wait afar off.

Already there has been a vast amount of litigation on side-issues growing out of the dispensary law, and South Carolina's ablest state circuit judge—Hudson—has in two cases decided the entire law unconstitutional. But appeal has been taken against his decisions to the state supreme court. That court, unfortunately, has been tampered with and is so much under the influence of "Tillmanism" that there is little confidence in its independence, or in its making other than a political decision of the question.

In the federal courts the decisions on the various side-issues brought before them have been in every instance adverse to the law, and this, too, even when appealed to the United States supreme court, as has been done in two or three cases. There is, therefore, little doubt concerning the ultimate decision of these courts, if once the question be placed before them on its merits.

Six months operation of the law as a prohibition measure (as some of our well-meaning temperance friends tried to regard it) has pretty effectually destroyed any delusions they may have entertained on this point. They had been cajoled and coaxed into accepting the plan under the impression that it would be executed in a way to restrain and restrict the traffic in intoxicants. The passage of the law at the hands of a subservient legislature was not for the purpose of restricting the evils of the whisky traffic, but for two principal reasons, which have become clearly manifest: First, the enormous profit which was expected in this state monopoly of the sale of intoxicants, including wines and beers; second, the immense political patronage and power such a law would place in the hands of the chief executive. There has been sad disappointment thus far. In the first, instead of the half million dollars profit per annum that glittered bewilderingly before eyes and judgment, the dispensary seems to be hardly more than paying expenses, if indeed it is doing that much. As to whether or not the promoters of the scheme will have occasion to be better satisfied with this as a political machine next autumn's elections must determine.

It is not to be denied that the original law of December, 1892, had certain commendable features, such as closing the dispensaries or whisky saloons at night, forbidding the sale of intoxicants to minors and habitual drunkards, etc. These were concessions made to the Prohibitionists, and would no doubt tend to diminish the evils of the traffic, were the law executed in the interest of Prohibition. But once the law was enacted and the almost absolute power for its execution in the hand of the governor of the state, very soon the prohibition mask was entirely thrown off and the law has since been operated with an eye single to making money out of it and for the purpose of building up an elaborate political machine all over the state.

But so disappointing has the original law of December, 1892, been to its advocates in every respect, that at the opening of the recent session of the legislature in December, the Tillmanites demanded, not modifications of the old law, but an entirely new and still more ironclad one, endowing the governor of the state with plenary powers for evasion of even the decisions of the courts. The new law was promptly enacted, for David B. Hill and Tammany never had a more servile and obedient legislature in New York than was the recent one in South Carolina to the present dynasty. Prior to December, 1892, when the first dispensary law was enacted, this state had absolute prohibition everywhere outside the incorporated towns and cities. In quite a number of the counties prohibition included the towns, by special acts of the legislature. For the other towns and cities local option prevailed. The result was a great diversity of licenses in the different towns, varying from $200 to $1,200. In Charleston and Columbia the license was only $200. One result of this was that Charleston had about two hundred little doggeries while the larger neighboring city of Atlanta, in Georgia, with $1,000 license, had only fifty-nine.

The dispensary law has in the brief space of six months entirely changed all this, and very much for the worse, as any unprejudiced observer must admit. Prohibition outside the incorporate towns no longer exists. Local option in the towns is no longer respected, but has to yield everywhere to Tillman bar-rooms. Even the rights of the dry counties to remain dry has been trampled under foot. The governor has it in his power under the recent act of December to establish a state saloon in every nook and corner of the commonwealth, including the dry counties, and he is making haste to do so. One of his very first acts under the new law, which went into effect immediately, was to establish two saloons in a county that has had prohibition for ten years; and it will be a surprise if we do not have them in every one of these counties before a month elapses. And yet there are those who would accept this dispensary law as a step in the direction of prohibition.

Besides these state saloons, dispensing chiefly to the negroes and poor whites what is said to be the poorest kind of whisky at one hundred per cent profit to the state, the "blind tigers" flourish everywhere. Unquestionably one of the worst results produced by this law is the demoralizing effect it has had upon the people. Those who formerly would never have thought of either selling or buying liquors in violation of law, now do so without hesitation. They reason, that if it is all right and proper for the state to engage in the whisky traffic for the sake of profit, it cannot be so very wrong for the individual to do so. Besides, the enormous profit of the state on its "wet" goods leaves an immense margin for profit to the "blind tiger," and the purchaser yields to the temptation of better goods at lower figures than furnished by the state.

Another indication of the demoralizing effect this law has had upon some of the people may be seen in the fact that even some ministers of the gospel, who once could not find language strong enough in which to express their holy abhorrence of the whisky traffic when carried on by individuals, now find a "state institution" above the criticism of gospel temperance. Even one or two of the good women prominent in the W. C. T. U. have been misled into advocating this law, and have even insisted that women might with propriety accept positions in the dispensaries as a sort of barmaid. Verily, as has been well said this dispensary law "is the prince of conscience stupefiers." Thank God, however, that no considerable number either of preachers or good women have been morally paralyzed by it. On the contrary such instances have been few.

The experience of the first two or three months after the closing of the bar-rooms seemed to indicate less drunkenness and less sale of intoxicants. But this has not continued. Drunkards had not then learned to evade the law, and the "blind tigers" had not gone into operation. But the latter are now in full swing, and the habitual drunkard has learned to buy by proxy when he cannot do so directly. Our dispensary keepers are said, however, not to be over scrupulous in enforcing the law as regards this class. There is about as much drunkenness now as under the old system. It is not possible to estimate the amount of whisky sold now compared with formerly, because so much is bought clandestinely or ordered from outside the state. Of one thing, however, there can be no doubt, and that is that those in control of the dispensary are doing all in their power to increase the consumption.

Another most objectionable feature of the dispensary law is the unequal and consequently unjust tax it imposes on the poorer class of our people. Experience shows that the dispensary is patronized chiefly by the negroes and the poor white people who bear the burden of one hundred per cent tax on all the whisky they consume, while the better classes and more intelligent whites who use it buy elsewhere. The dispensary, then, is but another instance of a most unjust system of raising revenue, by discriminating against the poor and ignorant, and in favor of the rich and intelligent, just as does a high tariff on prime necessities of the poor, and a low tariff on the luxuries of the rich.

Still another very serious objection to the law is that it requires an army of state constables, popularly known as "whisky spies," to enforce it. These are of course a very low order of men, receiving only two dollars per diem as remuneration, for no man of any character or self-respect would accept such a position. These constables have already caused much litigation by their arbitrary and lawless methods of proceeding. Four of them, including the chief constable, are now under indictment for violently entering and searching the bedroom of an ill woman, causing her serious bodily harm. During Christmas just past, they invaded the premises and killed one man, and one of them was nearly shot to death in turn. The popular feeling is very much aroused against them, and serious trouble is greatly to be apprehended. Yet, such men as these are given extraordinary powers, even to the extent of entering and searching the premises of any private citizen without the formality of a warrant. It has been the proud boast of the Anglo-Saxon race that a man's house was his castle. It is safe to say that no more arbitrary, unjust and despotic law is in force in any country, not even in Russia, than is this dispensary law in South Carolina.

Our law was modeled after a municipal law in force in the little town of Athens, over in Georgia, where the state university is located. There it was a compromise between Prohibitionists and the whisky element for the good of the students attending the university. It was only an experiment; according to the latest information the citizens are tryingto get rid of it. Certainly the law in South Carolina has proved a veritable Pandora's box of evils.

Newberry, S. C.

HOW ELIZABETH CADY STANTON GAINED PROTECTION FOR WOMEN.

BY SYDNEY DILLWYN.

Little Mistress Elizabeth Cady, of New York state, was the daughter of Judge Cady, who having retired from the bench, had resumed the practice of law. His office was attached to his home and his motherless daughter often found her way into her father's law office, where she gradually began to take an interest in his cases. Many of these concerned the wrongs of women, and she would entreat her father to protect the women. In reply he would explain to her that he could not, because of the law. She made him show her the laws in the books, and their injustice greatly stirred her feelings.

At length one day her former nurse, who had married, told the child a long story of her sufferings from a drunken husband who appropriated her earnings. Much excited the little girl ran after her when she had left, and told her not to trouble for she would "fix it all up." She would pretend a headache next Sunday, and, when all had gone to church, she would, with the scissors, cut out of the law books all those wicked laws. The nurse seeing that she was in earnest told the Judge, but with the caution not to let it be known that she had repeated to him what the child had said. Taking his daughter on his lap Judge Cady drew from her the plan, and then explained that if she did cut the laws out, or even burned the books, it would not help matters.

In reply to her question as to how then women's wrongs could be righted, he explained that it was only by changing the laws, and that the state legislature alone could do this. Little understanding it all, but with the injustice burned into her soul, she vowed that, when she grew up, she would have this wicked law changed. For this purpose, at about twenty, she went to the New York legislature, sitting at Albany. It happened that at this time—in the thirties—there were many thrifty Dutch farmers who had grown rich, and who were grieving that the dowries given to their daughters were wholly subject to their dissipated husbands. To see their hardly earned money thus spent in free living was an insupportable grievance to the thrifty old Dutchmen. Miss Cady easily obtained their assistance, and, after long effort, she secured the passage of a law giving married women separate and uncontrolled ownership of their own property.

From that time Elizabeth Cady Stanton has labored untiringly through fifty years, with her voice and her pen in the cause of the rights of women. She has lived down the reproach of an unpopular cause, and seen the realization of just protection to women, and this is largely attributable to her efforts. The women of this decade have entered into the labors of these early advocates of the enfranchisement of their sex. Through an amount of abuse, attack and ridicule, now inconceivable, they labored in season and out of season, sometimes wisely, sometimes unwisely, but always with the eloquence of profound feeling.

It has been remarked that eloquence is cheap among reformers. It is not strange that, all aglow with the sense of wrong, abolitionists, advocates of the rights of women, temperance lecturers speak with the burning eloquence of deep conviction. AGITATE! AGITATE! AGITATE! is the lesson to be learned from the accomplishment of reforms. Good people are often conservative and slow. They need but an awakening, an arrest of thought, for their purposes are right. Half waked up, even saints are cross, but get them fully awake to an overlooked injustice, and they will thank you and join in opposing it. The world is ruled by words. Talk of reform till you are hoarse. Get well, and talk again.

We build the tombs of the prophets, those who brought to us the deliverances which we now are enjoying; but are any casting stones to-day at the reformers, whose honored tombs shall be built by the next generation, and by those who, after opposing them, shall have then entered into their labors? Dead fish swim with the current. We all go with reforms already accomplished—the abolition of slavery, the property rights of women. But do any good people among us sneer and say hard things of those a little in advance of them who are struggling against the current of injustices to women, the survival of dying feudalisms and ancient social laws? Do we overlook the small unwisdoms of earnest reformers and delight in the greatness of their aims? Or do some look with a magnifying glass at their failings and with reducing glass at their greatness? Let each reader honestly read his own heart and life, and make the application personally. We make none.

An aureole, even if unseen by some, is upon the heads of the reformers who sacrifice popularity, time and means, with no hope of personal advantage. To them we can say: Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see; and those who hear that which ye hear; who see plainly the future good through all the clouds of prejudice and opposition; who, by faith, hear the thanksgiving of the future for things that as yet are not. Such are, in a true application of the words, "saved by faith," and will save multitudes by their faith—"the substance of things hoped for."

London, Eng.

MEMORIES OF THE WHITE CITY.
IV.

BY ELIZABETH CUMINGS.

What did the polyglot tribes of the Midway think of Chicago? What a revelation it would be if one could look at his own people through the eyes of an alien! Possibly it might not be altogether satisfactory to race prejudice. A persistent, ear-torturing drumming and a certain unmitigated shade of red are always associated with that thoroughfare we called "The Plaisance" in my recollection. As some of the strange people with ochre and umber complexions have exquisite feeling for color, the withering suspicion has sometimes come to me that the eye-biting red color and noise were intended to be delicate concessions to supposed Western tastes.

. . . . . .

It was an old, old spinet, dating back to the early days of the sixteenth century. It had three and a half octaves, and upon its sounding-board, as if scattered by a careless hand, were painted tulips, red and yellow, still very bright to see, and bunches of ripe, red cherries. Carved into the board, and gilded, was a very amusing and long-necked representation of King David playing upon a harp. The spinet had no legs of its own, and lay upon a table. The cover was fastened by simple brass hooks, like a monster ambrotype case, and across it in rude black letters was the legend: "Sic transit gloria mundi!" I softly touched one of the much-worn keys, and heard a faint, sweet sound. Then a terrific, soul-shaking voice shouted: "Let that alone, will you!"

Another spinet, also of three and a half octaves, had black naturals with white sharps. Another had naturals of mahogany A double spinet with two keyboards, each of three and a half octaves had upon the inside of its lid a carefully painted scene portraying the musical contest between Apollo and Marsyas. The principal figures were attended by a suite of interested friends. The tones were dark; crimson lake, Indian yellow and vague, shadowy green and sienna tints predominated, and the pigments were laid on in such a manner they seemed to have sunken into the fibre of the wood. At either side of the keyboards were dainty, dancing figures, extremely vivacious in pose and pretty to see. Still another spinet was square and had above its sounding board a tray fitted to hold a complete outfit of haberdashery for sewing, as buttons, tapes, thread and silk. It was, of course, the invention of a more recent genius, one of the type that now contrives pocket knives which hold a manicure set and tooth brush. This instrument had its own legs and was in general effect not unlike the card tables that date back early in the present century. An upright spinet had a back like a truncated cone, curiously touched off in gold and black. On top of it gazing down at the keys, regardless of the twist he was giving his neck, was what a placard said was a swan. Unaided, I should have taken it to be a more domestic bird. It had a black neck and a gold head, so perhaps it was a swan. The hammer does not always hit the tack in this imperfect world. The owner of the soul-shaking voice had been called away and unrebuked, vandal fingers thumped the ancient instruments without sense or sympathy, while I had touched the spinet lovingly and gently, thinking of the mighty master who loved its kind, the immortal John Sebastian Bach.

. . . . . .

A great many stories were back of what one saw at the Fair, some of them impossible for the mind to dwell upon. I see a wee laddie scampering down the street, and beneath his cap float golden curls. I saw a tress of just such golden hair woven upon the handle of some sort of an Indian war club in an angle of the Woman's Building, where the Navajo blankets made a room all burning bright, and a majestic bust of a great war chief stood guard. There was a second club from which hung a long brown tress thickly strewn with gray. I know not what else there was, for my heart failed me, and I hurried from the place and sought diversion in the United States Government Hospital. There I found rows of glass cases full of what surgeons would call "beautiful preparations," sections of bone delicately cleaned and dried, and other sections in alcohol to show the processes of disease set up by gun-shot wounds. But what riveted my attention was a miniature ambulance train, on which, bent up in seeming anguish, puppets lay on puppet beds. It was October, and a stream of visitors was pouring in and out in endless, hurried procession. I went with them, scarcely looking at the trim, soldierly young fellows in the dispensary, and took refuge with the Krupp guns. May the guns grow bigger and bigger, till for very terror men shall arrive at peace, by reason and by courts of arbitration.

. . . . . .

"If he can do great things, why does he do such things?" demanded a young girl before one of the Zorn pictures. It was the one in which the middle foreground was occupied by a man in utter collapse from drink. Beside him sat a young woman, presumably his wife. It was consummately done, that limp, overcome figure so wonderfully foreshortened. I heard the same young person declare that the light on the cheek of the most prominent lady in "The Passengers in an Omnibus," looked like the mark of a flatiron. Until then I had been occupied in admiring the art which so cunningly painted the dazzle of light on the windows, and its reflection upon the human faces. The ball-room with its dancing figures and glancing lights, so perfectly done, was like a photograph in color, but after all if Zorn can do great things, and he is a master in the technique of his art, why has he given us pictures which simply exhibit his immense cleverness, or about which there is question as to his aim? There was a picture of a young girl combing her hair, a dazzling, auburn-haired blonde, with shining hazel eyes, that did one good to look at, for the face was sweet and pure, the coloring charming. When I think of Zorn I like best to remember that lovely portrait and his wood carving of an old woman, an exquisite little work, before which I saw a boy bending entranced. First and last I saw many boys at the Fair, marching about quietly and taking in, I fancied, no end of mental treasure. Perhaps their presence made me more impatient with Zorn's picture of drunkenness. Only a supreme artist could imagine the depths of abasement in which lay the soul of that sprawling figure. But that last unspeakable touch could have been given, and we would have seen in it something as true and sorrowful as Vedder's "Lost Mind." Artists of pen or pencil, keep your hands off drunkenness, I beg unless you can show it for what it is.

. . . . . .

The acute Samantha Allen declares that for telling you your faults there's no one like relations, so it is, perhaps, natural that I saw some flaws in the arrangements in our Uncle Samuel's exhibit. I trudged up-stairs, past the supercilious looking llamas, to look at the South American photographs and the goods imported by the various parts of that continent from Europe, and I wondered, and wonder still, if those goods were shown to incite our manufacturers to compete in this great market, why they were not made more readily accessible. Unluckily, the patient wooden Indians, and the distinguished looking élite whose photographs adorned the walls had no word to say for themselves. I trust the manufacturers who visited the Fair knew where to look. If ever I have occasion to advertise a good thing, I shall not put the exhibit up attic.

. . . . . .

Each state sent of her best. Little Rhode Island sent portraits of her early governors. Virginia sent facsimiles of the precious relics of Washington. Illinois had the martyr, Lincoln; Ohio had her group of heroes and jurists, among them Grant; and Pennsylvania had the liberty bell, before which men stood bare-headed, and women grew dim-eyed. Utah, so anxious just now to prove that to be a Mormon is as harmless as to be, say, a Methodist, or Baptist, or Presbyterian, had an heroic statue of Brigham Young, all of bronze, made by Dallin. The statue and pedestal cost fifty thousand dollars, and the two have gone their way to adorn the beautiful stretch of Mt. Zion, at Salt Lake City, and perhaps now stand among the shaking aspens between the Tabernacle and that expansion, and, so to speak, apotheosis of the New England orthodox meeting-house, the Temple. I doubt if a state distinctively Methodist, or Baptist, or Presbyterian—or Mormon—is desirable.

In the Utah Building was a very perfectly preserved Cave-dweller mummy, with what was once precious to her about her. She was perhaps remote, but after all I understand her better than a modern Vermont Yankee, like Mr. Young, or a Connecticut man like President Woodruff, who claims to receive daily revelations from heaven. I like better to recall the true feeling for the beautiful shown by the Utah women in the frieze they put about the part of the room in the Woman's Building in which they set up their silk loom in which, under their fingers, a beautiful web grew as the days ran by. The frieze was of sage brush pressed, and was so arranged it always brought before my eyes a vision of the rocky wastes on which it shivers, blown by the never-ceasing winds. It was true feeling, too, that wrought the scarlet-painted cups that glow about the gray-green waters of the Great Salt Lake, and the flame-colored cacti of the desert upon the sage-green curtains in the parlor of the Utah Building. True love for one's land finds rootlets among its common things. Looking far afield how easy it is to miss the treasure at one's feet. I saw a fireplace set with hand-painted tiles among the work of women in the Illinois Building, and on each one glowed some flower we know, the columbine, the bird's foot violet, the exquisite shooting star, the gentian and the cardinal flower, but nowhere else did I come across the simple, homely appreciation of our lovely land manifested by the women dwelling in the mountain valleys of Utah.

South Evanston, Ill.

"WIVES, SUBMIT YOURSELVES."

Protests Against Dr. Lyman Abbott's Interpretations.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, in my humble opinion, mistakes wifely submission to the laws of God and nature for obedience to a husband's authority. He says a woman should "look up to and reverence her husband." Why not look up to and reverence God, and say of our husband, in the language of the Psalmist, "A man, mine equal, my guide and mine acquaintance. We took sweet counsel together, and walked to the house of God in company." Why will our brethren twist and distort the apostolic teaching into a command of "Wives, obey your husbands," when there is no such command? We recommend all such brethren to spend more time and give more thought to an elaborate and exhaustive explanation of "Husbands, love your wives," especially when we remember, and all fathers know, that "submission" means going down, as Mrs. Lathrap, says, "into the very jaws of death" to give birth to the children who are God's own pledges of faithful and honorable marriage.

Higbee, Pa. MARY SAMMONS PARRY.

In regard to Dr. Lyman Abbott's position respecting the submission of women, it may be said that a woman could obey her husband without humiliation, if that husband were the man Paul contemplated when he gave that advice in Ephesians 5. Interpretation of anything said in the past requires careful consideration of the party addressing and the party addressed, and of the circumstances surrounding both at the time of the act. Paul, from Rome, was sending back a familiar letter to the Ephesian church, having heard of shameful excesses within it. Among many other charges for a more Christian walk he urges: "Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God." Who shall submit themselves one to another? The members of the church—men and women. To the women he said: "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands as unto the Lord. . . . . As the church is subject unto Christ, so the wives to their own husbands in everything." Under the charge that the members of the church should submit themselves one to another, Paul said: "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it. . . . He that loveth his wife loveth himself. For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church: For we are members of his body, of his flesh and of his bones."

How did Christ love the church and give himself for it as its "head"? Even unto death—in self-sacrifice. Of this great mystery of the union and submission of husband and wife one to another, Paul says: "But I speak concerning Christ and the church."

No one will deny that many times Christ invites the church to co-heirship with himself in the rulership of the church, and this authority is reaffirmed more than once in Paul's epistles. The direct inference from Paul's illustration of the relations of men and women by the relationship of Christ and the church is their co-heirship in the rulership of the world. ZERELDA WALLACE.

Chicago, Ill.

Whether there can be given "an exegesis of this subject" of the gospel of marriage which will be "more in harmony with the practice of the nineteenth century" may be a question, but that one might be outlined "more in harmony with the spirit of the gospel" can be indicated, I think, to such as are not prejudiced by or for power.

First, then, wherein does this one fail? "The wife will submit," says Dr. Abbott, "because the man is the head of the household according to divine law." There are two large divisions of divine law, those which make for the best things possible under the circumstances, and those which make for the absolute best. The commands that the ancient Israelites said the Lord so often gave to them when they went out against the former possessors of Canaan, namely, that they should "leave not a soul alive," could come into the first mentioned division of divine laws; certainly not into the second. Into that same category would fall the laws allowing polygamy and divorce. Also the command of Paul to the Corinthian women about "covering the head" and "keeping silence."

If Dr. Abbott wishes to class Paul's command of "submission" for the wife in the same list, then I have no dispute with him. But if he wishes it classed as one of the everlasting laws of God along with "Thou shalt not steal," "Thou shalt not commit adultery," etc., then I protest against his statement, for I claim that this submission, though it is more or less essential under the present conditions, is based upon the fact that the muscular supremacy of the man is used to silence the will and the judgment of the one who is bodily the "weaker vessel"; and I deny the truth of his statement that such submission is of love and not a subservience to power, legal or social.

A woman may be ruled by a father, or a brother, or it may be only by the "legal or social" conditions upon which man has set the mark of his material mastery; but in the last analysis it is by muscular force. I do not forget that a woman may submit to her husband because of her sense of his superior wisdom and fitness, but such submission is given by man to man, by woman to woman, and by man to woman. When the woman submits because the man is her husband, or because being her husband he is a man, then she yields to muscular might, for in that only, opportunities being equal, has nature and nature's God made man superior. This superiority makes him the king in material matters, therefore the more material standards rule the more the woman submits, as can be plainly seen by looking over the nations of the world to-day.

"Thy desire shall be to thy husband and he shall rule over thee." Why? It was not so in Eden. But the man and woman had eaten that which tasted sweet to the flesh; had followed the bodily desires against reason and conscience, and this brings not only the "thorns and the thistles" of material providing (man's curse) but "submission" and "sorrow in childbearing" (her curse) to the woman. Shall the curse of living ever be taken away? "As in Adam all die so in Christ shall all be made alive." This is the resurrection that Jesus brought to a world dead in materialism, the resurrection of the spiritual life, the new Eden.

But Dr. Abbott says: "In every organization there must be some final authority." True, but why should that final authority rest on muscles? Does not the spirit of the gospel call rather for a headship of character? Will not such headship naturally come, is it not all the time coming, as the power of muscle is relegated to its proper place in the dispensation of righteousness, and used not as the master but as the mighty servant of the soul?

AURILLA FURBER.

St. Paul, Minn.

"No woman should marry unless she can reverence as well as love her husband; look up to him in a true sense, and rejoice in accepting his will as the law of the household." This is the opinion of Dr. Lyman Abbott. Every woman should be "wide awake" as to the virtues of her husband, but—it sometimes happens that wives grow intellectually, while the husband does not. In regard to the dictum "no woman should marry," etc., we fear the population of the world would decrease very much, if this were accepted. It is possible that the Rev. Dr. can recall some marriages at which he has officiated when he should have "forbidden the bans," if the position he takes had been heeded. Especially, as girls marry early and having been taught from birth the superiority of the male intellectually, she is not aware of his inferiority at the time.

Now, husband and wife being one, it follows that the half who possesses the best judgment will be leader. There may have been a time when the male represented the wisdom and the female the affection or love of this dual man, but the world has gotten so 'topsy-turvy,' that it is no longer so. We are assured that in a higher state the reverse is true, the woman being the wisdom of the perfect man, and it may be, that we are nearing the superior elevation of humanity. T. W. S.

ADULT SUFFRAGE IN SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—As I feared when I last wrote you, the whole measure is for the time stranded and lost, thrown out on the third reading of the bill. That this result has been brought about by the unwisdom of those who are supposed to represent our South Australian womanhood, does not make it any easier to bear. The suffrage party that led the sortie which has resulted in this disastrous repulse, had first, by not very honorable, methods succeeded in thrusting out those who from the start had been by virtue of large intelligence, broad views, recognized, lasting and ceaseless effort, the natural leaders of the reform from the start,—Rev. I. A. Kirby, to whom South Australian womanhood owes a larger debt than it has yet recognized, the woman of whom the Bombay Guardian rightly speaks as "apostolic" Hannah Chewings, Mrs. Robin, a sweet, large-minded woman, honored by this whole community, Mrs. Roberts, colonial superintendent of Sunday-school work, whose name is fragrant with good deeds and a synonym for all that is brave and noble, Mr. Caldwell, M. P., our early, valorous and consistent knight in the House of Assembly, with others equally worthy.

The counsels of this older party were treated with contempt, and the new party elbowed its way to the helm of the movement, hoping to accomplish in a few months what many of us felt sure could only be won fully by years of toil and discretion. The result is that by their lack of wisdom and ridiculous effort at lobbying, they have disgusted and alienated many friends, both in the Houses and the country, and the government says it will not touch the thing again until another Parliament.

Perhaps the saddest aspect of the position is, that the marplots seem too blind to comprehend the mischief they have done to woman and the suffrage reform. It is a great pity that at this critical juncture our clever and wise townswoman, Miss Spence, is away on your great continent in the interests of the "effective voting" campaign.

The party made the great blunder of a reliance on the present Premier, Mr. Kingston. He is a clever tactician, and, as I told you in my last, made the wreckage of the bill secure by a proviso that it be submitted to two illegal tribunals, that of the referendum—we have no referendum—and that of the woman's vote. We have, as you know, no woman's vote. Mr. Kingston likes his little joke when it is a practical one and takes the form of mystifying denser minds, and no doubt has had recompense for his work on this bill by seeing the cause of woman made a shuttlecock between two great parties, while the representatives of her cause have danced like puppets to his string. It was in response to his advice that their foolish committee met in the committee room belonging to members, and brought down on their heads an order for ejectment from the speaker's chair.

To brave any obloquy, opposition or derision, when one fights a true fight, is noble; but to place a great reform and a nation's womanhood in an utterly foolish and ridiculous position, by self-conceited and blundering assurance, is the antithesis of that.

One of the saddest results of this ill-considered movement is that men who have fought for us in and out of Parliament for many years begin to be in doubt whether we are yet wise enough for full enfranchisement, with all it involves. The truest and bravest friends of full suffrage in South Australia have sorrowfully to come to the conclusion of its bitterest enemies, i. e., that the only wise course, and indeed the only practicable one, is to let it alone for the present. MRS. O. LAKE.

Adelaide, S. Australia.

PLEBISCITE ON PROHIBITION IN THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO IN CANADA.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The returns of the prohibition plebiscite in the Province of Ontario are coming in slowly and it will probably be March before an accurate statement can be made. Returns from the cities have all been received except one, as well as some of the towns and a few of the counties. Of the eleven cities returned, ten gave majorities in favor of prohibition.

The figures given in the papers differ greatly according as they are based on calculations made from a prohibition or anti-prohibition point of view. For instance, in the six counties from which returns have been received, out of the 25,732 who voted, 17,565 declared in favor of prohibition, a proportion of over two-thirds. But when the total number of votes on the municipal lists is counted, 46,609, the proportion of those declaring in favor of prohibition is reduced to something over one-third. So that while there is actually in favor of prohibition a majority of nearly one hundred thousand of the votes polled, the proportion is materially lessened when calculations are based on the numbers on the municipal lists, but who did not vote at all.

In this way it can be seen that each party can justify to itself great discrepancies in figures; but nothing can nullify the fact that a grand victory has been won.

This is the prevailing feeling, and a call has been issued for a prohibition convention to be held in Toronto on February 6, the object being to take energetic action to secure the best outcome of the victory already won.

MARGARET G. URE.

772 Palace St., Montreal, Can.

THE W. C. T. U. OF TO-DAY.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Sometimes my heart is so full of our great work that I want to tell it out to anybody who will listen,—and this is the little word I would speak to-day to any who falter, to any who are ignorant of our aims, and to those great-souled workers who always see more ahead of them than the past has piled up.

The novelty of the Crusade and its methods, the enthusiasm generated by the resulting gospel temperance meetings and the active work for prohibition attracted general attention, and brought to the organization of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union not only those who were genuinely interested in the reform, but many others whose interest and enthusiasm was of varying degrees of intensity. As the work settled down to a regular routine, as it began to pall upon public curiosity, as it began to prove its right to exist by lessening the saloon customers through its reform and preventive departments, and made energetic and successful attacks upon the system itself, and so excited bitter opposition, and especially as in its development it came in contact with their own prejudices and predilections, these indifferent classes have one by one dropped out, until to-day, with the froth and foam of a temporary enthusiasm all blown away, none remain in our ranks save those who, calmly counting the cost and the consequences, have given hand and heart to the great reforms for which it stands.

With such a membership, with the good of humanity for its object, it is naturally in the van of the reform forces. It believes that the declarations of the churches regarding the liquor traffic, which are so generally ignored by the church membership, should be the rule for church action; it insists on the single standard for social purity, which a greater organization, composed of Christian men, refused to champion; it recognizes no sex, race or color line, and it gladly joins hands with all, who, having the same aims, are marching on parallel roads. While desirous that its ideas be favorably received, it will not modify them to court popularity, and as yet stands in no danger of the "woe" that is to come when all speak well of it.

Its demands are so just, its methods so reasonable, that the coming years can give them but greater recognition and success; and in the final regeneration of humanity it will be recognized that no society has been of greater worth and force than this whose scope embraces the individual, the home and the nations of the earth.

MARION H. DUNHAM.

Burlington, Ia.

"IT IS a dangerous thing for ignorance when a thinker is let loose in the world."

THAT we have but little faith is not sad, but that we have but little faithfulness. By faithfulness faith is earned.—Thoreau.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house, by which he condemned the world and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.—Heb. 11:7.

The new year seemed to dawn most auspiciously on the Temple, and with it also came a new baptism of faith. Our daily prayer has been, "Lord, increase our faith." In the face of such a financial crisis as the country is passing through, faith would waver if we did not lean hard on the Almighty arm; and oh, how He has comforted, upheld and made good His blessed promises. How delighted we all were at the Temple when in opening the mail on January 2, we found a letter from Mr. Samuel Simpson, Garfield, Wash., containing the good news of a bequest from him of $1,800 to the Temple. This was followed a few days later with a check for $100, which was bequeathed to the Temple by Frederick Baumgordus, La Porte, Ind., who died in December, 1893; and now comes the best news of all. One of the noblest Prohibitionists in the land, whose name we are not at liberty at present to divulge, has just made his will, and bequeathed $10,000 to the Temple. It is said he means, like a wise man, if spared, to carry out the provisions of his own will. If he can sell a certain piece of property which he now expects to dispose of the money will be paid over to the Temple at no distant day. Surely these are crumbs of comfort sent to sustain our faith, for which the faithful should rejoice and praise God.

***

Since writing the above paragraph the news comes of the death of our aged benefactor, Samuel Simpson. He has stepped from decrepit age to immortal youth. Now in the presence of the King whom he loved and served, no doubt he is rejoicing that before his departure he set in motion agencies that will bless humanity and hasten the coming of the Kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. It is especially comforting to have our brothers aid us and show a deep interest in the Temple. They seem with one accord to denounce in no stinted terms the cruel attacks made to destroy the Temple enterprise. We give below, leaving out the personalities, an extract from a letter sent by Mr. C. C. Spooner, Sand Creek, Mich., which contained $6. "I am getting more and more interested," he writes, "in seeing the Temple debt paid in full. . . . . The meanness of certain parties will hasten the payment rather than retard it. As soon as we get somewhat out of the tight fit the country is in I think the debt will be raised in a short time. I hope to have a hand in it myself." A kind letter comes from our brother, Mr. Robert Davis, Racine, Wis., president of the state L. T. L. of Wisconsin, enclosing one dollar in answer to our call. A letter has been received from an aged brother, Mr. Samuel Stover, Clyde, O., enclosing $5. He is eighty-seven years old and joined the first temperance society sixty-five years ago.

***

The dawn of this bright new year brought a new year's gift of $25 from Miss Anna Williams, Chicago. Another beautiful new year's gift of $100 has been received from Mrs. Hattie Root Tomlinson, Perry, N. Y. Its greatest merit lies in the fact that it is a self-denial fund, saved from a stipend that would have gone to clothe the generous donor. Instead, she has purchased with it raiment that will never grow old. A warm friend of the Temple, Mrs. J. B. Thorn, Philadelphia, Pa., sends $5. Our staunch and true friend, Mrs. Eliza J. Thomas, Tracy, Minn., the wife of a Welsh minister, whose salary is a mere pittance, sends $1, which makes $23 she has paid on a pledge of $100. Mrs. E. A. Babbit, North Adams, Mass., writes: "I am happy to enclose $1 for the 'House Beautiful.' I do hope that every white-ribboner who can, will do that much to help pay for that wonderful building." So say we all. Mrs. E. A. Ransom, Olcott, N. Y., writes a letter full of cheer and sympathy. She closes by saying: "I am sorry to acknowledge I am an outsider, but an old subscriber and great admirer of THE UNION SIGNAL; being nearly seventy-nine years old it is too late to change, but if my life is spared I will send you five dollars for the Temple within a year, one of which I now enclose." This "outsider" has certainly set a noble example, which if followed by all the insiders would roll almost a million dollars into the Temple treasury by the dawn of another year.

***

We are receiving very heavy mails just now. Orders for mite-boxes are coming in by the hundreds. The offer of a prize of such value and beauty as the Temple spoon is setting everybody to work. Think of it, a beautiful solid silver Temple souvenir teaspoon, weighing eight ounces, for filling a mite-box during 1894! Only one cent a day ($3.65) for the year. Those who enter for the prize must send their name and two cents for a mite-box to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, The Temple, Chicago. Those who are filling boxes to be credited on pledges for unions will be given instead one of our beautiful Columbian souvenirs, but may fill a second mite-box for the spoon. Mrs. Lydia B. Chase, Newport, R. I., received one of the souvenirs and says the following kind words in regard to it: "Let me again assure you of my great appreciation of it. I am so much gratified with it, that I feel like saying I wish every white-ribboner in the land was the owner of one, to keep ever in memory of the Temple, its noble founder, our beloved president, and to serve as a memento of the responsibility and duty resting upon each member to make the House Beautiful our own within two years."

***

All money orders and checks should be made out in the name of William D. Preston and sent to our financial secretary, Miss Sara G. Johnson, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

MARY AT THE CROSS.

Jews were wrought to cruel madness;
Christians fled in fear and sadness;
Mary stood the cross beside.

At its foot her foot she planted,
By the dreadful scene undaunted,
Till the gentle Suff'rer died.

Poets oft have sung her story,
Painters decked her brow with glory,
Priests her name have deified:

But no worship, song or glory,
Touches like that simple story—
Mary stood the cross beside.

And when, under fierce oppression,
Goodness suffers like transgression,
Christ again is crucified.

But if love be there, true-hearted,
By no grief or terror parted,
Mary stands the cross beside.

—W. J. Fox.

HOW ENGLISH WOMEN "TOOK THE CUE."

An American Tea Party and What Came Of It.

BY MRS. KING, OF PENRITH.

Some of the members of our Branch coveted the privilege of sharing the burden of the exchequer in London, but none of us being "rich" women, we didn't know how to come at it, till one lady recollected reading in THE UNION SIGNAL, "long time ago," how the American ladies had a tea party, to which they all brought a sum earned or saved, with explanation as to how they acquired it. Thinking this would be a novelty here, and that it is well to follow a good example when one cannot originate, circulars were sent to all our members, explaining the need of funds, and inviting all those who really wished to help in this matter to bring not less than two shillings to an American Tea Party (fortnight hence), and state how the sum was obtained—(it must be either "earned or saved or got by honorable means"). The day came, and over forty of us were en évidence with our silver and "accounts" in time for the six o'clock tea; this over, we were initiated into the art and mystery of corn-popping, and then, as the chairman took her seat, all were on the qui vive for the revelations about to be made.

Do you "want to know" what the report said? I will give you a few:

Three ladies had gone into partnership for a parlor concert, with dainty refreshments, and tickets sixpence each. Net profit, nine shillings cash, besides spreading the interest beyond our membership (one gentleman even inquired how he could get to the next party—could it be done by paying?)

One lady picked an old hood to pieces and made a cap for her baby, saving two shillings.

Another gave four shillings by selling old newspapers.

One sold flowers for one shilling and threepence and gave the rest.

Another wanted to go to Carlisle, but the children were poorly and the cash came here instead of to the railway company.

One lady had done her own "wash" when her woman had hired herself out to service, and thought the money so well earned that she ought to have threepence out.

One young lady bought an article at the bazar and cleared two shillings by re-selling it.

Another asked her mother for it, and another took it out of her pocket money.

And yet another sold something she did not want.

One didn't take the children to an entertainment for fear of fever, and saved it.

Another "took it in the shop," adding, "I don't know whether you would approve, for it was after closing time."

One did fancy work.

One, embroidery.

One sold vegetables and did some sewing.

One said, "My garden sadly wanted weeding, and I had a visitor who was willing to help, so we set to and did it, and I felt two shillings the richer."

One made toffee, and sold it and some new-laid eggs.

And one said, so quietly, "I didn't know any new ways of making money, my wits are mostly at work to make it every day. I thought I should have to give it; but just at the last minute a lodger said: 'There will be a subscription, won't there? I will give sixpence;' then the servant added threepence, and the others in the house gave the rest."

One took it out of the "Lord's store," rightly concluding that this i His cause.

One was wondering what she should do to turn two shillings, when an inquiry came by post as to where certain plants could be procured. "Here is my chance," she said, and replied: "They may be had here, if you will send a donation for British Women's Temperance Association." And fifteen shillings came.

One member advised another to sell flowers, and some carefully dried everlastings brought in a nice little sum, beside helping to beautify our homes and remind us that there are "British women."

Time fails me to tell of all the kind messages and contributions from absentees, and now we add up the cash to £7 17s. 6d., with a thankful heart that cash is not the only result of this effort,—five different religious bodies were represented in our gathering, and brought together in this social way everybody seemed to be at their kindest and their best; those who sing readily added to our enjoyment, and our host and hostess found willing and efficient helpers at every turn.

In making all as "American" as possible we had the invaluable aid of one of our members recently returned from a visit to the states, brimful of American enthusiasm and new ideas. We can't "begin to tell" all that she brought us, but the doughnuts were made from her cookbook, and there were lovely heads of maize and sweet corn, and the wonder and delight of "corn-popping" was new to nearly all of us, and quite an event in the program.

I believe we all enjoyed our A. T. P., and if any other Branch inclines to try it for the same object we will gladly give them a wrinkle; and we cannot do better than wish them as much fun and pleasure over it as we have had over ours.

[Why may not American unions go round the World's W. C. T. U. for a menu for entertainments? There would be "lots o' fun" in it—and cash, too.—EDS.]

A RULE OF GROWTH.

For a Woman as well as a Man.

One of the most difficult problems in life is to adjust the burden of one's immediate work to the conditions of one's largest development. Earnest young men and women are constantly tempted to pour their vitality so copiously in the channels of immediate duty that they frequently deny themselves the conditions of the highest growth. No young man can put all his force into the work of the day, if it be along intellectual lines, without dwarfing his ultimate development. There ought to be behind every specific force a general force, and in the long run the value of the specific force will depend upon the volume of general force; but it is this general force which is suffered to diminish by reason of the pressure of daily work.

A young minister goes into a new parish. If he happens to be a brilliant man, he is immediately assailed by calls to take part in every kind of enterprise, to speak on all occasions, and to become a leader in every movement in the community. In the enthusiasm of his strength and devotion to his profession, he gives himself body and soul to the solicitations of all these enterprises, every one of which involves a certain tax upon his strength, time and thought. His congregation, meanwhile, anticipates from him freshness, force and growth in his pulpit work, and for a time gets it; but no man can grow into full stature, develop strong lines of thought, and mature himself on the highest possible plane who does not reserve a good part of his time for study, investigation and meditation. In the course of ten years the man who gives himself to every demand begins to show a decline of freshness, a decay of force; and very soon the congregation that has been drawing on him relentlessly, and the community that has called him at every turn with imperative voice, begin to comment on his failure to fulfill the promise of his earlier years. Disappointment is followed by dissatisfaction, and the man, often embittered by a sense of ingratitude, finds his influence waning, his force declining, and steps down in order that some other and fresher man may step up into his place.

Every man must protect himself against the demands of his position, of the community in which he lives, and of the causes which solicit his support, if he is to secure his highest growth and do his best work. He must heed not only the imperative demand of the duty of to-day, but the equally imperative demand of the duty of the next ten years. The young minister must defend himself against the not unkindly, but often too exhausting demands of his congregation and the community. This is true of the teacher, of the writer, of every man who, by position or talent, addresses the public or is engaged in any kind of public work. The world does not, and, in the nature of things, cannot stop to think of a man's future. It leaves that to him. If it is denied its requests it may sometimes grumble, but ten years afterward, instead of discarding a spent force, it is cherishing and following a growing leadership. There is a duty which every man owes to himself which is quite as great as that which he owes to the community. Indeed, it is in the widest sense a duty to the community; for the greatest thing which any man can do for the world is to make the utmost of the power, the force and the character which are given him, and he can do this only by taking constant thought of the conditions which elicit what is deepest and greatest in his nature.—The Outlook.

TYPICAL LESSONS FOR LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION TEACHERS.

VII.

Pebbles.

BY MARY E. RUDD.

Opening Exercises, 15 minutes:—New song, "Our Wonderful House," Page 11, "Marching Songs," "Listen to the Melody." Prayer, followed by hymn and repeating of Scripture texts. Song. Finger play, "The Merry Men."

Games, 15 minutes:—A walk along the side of an imaginary brook. Let two children take a walk and come back and report what they saw. Something they have seen at some other time, something they would be apt to see on such a walk is not a violation of the truth. If some child can see the pebbles in the bed of the brook it will help to open the lesson naturally.

Physiology, 5 minutes:—Sing "Raise your Hands," noticing as before the clean hands. Then repeat the words of the first verse of "Our Wonderful House," trying to have the children understand what the house is and what the windows and keepers are. Review the facts already given about the care of the hands, and add the care of the finger nails, not fastidious care, but the ordinary care that each one should know how to bestow.

Lesson, 25 minutes.—Go right on without any break to the lesson, telling how the boys were washing their hands in the brook one day and they found something very pretty. What do you suppose it was? If no child can guess the thing you mean hold up a pebble. Let them guess how it came to be in the stream. Then tell them in the form of a story the history of a pebble. Prepare yourself for this lesson by reading Kingsley's "Town Geology," and such other books as you may have access to which give the facts you want. The time will be none too long if you are full of the subject yourself, and it is one which shows the powerful action of water better than any we shall study.

Marching, 10 minutes.—Occupation, sort pebbles. Give every child a little pile of pebbles to see if he can find two alike. It will afford an opportunity for observing the variety of form. When they have all been looked over mix them together and give each child a fresh supply. Then let the prettiest ones be picked out, and finally give each child one to carry home.

Closing Exercises.—If possible to-day have a little box of sand. Make it quite wet and set it away where it will be undisturbed. Also fill a cup or saucer half full of water and put away. Let the children see you do this. It will stimulate their curiosity. They will want to come next time to see what has happened to the sand and the cup.

Good-by as usual.

Chicago, Ill.

THE HOLY SPIRIT IN THE CRUSADE.

BY EMMA SELLEN ROBERTS.

The Crusade was preëminently a movement of the Holy Spirit. This was evidenced in many ways. First: by its suddenness. It was not a well-planned scheme. It was not the result of combined ability and wisdom, of wide experience and great forethought, but, better and mightier than each and all of these, it was an inspiration, a thought God-given and put, as it were, suddenly and directly into the minds of these women of faith.

It will be remembered that when the Pentecost came upon the believers it is said "Suddenly there came a sound from heaven." This suddenness is characteristic of the operations of the Holy Spirit in all ages and in every period of the history of the church.

Second: by its effects on the Crusaders themselves. Think of the boldness and courage imparted to those quiet women who, until this outpouring of the Spirit came upon them, were too timid even to speak in a quiet, social meeting. These women, of refinement and culture, who had presided only over their own homes, whose voices had been heard only in soft accents, by the ears of little children and the loved members of their own household found courage given them to march through crowded streets, to face a mob of curious and often wicked men, to enter the very haunts of vice and to kneel on foul floors or on muddy streets, in inclement weather.

Third: by the effects on those against whom the movement was directed, for the signal victory that attended the efforts of the Crusaders was not less marked than their own courage and zeal.

Success perched on their banner in every instance. These saloon-keepers, who feared neither God nor men, shook and trembled before this onslaught of faith. Never before had they listened to such prayers nor such exhortations. They felt, as Pharaoh and the Egyptians of old had long years ago, that God was looking at them, this time through the faces of saintly women, instead of the ranks of the Israelites.

There is no power like the power of the Holy Ghost. The Spirit of God does accompany its own words and work with unseen power, and results follow.

North Chili, N. Y.

A FELLOW'S MOTHER.

"A fellow's mother," said Fred the wise,
With his rosy cheeks and his merry eyes,
"Knows what to do if a fellow gets hurt
By a thump, or a bruise, or a fall in the dirt.

"A fellow's mother has bags and strings,
Rags and buttons and lots of things;
No matter how busy she is, she'll stop
To see how well you can spin your top.

"She does not care—not much, I mean,
If a fellow's face is not always clean;
And if your trousers are torn at the knee
She can put in a patch that you'd never see.

"A fellow's mother is never mad,
But only sorry if you are bad;
And I tell you this, if you're only true,
She'll always forgive you, whate'er you do.

"I'm sure of this," said Fred the wise,
With a manly look in his laughing eyes,
"I'll mind my mother, quick, every day;
A fellow's a baby that don't obey."

—Selected.

WHAT WAS SAID AT THE L. T. L. MEETING.

LEADER (touching forehead).—What we want to talk about lies behind this bone. What is it? Any one, please.

JAMES.—The brain.

LEADER.—What lies in the brain?

CARRIE.—The mind.

LEADER.—What do we do with the mind?

HARRY.—We think with it.

LEADER.—What may the mind tell us to do?

EDWIN.—It may tell us how to read, write, work in the garden, go to Sunday-school, etc.

LEADER.—Yes, the well mind tells us how to do all these things. Could a sick mind tell how to do them, Helen?

HELEN.—No, it could not.

LEADER.—Why?

HELEN.—Because it is stupid and cannot think.

LEADER.—Tell me something that always makes the brain sick, John.

JOHN.—Alcohol.

LEADER.—What drinks contain alcohol? Winifred may answer this question.

WINIFRED.—Beer, wine, brandy and whisky.

JOHN.—Cider and gin and rum, too.

LEADER.—Many drinks contain alcohol, and cider has a good deal, even when fresh made. If people drink these, what effect will it have on the brain? A good many seem to know. Well, what is it, Everett?

EVERETT.—It will make the brain sick and the mind stupid.

LEADER.—If people go out of doors when the mind is sick what may happen, Evelyn?

EVELYN.—They can't walk straight and they may get run over.

PAUL.—They might get lost.

WALTER.—Or take the wrong car.

LEADER.—Many dangerous things are apt to happen, we all know. Fred, can that which makes the brain sick be good for us?

FRED.—Oh, no, it's very bad.

LEADER.—What should we do if it is offered to us?

MARGARET.—Say, no, thank you, I don't think it is right to drink what will make my mind sick.

LEADER.—Very good, Margaret. If it is wrong to drink it, is it not wrong to sell it or give it away, Ada?

ADA.—I think it is.

LEADER.—And you are right, for it does the same harm to all. Did you ever see people who had used so much alcohol that the brain was sick nearly all the time?

ALFRED.—I have. Our neighbor, Mr. Smith, was very bad all the time before the saloons were voted out of our neighborhood. Now he doesn't drink any more, because he doesn't have to pass saloons every day and get invited to drink.

CLARA.—Anna James' brother lost his place in the bank because he drank so much he couldn't be trusted to do his work.

LEADER.—Mr. Smith's brain was so sick that he couldn't resist the temptation to drink, and poor Albert James' mind became so stupid from the effects of drink that he could not attend to his duties. How does drink affect the actions of some men?

HARRY.—They stagger and fall down.

ELLA.—A man walked off our wharf and was drowned.

CAROLINE.—A man beat his wife and little boy dreadfully, and was arrested for it.

GEORGE.—I read an account in the papers of a murder in a saloon, where two drunken men got into a fight, and one killed the other.

LEADER.—Did these people know what they were doing, Paul?

PAUL.—No, they were crazy with drink.

LEADER.—Yes, their minds were sick. Then how should they be treated?

FRANCES.—They have to be locked up until they get over the effects of drinking. Then, I think, we ought to treat them kindly and try to get them to stop drinking.

LEADER.—What is the best way to get them to stop.

EDWIN.—Shut up the saloons forever.

LEADER.—Is there danger that we may become like these people?

JOHN.—Not if we never touch alcohol.

LEADER.—Where is the greatest danger, then?

CLARA.—In the first drink, for alcohol always makes us thirsty for more, and it is hard to stop when we begin.

LEADER.—Give a good reason for signing the pledge, suggested by our talk to-day. James may answer.

JAMES.—In order that every one may have a sound, clear mind for work and play.

LEADER.—Good. Now we will sing, and the meeting is adjourned.

—Adapted by J. A. S.

A CAT CORRESPONDENCE.

Our children will remember the interesting letter from "Toots," Miss Willard's cat at Rest Cottage, which was published on this page some weeks ago. And now Toots is delighted to find himself in the midst of a lively correspondence with temperance cats who are kindred spirits and want to help the temperance cause just as much as do their little masters and mistresses. Who knows but a cat confederation may be the result with Toots for president? Here are samples of the cute letters:

A LETTER TO MISS WILLARD'S "TOOTS."

ROCKY FORD, COL.

DEAR TOOTSY, WOOTSY, TEMPERANCE FRIEND:—This afternoon as I lay curled up among papers, magazines, etc., on my mistress' reading table, I heard her reading your letter to L. T. L's, and being a temperance cat myself, thought I would write you a letter, and send you a quarter, and after the approved method, propose an exchange of photos, as I am very anxious to see so beautiful and good a creature of my own species. I enclose the required "needful" with this, "an it plaze ye," will send my picture and a leaf of my history later on. My mistress is corresponding secretary of Rocky Ford W. C. T. U. My master is an honorary member of same; my young mistress and master, Rosa and George, are earnest L. T. L's, and I'm no common cat—I have traveled and can produce good credentials. Meowingly your friend,

BLONDIE GREEN.

ANSWER FROM TOOTS.

DEAR BLONDIE GREEN:—I was delighted with your letter, and hasten to send you a photograph of my elegant self. Of course it goes without saying that I am very much admired in Miss Willard's home, and if I am somewhat proud of my aristocratic appearance, I am sure you will forgive me, dear Blondie Green.

I shall be more than pleased to receive your photograph—and I am sure we shall be great friends—being both temperance cats, we have many ideas in common as a matter of course.

Pray give my best feline love to your mistress and her family. Yours purringly,

"TOOTS" WILLARD.

ANOTHER LETTER.

CAMARGO, ILL.

Mr. Toots Willard, Evanston, Ill:

DEAR SIR:—Though I am just a common, every-day cat, and can't trace my parentage back to Asia, nor claim any blood royal, nor to be a descendant from Angora, still I am a W. C. T. U. cat; a Prohibition cat; an L. T. L. cat. My coat is not as white as yours, nor my hair so long, but my claws are as sharp and it occurred to me when I read your letter that you and I would quit me-owing and arching our backs at each other, and go to work unitedly to scratch out the eyes of the legalized rum power.

I enclose you a quarter which please present to Miss Gordon with my compliments and tell her my name is Tiger, and my little seven-year-old mistress, who will sign this letter for me thinks I am just as cute as any Angora cat that ever wagged a tail—but wants your picture to compare us. Yours fraternally,

TIGER WISEMAN.

By Meda Alberta Wiseman.

P. S.—You may publish this if you think it will cause other cats to write and pay. TIGE.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—A couple of live Cozy Corner cousins, ten and eight years old, have written such a good, stirring letter to "Aunt Jane and comrades of the Cozy Corner" that I think we ought to have it in full. So here it is:

We live in the coast range mountains of California, where there are lots of vineyards, where wine is made and drank as well. We have a vineyard, but there is not a drop of wine made from it. We have two grandpas, one grandma, a papa and mamma that are total abstainers and white-ribboners, and we all read THE UNION SIGNAL. We boys are temperance through and through. We took the triple pledge when we were little boys, and told old King Alcohol to tremble then, and tell him so now. We tell the other boys we don't bet, we don't profane, we don't drink, nor touch the vile tobacco. We are the American boys that "Are coming from the mountain,

Are coming from the plain,
And when we get a vote,
Some Cains will sure be slain!"

Our papa publishes a paper in Hollister, and when he puts W. C. T. U. in its columns, he don't apologize for doing so. HOMER LEONARD, NEWTON LEONARD.

Paraisa Springs, Cal.

We are sure there will be a stirring movement by the temperance army when thousands of such boys as these enter the voter's ranks. May they never flinch nor falter.

Yours, to overcome evil with good,

Aunt Jane

NEPHEWS AND NIECES.

Question for Aunt Jane's little folks: When will the twentieth century begin? PHILIP H. DAVIS.

Trubury, Me.

How many can answer correctly, I wonder?

Please may I join your Cozy Corner? I have read so much about it. ADA GREENE.

Gardner, Ill.

Then you know our principles and are ready to adopt them. Come right in, little friend.

My papa and mamma are Prohibitionists, and if women are voting when I get big I will vote for temperance.

Mossy Creek, Tenn. FLOY MCNEILL.

They surely will be, Floy; so prepare to vote out old King Alcohol.

We have seven saloons, and seven churches! I liked the story of Miss Willard's cat. LU BONWELL.

Blue Earth City, Minn.

That's a more encouraging proportion than in most places, Lu. Suppose each church undertook to clear away one saloon, what then?

I am a temperance boy. I hope by the time I am twenty-one there will be no saloons left to vote out.

Buffalo, N. Y. EARL WAYLAND MYERS.

They'll be voted out, then, I'm sure.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

266.

CONVERTED DRINKS.

[Example. Change from gin to tea in three moves. Answer. Gin, tin, ten, tea. One letter only can be changed at each move.]

1. Change wine to milk in three moves.
2. Change cider to water in three moves.
3. Change rum to pop in four moves.
4. Change beer to soda in nine moves. J. A. S.

267.

PI.

Cterid ym ftoospest yb yth rodw,
Dna ekma ym haret erecins;
Elt ins aevh on nionmido, Lord,
Tub eekp ym cseiecnnoc realc.

ETHEL PEIRCE.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JANUARY 11.

260.

s t O o p m o U t h
c a R t s f a C t s a c H e s h o I s t
s a L v e t i D e s b i R d s s k E i n
l a N c e

OUR CHILDREN.

Correct answers: Warren L. Babcock; Jennie S. Wallace; Wilbur Hall.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
MANAGING EDITOR—MARGARET A. SUDDUTH.
OFFICE EDITOR—MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—JENNIE A. STEWART.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS { LADY HENRY SOMERSET. MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Secretary.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, My New Name. By Adaline Hohf Beery 2
The Member-at-Large. II. By Helen Campbell 2
The South Carolina Dispensary. By B. Odell Duncan. 2
How Elizabeth Cady Stanton Gained Protection for Women. By Sidney Dillwyn 3
Memories of the White City. IV. By Elizabeth Cumings 3
"Wives, Submit Yourselves" 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Adult Suffrage in South Australia 5
Plebiscite on Prohibition in the Province of Ontario in Canada 5
The W. C. T. U. of To-day 5
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 5
THE HOUSEHOLD:
Poem, Mary at the Cross 6
How English Women "Took the Cue." By Mrs. King, of Penrith 6
A Rule of Growth 6
Typical Lessons for Loyal Temperance Legion Teachers. VII. By Mary E. Rudd 6
The Holy Spirit in the Crusade. By Emma Sellen Roberts 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, A Fellow's Mother 7
What Was Said at the L. T. L. Meeting 7
A Cat Correspondence 7
AUNT JANE'S COZY CORNER:
Soft-Shelled Nuts 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
A New "Argument" for Liquor 8
Helpful Hints for Public Speaking 8
"No Sex in Crime" Enforced 9
Patronize Prohibitionists 9
THE WATCH TOWER 9
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Southern California—Florida—Iowa—New York—Vermont—Alabama 10, 11, 12
News in a Nutshell 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
"Important Requests." 12
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 13
TREASURER'S CORNER 13
ORGANIZERS' CORNER 13
Temperance Hospital and Sanitarium 13
OUR LIBRARY TABLE 14
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

But be not unequally yoked with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? And what communication hath light with darkness?—II Cor. 6:14.

A NEW "ARGUMENT" FOR LIQUOR.

So far as we know, not the most unprincipled dealer in intoxicating liquor, not the most rabid supporter of the traffic, has presumed heretofore to place the responsibility of this "necessary evil" upon the Creator of the universe. It remains for a Christian minister, from a Christian pulpit, to make the startling statement that "God made liquor and designed it for the use of man!"

In a recent sermon on the "Social Vices," which drew to his church an overflowing audience, a New York clergyman, according to the associated press, stood forth as a public defender of the drink habit, declaring his belief that a moderate use of liquor was "proper, legitimate and right." The trinity of evils which, he says, are dragging men down to hell are the "abuse of liquor, gambling and lust," and, with the sophistry characteristic of "temperate" liquor advocates, he essays to draw the line between the rightness of drinking and the sin of drunkenness.

In view of the fact, abundantly proven, that use is inseparable from abuse (and the few exceptions only prove the rule) it is evident to all who are not already caught in the toils of the enslaver that the first in the trinity of vices is, not the abuse, but the use of liquor. From the standpoint of that gospel, which the reverend gentleman in question professes to preach, the drink business is no more legitimate or right than the business of gambling or prostitution. And yet he would defend the one, and pronounce as utterly undefendable the other two.

"As a minister of God," he declares, "I do solemnly aver that if I could, with my knowledge of human nature, I would not close the saloons of this city and deprive the honest and industrious working man of his pot of beer." Now, given the saloon, and the evils of gambling and prostitution, with all the concomitants of this hell-born trinity, inevitably follow. This is not merely a prohibition "calamity howl." The municipal officers of New York, or of any other large city, will testify to the truth of the statement.

Even if there were a "proper use" of intoxicating beverages, it is the business of the saloon-keeper to turn use into abuse. He pays for the privilege of turning drinkers into drunkards. He has a legal right to make of the "honest, industrious working man," a sot and a criminal. Like other tradesmen, he offers all kinds of inducements to people to spend their money in buying the commodity he has to sell, and, by fair means and foul, he endeavors to create a demand for his particular line of goods.

No man, whether he be minister or laymen, is loyal to the church of God when he upholds, by voice or by vote, that "organized expression of Satan's kingdom on earth" —the licensed saloon.

This New York clergyman deplores the "destruction of thousands of virtuous women every year, by fiendish men," yet "he would not if he could" abolish that which breeds more lust and produces more fiendish men than any other one agency. He arraigns the city officials for not closing the gambling dens and prohibiting the second evil in the trinity, yet he would continue to extend legal protection to an institution which makes the first evil—the "abuse of liquor"—a foregone conclusion. If prohibition of the liquor traffic is, as he affirms, "mere moonshine," what reason has he for thinking that prohibition of the other two evils is anything more practical and substantial?

By his own confession this reverend apologist of the saloon is not a total abstainer, and his utterances upon this occasion simply go to prove that even a moderate use of intoxicants is apt to be productive of queer fancies and dangerous fallacies in the mind of even a minister of God. It is a well-known fact that the brain is one of the first organs to be attacked by alcohol. The perceptive faculty is beclouded, the reason dethroned and the moderate drinker never knows the exact moment when the sceptre passes into the hand of the arch-deceiver. In fact such is the deceptive nature of strong drink that he often imagines the intellect to be stimulated and sharpened by a "proper and legitimate" use of the wine when it is red, when it moveth itself aright. Surely no man, especially no teacher of men, would in a normal condition of mind dare accuse the Almighty of manufacturing intoxicating liquor! The most charitable construction, therefore, to be placed upon this glaringly false interpretation of the divine intelligence is that it was inspired by the evil, mocking spirit which resides in the wine-bottle itself. If it is possible that any one on sober second thought is ready to maintain that God made liquor and designed it for the use of man, we should be glad to know what they have to offer in proof of such statement. Even the liquor papers call the reverend gentleman's statements "bold."

HELPFUL HINTS FOR PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Lady Henry Somerset gave an off-hand talk to the school of methods, held in Memorial Hall, London, November 15 and 16, 1893, on the subject of public speaking. A large number of women desirous to know more of the methods of the white ribbon movement gathered during these two days. A model local union was held which caused much amusement as well as afforded much instruction. All the details of a local meeting were worked out in a sort of dramatic form or object lesson. The speech by Lady Henry to which we have referred was, however, the best feature of the meeting.

It would be impossible to reproduce the address because Lady Henry has a remarkable gift of mimiery, and her inimitable fashion of "suiting the action to the word" lent to her words their final charm; but the points she made were first, public speaking—what it is, what it is not. For instance, it is not a dilly-dally sort of talking, it is not a hash of anecdotes warmed over, it is not an appeal to the sympathies alone, but every speech must have as its nucleus good, hard-headed common sense principles and arguments; there must be no haphazard preparation. There is no royal road to success with the public; they know very well when a speaker has given them beaten instead of crude oil, polished instead of rough diamonds. They are bound to respect the speaker who has carefully considered what she has to say and who has respected them enough to make conscientious preparation. The embroidery of rhetoric and the illumination of picturesque style and illustrative examples are not only desirable but essential in a speech; although it is to be remembered that the whole gospel of public speaking has long ago been stated in the pungent phrase, "have something to say and say it." Begin at once, and when you have finished, do not stand upon the order of your going, but go at once; that is, to use the old-fashioned phrase, "take a seat and sit down." In telling an anecdote get about it directly and go through it in clear-cut but concise language.

Here Lady Henry illustrated the manner in which she had recently heard an account given of a poor woman who had reformed,—the point of the narration being what sort of medicine she had taken to bring about this result; but the good woman who was giving the account had so much to say about "we took a carriage, and we went here; we took an omnibus and we went there; we sat down, we rose up, the woman cried—I comforted her, etc.," that the gavel fell and the speaker had to stop before she had given any intimation of what the medicine was or where it could be obtained, and to this day the audience knows nothing whatever except a sort of inventory of the cabs taken and the streets traversed by the good woman and her patient.

A few well authenticated, recent and telling statistics are always helpful in any speech that refers to the social problems of our time. These figures can be obtained by writing to the most trustworthy specialist in the different lines the speaker wishes to take up. Lady Henry insisted that although her hearers might consider that she had laid out a good deal of work for them as speakers, there was no need for discouragement; women had a remarkable fluency, as everybody knew; and in proportion to their education much wider and more vivid vocabularies than men. The vehicle of speech—if one might use the term —was with them at once attractive and available. What they must look to was to put passengers worthy the carrying within those vehicles, i. e., as words are called the "chariots of ideas," they must be well freighted by knowledge and research. She believed the platform of the future would show fully as many successful women advocates and pleaders as men. It was an old and faithful saying that practice alone makes perfect. The courage that we have in speaking is the same they had at Waterloo—to use the phrase of a great soldier there, "It was the courage of having done the thing,"—that is of discipline, hardihood, success. The only way to begin is just to begin. Perhaps there is no stronger analogy than that between speaking and learning to swim; you must speak and speak a great deal if you would be a speaker, and if you speak a great deal and speak to the purpose, nothing can prevent you from becoming a speaker of whom the public will speak well.

Now as to manner,—first of all let there be complete composure; this is restful to the audience. If you are not first of all "at home" with them, they can never be at home with you. When you have carefully meditated your line of argument, determined where you will put in your illustrations and have prepared your peroration with especial care, come forward gently, modestly, but with the air of one who does not know the name of trepidation, stand firmly on both feet, do not indulge in gesture at the first, and do not overdo your gestures at the last; let them be unstudied; the natural outgrowth of your thought. Rehearse your speech before good friends or that good friend, a mirror, and see if you are awkward in attitude or motion, or redundant in gesticulation. Nervousness is apt to lead one to throw out the arms wildly, and this is ruinous to the effect. Pitch your voice on a key well down the octave; make sure that it comes from your chest and not your throat. Practice in private with your hand on your chest so as to be sure and drill yourself into the habit of deep and pleasant tones. Choose the person farthest from you and make sure he has heard you. His expression and attitude will soon reveal this. It is desirable that you should "point out," as journalists never tire of saying, the lines that you desire to impress upon your audience; but do not point with the index finger. I know a celebrated lady speaker who not only points squarely in the face of her audience with the right hand, but takes hold of the wrist with the left hand, thus symbolizing an actual effort at trepanning an idea into their heads. To my mind, gestures should be rather suggestive than pointed. Avoid the handkerchief habit; some of our best speakers seem obliged to take up their handkerchiefs—(this was illustrated in a variety of ways)—about every other minute. Both men and women fall into this wearisome habit. I do not say that one should never use the handkerchief, but on this subject try to "reduce to an irreducible minimum," to say the least.

Miss Ackermann tells a droll story of a chairman who, not having prepared his peroration with sufficient care, was left with lifted hands before his audience repeating over and over again, with brandishing gesture toward the sky, "the milky way—behold the milky way." Moral: let there be no half-way work about the memorizing of your climaxes, but do not memorize other parts of your address.

The speaker strongly urged upon her co-workers the importance of not wearing headgear when on the platform. She said that when she spoke recently in Wales a note was sent her by some, no doubt, excellent woman, requesting her to "consider what the Bible says about women with uncovered heads." "I know," she admitted, "that it says women must keep their heads covered, 'because of the angels' (which I learn on high ecclesiastical authority means the deacons), and probably in the early days of the Christian church, when among the surrounding heathen, women participated with men in the temple in exercises that cannot here be named, it was doubtless necessary for the apostle to make a rule that should save Christian women from the implication of uncovering their heads in the presence of men, a proceeding so unexampled that it might prove to be a most harmful temptation to their brethren; but no such rule has weight with women in the church to-day, when the gospel has brought about conditions in the world around us so vastly exalted above any that existed in the first century. Hence I am convinced that the rule relating to the covering of their heads by women in the public audience has no more application than that other rule laid down by St. Paul, which forbade the use of 'meats offered to idols.' The laws of health are as sacred as any other laws of God. Why do men uncover their heads when in the house and on the platform? Because it is more natural. Who knows but that the freer circulation of the blood throughout the heads of men in all these centuries, when women's heads have been burdened and constricted, has had much to do with the greater intellectual growth of men as a class? For my part, I think that every woman who modestly comes forward on a platform with her bonnet off has helped forward the total of human happiness and well-being, and I am glad to believe that she has also made fully as pleasant an impression on her audience, and that is an item not to be despised either by men or women in their relations with the public. It was once thought hardly modest for a woman to show her ear, and the dressing of the hair was arranged so that this beautiful member was completely concealed; but that was a false view and wholly unæsthetic. In like manner we shall yet speak of hooded, bonneted and hatted women in public audiences—church, hall and theatre, as links with the subjection and barbarism of the harem."

Lady Henry was requested to furnish her address for publication, but she said she must admit that she had not bestowed upon it the study that she had advocated in it, and that it was simply an off-hand talk to her comrades; but we have thought that some outline of it might be helpful to men as well as women, especially since it comes from one who in a very few years has reached a foremost place among the speakers of Great Britain.

"NO SEX IN CRIME" ENFORCED.

Lincoln, Neb., is thrown into an unwonted agitation by the official letter of its mayor bearing date of January 15. It is in every respect a remarkable production, and we wish there were space in our columns to quote it entire. The following are extracts:

Chief of Police, City of Lincoln:

DEAR SIR:—The agitation of the "social evil" question in this city for the last few months has, in my judgment, developed a condition of public sentiment that will sustain and endorse more vigorous and positive action than has ever been attempted in connection with this question heretofore.

I am in no wise in sympathy with the methods commonly used in dealing with this evil. The monthly fine system, usually applied to women alone, is to all intents and purposes a license system, and I do not believe in municipal co-partnership in crime. The prohibition people claim that this is the case with the liquor business, but that is a law of the state, over which I have no control.

I will, under no circumstances, concur in the custom of fining the women alone, believing that all prostitutes, male and female, should be dealt with exactly alike.

There follow five distinct orders which are to be enforced on and after the first day of March.

1. To notify all persons responsible for the management and control of houses of ill-fame within the city limits, that they must be closed at that time.

2. To notify all known prostitutes that they must leave the city by that date, and that if they refuse to comply they will be arrested and fined each day until they consent to go, or remain in custody.

3. That all male visitors found in such places after the date given will have their names entered on the records of the police office, and free access given to this record to all who may care to see it.

4. That complaints will be filed against all property holders who rent their buildings for such purposes.

5. That, if necessary, an officer shall be stationed at the door of each one of such houses to see that the orders are strictly enforced.

There has been no such vigorous handling of the social evil in our country as the past year has seen, and Mayor Weir deserves the thanks of all lovers of purity for his brave action.

Especially would we call attention to that sentence:

"I will under no circumstances concur in the custom of fining the women alone, believing that all prostitutes, male and female, should be dealt with exactly alike."

Does it not seem as if we were nearing the millennial glory when such words are penned by a man? It is the echo of the title of that wonderful sermon preached in Chicago by Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones—"No Sex in Crime"—from which we quote: "Who has ever heard of their finding men in those houses, or, finding them, have they ever given their names to the public? Talk of 'fallen women'! Let it be known before high heaven that for every such a one there stalks somewhere a 'fallen man.' In the name of justice he should at least be held as equal partner in the transaction."

And when "all the people say 'Amen'" then shall be ushered in the new reign of righteousness—the "white life for two." God bless the Nebraska mayor and give him power commensurate with his courage!

On one ground only do we find cause for fear, and that is that no adequate provision will be made to prevent suffering on the part of these women. The scenes of Pittsburg must not be reënacted. These poor creatures must not be left without a place of shelter or a certainty of food.

If side by side with these five orders there be placed a sixth—that temporary shelter be provided for those who have not been able to leave the city, and a permanent home opened for those who wish to reform, there would be left nothing to desire. We shall have solved the social problem and all our problems as well, when we shall recognize the two-fold truth that there is "no sex in crime," and "no sex in citizenship."

PATRONIZE PROHIBITIONISTS.

We take it for granted that Prohibitionists everywhere are desirous of utilizing all means in their power to promote the interests of the cause which lie so near their hearts, but there seems to be one line of effort which temperance workers have not sufficiently emphasized. A prohibition merchant, writing to the New York Witness, calls attention to the fact that Prohibitionists do not "patronize Prohibitionists."

It is his own experience and the experience of temperance business men generally, that "Christian temperance workers do not seem to consider that it might be their duty, reasonably, to patronize the business man who is making sacrifices (from a business point of view) for the cause of prohibition." Now, we doubt not that the most ardent Prohibitionists among us will confess to having been more or less remiss in this respect, but we feel sure that, as has been suggested, it is from want of thought and not from want of heart.

Tradesmen who are avowed Prohibitionists expect to lose the patronage of the liquor element, but the unkindest cut of all comes from those who profess to "support such tradesmen in sentiment, but who give their business support to opposers of the very good they are endeavoring to foster." Business men who have antagonized the anti-temperance people by their attitude on the prohibition question certainly have a right to look for business support to all who are identified with the cause of temperance and prohibition. The "patronage" of the saloon-keeper and his friends goes to the merchant who is "friendly" to the liquor business, never, if they know it, to one who votes and works for its abolishment. We believe that if Prohibitionists were as clannish in business matters as their opponents, if they would, wherever practicable, withdraw their patronage from liquor men—that is, from all merchants who vote with liquor parties—and bestow it upon prohibition tradesmen, our cause would be strengthened, morally and politically, more, perhaps, than we now imagine. THE UNION SIGNAL does not, as a rule, advocate the boycott system, but there are cases in which boycotting is not only excusable but proper, and this is one of them.

It is also clearly a matter in which woman may exert a direct and very practical influence, for in most families the wife and mother does the family shopping and marketing. Outside the active ranks of temperance workers there are thousands of women whose sympathies are with the Prohibitionists, and while, as a class, they are unable to furnish financial support to the movement, they can help the cause along very materially by "trading" with the prohibition merchant instead of with the firm whose money helps periodically to provide the wherewith to carry on political campaigns in the interest of the liquor traffic.

One of the resolutions passed at our last annual convention pledges the "moral support" of the W. C. T. U. to the Prohibition party. But we find that after all there is a way by which we may extend not only moral but financial support to the party which is the best embodiment of home protection principles, and that is by supporting the prohibition business man. Let every woman, and especially every housekeeper, who is in her heart a foe to the saloon, do this much toward carrying on this holy war. If she can get an article of good quality and reasonable price at the store of a prohibition merchant, she should show her loyalty to the cause by purchasing it there even if it involve a little inconvenience.

"To let men alone while they suffer no sad pangs, careless whether they have any good joys, is but a meagre leanness of heart which will sing no carols of praise."—James Vila Blake.

***

The beautiful verse quoted in these columns a few week. ago, beginning,

"There's never a rose in all the world
But makes some green spray sweeter," was written by Mrs. Alice Eddy Curtiss, of Detroit, Mich. Five years ago her spirit went to its Maker, but her sweet verses live on and on.

***

Monday evening, January 15, was a jubilant date for the Nebraska white-ribboners, who at that time observed the lifting of the debt from the state Temple at Fremont. It was a reception to the members of the union and their friends who had contributed to the building fund. One of the novel decorations was a graceful festoon of the subscription cards, over a thousand in number, which were the veritable silver lining to the cloud of debt which has so long hung over the enterprise. A very happy surprise was the presentation of a fine piano by the traveling men's association which appreciated the value of such a building and the work it 'orwards. Congratulations to the Nebraska workers.

***

"For it is the best sweetness of a kindness to be the fruit of thought, of consideration. If it be only a word well considered, it is rich. A small kindness, if it be thought of well and invented cunningly, is a great offering be like a rich benefit."

***

Miss Susan B. Anthony has repeatedly expostulated with our "Chieftain" in the years when she insisted on reading and writing all day on the cars and speaking at night. She said it was her custom to have a pillow and throw herself into a state as comatose as possible when on the cars, neither reading nor writing, but sleeping or day-dreaming, and taking the most restful attitude she could. She also said that when she found on arriving at the home in which she was to be entertained that company was invited, she was wont to say to her hostess, "I will do my best to entertain those who have kindly come to see me and give you a poor speech to-night, or I will go now to my room, conserve my forces to the utmost and give you a good speech to-night." Naturally the verdict was always in favor of the speech. By carefully observing these two rules, Miss Anthony has preserved her health and vigor until at seventy-three years of age—if I remember correctly—she is in first-rate condition in every respect and has been this year the central figure among women at the World's Fair, full of her wonted happy hits and arguments, quips and turns, good sense and good will.

***

"On my visit to the World's Fair, in the Midway, I think it was," writes a friend, "I saw a cider press in shape like the old-fashioned round wooden pump, and, in some unaccountable way to me the apples were thrown up high above the pump, and then coming down, without one exception, disappeared inside to emerge an instant later from the spout in rich, foaming juice. A tub was conveniently near to receive it. The press itself was fenced around, but just outside was a table upon which was placed glasses of the cider for the passer-by. A little girl attended the same. I was tired and very thirsty, and never in all my 'grown-up life' have I wanted a drink of cider (or apple juice, for it could hardly be called cider), as I did at that time. I opened my mouth to say to my brother a few steps in advance of me, 'Let us have some cider,' when, lo! on my coat I caught a glimpse of the knot of ribbon white, the cost of which was only a fraction of a cent, but its value priceless to me at least, and it 'all my powers engage,' to keep that same ribbon uncontaminated. Conscience said, 'Surely you would not drink cider with that ribbon on?' The tempter said, 'Pull it off and throw it on the ground.' Policy said, 'Yes, and a hundred eyes will see you do it.' The tempter retorted, 'The hundred eyes are looking at something of more importance.' Conscience again said, 'What would your brother and his wife think of your temperance principles if you do this?' And, my dear sisters in the white-ribbon army, conscience won the day, the temptation was removed, and I found I did not want their 'old cider' after all. Stick to your principles whatever the cost, dear co-workers, whatever the discomfort, and we shall surely conquer."

ON DUTY.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

PRIZE BANNER STATE NEWS.

That the Southern California W. C. T. U. has been able to secure one National prize banner and our Y's another, might be considered an additional proof of the wonderful influence of this climate upon growth; at least, we are as yet ignorant of the cause of our acceptable honors.

"Our folks" have waited in vain for some positive advance as a result of the strong temperance resolutions passed by the conventional bodies which met in this city. The M. E. church of Southern California conference, after a lengthy preamble which closed with the words: "If the Christian voters of America cannot find such a party (one which the legalized liquor traffic cannot control) it is high time to make one," made this closing resolve: "That we look with suspicion upon every professor of Christianity who refuses to use his political power for the suppression and prohibition of the liquor power."

Scarcely had the ring of those strong words ceased when the county convention of the Y. P. S. C. E. gathered. With a practical temperance man for president, Dr. J. T. Price, naturally the program gave prominence to the subject of temperance. In the presinent's address were these thoughts: "The times are here in which humanity demands that our patriotism rise above partisanship and inspire us to cast our ballots for none but clean, pure, honest men." "We are paying dearly to-day as a nation, both in money and lives, for our thoughtlessness and selfishness at the ballot box." He recommended a union of all young people's church societies, temperance organizations, the Y. M. C. A. and the Salvation Army to "close the open saloon," the distribution of temperance literature once a month in every home in the county, and the holding of Demorest and Cooper medal contests. These recommendations, as also that of systematic giving, were adopted.

The Woman's Parliament passed a resolution to use their influence and endeavors to have only good men put into office, and if that body of bright, brainy women, more than two hundred in number, will so do, the way of the politician will be hard. Few gatherings in this future capital have contained so large a representation of America's highest womanhood as that of the Parliament. The papers read during the session covered a wide range of subjects, and a wider one of thought and research, yet both from the platform and floor the voice of the white-ribbon fanatic (!) was heard.

At our last state convention Mrs. Emma Cash was elected state organizer, and owing to the summer's heat and consequent necessary rest, was not expected to begin her labors until fall. During September she visited in Los Angeles county, and formed a new union at Burbank, which now has a flourishing Loyal Temperance Legion. Riverside county was then entered. This county was formed last summer from portions of San Bernardino and San Diego counties, because of a strife among the politicians. Our hosts deemed it best to divide also, and thus a ninth county was added to our Southern California union. Ever on the alert, our comrades improved the opportunity to capture the new territory for prohibition, and were successful.

Accompanied by the county president, Mrs. E. J. Davis, Mrs. Cash made a thorough tour of the county, every town being visited, and the results were large, attentive audiences everywhere, one hundred and ten active and ninety-one honorary members secured, and four new unions—at Banning, Murrietta, Moreno and Perris—besides arousing much interest in juvenile work. To the local workers much praise is due for their preparations for the meetings, which with the wise plans laid and executed by the county president, effected so desirable a result.

The trip culminated in holding at Riverside the first county convention which represented twelve unions "all working to hold and enforce the prohibition ordinance." A paper on "Franchise" and another on the "Prohibition Ordinance" were especially good. A year's work was planned and the state union invited to hold its next annual convention for the first time in a prohibition county—at Riverside.

From thence Mrs. Cash went to Santa Barbara county, where long distances between appointments, travel over rough, mountainous roads, and sometimes with drunken stage drivers, gave variety as also much weariness to the trip. At one town of six houses she found only one woman who expected to be a permanent resident, and when urged to form herself into a W. C. T. U. she promised to try to keep out the saloons, anyway. Addresses were given at Garey, Lompoc, Los Alamos, Los Olivos, Ballard, Santa Ynez and Santa Maria, and forty-five active and twenty-nine honorary members added to the ranks.

Most of December was spent by Mrs. Cash in San Luis Obispo county, where a few women with undaunted courage hold up the temperance banner. In one city of three thousand inhabitants there are eighty places where liquor is sold, sixty of them being saloons, and but one grocery and one dry-goods store where it is not sold. Yet our comrades are bravely holding on.

Our state superintendent of evangelistic work, Mrs. Anna Breese Southwick, has been in active work for two months, conducting successful services under the auspices of the local unions at Azusa, Glendora and West Los Angeles—usually spending two weeks in a place. Pastors of many denominations have given their presence and assistance in the meetings and both pastors and people have been led into the light of the higher Christian life.

Under the evangelistic department the railroad work in Los Angeles is conducted; meetings being held in the shops every Tuesday noon, and our members often assisted by others interested in mission work.

A renewed interest is shown in Y and juvenile work and our young people are proving themselves practical workers. One fact is to be deplored, and I suppose our experience is not an exceptional one—and that is that the Loyal Temperance Legions seldom continue to exist after the first year without reorganization, and that means a different company of children and a recommencement of the work. One L. T. L. has successfully solved this problem by offering silver and gold badges as prizes for regular attendance—the silver for one year and the gold for two—and this year I believe they have two silver and four gold badges to award.

Mrs. Ellen A. Blair, National chalk talker, is now a resident of Los Angeles, and has addressed unions, Legions and Sunday-school conventions in this part of the state.

Mrs. Abbie L. Button, of Colton, formerly president of San Bernardino county W. C. T. U., has returned after a year's absence in Illinois, and the music of Marching Songs is again heard in Colton. We are glad we did not lose that Button, as we feared we would when she left us.

Some months ago the union at San Fernando discontinued its gospel temperance meetings as a series of temperance meetings were begun by the Law and Order League, and one Sabbath each month has since been given wholly to temperance. Union services are held in the morning in one of the churches with sermon by a pastor; afternoon service in a church with a number of speakers, and in the evening a mass-meeting is held in a hall with addresses by one or more prominent speakers from other cities. The object is to rid the town of saloons by increasing the sentiment against them. So successful and comparatively inexpensive have the series been that the leaders are encouraged to operate the plan in other towns, hoping soon to spread the work throughout the entire county.

It is pleasant to notice the change of sentiment regarding woman suffrage as demonstrated by the hearty applause given the speakers at the celebration of Colorado's victory by the suffrage society of Los Angeles. With one exception the gentlemen appeared before the audience with manuscript in hand; the ladies without. By invitation, our state president, Mrs. Mary E. Garbutt, replied to the question, "Shall California fall into line?" She not only gave a decided affirmative answer, but urged that our efforts be expended in securing a constitutional amendment in favor of equal suffrage.

If our mothers had only chosen some other date than December 23 for Crusade day it would have been much easier to have made the anniversary celebration a success. More than usual interest has been shown this year by most of our unions, even the new ones. The Central at Los Angeles had the pleasure of hearing from five original Crusaders at their meetings, and the reminiscences were most interesting.

GABRELLA T. STICKNEY,
State Reporter, Temperance Temple, Los Angeles.

FLORIDA.

WINTER DAYS

here are not the "saddest," but the gladdest, of all the year; for golden sunshine floods the land, and our wandering white-ribboners have come home. They have been away to the great Fair—to the wonderful World's and National W. C. T. U. Conventions, and we few who stayed at home only "held the fort" until their return.

Our local president, Mrs. Lillian S. Wells, came back full of the idea of opening the winter's campaign with parlor meetings as a possible means of reviving waning interest in members and awakening the same in others. Accordingly, invitations were quietly given for a meeting in the parlors of a member, to hear and talk about woman's work as seen at the Fair, and woman's part in the great reforms of this wonderful age.

About thirty of Tampa's best women were there. Miss Mary Taylor, who is always wide awake, and had spent months at the Fair, treated the company to a feast of riches garnered there. Mrs. Wells also told us of noted women she had seen and heard, and very deftly wove in W. C. T. U. teachings and modes of work. Questions were asked and intelligently answered. Light refreshments were served. The interested ladies enthusiastically voted for another meeting the following week, since which eight meetings have been held in as many homes. At one or two busy fingers hemmed towels or darned socks for use in hospital or children's home, while appropriate selections were read and freely discussed. Finding the children's home in need of help, in a meeting previous to Christmas week a plan was proposed to solicit donations of the citizens, and hold an all day fair for the Home. One hundred and thirty-six dollars and sixty cents was placed as the result at the disposal of the grateful matron of the Home. This was accomplished on Crusade Day.

A few blocks away a little band of earnest women were holding a prayer and praise meeting, carrying out as nearly as possible the order of the day as given in Crusade number of THE UNION SIGNAL. We were aided by a number of friends—ministers who spoke for an half hour and offered prayer in behalf of work and workers. Miss Lawrence, superintendent of work among colored people, spoke pathetically of the need of temperance teaching among those people, and their eagerness to be taught. Mrs. Wells presided and with her usual tact, spoke the right word in the right place, gracefully and effectively filling in the "gaps."

The rarest treat of all was the talk of a genuine Crusader, Mrs. Louisa Thomas, who has but lately become a resident of our fair city. She gave her experience in leading a band of Crusaders in Dayton, Ohio, where the movement was almost simultaneous with that at Hillsboro. Supplementing Mrs. Thomas' story, the writer gave some personal reminiscences of Mother Thompson and of the old Crusade town, her girlhood home. Each hour of the day the church bell rang and silent prayer on faith's white wings was borne to heaven. The good that came of that meeting, we realized in the stronger purpose of heart; the greater courage to go forth and battle for God and humanity. Three new members were added.

A lengthy account of the spirited annual convention of Volusia county W. C. T. U. has just reached me. It was held in Ormond and welcomed by large and deeply interested audiences. Mrs. E. A. Hill, president of both state and county unions, presided. Addresses of welcome were given by local union, city and church. The response was hearty and eloquent. The convention was visited by a delegation of some forty young colored people, representing a gathering of Loyal Temperance Legions, the first convention of the kind ever held, it is said. The president's annual address was warmly received and heartily applauded.

Reports were read from various committees. Mrs. Clark, on temperance in the Sunday-school, showed that there was much improvement for the "better" within the past year. Mrs. Hamilton reported the organization of many L. T. L's among the colored people, showing a large and increasing membership. The president commended the work done by this faithful superintendent, adding "that these men are voters, and as they help make laws for all of us, they must be assisted and educated by the white people for their own defense. But the question of how best to do it must be very carefully considered."

Mrs. Hill hoped that each union would carefully and prayerfully consider the question as to whether the W. C. T. U. societies among colored women, several of which have been organized by white workers, shall be admitted as auxiliaries to the state union or remain independent. The matter will be brought up in convention next month. Mrs. Palmer read a report on social purity. Mrs. Arnold, of Daytona, read an able paper, in which she considered many evils existing in society and politics, and sharply analyzed some of the causes producing laxity and inefficiency.

Mr. Scammell expressed it as his opinion that the only way to reach the actual enforcement of any prohibitory enactments in any town under municipal government was the election of good mayors and sheriffs. The influence and backing of such officials as standing behind the laws would avail much.

A free debate upon the resolution that "the temperance cause in this country is in more danger from the indifference of good men than from the aggressive action of bad men," resulted in a vote in favor of the resolution. Among the good resolutions was one protesting against the prize fight, proposed to be held in our state, and another pledging aid to our superintendent of work among colored people. The convention was marked throughout by a spirit of sweetness and unity. "God be with you" closed the meeting, while the women clasped hands and vowed renewed consecration to the work.

SALLIE J. GLENN,
State Reporter, Tampa.

IOWA ITEMS.

No doubt Crusade Day was observed by many unions in the state, but only five have reported to me.

Burlington union held its meeting on January 7; there was a full house and a fine program, the audience manifesting their enjoyment of the exercises by a generous collection.

Creston, Middletown, Toledo and Fayette had profitable meetings on this day.

Fayette is favored in the advent of a brave worker, Miss Urch, the new preceptress of Upper Iowa University, who is making her influence felt by securing more temperance works for the college library, and by organizing a society of Y's.

A beautiful paper called The White Ribbon Banner has been sent me. This is ably edited and managed by the executive committee of Creston union. This enterprising union has a blessed way of visiting outlying districts,

Royal Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure
A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.
Royal Baking Powder Co.,
106 Wall St., N. Y.

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE.
A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.
40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

explaining our God-given work and organizing willing women into local unions. Here is a shining example worthy of imitation all over the world. This union has sent its third box of clothing to Mother Benedict at Decorah, to aid her in rescuing unfortunate girls and their little ones from lives of shame.

Des Moines county union held its semi-annual convention in Danville. This was the best and the most largely attended of any held within the past five years. Mrs. McMakin, of Middletown, spoke on "The Needs of our Work," the greatest of which she declared to be the votes of Christian men. There are a good many "Brudder Barkises" in Iowa just now, who in view of their past manly record, would be compelled to hang their heads in shame if confronted with the question: "Which way is your musket a-pintin' to-day?"

Mrs. J. W. Seymour spoke strongly for social purity, denouncing the vile talk indulged in many country stores and barber shops. Mrs. Dunham has modestly written me that she spoke on "The Economics of Prohibition," while another correspondent enthusiastically declares that she gave a "magnificent address." Miss Belle Mix, state corresponding secretary, talked cheerily on "Our Encouragements."

The county pledged another $100 for the Temple, to be raised by January 1, 1894.

Oelwein union, under the inspiring influence of Col. C. J. Holt, of Illinois, has commenced a raid upon thirteen saloons in that place. The W. C. T. U. visited the saloons and invited the proprietors out to Col. Holt's meetings. They petitioned the mayor and city council to close these places, and their petition was laid on the table; they then proceeded to serve upon each of the saloon-keepers an informal notice to give up their law-defying business. These "knights of the white apron" were loud in their threats against Col. Holt if he continued his meetings, but he, nothing daunted, calmly announced that the subject at his next meeting would be, "Why Holt didn't ride on a rail." The women declare that the saloons shall now go, if they have to carry the matter up to the Supreme Court of the United States, and it costs the county a million of dollars.

The beloved editor of our Iowa Signal, having suffered long weeks of serious illness because of over work, many unions and individual friends took it upon themselves to surprise her with a Christmas present amounting to over two hundred dollars in cash, which she says was "a 'tonic' so strong that it completely deprived her of words."

Three petitions to our general assembly now in session at Des Moines are being circulated by the W. C. T. U., one is for franchise for women, one for better protection of women, and one forbidding the use of tobacco in any of its forms by minors.

Petitions against the modification, or repeal, of our prohibitory law are also being circulated, and are readily signed by the very men who voted for the present governor of this state who, as is well known, is a license man. The odious Gatch bill which was presented to the assembly two years ago has again been presented, and according to all appearances it will be adopted. Still, I positively affirm and will steadfastly maintain that a majority of the people of Iowa are opposed to the return of the legalized saloon. But the politicians stand pledged to bring it back, and have deluded many into believing that the thirteenth plank in the Republican platform was a temperance measure, but they "can't fool all the people all the time."

Mrs. Anna M. Palmer has been doing good work in the state for the past three months. She gives the month of February to Nebraska.

CLARA P. WHITE,
State Reporter, Volga,

NEW YORK STATE NEWS.

ANOTHER YEAR.

Having entered upon another year, our state is "girding on the armor" again and preparing for the fray. We look back upon our recent state convention as having been one of the best ever held, and we look forward to the accomplishment of good work during the coming year.

In reporting the state meeting I failed to mention one very important fact. On the day preceding our convention, the Loyal Temperance Legion was made with officers, constitution and all that is necessary for a permanent organization, its membership fee to be twenty-five cents. Of this, five cents shall go to the state W. C. T. U. and five cents to the National. Plans of work were discussed and mottoes adopted, the motto for 1893 being "No compromise for the Empire state." The Loyal Temperance Legion was represented in the state convention for the first time, by "a very own delegate," having paid dues on one thousand members. A class of graduates was presented to us on Tuesday, and Chautauqua county received a banner for having the largest number of graduates during the year. Our L. T. L., under the efficient leadership of the state superintendent, Mrs. H. A. Metcalf, has been making history and we can hear these youthful soldiers saying:

A STATE ORGANIZATION

"True and faithful we will be Until our land from rum is free."

Just a week previous to our state convention, held its annual meeting at Union Springs. It was my good fortune to be present for both days and the reports given proved that this county is very much alive to the needs of the work. Several visitors were there from other counties, each one adding to the interest of the occasion. Mrs. Nellie Hutchinson, president of Tioga county, gave an interesting address in the evening. Several clergymen were at the evening session, and each one spoke briefly on some phase of the temperance question. The officers were all reëlected on the informal ballot, and everything worked most harmoniously for good.

CAYUGA COUNTY

The annual meeting of

SCHUYLER COUNTY

was held at Reading Centre, with every union represented. A new union has been organized at Catherine, making seven in the county with a membership of one hundred and twenty-two.

The union at Reading Centre has held three medal contests, and distributed much literature.

The president of Havana union has been elected a member of the board of education of that town.

Tyrone union has aided materially in the election of a no-license commissioner and is very active in many ways. Entertainments have been held and means raised to carry on their local work, and temperance sermons secured occasionally through their efforts. The superintendents of departments gave excellent reports, and all felt encouraged by the success of the past year, and eager for the future.

LIVINGSTONE COUNTY

met at Livonia for its annual gathering. Mrs. Mary J. Weaver, of Batavia, was present and was most helpful during the day, beside giving the evening address. Encouraging reports were given and an exceptionally fine program was well carried out. Each paper read showed a thorough knowledge of the subject presented. Livingstone county, with Mrs. H. M. Freeman at the head, has reason to rejoice over the good work done by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

GENESEE COUNTY CONVENTION

was held at Oakfield, and was well attended. The first day, "Forty minutes with the Y's," proved to be not only pleasant but profitable. Miss Ida Clothier, National organizer, was present and gave a very earnest talk. In the evening Rev. Anna Shaw gave one of her best lectures, which was most thoroughly enjoyed.

Several papers enlivened the convention, and a discussion, or rather a debate, was one of the best things on the program. The subject under debate was:

"Resolved, That by taking up the various departments of work the W. C. T. U. has accomplished more good than it could have done by adhering to a direct crusade against the saloon."

Mrs. Daniels, of Stafford, took the affirmative and Mrs. Stevens, of Bergen, the negative. The latter, though arguing contrary to her belief, almost convinced her hearers that she was right. The law on voting for school commissioner was read, and nearly every woman signified her intention of voting.

WARREN COUNTY W. C. T. U.

held its annual meeting at Bolton. Seven unions were represented and excellent reports of all were given. There is but one Y in the county, but it is a busy one. In relief work, over six hundred garments have been given out by them during the past year. The L. T. L. has increased in membership, and has had an awakening in interest as well.

The evening session consisted of a program prepared by the Bolton union which included two fine selections by Mrs. Long, of Glens Falls.

CATTARAUGUS COUNTY

met at Salamanca. Sixty-two delegates answered to roll-call and a lively interest was manifested throughout. Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap gave the address of the first evening to a "packed" house. The second evening was devoted to a gold medal contest, and a fee of ten cents was charged at the door. The receipts were thirty-two dollars.

Miss Van Rensselaer, candidate for school commissioner, was present and spoke on the school question. Fair work and franchise are the departments which are taking the lead in the county.

Portville union has completed its temperance temple and Col. George W. Bain was present at the dedication, giving an address and at the close raising two hundred and fifty dollars. Mr. Bain lectured in the temple the following evening, and as usual to a crowded house. Miss Claire L. Darte, of Delevan, and Miss Torrey, of Eldred, sang solos very acceptably.

The

ANNUAL MEETING OF COLUMBIA COUNTY

was held at Canaan Four Corners, and most of the time was given to reports and routine work. As in many other counties, so in this, the department of franchise seems most important, and a discussion on the subject was made very interesting, and was full of suggestions and timely bits of advice.

The officers were all reëlected and after the election the county president, Mrs. Marcia C. Powell, was surprised by a gift of a set of W. C. T. U. souvenir spoons from the county union. Mrs. Powell is now filling the ninth year as president.

In the evening, Rev. V. E. Tomlinson gave a most forcible and telling address, his subject being, "An enemy hath done this." The convention was a success in every way and at the close all felt more ready than ever before to do all possible to aid the work.

Schenectady county held

ITS FIFTH ANNUAL MEETING

at Duanesburg, and met with a most cordial reception from the people of that vicinity. Each union sent its full number of delegates and the reports from all departments showed an advance since last year. Medal contests have been given by every union, and they find them profitable, both financially and educationally. The Y's are energetic and growing. A fine paper on suffrage was read by Mrs. Hallenbeck, of Glenville. The county officers were all reëlected. A parliamentary drill was one of the best things on the program. Miss Cheney, of Jamestown, gave an excellent address in the evening.

The

QUARTERLY MEETING OF KINGS COUNTY,

called to consider the best methods of conducting the winter's campaign, was held in the Fleet Street M. E. church, Brooklyn. Plans were discussed and admirable papers were read, bearing upon the department work. These were followed by discussions and the outcome of this gathering no doubt will be a good, systematic winter's work. A new union has been formed with fifteen members, with Mrs. Harriet S. Pritchard as president, and with such a president, we feel assured of a successful union.

THE EIGHTH ANNUAL GATHERING of Chemung county was held in Lake Street Presbyterian church, Elmira, and was opened promptly on time by the president, Mrs. Stoddard. After the devotional exercises the president spoke briefly concerning the work. Among the many good things on the program was an address on "Wines of the Bible" and a paper on total abstinence.

The executive meeting was characteristic of Chemung county workers—earnest, hopeful, progressive. Eighteen departments of work are taken up for the coming year. The pastor of the church, Rev. A. F. De Camp, gave the evening address, which was most acceptable. He laid great stress upon training the children.

Steuben county reports

A VERY ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

at Campbell. The roll-call showed all officers in their places, and a goodly representation from the local unions. Two minute reports of locals brought to the surface much of interest in the variety of work accomplished and methods used in carrying out the lines of such work. The annual address of the president was full of loving cheer and counsel, and contained many valuable recommendations.

Two most excellent papers were read—one by Mrs. C. M. Case, of Bath, on "The Effects of the Saloon upon the Soldiers' Life," the other by Mrs. Smith, of Hornellsville, "Will it Pay?"

One evening was given to the Y's, and was well filled. The second evening all listened with pleasure to an address by Miss Lotta Cheney, of Jamestown.

The county voted a contribution toward state headquarters, and also made its president a life member of the state.

ITEMS.

Long Eddy W. C. T. U. in Sullivan county gave a supper to its members, their husbands, and the honorary members, at the home of the president, Mrs. M. M. McKoon, who is also county president. Several toasts were given and responded to by members or honoraries. The toasts were, "Total Abstinence," "The Ballot for Women—why I Believe in it," "Our Honorary Members," "Our Duty to the Children," "The W. C. T. U., the Society to which all Women should Belong," the last named being responded to

Friendly Regard

is never entertained by the children for a medicine that tastes bad. This explains the popularity among little ones of a preparation of cod-liver oil almost as palatable as milk. Many mothers have grateful knowledge of its benefits to weak, sickly children.

Scott's Emulsion,

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All druggists.

For Women Only.

In morning sickness it is a specific that gives instant relief and tones the stomach for other foods.

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON.

Nothing is more delicious and acceptable to a weak stomach. It will soothe and quiet the nerves as nothing else will. It supplies the place of tea, coffee or cocoa at breakfast.

Never buy Clam Bouillon for the sick, except in Glass Bottles.

Grocers and Druggists.

Six ½ pint bottles expressed for $1.50. Send stamps for book, "Household Hints."

E. S. Burnham Co., 120 Ganesvoort St., N.Y.

True economy doesn't buy what it doesn't need. Indigestion, Biliousness, Sick-Headache, do not need a dollar's worth of doctor, but a quarter's worth of

Beecham's Pills

(Worth a Guinea a Box.)

Price 25 cents. (Tasteless)

No local dealer can compete with us

WALL PAPER

in variety or price. Our new designs and colorings are handsomer this year than ever before.

Our "Guide How to Paper and Economy in Home Decoration," mailed free with samples

Beautiful Gold Paper, 5c. per Roll.

We carry the largest stock in the country, and can save you 50 per cent. on every roll of paper you buy. No matter where you live, if you have any use for wall paper, send 10c. to nearest address to pay postage on a large package of samples. One good agent or paper hanger wanted in each town to sell from sample books, price $1.00.

ALFRED PEATS,

80-82 W. 13th St., NEW YORK. 136-138 W. Madison St., CHICAGO.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE-ROLLERS.

Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

BAKER'S COCOA.

ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used.

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE WAISTS

Are made in A VARIETY OF SHAPES—to fit SHORT, MEDIUM, and LONG Waists.

by Mrs. McKoon. Music and conversation filled up the remainder of the evening. This little feast revived the union wonderfully, and brought the members all out to the next regular meeting. Five new members were gained.

Brant W. C. T. U., of Erie county, reports having done much good work in the line of department work, gospel temperance meetings, sermons by the pastors, free temperance lectures, and assisting in work among the Cattaraugus Indians. They sent a man to the drink cure, and he has returned to his home and business cured. This was the means of another man going. The union also gave a white ribbon tea, inviting the husbands. A subject was given out for discussion in which all took part, and this was found to be an excellent way of interesting the "brethren."

Kings county W. C. T. U. rejoices in having sent 12,000 signatures to the great World's Petition.

On Sunday, October 15, the W. C. T. U. of Sodus, Wayne county, conducted the only religious service held in the village on that day, all the ministers being out of town.

Several new unions have been organized since our state convention.

FRANCES W. GRAHAM,
State Reporter, Lockport.

VERMONT.

WORK IN THE GREEN MOUNTAIN STATE.

"If with readier ear thou heedest,
What the Inward Teacher saith,
Listening with a willing spirit
And a childlike faith —

"Thou may'st live to bless the giver,
Who, himself but frail and weak,
Would at least the highest welfare
Of another seek;

"And his gift, though poor and lonely
It may seem to other eyes,
Yet may prove an angel holy
In a pilgrim's guise."

The home for friendless women in Burlington is a good home, and the inmates appreciate it, and are becoming industrious, cheerful and happy, and some of them have been hopefully converted. The matron is a woman well fitted to hold this position, both by natural ability, and a tried experience. She possesses dignity of manner, tact in management and fervent piety. She told me of the hundreds of girls that had come to the different homes in which she had held the position of matron, not one of them had had a loving, Christian mother. Oh! mothers, those of you who have pure and lovely daughters, think of this. Surrounded as your loved ones are, by all the safeguards and restraints of home-life, and with your love encircling them, how wretched they might have been if placed in different circumstances. Let your hearts go out in sympathy to them, and stretch out your hands for these poor, erring ones, that they may seek and find a purer life.

Windham county is honored in the recent appointment of Mrs. E. A. Kenyon, of Townshend, as National organizer. Mrs. Kenyon has served efficiently in local work. She has been a trusted and faithful worker in the county, both in juvenile work and in the W. C. T. U. Our state, as well as Windham county, rejoices in the ability and consecration which so well qualifies Mrs. Kenyon for her new position.

Orleans county reports good work. Derby Line union is interested in paying for a drinking fountain, which they have placed upon Stanstead Plain and Derby Line. The women of this union are always engaged in some good work. Derby union is interested in working for the Home for Friendless Women in Burlington.

Parlor meetings are held by many of the unions in Orleans county, also gospel temperance meetings.

At the Sabbath-school convention held in Rutland some weeks ago, a paper, entitled, "Sunday-school and Temperance," was prepared and read by Miss Irene Hubbard, of Berlin. The paper was highly commended, not only by individuals, but by the public press.

I will reserve the rest of our work in Vermont for my next letter. We are doing with a will and with united force whatsoever our hands find to do, and in His name we expect to conquer.

MRS. E. S. FARR,
State Reporter, Bristol.

ALABAMA.

A WINTER CONVENTION.

The tenth annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of Alabama was held in Selma, December 1, 2 and 3. The changing of our season for meeting from spring to fall made a space of eighteen months since our last convention; and many of the workers had not seen each other in that time. The state officers and about twenty-five other delegates were present, and many others were with us in spirit who were detained at home on account of the World's Fair and other reasons. Mrs. Mattie L. Spencer presided.

The reports from the officers and superintendents of departments contained words of encouragement and promise, for though the waves of temperance were at high tide in some places and at very low ebb in others, the sea of temperance sentiment covers our state by unions in nearly every county that is not already prohibition.

The treasurer's report showed that more money had been raised for temperance work than in any previous year. The Mercy Home, established in Birmingham is a monument to the indomitable energy and self-sacrificing spirit of the W. C. T. U. women of that city, and we hope in time to adopt the institution as a work of the state union.

The president's annual address was received with marked attention. It began by reviewing briefly the work of the ten years since the state union was organized, glanced at the failures and success of the work, giving plain, practical reasons therefor, and marked out plans and methods for future work, which, if carried out, would place Alabama W. C. T. U. in the front ranks.

Part of the time Mrs. Lide Meriwether, of Tennessee, was our guest, and aided us by her words of experience in our business meetings, besides giving a fine address. We had also with us Miss Clara Baer, of the Sophie Newcomb College, New Orleans, who gave a talk on physical education. Later on the program she gave specimens of her elocutionary abilities in a style out of the ordinary and peculiar to herself.

One of our best services was on Sunday afternoon in a gospel temperance meeting, when we listened to a powerful exposition of the story of Uzzah, by Mrs. A. L. Billheimer, of Birmingham. After this, short talks from "friends of the cause" were requested by the president, and several pastors responded in a way that cheered us wonderfully.

The convention was held in the Y. M. C. A. building, which was tastefully decorated and had such an air of welcome that we felt at home from the first. We were kindly cared for in the lovely homes of Selma, and the entertainment committee treated us royally. One day the whole convention was dined at the new hotel which is the 'pride of Selma, and would be an acquisition to any city.

The officers were reëlected except the recording secretary and treasurer, who were released from faithful service at their own request.

JULIA H. MC BRYDE,
State Cor. Sec'y.

Mobile, Ala.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

FIVE new members have joined the Griffin, Que., W. C T. U., which enjoyed a helpful observance of Crusade Day.

AT La Porte, Ind., the program for Crusade day exercises was followed as nearly as possible and enthusiasm was engendered for future work.

THE New York W. C. T. U. workers heartily commend Rev. H. E. Gurney and Mrs. Ella Gurney, of Clayton, N. Y., who are devoting themselves to active temperance work. Their services are helpful and terms most reasonable.

A GRAND Crusade rally was held at Corvallis, Ore., Sunday afternoon, January 21. Each of the ministers made five minute speeches. The Y's and the Junior Y's followed the "Home Annals" of the W. C. T. U. with annals of their own.

A TRIP to New Jersey was taken not long ago by Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, the Y's General Secretary. She attended the state Y conference at Ocean Grove, organized a new Y of sixteen members at Rahway, spoke for the W. C. T. U. and on the Y. W. C. T. U. anniversary at Florence.

MRS. MARY CLEMENT LEAVITT celebrated her last birthday at Ashland, Ore., where a union of seventeen paying members was formed, and her addresses were highly appreciated. A tea party in her honor was given in the church lecture-room, and among the many decorations were the words, "Red-Letter Day," in red letters upon the wall.

THE W. C. T. U., of Jennings, La., observed Crusade Day in prayer in their several homes, as many were out of health. On Sabbath morning following, temperance services were held in the Congregational and M. E. Churches, and in the evening they had a grand mass-meeting, uniting all denominations. Addresses were very interesting, mostly delivered by ladies. Much credit is due to the Christian Endeavor young people who superintended the singing. The meeting occurred at an opportune time, just previous to the local election, when a stirring of temperance sentiment was needed to keep the saloon from this growing town.

THE free reading room for working boys, under the auspices of the Loyal Legion Temperance society of New York City, is still doing a splendid work, as attested by its annual report just issued. Mrs. Frances J. Barnes remains its president, the young men's and young women's divisions are well officered and efficient, and the record of the year shows that there is no let up in the good work of the organization begun twelve years ago.

KANSAS has been called to part with one of her most faithful and efficient workers. After months of suffering, much of the time of the most acute nature, death came to the relief of Mrs. M. L. Berry, the state W. C. T. U. treasurer, on Saturday, January 13. In her, the sixth district has been called to part with a president beloved. They mourn the loss of an earnest, Christian worker—one whose death will leave a large place to be filled.

Official Communications.

"IMPORTANT REQUESTS."

The few lines published in THE UNION SIGNAL of December 7 have deluged me with names and inquiries; literally from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from Maine to Florida they have rained in, with quite a few from other countries. Let no one charge white-ribboners with careless reading or lack of interest, neither confine such interest to superintendents alone. I am more gratified than I can express but the impatience is a little harassing, due mostly, I suppose, to "the fear that my name has not been received." My friend, your name came duly to hand but I begin to despair of saying so, on a postal, to each inquirer. You will certainly receive the "suggestions" as soon as they materialize. So many desire them, it would be quite impossible to send them out in written form; they must be printed and this, with divers and sundry other reasons entirely beyond my control, has delayed the "document" and I am not able to say even now just when it will be ready. This I much regret. I begin, too, to suspect that the "helps" will not be so helpful as some seem to desire and expect. No one can teach what she herself does not know, nor can any simple "plan" or "suggestions" impart the coveted knowledge. While we wait, let every superintendent of parliamentary usage familiarize herself with card and manual.

The "plan" will pertain more especially to schools of methods, though special hints will be given to the parliamentary usage department.

The chief trouble is to embrace in two or three columns, what might properly fill a good-sized volume, and this scribe predicts that such a book will yet appear—a department book—with so much of each department helpfully arranged as will enable any white-ribboner who is "apt to teach" to present our departments in or out of schools of methods, so as to interest, instruct and enthuse those who listen. If with this intimation some one does not speedily come to the front, I may possibly "declare my intentions" to try a hand at it myself!

Let me once more call to your remembrance the school of methods manual prepared by our lamented Mary Allen West, and published in 1890 (price twenty-five cents, W. T. P. A.) Aside from individuals, each union should own at least one copy.

A. S. BENJAMIN,
Supt. School of Methods and Parliamentary Usage.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

HERE AND THERE.

Washington being the capitol city of our nation, we rejoice in every successful work of the W. C. T. U., and late news is so cheering we are glad to communicate it to co-laborers everywhere. The exercises of Crusade Day were a delight to all, being of rarely spiritual character. The pastors of the city conducted the services, changing each half hour, and Sabbath evening a meeting was held under the auspices of the union at Garfield Memorial Church, Mrs. Anna Rice, of New York, and Mrs. Griffith, the district president, being the speakers. A reception was held at W. C. T. U. headquarters from two p. m. to ten o'clock on New Year's day, when one thousand friends called, among whom were ministers, congressmen and society generally, all of whom partook of delicious refreshments without wine. From 12 m. to 9:30 gospel services were continuously held in the auditorium seating four hundred, which was packed, and during which more than one hundred professed conversion. Good report of the work of the Y's is also received.

Sample vial mailed free to any address.
RUBIFOAM
For the TEETH.
Deliciously Flavored.
Cleanses and Beautifies.
Price, 25 cents.
E. W. HOYT & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Alaska Stove Lifter

Always Cold. Will not get hot even if left in the lid.
Heavily Nickel Plated. Sold by all Stove, Hardware, and House Furnishers, or sent by mail, postpaid, for 30 cents.
—Also the—
ALASKA POKER.
TROY NICKEL WORKS, Troy, N.Y.

DO YOU DESIRE YOUR CHILD TO READ? If so, send 36 cents for a
NEW MODEL FIRST READER.
A beautiful book, with colored illustrations. It delights and instructs. Address
GEO. SHERWOOD & CO.,
303 Wabash Ave., - CHICAGO

485,629 PAIRS SOLD THROUGHOUT THE U. S.
PARKER PAYS THE POSTAGE on his Arctic Sock for men, women, and children. Recommended by physicians and nurses for house, chamber and sick-room. Only sock for rubber boots; it absorbs perspiration. Ask shoe dealer, or send 25c. with size.
J. H. PARKER, 103 Bedford Street, Boston. Dept. 39.

STUDY LAW AT HOME. Take a Course in the SPRAGUE Correspondence School of Law. (Incorporated.) Send 10c. stamps for particulars to
J. COTNER, JR., SEC'Y, DETROIT, MICH.
No. - TELEPHONE BDG.

GLOBE SAVINGS BANK
Corner Dearborn and Jackson Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.
UNDER STATE CONTROL.
INDIVIDUAL AND SAVINGS ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.
SAFETY ▲ DEPOSIT ▲ VAULTS.

AGENTS COIN
Money selling Beveridge's Automatic Cooker. Latest and best cooking utensil ever invented. Sells at sight. One Agent sold over 1700 in one town. One sample Cooker free to good agents. Advertising matter furnished. For full particulars address W. E. BEVERIDGE, BALTIMORE, Md.

High Arm

Warranted Ten Years.
FREE TRIAL in your own home for 30 days without paying one cent in advance; machine to be returned at our expense if unsatisfactory. We take all risks, pay freight, ship anywhere, to anyone, in any quantity at wholesale prices. $65 Kenwood machine, $24.50; $55 Arlington, $20.50; $45 Arlington, $17.50; $35 High Arm Gem, $12. We sell all makes and styles, from cheapest $7.95 to best "Kenwood," $24.50. All attachments free. THREE HIGHEST WORLD'S FAIR MEDALS AWARDED. Over 100,000 now in use. Buy direct from factory. Save agents large profits. Catalogue and testimonials free. Write at once. Address (in full) CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 W. VanBuren St., Dept. A151, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS MAKE MONEY
Selling the New Moon Embroidery Ring, for all kinds of fancy work, darning and mending. Good profits and a clear field. Sample and full particulars mailed for 25 cents. The Ohio Novelty Co., D35, Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS WANTED for MOTHER STEWART'S new book, "THE CRUSADER IN GREAT BRITAIN." Is creating great interest on both sides of the water. Crowded full of humor, fun, pathos and valuable history. Just the book that agents like to handle. Price $1. Address
M. CAMPBELL, Springfield, Ohio.

World's Fair Highest Awards
Medal and Diploma on our INCUBATOR and BROODER Combined.
"Old Reliable" Leads them all.

If you are interested in Poultry, it will pay you to send 4 cents in stamps for our 72 page catalogue, giving valuable points on Poultry Culture. Address
Reliable Incubator and Brooder Co. Quincy, Ill.
45 yards High Class Fowls.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS,
But save you money on everything you eat, wear or use. Send 8 cts. for full catalogue.
H. R. EAGLE & Co., 68 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Mrs. J. B. Shesler, of Iowa, writes: "My district is looking up. New unions are being organized and old ones revived."

The spirit of a letter just received from Mrs. Julia A. Bidwell, our new superintendent of Sunday-school department, assures of successful prosecution of the work. She inclosed Miss Kimball's weekly calendar of prayer for the same department in the World's W. C. T. U., of which she is superintendent, being a topic and text for each day of the week.

Our sympathy is extended to Mrs. R. J. Trego, National evangelist, who, in the midst of her labors in Colorado, was called to her home in Ohio by the very sudden death of her mother. After laying away her beloved she immediately returned to her work, where, at Fort Collins, blessings still attend her, as souls are born into the kingdom of Christ.

May not the following be suggestive to many unions? In the "Church Calendar" of the Walnut Street Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, we find "Monthly Meeting of Woman's Temperance Committee," and on the card giving the program for four months of the "Woman's Missionary Society" of the same church, we find as a topic, "The Liquor Traffic in Africa," to be given by Mrs. Wm. G. Moorhead, who through faithful, diligent labor, has introduced these innovations.

Thanks to Mrs. E. J. Gray, of Medina, O., who writes: "The new feature of THE UNION SIGNAL, 'Corresponding Secretary's Notes' and 'Treasurer's Corner,' are to me very interesting, and, indeed, meet a long-felt want. It brings us into direct personal relation with our workers at Headquarters, and makes us feel more than ever that 'we belong' to the great fraternity and that our interests are mutual and closely allied."

How wonderfully kin we find ourselves when laboring with the same spirit for the same cause. After reading our last week's column the W. C. T. U. of Taunton, Mass., sent us the "annual report of their union, containing the president's address, who recommends to her constituency" the adoption as a local motto for the year the words of Lowell, "Not failure, but low aim is crime." It is an admirable document throughout, and is followed by the secretary's report, which shows intelligent, systematic prosecution of their work, while the treasurer's report proclaims the generosity of the union, its wise expenditure of funds and a good balance in the treasury.

We are receiving frequent orders for the free literature advertised a few weeks since. We are striving to secure a larger variety that still broader, deeper results may be insured by distribution. Mr. Sho Nemoto, our valued Japanese friend, has translated into English the telegrams and letters exchanged between the friends of Miss Mary Allen West at the time of her death—with many interesting facts—and an account of her funeral services; also a lecture upon citizenship delivered by her in Japan. Through the kindness of Mr. Nemoto, we are able to furnish these at five (5) cents each, which is not a quarter of their cost, the postage alone being three cents.

MARY A. WOODBRIDGE.

Treasurer's Corner.

WHAT THE DIMES ARE DOING.

The question is asked, "Why did our leaders allow the National to get into debt?" One year ago last November no one could have foreseen the coming financial storm. The executive committee planned its work and made its appropriations as usual. Early in the year the confidence of the people in the financial policy of the government began to waver, the papers began to talk of hard times and prophesy worse times coming. The panic was worked up and people began to save their money and hide it away for the rainy day foretold. Gifts and contributions to all philanthropic work fell off. Dues were cut down in almost every state, and the money that the National had the right to expect did not flow into its coffers. But each superintendent had been promised a certain sum, and it must be paid. The salary of the workers, postage and printing bills, rents, etc., all must be met, for they were promises made and could not be broken without dishonor. Believing that these hard times were only temporary and that the clouds would soon lift, money was borrowed, and as far as possible these obligations were met, so that the work should not suffer.

In spite of this many bills of last year ran over into this, and really made the deficit much greater than the eleven hundred dollars reported. There are always large bills for convention expenses that cannot be avoided. Then come the minutes, which are furnished to all applicants for the bare postage, while to all state officials they are sent free of that even. Our postage bill for minutes thus far is $60, and the bill for printing $690. They have a great quantity of matter, and could not be furnished at less expense. I state these facts, my sisters, because this is your work, and because it will show you that generous as your responses have been, there is still great need. I trust those unions that have not yet sent in their dimes will do so, for, believe me, there is still a place for them. Each superintendent should have a remittance this month.

The treasurer was greatly cheered by a donation from Dorchester W. C. T. U. of $8.43, and the writer says: "These donations are a habit of ours—have been for several years, owing to the fact that we were able sometime ago to place the W. C. T. U. on the weekly offering list of one of our churches, the Second Congregational. Do you not wish others had such good habits?" Indeed, we do. Why should not the W. C. T. U. be remembered regularly by the churches as well as educational and missionary societies, for it is both. Let others do likewise.

A letter containing two dimes said: "These are not only dimes but treasures, for they were found in the pocket-book of my dear son, who was taken from us a few weeks since. I could not use any of his money for anything but sacred purposes, but the W. C. T. U. stands for the grandest and best work that is being done to-day for humanity, so these may go."

Mt. Vernon, Ind., union sends $1 and says: "At our last meeting one of our ladies brought a UNION SIGNAL, containing Miss Willard's letter to us all. We had it read and it resulted in a gift of ten cents from every one."

Colorado sends a dime: "The enclosed is a keepsake that has lain contentedly idle for more than twenty years. Miss Willard's appeal was too much for it and now it goes forth to be of some little use in the world. The only regret is that it has no companion to accompany it." This reminds me of Martin Luther who once listened to an urgent appeal for help, when he was absolutely penniless and in his anxiety to give he remembered that he had a beautiful medal of Joachim, elector of Brandenburg, which he highly prized. He went to the drawer where this treasure was kept and said: "What art thou doing here, Joachim? Dost thou not see how idle thou art? Come out and make thyself useful." How many idle Joachims are there hidden away in temperance homes that should be called forth and set to work?

HELEN M. BARKER.

Organizers' Corner.

[It is the desire of the editors of THE UNION SIGNAL that this Corner should serve the National Organizers as a sort of Lecture Bureau, and to that end they are invited to send their calendar of appointments long enough ahead to secure engagements in the territory to which they are called.]

The following is the list of National organizers for the present year, and whether W's or Y's they are all accredited public speakers and fully prepared to organize W's, Y's, L. T. L's, or speak to the general public and add to the membership of unions.

For terms and dates address as below:

Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.
Mrs. L. H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.
Miss Frances E. Griffin, 69 Maple street, Chicago.
Mrs. Mary Bynon Reese, Chautauqua, Wash.
Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, 1907 Bush street, San Francisco, Cal.
Mrs. E. A. Blair, 936 Cottage Place, Los Angeles, Cal.
Mrs. Maude L. Green, Manitou Springs, Col.
Mrs. E. Norinne Law, Baraga, Mich.
Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.
Mrs. Delle H. Cox, Newberg, Ore.
Miss Ida Clothier, Manitou Springs, Col.
Mrs. Henrietta Skelton, 132 McAllister street, San Francisco, Cal.
Miss S. C. Harris, Franklin, Va.
Mrs. F. E. W. Harper, Bainbridge street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.
Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.
Miss Frances Ensign, Madison, O.
Mrs. E. A. Kenyon, Townshend, Vt.

I am en route in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. Last Sunday I visited Hancock, lectured in the afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. meeting, and addressed a union temperance meeting in the evening. The union received many new members and started on another year's work.

My appointments for the present are as follows: Escanaba, January 20-24; Ford River, 25-26; Gladstone, 27-29; Rapid River, 30-31; Houghton, February 10-14.

I find this a good time to cause an arrest of thought. A good time to show up the financial side of the liquor traffic. Many have declared to me at recent meetings, "I never saw it in that light before; hereafter I am for prohibition." Yours for victory,

E. NORINNE LAW,

Oak Park, Ill.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL AND SANITARIUM.

Conditions of membership in the Hospital Association: Signing of the temperance pledge, payment of $5 membership fee and $1 annually thereafter.

Needs of the Hospital: Members in its Association; Endowment of beds, contributions of money, blankets, towels, etc. (As quilts cannot be used to good advantage on hospital beds, it is better to sell them at home and to send the money thus received.) Acquaintance with its principles and purposes. Urgent invitation is extended to all interested, and especially to all physicians, to visit the institution and make full inquiries in regard to its workings.

A good friend from Minnesota, who gives no clue to her identity save that she is a white-ribboner, writes: "Inclosed please find $20 with which to buy needful things for the sick. May God's blessing be upon the inmates of the hospital."

That such prayers, ascending from many hearts all over the land are being answered is being proven daily. In spite of the hard times the hospital has held its own and paid its bills. Now and then the outlook is threatening, and the treasurer wonders where the next month's rent is coming from; but the money has never failed when most needed, and letters like this strengthen the faith of those who are bearing the responsibilities of this line of our work.

But there is pressing need of more money, that there may be fuller demonstration of our principles. Until more charity patients can be taken it is not possible to reach as full a line of diseases as is desired. That alcohol, as an active medicinal agent is utterly unnecessary, or worse, in cases of surgery, typhoid fever and the like, has been abundantly proved. Its general uselessness or positive injuriousness can be as clearly shown when it is possible to treat a wider range of diseases—such a range as can be secured only by treating those who are unable to pay even the low hospital rates. The furnishing and the endowment of a ward for free patients is the "next thing" on the hospital calendar. Who will help to do it?

The children are taking hold with a will in the furnishing of the Loyal Temperance Legion room. It will contain two beds with full equipment for two child patients. The several items of furnishing have been assigned to the several states, that all may have a definite share in the result. Pennsylvania furnishes the rug for the floor; Massachusetts and New York each a bedstead with mattress; Michigan has already sent the money for her assignment—a pair of blankets—and holds some surplus toward the endowment fund, the next step after the furnishing. Pillow cases are in hand from Delaware and others are promised. Arkansas has sent more than enough for its assignment of towels, and the balance will be held for the endowment fund; other states have nearly enough for their special parts.

Will all those who have money in hand for this purpose, whether state superintendents or not, please send it as soon as possible to the address given below. It is earnestly desired to proceed at once with the furnishing, that the room may be ready by April 1. Send what you have and the rest can come later. In accordance with the rule of the hospital, we do not propose to go in debt, but with what you now have we can probably begin the work. The room is now empty and we wish to claim it at once for the Legion.

The L. T. L. school of industries at Milwaukee will make the panel for the door which shall tell to all that it is the Loyal Temperance Legion room.

ALICE M. GUERNSEY,
Ass't Secretary.

PROF. MANLEY.

FREE.

The late Prof. Basil Manley, of the South, Bap. Theo. Seminary, Louisville, Ky., says of the Aerial Medication after his wife had thoroughly tested it: "I can cordially recommend its use." Write for a facsimile of his letter.

The Author of Harvest Bells.

Rev. W. E. Penn, the noted evangelist of Eureka Springs, Ark., says: "I was cured of Catarrhal Deafness in 1886, by the use of the Aerial Medication, and it has proved to be a permanent cure, and I know of many cases of catarrh that have been cured by its use. Rev. J. H. Cason, of Russellville, Ark., was compelled to abandon preaching several years ago on account of lung trouble. I advised this treatment, and after three months of its use he was cured, and has been preaching ever since."

REV. W. E. PENN.

MEDICINES FOR THREE MONTHS' TREATMENT FREE.

To introduce this treatment, and prove beyond doubt that it is a positive cure for Deafness, Catarrh, Throat and Lung Diseases, I will, for a short time, send (by express) Medicines for three months' treatment free. Address,

J. H. MOORE, M. D., Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS $10 a day at home selling LIGHTNING PLATER and plating Jewelry, Watches, Tableware, Bicycles, etc. Plates finest jewelry good as new, and on all kinds of metal with gold, silver or nickel. No experience. Anyone can plate the first effort. Goods need plating at every house. Outfits complete. Different sizes, all warranted. Wholesale to agents $5 up. Big profits, good seller. Circulars free.

H. F. Delno & Co. Dept. No. 6, Columbus, O.

DROPSY TREATED FREE Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

You Dye in 30 minutes Turkey red on cotton that won't freeze, boil or wash out. No other will do it. Package to color 2 lbs., by mail, 10 cts.; 6, any color—for wool or cotton, 40c. Big pay Agents. Write quick. Mention this paper. FRENCH DYE CO. Vassar, Mich

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT. $10.50 Buy the Oxford Improved SINGER Sewing Machine, with a complete set of attachments and guaranteed for 10 years Shipped anywhere on 30 days' trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded. Buy from factory, save dealers' and agents' profit. Write to-day for our LARGE FREE CATALOGUE. Oxford Mfg. Co., 342 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

BICYCLES FREE Organs, Watches, Guns, Etc. TO BOYS and GIRLS Devoting a few minutes after school-hours to our interests BOORMAN & PARKER, 173 5th Av., Chicago. Ill. Cat. full instruc. 1c stamp.

JENNESS MILLER Specialties. Corset substitutes, Empire Waists, Bust Supports, Divided Skirts, Union Suits, etc. Send stamp for illustrated pamphlet, "Dress." Mrs. S. W. PIKE, 34 Central Music Hall, CHICAGO.

SALESMEN WANTED to sell our goods by samples to the wholesale and retail trade, sell on sight to every business man or firm; liberal salary, money advanced for advertising and expenses. Permanent position. Address with stamp, KING MFG. CO., A 55 Chicago, Ill.

FREE MUSIC 44 pieces, latest Sheet Music and charming illustrated Magazine 3 months; all for 10 cents; send silver dime. American Nation, Box 1729, Boston, Mass.

AGENTS CAN MAKE FROM $25.00 TO $100.00 a week by canvassing for the best specialties ever offered. No competition. Address, N. Y. & LONDON ELECTRIC ASSN., Kansas City Mo.

Don't Cost You a Cent! BOYS AND GIRLS who want an elegant high grade SAFETY BICYCLE FOR NOTHING, send your name and address to H. M. CO., 358 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

PILES Instant relief, final cure in a few days, and never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. Remedy mailed free. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N. Y.

At 1/4 Price Watches, Guns, Buggies, Harness, Sewing Machines, Organs, Bicycles, Farm Tools, Safes, etc. List FREE. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS clear $100 monthly. 100 New Ladies' Specialties for Old and Young. 64 page Illust'd Catalogue FREE. G. L. Erwin & Co., Chicago, Ill. LADY

CARDS Send 2c. stamp for Sample Book of all the FINEST and Latest Style Cards for 1894. We sell GENUINE CARDS NOT TRASH. UNION CARD CO., COLUMBUS, OHIO.

WE WANT YOU to distribute circulars, samples, etc., in your locality for our syndicate of big advertisers. $3 to $5 per thousand. CASH PAID. No canvassing. Enclose stamp. DISTRIBUTING BUREAU, P.O. Box 1925, New York City.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL

Subscription Rates for 1893.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly.
Price per year $ .50

Young Crusader, monthly, one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum .15

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago.

ATTENTION BOYS!

FOR SIX NEW SUBSCRIBERS

to THE UNION SIGNAL we will send this watch to your address, postpaid.

FOR FOUR NEW SUBSCRIBERS

and Fifty Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

FOR TWO NEW SUBSCRIBERS

and Seventy-five Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

THIS OFFER IS

FOR BOYS ONLY

Boys who will thank us for this generous offer to own the best pocket time-piece yet made by any Clock Company. Extreme diameter of case 2¼ inches.

As soon as your mind is made up to secure one of these Watches, write to us. Address

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n
THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO...

THE QUARTERLY TEMPERANCE LESSON

For the special use of Sunday-school teachers, is issued as a supplement to the March number of

The Young Crusader.

L. T. L. Superintendents should send their orders in early. Scatter the good seed far and wide. Donate to Sunday-schools which cannot buy. Order with or without

The Young Crusader.

The lesson is prepared by Mrs. Helen G. Rice, whose able pen makes the subject attractive and fruitful. Read our terms:

For 100, 65 cents; 500, $2.75; 1,000, $5. The Young Crusader and the Lesson will be sent, 100 for $1; 500, $4.75; 1,000, $9; 2,000, $15; 5,000, $35; 8,000, $48; postage paid by us. All orders between numbers named at the rate immediately preceding.

Send order in time to distribute in your schools on the Sunday preceding the date of the lesson.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

PROHIBITION.

If you are a Prohibitionist, if you are not a Prohibitionist, if you have a friend you wish to become a Prohibitionist, send for our Neal Dow Prohibition Number, to be issued February 22.

See prices elsewhere.

PETITION OF THE WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE HOME.

Addressed to the Governments of the World.

Honored Rulers, Representatives and Brothers:

We, your Petitioners, although belonging to the physically weaker sex, are strong of heart to love our homes, our native land, and the world's family of nations.

We know that clear brains and pure hearts make honest lives and happy homes, and that by these the nations prosper, and the time is brought nearer when the world shall be at peace.

We know that indulgence in Alcohol and Opium, and in other vices which disgrace our social life, makes misery for all the world, and most of all for us and for our children.

We know that stimulants and opiates are sold under legal guarantees which make the Governments partners in the traffic, by accepting as revenue a portion of the profits, and we know with shame that they are often forced by treaty upon populations, either ignorant or unwilling.

We know that the law might do much, now left undone, to raise the moral tone of society and render vice difficult.

We have no power to prevent these great iniquities beneath which the whole world groans, but you have power to redeem the honor of the nations from an indefensible complicity.

We therefore come to you with the united voices of representative women of every land, beseeching you to raise the standard of the law to that of Christian morals, to strip away the safeguards and sanctions of the state from the drink traffic and the opium trade, and to protect our homes by the total prohibition of these curses of civilization throughout all the territory over which your Government extends.

NAMES. | RESIDENCES.

Will not everybody who loves the great cause of home protection, send to Miss Alice E. Briggs, Evanston, Ill., for the regular form, and circulate it to the best of her ability, mailing the names to Miss Briggs. Use separate blanks for men and women.

TEMPLE RECEIPTS.

Maine—Rockland: Eliza L. Crie, $5; Stillwater: Mrs. S. N. Mathews, $2.

Michigan—Ingham Co.: W. C. T. U., $5; Romeo: W. C. T. U., $62.78; Kalamazoo: Pengelly W. C. T. U., $27; South Haven: W. C. T. U., $11; Rockford: Rev. M. Stillwell and friends, 45 cents; Lansing: Frederick Ogle Cameron: 10 cents; Pinckney: Louisa M. Coe, $1.

Minnesota—Lake Crystal: W. C. T. U., $32.35; Clinton Falls: W. C. T. U., $1; Dresbach: W. C. T. U., $1.50; Minneapolis: Central W. C. T. U. Coffee House employés, $5; Hobart: W. C. T. U., $1; Alexandria: W. C. T. U., $3.20.

Missouri—Jackson: Miss Annie Hutchinson, $2.28; St. Louis: Carondelet W. C. T. U., $10; Brookfield: W. C. T. U., $20.18; Shelbina: Mrs. Kittie King, $7.25; Hannibal: W. C. T. U., $10.

Nebraska—Lincoln: Mrs. H. A. Stoner, 20 cents; Sabine county: W. C. T. U., $8.

Nevada—State W. C. T. U., $8.

New Jersey—Moorestown: Y. W. C. T. U., $15; Tuckerton: W. C. T. U., $41; Florence: W. C. T. U., $5; New Egypt: W. C. T. U., $5.

New Hampshire—Tilton: W. C. T. U., $10; Moultonboro: Mrs. Fannie S. Locke, $4.

New York—Grahamsville: W. C. T. U., $1; Saratoga County: W. C. T. U., $100; East Randolph: W. C. T. U., $3.13; Versailles: W. C. T. U., $3.25; Rondout: W. C. T. U., $3.65; Erie county: W. C. T. U., $35.24; Brooklyn: Signal W. C. T. U., $5.26; Middleport: C. Allen, $1; New Hamburgh: W. C. T. U., $12; Poughquag, W. C. T. U., $2.50; Manchester: W. C. T. U., $2.50; Kings County: L. T. L., $6; Wallkill: W. C. T. U., $30; Whittemore Hill: Mrs. Decker, $3; Campville: Mrs. Daniel Case, $1; Elizabeth T. Belknap, $1; Steuben: W. C. T. U., $5; New York: Mrs. Maria Cunningham, $3; Greece: Mrs. E. S. Benedict, $1.30; Rensselaer Falls: W. C. T. U., $2.50; South Perinton, W. C. T. U., 22 cents.

Ohio—Mogadore: Mrs. John Ewart, $1; East Springfield: Woman's League, $1; Bellefontaine: W. C. T. U., $27; Talmadge: W. C. T. U., $1; Milford Center: Mrs. C. Mitchell, $3.65; Logan: N. H. Blosser, $40.

Pennsylvania—Philadelphia: Cedar Grove Band of Hope $1.11; Nashua: L. T. L. $1; North Galilee Y. W. C. T. U., $2; Conewango: W. C. T. U. $2; Idlewood: Alice G. Harrison, $1; Equinunk L. T. L., $12.54; Westmoreland county: W. C. T. U., $30; Springdale: Y. W. C. T. U., $1; Bradford county: W. C. T. U., $1.50.

Rhode Island—Apponang: W. C. T. U., $2. Urquepaugh: W. C. T. U., $5.

Wisconsin—Chippewa Falls: Geo. R. Shaw, $1; Marshfield: W. C. T. U., $22; Almond: S. J. Hill, $2.50.

Vermont—Westminster: Mrs. Mary L. Garmon, $2.50; Woodstock: Sarah B. Atwood, $5; Orange County: W. C. T. U., $5.

Virginia—Lincoln, L. T. L., $1; W. C. T. U., $4.50; Newport News: W. C. T. U., $25.

Washington—Orondo: Mrs. J. H. McMilan, $1.

October 1, 1893.

SARA G. JOHNSON,
Financial Secretary.

GRANŪLA

"The Perfect Health Food."

"Granūla" is one of the most concentrated forms of food, and contains in proper proportions all the elements of nutrition needed by the human body. It is made from the best White Winter Wheat grown in the famous Genesee Valley wheat-growing region.

It contains every needed constituent of the grain, and, as wheat is considered the best single article of food, "Granūla" supplies in a palatable form the best and most highly nutritive alimentary principle.

SEND FOR FREE BOOK OF RECIPES. It is ready for immediate table use by simply soaking it in milk or hot or cold water, as it is twice cooked in its manufacture. It may be made the constituent of many palatable dishes. It will keep for years unchanged as to value if stored in a dry place.

Trial package 25c. by mail postpaid. Address, OUR HOME GRANŪLA CO., Box 100, Dansville, N.Y.

"A disease known is half cured."

If your house is dirty

Buy a cake of SAPOLIO. It is a solid cake of Scouring Soap used for all cleaning purposes except the laundry. Try it.

You are judged by your house just as much as by your dress. Keep it neat and clean and your reputation will shine. Neglect it and your good name will suffer. Do not think that house-cleaning is too troublesome; it is worth all it costs, especially if you reduce the outlay of time and strength by using SAPOLIO.

A Beautiful Home
Why not have one?

Our handsomely illustrated Book tells you all about it. Shows Designs of many Beautiful Homes, also designs for laying out and beautifying your grounds, sent for 20 cts. in postage, or silver, or WILL SEND IT FREE to any one ordering our 1894 Book. (Just out.)

"NEW MODEL DWELLINGS."
"AND HOW BEST TO BUILD THEM."

This beautiful Book contains Designs, Plans and Interior Views of 100 medium and low cost houses, ($400 to $10,000), with correct estimates of cost. For convenience and Artistic Merit, the houses shown in this book far surpass anything yet published. Price $1.00. G. F. BARBER & CO., Arch't, Knoxville, Tenn.

4 YEARS BOARD, TUITION, CLOTHING, FREE AT HAMILTON COLLEGE OR HOUGHTON SEMINARY.

The following letter from M. Woolsey Stryker, D.D., LL. D., Pres't of Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., guarantees the fulfillment of our offer: CEDARINE MFG. CO.—Gentlemen: I fully indorse the offer made by you to give $2,000 as a premium for the largest sale of your product, to be the means of procuring an education for a young man at Hamilton College, or a young woman at Houghton Seminary, and heartily commend your plan. I know your Cedarine to be an article of sterling merit, the officers of your Company to be responsible men, that they have deposited with the Treasurer of Hamilton College funds to the amount of $2,000, and that it will be paid as agreed. Respectfully, M. WOOLSEY STRYKER, Pres't.

A liberal salary assured to any one who is willing to work, and a college education free to the winner. Don't delay, but write at once and secure territory. It is important that you look into this plan AT ONCE. Send for pamphlet to CEDARINE MFG. CO., BOX C CLINTON, N. Y.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW
About ZOA-PHORA—

A True Nerve Tonic.
Not a Stimulant or Narcotic.
Expressly for Weakly Women.
Full information and testimonials sent sealed.
Address ZOA-PHORA MEDICINE CO., H. G. COLMAN, SEC'Y, KALAMAZOO, MICH.

JUST ISSUED.

Four New National Leaflets.
Two New Y National Leaflets.

THE STORY OF THE CRUSADE.
THE SPIRIT OF THE CRUSADE.
THE CHILD OF THE CRUSADE.
AFTER TWENTY YEARS.
INASMUCH, and
WHAT IS YOUR VALUE?

Each Invaluable.
Try Them.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

DIVIDEND.

In response to many inquiries, we desire to say that owing to financial conditions throughout the business world, the Board of Directors did not declare a dividend at the annual meeting. At the quarterly meeting of the Board held January 17, it was decided to send out a detailed statement to all stockholders at an early date.

Respectfully, C. F. GROW,
Business Mgr.

TEACH THE MASSES.

This is your opportunity to teach the masses the effects of prohibition as illustrated by the life and works of Neal Dow. Send for our Prohibition number.

See prices.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Magnificent New Flowers
FOR ONLY 25 CENTS.

Including the lovely Orange Scented Tuberose which bears flowers of great beauty and of unsurpassed fragrance, worth more than the price of the collection. One bulb of Orange Scented Tuberose, 1 bulb French Seedling Gladioli, lovely spikes; 1 pkt. Fuller's New Sweet Pea in mixed colors, a grand variety; 1 pkt. World's Fair Pansy, comprises all the finest strains mixed; 1 pkt. Fuller's New Rose Aster flowers of great beauty, 1 pkt. Star Phlox, 30 colors mixed; 1 pkt. Giant Cockscomb, heads over two feet in circumference; 1 large pkt. Mixed Flower Seeds, over 100 different kinds, all the best sorts, which grow and bloom freely. The above fine bulbs and seeds are worth $1.00, will all flower this season, and we send them for only 25 cents. Order at once. Catalogue free.

J. ROSCOE FULLER & CO., Floral Park, N.Y.

HATCH CHICKENS BY STEAM
With the Improved Excelsior Incubator.

Simple, Perfect, Self-Regulating. Thousands in successful operation. Guaranteed to hatch a larger percentage of fertile eggs at less cost than any other Hatcher. Lowest priced first-class Hatcher made.

Circulars free. Send 6c. for Illus. Catalogue.

GEO. H. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

CAN YOU VOTE?

If you are a woman and cannot vote, use your political influence by distributing the Neal Dow Prohibition Number among your gentlemen friends.

See list of prices.

DO YOU WISH IT?

If you do wish the Neal Dow Prohibition Number, to be issued February 22, send in your order at once.

See terms in another column.

When you're Rubbing over your washboard, in that painful, old-fashioned way, these are some of your positions. Just try these motions, up and down, without the tub. That will prove how hard they are. Then try Pearline's way of washing.

That will prove how needless and absurd they are. Without the washboard and the rubbing on it, and without bending over the wash-tub or bobbing up and down over it —you save the wear to your clothes and the work for your back. That's Pearline's way. Directions on every package.

390 JAMES PYLE, New York.

DEAFNESS & HEAD NOISES CURED by my Invisible Tubular Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Warranted to help more cases than all similar devices combined. Help ears as glasses do eyes. Sold by F. Hiscox only, 853 Br'dway, N. Y. Send for book of proofs FREE

CANCER Its cure by scientific local treatment. 20 Years Experience. Book Free. Drs. McLeish and Weber, 123 John Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

What folly! To be without BEECHAM'S PILLS.

THE BEST OFFER YET ON SEEDS

is that made on page 16 of this issue of our paper by the great seed house of Peter Henderson & Co. of New York, who will send sixteen varieties of Sweet Peas (including the famous Emily Henderson), together with their illustrated catalogue, at about half the regular price. This offer is well worth reading and accepting.

Publisher's Notes.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER.

If you have seen the January and February number of the children's own paper, The Young Crusader, you will want the March issue. This is more emphatically a temperance number than common, containing the Quarterly Temperance Lesson as a Supplement, and other temperance truths in various bright and attractive presentations. This little eight-page monthly has hosts of friends. Are you one of them? If not, why not?

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ATTENTION! BOYS!

See our display advertisement which cannot fail to interest you. This opportunity is not for your mother or sister, but for you only. We do not offer many premiums but we are confident this nickel watch is just what you need, just what it claims to be, and for the effort it will cost, you can not obtain a better time-keeper. It is really a clock movement in a nickel case, manufactured by the Waterbury Clock Company, small enough to fit in your vest pocket. The smallest boy can wind it and tell accurate time by it. It is not a toy watch nor as small and delicate as your father's, yet will keep perhaps better time than his. Read our offer and notify us at once that you wish to work for one of these watches and we will be ready to fill your order as soon as it reaches us.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS.

Mrs. Lathrap's bugle note in the Crusade number of THE UNION SIGNAL is taking form as a National Leaflet, and will soon be ready.

Nothing has yet appeared which so fully carries the Crusade fire into the advanced lines of to-day's work.

You cannot afford to be without it.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

NEAL DOW'S BIRTHDAY.

Special Prohibition Number of THE UNION SIGNAL Feb. 22, 1894.

Our Crusade issue of THE UNION SIGNAL is entirely exhausted. So will be the Neal Dow Prohibition Number unless you

Order Promptly.

This will enable us so to judge of the demands of our clientele that none shall be disappointed.

A Prohibition number per se could not fail to be of interest, but a Neal Dow Prohibition Number, with the handsome face of this grand man is one you will wish to keep, and one you will be glad to send to your friend, who may not be a Prohibitionist, but will enjoy reading of the Maine law and its results and of the Life Work of Neal Dow.

This number will contain a sketch of his life, his portraits at different periods, a short history of the prohibition movement, statistical from its beginning, a symposium of opinions of leaders from everywhere on the prohibition question, and a symposium of the opinions of prominent Maine people as to how it has worked in Maine. It will also contain a rallying song and two other fitting poems. The editorials and other leading articles will be devoted to various phases of the prohibition question, and taken in its entirety the paper will be one of the finest yet issued from our press.

PRICE:

Single copies	.....	$ .10
5	"	.25
10	"	.40
15	"	.60
20	"	.75
25	"	.90
100	"	3.00

Orders must invariably be accompanied with CASH.

We give no credit or special discounts on extra issues.

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

OUR LATEST AND GREATEST ENTERPRISE.

By an arrangement we have made with the publishers of a collection of photographic views we are enabled to put them into the hands of our readers, practically as a gift, our only recompense being the fact that we incidentally interest the people in our publication. The one grand idea is that we have the opportunity to give our readers a great pleasure, put in their hands a work which will not only prove entertaining, but be instructive to both young and old.

Our portfolio of photographs consists of a collection of views which have been selected by John L. Stoddard, the most noted traveler and lecturer of the day. They represent scenes and places he has visited, and each view is accompanied by an interesting and graphic description. As works of art these photographs have never been equalled by any results of the camera. They are each 11x13 inches in size, and would cost any purchaser $1.50. We offer them in portfolios, containing sixteen views, and the cost of each portfolio is but five two cent postage stamps with coupon found on this page.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

CALENDARS! CALENDARS! Half Price!

We have a line of calendars for 1894, unique and attractive, which we are ready to offer at just half their former price:

Poet's	Calendar, formerly	.50	now	.25
Little People's	" "	.40	"	.20
Christmas	" "	.40	"	.20
Onward and Upward	"	.25	"	.12
Play Day Calendar,	"	.15	"	.08
Petit "	"	.15	"	.08

Special Attention

is called to the Poet's Calendar as being best value for the price, also to the Onward and Upward Calendar, which has Scripture texts for each month. We have but a limited number of each, and in order to avail yourself of this opportunity to secure a lovely gift for a friend you must order at once. Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ARE YOU A POLITICIAN?

If so, can you not use effectively our Neal Dow Prohibition Number?

SOUND ABROAD THE FAME OF
THE UNIVERSAL FAVORITE

CRAB-APPLE ∴ BLOSSOM ∴ PERFUME

AND THE WORLD RENOWNED

CROWN ∴ LAVENDER ∴ SALTS

EXCLUSIVE PRODUCTIONS OF

THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO.,
177 New Bond Street, London.

Asked For all Over the World. Annual Sales More than Half a Million Bottles.
Sold only in Crown Stoppered Bottles as shown above.

...PORTFOLIO OF PHOTOGRAPHS...

THE FIRST SERIES CONTAINS:

Portrait of John L. Stoddard; Panorama of Paris; Ann Hathaway's Cottage at Stratford-on-Avon, England; Ellen's Isle in Loch Katrine, Scotland; Blarney Castle, Ireland; Panorama of Stockholm, Sweden; A Group of Lapps, Norway; Heidelberg Castle, Germany; "The Dying Gaul," statue in the Capitol, Rome; Statue of Columbus, Genoa, Italy; The Milan Cathedral, Italy; The Garden of Gethsemane; Botanical Gardens and Mt. Corcovado, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Straw Cottages, Salamanca, Mexico; Lucerne, Switzerland; The Graben, a wonderful street in Vienna, and a scene on the Indian River, Florida.

Signal Notes.

THE highest death-rates per thousand inhabitants are found in Dublin, New Orleans, Rheims and New York City.

THERE are six hundred and sixty women writers in England as against five thousand one hundred and eleven men.

POOR womankind in France cannot even have a rational cycling costume, for a wise Prefect of Police in Paris has decided that it infringes the law against women wearing men's clothes.

OVER eleven thousand immigrants were landed at Ellis Island, N. Y., during December, three thousand of them being unable to read or write, and more than half without trade or profession!

THE same legislature in Georgia that passed a bill admitting women teachers to the normal branch of the State University, also voted down a bill for a reformatory for young criminals. "Consistency, thou art a jewel!"

THE noted Hindoo, Chunder Mozoomdar, leader of the Brahmo-Somaj, proposes to do all in his power to bring about a practical result to the World's Parliament of Religions. He favors the starting of a journal to represent the views of all the denominations in the world.

AN evangelical and prohibition church will be organized in Chicago, at 1086 Lake street, Good Templars' Hall, on Sunday, February 4, at 2:30 p. m., with a preliminary meeting on the 3d. The object is to be as its name indicates, and the membership to be active, and associate, local and non-resident.

THAT England is very generous with regard to the pensions to her civil servants is shown again in the announcement that her women typewriters are to be incorporated in the regular civil service and will then be entitled to a pension amounting to two-thirds their salary at the conclusion of the regular period of civil service.

THE long-cherished plan to publish a daily in France which would be the organ for the Protestant interests of that country is about accomplished. A call for subscriptions has been issued, and the first number was dated January 25, 1894. Many distinguished Frenchmen and foreigners have promised their coöperation.

THE passage of a law in the New York legislature is being urged by the Waiters' Union, the object of which is to forbid persons engaged in the sale of liquors acting as employment agents. The man who spends the most for liquor naturally gets the best position, and the man who spends nothing practically gets no position.

DURING the year 1894, Dr. G. D. Bailey, of Spiceland, Ind., a well-known Prohibitionist, will attempt to compile the statistics of crime and casualties due to liquor drinking, and the liquor traffic in general. Clippings from papers with the place and date distinctly given or original accounts of such calamities will be carefully preserved and at the end of the year collated in a valuable document. Dr. Bailey is a painstaking, intelligent man who will make excellent use of such material, and our readers can render a real service to the temperance cause by giving him this assistance.

A NEW labor movement has lately begun in Great Britain and promises to work a revolution in the industrial world. It is a coöperative revolt between workingman and employer, against the tyranny of tradesunionism on the one hand and the professional labor leader and agitator on the other. It bears the title of the National Free Labor Association and embraces every branch of labor. By means of local registry bureaus, of benefit funds, of boards of arbitration in each district composed of an equal number of employers and employés, all the good effects of coöperation will be attained, the evil of interference by labor agitators will be done away with, and it will bring about a better harmony between masters and men than now exists.

A NEW CURE FOR ASTHMA.

Medical science at last reports a positive cure for Asthma in the Kola plant, found on the Congo river, West Africa. So great is their faith in its wonderful curative powers, the Kola Importing Co., 1164 Broadway, New York, are sending out large trial cases of the Kola Compound free to all sufferers from Asthma. Send your name and address on postal card, and they will send you a trial case by mail free.

A Novelty

to some people who are not at present familiar with its value, but our friends have been using it for 30 years, and regard the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk as a household necessity, and indispensable to good cooking.

IVORY SOAP

99 44/100 % PURE

DON'T ACCEPT IMITATIONS.

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CIN'TI.

SWEET SIXTEEN SWEET PEAS

Comprising all of the Really Distinct Varieties of these charming garden flowers, selected by careful comparison from our trials of nearly one hundred varieties—including

"Emily Henderson"

THE QUEEN OF WHITE SWEET PEAS.

A gloriously beautiful acquisition of American origin. Absolutely pure white, as clear as alabaster and as lustrous as satin. The flowers, of remarkable substance, are borne on long stiff stems, are extra large, with broad round standards that stand up boldly without reflex or curl.

The plants are robust, compact and branching, producing such a prodigal abundance of flowers that the plants appear as if covered with snow. From one plant, specially cultivated, we have cut in one season the seemingly incredible number of 1,035 sprays of bloom! In earliness it outrivals all competitors by nearly two weeks, and continues a veritable "cut-and-come-again" to the end of Autumn.

Pkt., 15c.

Butterfly. White, suffused lavender; edged with blue, Pkt. 10
Orange Prince. Orange and pink..... 10
Boreatton. Maroon, rich and velvety..... 10
Queen of the Isles. Striped, rose, crimson, wine red and white..... 10
Primrose. Primrose yellow..... 10
Mrs. Gladstone. Exquisite soft blush pink..... 10
Captain of the Blues. Bright purplish and ultramarine blue.... 10
Cardinal. Grand crimson scarlet..... 10
Dorothy Tennant. Heliotrope; beautiful.. 10
Countess of Radnor. Delicate lavender... 10
Indigo King. Maroon purple and indigo... 10
Senator. Striped brown, purple, cream and white..... 10
Princess Victoria. Pink and cherry rose 10
Blanche Ferry. Crimson pink and blush white..... 10
Her Majesty. Deep rosy crimson..... 10
Emily Henderson. (see cut)..... 15
Catalogue for 1894..... 20
$1.85

Any of the above free by mail on receipt of price, or entire collection for $1.00. (separate value $1.85.)

On receipt of $1.00 we will mail, free, ALL SIXTEEN VARIETIES of Sweet Peas (including the Emily Henderson), and in addition, without extra charge, with every order from this advertisement, providing you will name this paper and date of issue, Our Grand 1894 Catalogue of "EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN," (value 20 cts.) larger and more beautiful than ever, 160 pages, replete with all that is desirable, old and new, in Seeds, Plants, Bulbs, Tools, &c.

Regular value $1.85

PETER HENDERSON & Co. 35 & 37 CORTLANDT ST. NEW YORK

RARE PANSIES FREE

LAST YEAR We gave away over 250,000 packets of Pansy Seed and found it the best advertisement we ever had. This season we shall do the same. To every reader of this paper sending us 10c. the actual cost of postage and packing, we will mail our famous Gem Collection of Pansies, precisely the same as we are selling for $1.00. This collection consists of four regular size packets as follows:

King Rufus, rich red, new and scarce.
Alpine Belle, light lavender, shaded blue.
Bronze Queen, beautiful bronze, edged with mahogany. Very handsome.
Royal Mixed, mammoth flowers, often measuring 3 inches in diameter, all colors.

PÆONIA POPPY EXTRA—To everyone sending for the Gem Collection and giving us the names and addresses of three moreof their friends who purchase seeds and plants, we will add one packet of our new Pæonia Flowered Poppy, and our 25c. Certificate.

Our Handsome Illustrated Bargain Catalogue of Seeds, Plants and Fruits, containing colored plates and thousands of illustrations free with every collection.

MAY & CO. SEEDSMEN AND FLORISTS ST. PAUL, MINN.

May & Co. are perfectly reliable.—Ed.

The sower has no second chance. If you would at first succeed, be sure and start with

FERRY'S SEEDS.

Ferry's Seed Annual for 1894 contains the sum and substance of the latest farming knowledge. Every planter should have it. Sent free.

D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.

SEEDS GIVEN AWAY

FOR TRIAL. I have found that the best way to advertise good Seeds is to give away a sample for trial. If you will send me a 2-cent stamp to pay postage, I will mail free one package, your selection, of either Cabbage, Carrot, Celery, Cucumber, Lettuce, Musk or Water Melon, Onion, Parsnip, Pepper, Pumpkin, Radish, Spinach, Squash, Tomato, Turnip, or of Flower Seeds—Aster, Balsam, Celosia, Carnation, Mignonette, Pansy, Phlox, Poppy, Sweet Peas, Zinnia, or Verbena, and one of my 1894 Catalogues. Under any circumstances do not buy your Seeds until you see it, for I can save you money. Over 200,000 people say my seeds are the cheapest and best. I have earliest vegetables on record. Discount and large prizes to agents. 50c. worth of Seeds free with $1.00 order. Write to-day. F. B. MILLS, Box 50 Rose Hill, N. Y.

SEND TO GOOD & REESE, SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, for their beautiful catalogue of roses and shrubs

Publisher's Notes.

THE CHICAGO MAGAZINE OF

CURRENT TOPICS

The Popular Magazine.

RESPLENDENT WITH INTERESTING ARTICLES UPON SUBJECTS OF IMMEDIATE INTEREST TO EVERY THINKING READER BY WRITERS OF WORLD WIDE REPUTATION.

Contents of the February Number:

ILLUSTRATIONS:

Photogravures of William T. Stead and others.

CHICAGO'S WICKEDNESS — A Discussion of Remedies.

Mr. Stead's defense of the saloon and immorality, and his startling criticism of the leading ladies in movements of reform attacked..... Mrs. Helen M. Gougar.
In defense of his position.... Wm. T. Stead

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE ON HAWAII.

An able and sensational review of President Cleveland's message.... Charles Robinson.

IS PRENDERGAST CRAZY?

An interesting illustrated reply to A. S. Trude's article in December Current Topics, by the celebrated specialist, Dr. Daniel Brower.

PINERO'S PLAY—"The Second Mrs. Tanquary."

Does it teach immorality?.... Emil Friend

ANTHROPOLOGY AT THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

A neglected feature of the great Fair. Warren K. Moorehead.

PRECINCT ORGANIZATION.

Vitally essential to political success. W. C. Amos.

POLITICAL PROGRESS IN JAPAN IN 1894.

Its Interesting Features..... E. W. Clement.

STUDENT TRAMPS IN SWITZERLAND. Ira M. Price

A Continued Story.
A Short Story.
Poems.

These with other interesting, instructive articles make up

Eighty Solid Reading Pages.

$1.50 Per Year. - Single Copy 15cts.

Of the magazines for February, none will find more favor with the people generally than The Chicago Magazine of Current Topics. In existence but little more than a year, by its strong and fearless articles upon topics of vital and present interest, it has forced its way upon the thinking public. And not upon the thinking public only, for it aims to entertain as well as instruct. Its stories have been of an unusually brilliant character, and its poems have included many veritable gems. In the matter of illustration it is quite abreast with its competitors, and growing steadily. $1.50 a year, 15c. a copy. During the month of February we offer 1 year subscription to THE UNION SIGNAL and 1 year subscription to Current Topics for $1.50, cash invariably to accompany order.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

WHO WILL SWELL OUR PHILANTHROPY FUND?

Our philanthropy fund is nearly exhausted, yet we continue to receive appeals like the following:

"I see a home, a poor log house, where dwell four orphans who are struggling for a subsistence and an education. The three girls and their brother would read THE UNION SIGNAL with eagerness, and would thank you with tearful eyes if you would send a copy from the philanthropy fund. 'Twas drink that made them poor."

JUST ISSUED.

Department Leaflets.

No. 18 (For Miners).—ANSWER THIS QUESTION.
No. 43 (Narcotics).—DOES IT PAY TO USE TOBACCO?
No. 44.—EXPERT EVIDENCE CONCERNING TOBACCO.
No. 52 (Y. W. C. T. U.).—WHEREFORE A Y?
No. 72.—A MODERN DEVIL'S MISSION.
No. 73.—THE CUP OF BLESSING.
No. 91.—A WOMAN'S LOGIC.

Others in Preparation.

Price 15 cents per 100.
Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XX.—No. 6.] CHICAGO, February 8, 1894. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance

Mrs Ursula D Hetrick
1029 15th st
Rock Island Ill

OUR COMING SPECIAL.

Neal Dow Prohibition number, February 22!

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The discussion of the Hawaiian resolutions began in the House, Friday.

The Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha made their state entry into the capital of their little kingdom last week.

Steps have been taken in the New York legislature looking toward the investigation of the corrupt New York city police.

A number of manufacturing establishments in the United States have resumed operations during the week, but at reduced wages.

Sixteen million dollars are required to meet the municipal government expenses of Chicago in 1894 according to the estimate of the city comptroller.

An heir has been born to Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria. The conspirators against the life of the latter have been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment.

The Pennsylvania riots have been ended by the arrest of the striking miners. Pitiable scenes and a terrible state of destitution are reported from that region.

Judge Cox of the District supreme court has decided that the Knights of Labor cannot enjoin the issuing of United States government bonds. The case has been appealed to a higher court.

The Iowa house committee on the suppression of intemperance has reported favorably on the bill prohibiting the sale of cigarettes or tobacco to minors under sixteen years of age. A bill to suppress prize fighting in the state has been passed.

A dispatch from Honolulu, Friday, says that January 17, the first anniversary of the establishment of the Hawaiian provisional government, was celebrated with great enthusiasm. The United States minister, Willis, refused to recognize the national holiday, and declined an invitation to participate.

Another has been added to the grist of Iowa's proposed liquor laws, in the form of a bill giving city councils the power to inflict a penalty on liquor selling in towns of two thousand or more inhabitants. This act is said not to nullify the present prohibitory law, but to strengthen it and forward its enforcement.

The Wilson bill as amended, passed in the United States House of Representatives, February 1, by a vote of 204 to 140. A great crush of people assembled in the galleries during the closing hours of the debate when memorable speeches were made by Thomas B. Reed, for protection, and Speaker Crisp and Mr. Wilson for free trade.

The American fleet in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro was fired upon by the warships of the Brazilian insurgents last week, while protecting American commercial interests at that port. The action was one of piracy in international courtesy, and the shots were returned. The Brazilian civil war, which has continued for so many months, may be brought to a much desired end by the action of other nations in protecting their commercial interests.

JUST as we go to press comes word of the serious illness of New York's honored president, Mrs. Mary T. Burt. For days her life was despaired of, but we rejoice to announce that hope for entire recovery is now entertained.

ONE of the pleasant features of a recent Willard Hall noon meeting was the singing of the Moody quartette. Although they usually receive ten dollars for their services, they freely gave them to us. We can cordially recommend this quartette to all desiring devotional music of a high order.

THE headquarters of the Illinois W. C. T. U. were removed February 1 to Bloomington, as per vote of last state convention. Mrs. L. S. Rounds, the state president, will remain in Chicago and her address will be Room 1101, the Temple, the same as heretofore.

THE Oak and Ivy Leaf, our young woman's paper, will complete its seventh volume very soon. Beginning with the eighth year (July, 1894), this dainty sheet, which is World's and National organ of our Young Woman's Branch, will enlarge its borders, while continuing its useful career as a young people's Christian temperance paper. The hitherto low subscription price has not met the expenses of the publication, which has, in fact, been a missionary effort on the part of the W. T. P. A. For particulars, see publisher's notice on page 14. May success attend this and every forward movement of our active and alert young auxiliaries, the Y's.

"UNWEPT, unhonored and unsung" will never be applied to the noble life which departed from Philadelphia last Saturday, February 3. George W. Childs was the friend of humanity, and as such his mourners will include thousands, yes, millions. Entering business as a mere boy, and a poor one, too, his industry and far-sightedness soon amassed a large fortune, which he has discriminately distributed among worthy people and benevolent objects. His life was full of generous deeds, and so unselfish was he of himself that his sixty-five years may well be compared to a span of fourscore and ten in point of usefulness. Nothing ignoble rests with the memory of George W. Childs.

THROUGH the efforts of the legislative committee (or more properly the committee on legislation) of the Anti-Saloon League, the Babcock amendment to the District liquor bill which the liquor men were so anxious to have rushed through Congress early in the fall, is still delayed in the committee, and its promoters hope, if they cannot muster strength enough in Congress to defeat it, to keep it from reaching a vote, which will amount to the same thing. This bill provides that liquor stores and saloons which were within four hundred feet of schools or churches at the time of the passage of the present law (March, 1893) may still remain there, by complying with the provisions of the law. The law as it now stands cuts out all within four hundred feet, unless they were established prior to the church or school; the amendment would allow all to remain which were established March, 1893. The League has given the liquor men a good deal of annoyance, for which let us thank God and take courage.

WE rejoice with the Christian Endeavorers over the celebration of their thirteenth anniversary, February 2. While a rather odd number to celebrate, the remarkable growth of the society during the past twelve months warranted a special observance of this birthday. The official statement of the president, Dr. Francis E. Clark, shows that more new societies have been formed than in any other single year, and that they number now in all the world about 30,000, with a total membership of 1,700,000. The extension of the societies has been most marked in England, Australia, China, Japan and other Oriental lands which Dr. Clark visited last year. One of the prominent lines of work has been for temperance, particularly in Illinois, where the campaign has been most rigorously pushed through the local auxiliaries. The current issue of the Golden Rule, the excellent organ of the Christian Endeavor societies, is devoted almost exclusively to the interdenominational features of the organizations, and contains a remarkable and invaluable symposium from scores of eminent clergymen and educators, as to the value of the society in promoting Christian unity. We recommend these terse and spirited opinions to every doubter of the growth of Christian fellowship.

THE colleges seem to be uppermost these days in temperance endeavor. Last week we noticed the active work of the University of Minnesota in circulating the Great Petition, and now word comes from Nebraska that all of the students of Bellevue college signed the temperance pledge on College Day, January 25. It seems to have come about through the efforts of Mrs. Mary L. Lawrence, of Missouri. This enforces the truth that personal efforts are always effective. The college is so delighted with its stand on this important question that it wishes to issue a challenge to any other co-educational institution to furnish such a record—or one hundred per cent total abstainers.

A LATE item of much interest is a temperance society in St. Petersburg, Russia, which includes a brother of the reigning Czar, a high dignitary of the Greek church, and the ministers of all the departments of government. The leading Russian newspaper, in commenting upon this new alliance of government with temperance, says: "Only the coöperation of the government departments with the efforts of the society can deliver the people from the thralldom of drunkenness. To abolish such is the province and the power of the government." The Russian temperance society has experimented in tea-houses, etc., as remedial agents; but while giving them hearty approval as needful social institutions, declares them ineffectual for reducing drunkenness, and has enlisted the government for the abolition of the kabac. The interesting and astonishing fact is that so early in their history the Russian temperance people should have come to a knowledge of the necessity for political prohibition and should have linked the heads of government with their plans. One cannot help wondering if a nation is to be born in a day to prohibition, and if this bewildered old world may not be nearer than we dream to a day when right, health, and other beatitudes, as somebody suggests, shall be as contagious as wrong and disease now are.

"Now that the Fair is over," are words that, doubtless, times without number, have, in the past few months, announced the return of the person or community in question to the paths of a seldom-interrupted method of procedure, for the Fair of 1893 may be said to have been the widest "disturber of the peace," i. e., the peace of routine work and consecutive plans, that the world in general has ever known. From pole to pole its influence has gone, and "now that the Fair is over" is but a surface expression with a surface interpretation. It is not over, and though the legend "1893" shall never again appear in Time's annals, no other year can boast such a recording in such an "indelible ink" as coming decades will one after another prove the story of the last year to have had. The making of history is by deeds which have their day; history itself, once made, endures. The best of all the unprecedented pageant was that daily exhibit in Memorial Art Palace of the artificer man, his ideas, his creeds, his accomplishments, his ideals, ambitions, purposes; the crowning glory of the Congresses shall be in their crystallization into history—a history whose pages shall answer to the searching eyes of hungry youth, critical maturity and sagacious old age for decades, if not centuries to come. The official report of Secretary Young says that it will require fifty volumes of six hundred pages each to contain the published proceedings of the congresses, papers and addresses. What a library! There is no organization large enough, powerful enough, hoary enough in wisdom and experience, to father the preservation and distribution of this invaluable work, save one, and that is the government which has so proudly carried off the palm of having had successfully carried on within its borders the greatest celebration the world has ever seen. It is safe to prophesy that "Uncle Sam" will measure up to what is expected of his large-eyed sense of the "fitness of things," and end well, by this public benefaction, an event that has had so shining a career.

TO MY MINT-GERANIUM.

BY N. W. HODGE.

Stern winter chills the darkened sky
And petrifies with Gorgon eye
The solid ground; the stream, the sea
Has felt his potent alchemy;
Touched by his breath, each leaf and flower
Has drooped; each bird of summer hour
Has fled to summer skies, to cheer
The day-spring of the southern sphere.

Protected from his blighting snows
By the bland warmth my fire bestows,
Thou joyest still in life and bloom,
Thou cheerest my solitary room.
And oft from heartless books I turn,
And from thy silent presence learn
Lessons that sink upon the soul,
And win it to my God's control.

I press thy leaf, and for the wrong
Thou yieldest a perfume sweet and strong.
Thus should the spirit, when 'tis wrung
By sadness or a wanton tongue,
Return but love, forgiveness still,
And breathe a blessing for the ill.
I watch thy growth and see thee turn
Where'er the fires of heaven burn.

Aye, thou dost seek and drink the ray
Of the pure sun and golden day;—
Yes, let the soul as cheerful too,
The radiant track of truth pursue;
Its influence own, and bask the while
In God's all-deep, unvarying smile;
And should I seek a friend to win,
Close to my heart a brother-twin,

Thou showest all the tender care,
The deep affection he must share;
No coldness nor neglect allow,
To chill his heart or cloud his brow.
And should I constant, faithful be,
To cherish him as I have thee.
Thou readest him a lesson too—
To bloom as fresh and be as true.

Ripon, Wis.

A SOCIAL STUDY.

BY MARIE J. HESSE.

"Oh, come, Prudence," said Mrs. Fordham, impatiently tapping the floor with her well shod foot, "one mustn't draw the line too rigidly. Young men will be young men; they must see the world, and to do it I suppose they must sow their wild oats."

"Ah! Maria, I am thinking of the harvest," and Prudence Rockwell's strong, honest face clouded.

They were sitting in Mrs. Rockwell's little parlor, with its long windows letting in a flood of light, its dainty but substantial belongings, its books and pictures. There was such an air of refinement and rest about it that even the fashionable Mrs. Fitz-Fordham loved to drop in for a little chat with her plain, old-time friend and school-mate. It was true Maria Fordham rather pitied her friend. It must be so stupid to live in such a small house and have only one maid and no carriage. She could not resist drawing comparison between Prudence's husband and her own. Plain James Rockwell who came in from his work often covered with soot and dust, and Dudley Fitz-Fordham, resplendent in a suit of the latest cut, adorned with neat-fitting gloves and a judicious use of diamonds.

Of course James Rockwell could make every part of a great engine, and put it together, and run it, too, but that was such dirty work, while Dudley Fitz-Fordham drove to the bank, remained a few hours and devoted the rest of time to the demands of a fashionable life. In troublous times hundreds turned to plain James Rockwell for counsel, and in the worth of his judgment forgot the soot and grime, but his bow was stiff, and he couldn't tip his hat at just the correct angle, nor could he hand a lady her handkerchief with any grace.

Maria reasoned, "It was so comfortable to have a husband with a style. One never needs be ashamed."

Then those great strapping sons of Prudence. Of course they were good to their mother, and treated her as though she were a queen, but they were so unfashionable. They didn't play cards or billiards, they didn't dance or go out with "the boys." Maria wondered how Prudence could be so satisfied!

When Mrs. Rockwell was sandwiched between her loyal sons and her great-hearted husband she looked nothing short of glorified, and if her bonnet was plain and her clothes were somewhat unfashionable, she lacked nothing in their eyes, for to them no other woman could be so good and beautiful!

Maria Fordham looked on her friend compassionately as she smiled at the troubled face: "Yes, yes, you moralists take such a pessimistic view of life," she continued. "I'll admit Russell Norton is a little gay, but that doesn't signify anything. He will settle down comfortably enough when he and Ethel are married."

"Maria, do you call it only a little gaiety to have deserted that poor, young creature, who escaped a worse fate through death? Oh, Maria, if you could have seen her—how she trusted him, how she believed till her last breath that Russell Norton was true to her, and died believing it because we couldn't bear to undeceive her!"

"Oh, pray don't preach, Prudence," blurted Mrs. Fordham. "What can I do about it? You wouldn't have me tell that dreadful tale to Ethel? The young woman was foolish enough to be ensnared, and besides she may have been an impostor!"

"No, Maria, she was not an impostor, she was only a simple, ignorant girl. Why be so hard on her and let the real criminal go unblamed? I only wish for Ethel's sake Russell Norton were free from sin. Oh, why does the world condemn the woman and open its arms to the man?"

"You are too severe, Prudence. Why, many a man who was wild in his youth has become a model in after years."

"But, Maria, think of the risk!"

"No greater than hundreds have run before me," responded Mrs. Fordham.

Mrs. Rockwell laid her hand over the well-gloved one in her friend's lap, as she said earnestly: "Maria, think of your lovely daughter, pure as a snowdrop, given into the keeping of a man who knows no honor or chastity. Think of her happiness!"

"Certainly, Prudence," haughtily said Mrs. Fordham, "I'm her mother, why shouldn't I think of it? It would break her heart—"

"Wait," interrupted Mrs. Rockwell. "You yourself told me Ethel did not love Russell Norton as you wish she did. How could it break her heart to know the truth? Tell her, Maria; do not let her be deceived—"

"You talk wildly, Prudence Rockwell!" flashed Mrs. Fordham. "The engagement is already announced. It's all over town. She can't refuse to marry him. Why, we would be the town talk, and Dudley could never bear to create such a scandal!"

"Do you mean, Maria, you would rather Ethel would marry that man with all his sins than to stand the criticism of society!"

Mrs. Fordham winced.

"Oh, Maria, do stand for what is true. It alone will bring you happiness."

Mrs. Fordham's face flushed angrily: "It's out of the question, wholly so; beside, you won't find another woman in the city to agree with you. Only this morning I received congratulations on all sides. Every one thinks it's a fine chance for my daughter. It would be the height of folly to allow Ethel to be governed by such stuff. Her husband will be the wealthiest man in town. His summer home at Newport cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. Think what it will be for her to be mistress of such an establishment!"

"But, Maria," persisted Prudence, "I saw him helped into a carriage so drunk he couldn't stand, only last week."

"Why, he has such a kind heart and is so generous," replied Mrs. Fordham. "Only last week our guild called on him for aid for unprotected females, and without a word he subscribed an even hundred dollars! And, then, you ought to see how he indulges Ethel."

Prudence looked so troubled that Mrs. Fordham relented a little as she said: "Come, come, Prudence, you take too serious views of life; you always did when we were girls. You will see when they are married how this will blow over, and even you will say you were mistaken. You see," this fashionable woman complacently continued, as she drew her rich wraps about her and rose to go, "you are morbid. We cannot make men as we would like them; we must take them as they are."

Prudence rose also, and as she held her hand, said very earnestly:

"Maria, I mean, with God's help, to make such men of my boys as I wish them to be. If I fail, God forgive me!" She followed Mrs. Fordham to the door. "Promise me, Maria, you will tell this story to Ethel, and let her act on her own judgment?"

"Oh, certainly, Prudence. I'm no ogre, but Ethel has too much sense to allow such tales to stand in the way of her making the greatest match of the season." Mrs. Fitz-Fordham swept haughtily to her carriage and slammed the door. "Home, James," were her orders. She sank back into the cushions to avoid showing a face which spoke of a stronger agitation than she cared to admit. "I'll never go to Prudence Rockwell's house again; she is so persistently puritanic, and becomes more so each year."

Before she reached home the proud woman had resolved her daughter should know only what she chose to tell her. She told the story off glibly enough, and laughed lightly as she said: "You can hold it over his head when you want anything. It's a good joke on Russell!" Seeing the troubled look come into her daughter's beautiful face, she changed the subject quickly. But Ethel sat so silent during the recital of the story that her mother knew it had made more of an impression than she expected.

Mrs. Fordham quickly determined on a whirl of theatre parties, balls, receptions, teas and other fashionable pastimes. "She'll have no time to think about it and brood over it foolishly. When she is married she will see what sacrifices I've made for her, and she will rise to the occasion like her mother's own daughter. Children never know how much their mothers do for them, but I won't mind if my darling only marries well."

Sure enough, Ethel was kept so busy in social duties that she had no time to think. Only at night when she laid her tired body down would the great cloud settle over her.

The wedding came off with great eclat. The solemn words, "love, honor and cherish" died on Ethel's pale lips. Then came a burst of music, congratulations and a trip to Europe. Ethel forgot all in the new power, almost regal, that was vested in her as mistress of the Norton mansion and millions.

. . . . . .

A year had gone. The Nortons then returned and were established in their city home. Society had been greatly elated that such hospitable doors were thrown open, but soon society admitted, rather gingerly, to be sure, that Mrs. Fitz-Fordham Norton was ailing and later that she was ill.

One bright morning the crape fluttered from the door and the papers spoke of the untimely death of the young and beautiful wife of Russell Norton.

Prudence Rockwell hastened to her old friend in her distress. At the gate she met grumpy old Dr. Whitpil, who was muttering to himself and seemed relieved to speak his mind out to some one.

"She is dead, murdered, Prudence Rockwell! I tell you that beautiful, young creature and her baby were murdered! I know what I'm talking about. I told her mother what that man was—for I have been friend as well as a physician to that family; but no; she wouldn't listen to me. I am only an old fogy; my years of experience counted for nothing. She planted her lily in a dung heap and of course it died! Now they will say the 'Lord saw fit to remove her'! The Lord forgive me and them! but He didn't have anything to do with it! He wanted that lovely girl to live! I tell you, Prudence Rockwell, I have no patience with such things! They are blasphemous! Pride and ambition are the crying sins of our nation!"

Mrs. Rockwell found her friend in a frenzy of grief, sobbing, wringing her hands and crying, "Oh, my beautiful darling, why did the Lord take her away! Why was He so cruel to me!"

"Hush, dear," whispered Prudence. Only one who is brave and true can be a strong tower at such a time.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Fitz-Fordham Norton was attended with much pomp and ceremony. Again the great church was thrown open to the fashionable throng. The grand organ breathed again deep, solemn tones. The air was again heavy with the scent of flowers, while sweet Ethel Fordham was placed for the last time before the altar.

In the hush that followed the minister rose and said: "The Lord hath given and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

The audience solemnly responded, "Amen."

Chicago, Ill.

TEMPERANCE IN RUSSIA.

TRANSLATED BY WM. ROBERT EBELL.

It may not be without interest to the workers in the cause of temperance that this movement is gaining a strong foothold in Russia. From the Novoe Vremija, the leading Russian newspaper, the following is gleaned:

At the recent annual meeting of the Society of Temperance, among the many prominent persons present were Adjutant-General K. N. Possijet, the St. Petersburg governor, Count S. A. Toll and many other high officials. The meeting was opened by an address from the president of the society, Senator A. B. Bjelostolzky. He referred to the important event in the life of the society when their imperial highnesses, the emperor and empress, visited the tea house conducted by the society. The committee in charge on that occasion set aside several articles which attracted the attention of the imperial patrons.

The sympathy extended to the object of the society is growing to large dimensions, as evidenced by the recent additions to the list of its members, among whom appear such names as the Grand Duke Michael Nicolajeritch, the brother of the Czar; the St. Petersburg Metropolitan (ecclesiastical head of the church) Palladi, who donated to the society two thousand books of a religious-moral tendency. The rector of the St. Petersburg Theological Academy, Archimandrite Boris, has organized a circle of students to hold debating meetings in the tea houses, conducted by the society. In addition to this, the following persons in high authority joined the ranks as members of the society: The Ministers of Interior, Public Education, Finance, Ways and Means of Communication, the General Manager of the Marine Ministry, Chief Attorney of the Holy Synod, Imperial Controller and other persons in high official life. Thus the society to promote temperance can count on the moral assistance of people with influence.

At first the government kept up frequent warfare with drunkenness by adopting measures forbidding the sale of liquors but it proved ineffectual. The society also could not reduce the vice by measures of distraction; only co-operation of governmental departments with the efforts of the society can deliver the people from the thralldom of drunkenness. Thus it was in Denmark, Norway and Sweden. All kinds of counteracting measures, such as tea houses, hospitals, to cure from alcoholism, debating clubs, have but little effect as long as there are in existence various methods to entice people to drink. To abolish such is in the province and power of the government.

Taking advantage of the coöperation of the government the society can petition the government to close up the drinking places known under the name kabac (low dram-shop), to be closed up as soon as pointed out in the vicinity of factories; also the closing of places where immorality is practiced in conjunction with the sale of intoxicants.

Toward the end of his address Senator Bjelostolzky requested those present to coöperate with the society in forming separate circles, each one formulating plans and means looking toward the establishment of tea houses, public reading rooms, debating clubs. This address was loudly applauded. The members of the society, with a special committee, will look over the question of teaching in public schools the principles of health and the evil effects of the use of alcoholic beverages.

A paper by E. P. Koralevsky was read, treating about the education of the young generation in the spirit of temperance and abstinence; also D. H. Borodine read "The Part Taken by the School in the Battle with Drunkenness."

The condition of the finances of the society is as follows: Donations by the Rev. Father Ivan Sergief, of Cromstadt, 1,000 rubles; Botkin, 200 rubles; Father Slepianoff, 100 rubles; the latter donation, conditional—to establish a library in the rooms of the society for promotion of temperance.

Some sixty-four provincial societies were reported, some of which have received aid.

By the denunciation of a member of the society a tea house selling liquor was closed with the assistance of the Chief of Police, V. V. von Wahl.

Chicago, Ill.

WHY WE WENT TO ARRETON.

BY SARAH K. BOLTON.

Thousands visit various places in the Isle of Wight each year for pleasure or health. At Freshwater we look upon the home of Tennyson; at Osborne House, with its five thousand acres, we see one of the favorite homes of Queen Victoria, and the little church where she worships. In the churchyard are several graves of her servants, to which she has brought wreaths with her own hands and laid them there. Here lies a groom to the Queen. Here are the graves of two who died near each other in time: Thomas Warner, December 27, 1881, and his wife, September 19, 1881, who for twenty-seven years lived at a Swiss cottage near by and taught the royal children how to work.

Here are the pretty, one-story, red brick cottages, built for the old servants. Mrs. Guttridge lives in a quaint, low, thatched roof cottage, with a little window. Here Victoria in her walks used to come for a cup of tea. No wonder the lowly idolize their Queen.

At Ventnor people enjoy the balmy air, if consumptive, and look out upon the beautiful ocean. But why do thousands go to the quiet little parish of Arreton, where everything seems asleep?

They go to look upon the simple grave of a servant, the story of whose Christian life by Rev. Leigh Richmond, has been translated, it is believed "into most of the Continental languages."

How many thousands, yes, tens of thousands have read and cried over "The Dairyman's Daughter." We drove up to the old Arreton church, and gave some children a penny to call the sexton.

"Do you know where 'The Dairyman's Daughter' is buried?" we asked.

"Yes," six repeated in succession, "she lie by her sister," and hastened to show us. A plain slab bears this inscription:

To
the Memory of Elizabeth Wollbridge,
The Dairyman's Daughter,
Who died May 30, 1801,
Aged 31 years.
She being dead yet speaketh.

Beside it is a smaller stone, to the memory of a younger sister, Hannah.

Not a flower adorns the grave, but it has immortalized Leigh Richmond and Arreton, and made many a traveler a better Christian from resolutions made beside that unadorned mound.

The sexton, a quaint old man, Henry Blake, by name, showed us about the church with its high back pews, one thousand years old. His family have held the sextonship for four hundred years. Here are the graves of men buried nearly five hundred years ago. The old book of martyrs, illustrated, date 1684, is preserved in a board box. Here is the grave of William Serle, with this epitaph:

"For that unto the people poore
Of Arreton he gave
An hundred powndes in redie coyne
He willed that they should have.
Thus did this man a batcheler
Of yeares full fiftey-nyne,
And doeing goode to many a one
Soe did he spend his tyme,
Untill the day he did decease
The first of February
And the yeare of one thousand
Five hundred nyntie-five."

After seeing the old chancel in which the bats delight to live, and the place where holy water was once kept, before the Protestants came into possession of the church, we went again to stand beside the grave of "The Dairyman's Daughter," and then drove a mile to the long, one-story, thatched roof cottage where this saintly girl lived and died. Ivy and roses were clambering over it. The room in which she died is a small, low one, with a little window in the roof.

Elizabeth Wollbridge has been dead over ninety years, yet her home and her grave are precious to every Christian. Rev. Leigh Richmond, a young minister of fine family and many talents, ordained in 1798, was sent to the Isle of Wight to preach. He was only twenty-six, musical, scholarly, and devoted especially to work among the poor. Two years later he received a letter from a young woman, brought by her aged father, a dairyman, asking that he take charge of the funeral of her sister, Hannah, who had died while at service, and she, Elizabeth, was filling her place in the wealthy home.

From the father he learned that Elizabeth had been fond of dress and pleasure, but becoming converted, her whole life had been changed. She gave her wages to her poor father and mother, and soon was the means of the conversion of both parents and of the sister Hannah.

Mr. Richmond conducted the service, and saw from the pale face of Elizabeth that she, too, would not be long spared to the aged couple. She was refined in her tastes and gentle, and she became, through her letters, the spiritual helper and teacher of the young pastor. These letters, which he printed after her death, will always stand as rich examples of the closest walk with God, and the joy of a complete trust.

She thanks him "for leaving those that are of high rank and birth in the world, to converse with me, who am but a servant here below." When she grows weaker she writes him: "I walk out a little on these fine days, but seem to myself to walk very near the borders of eternity. Glory be to God, it is a very pleasing prospect before me! My desire is to live every moment to God, that I may, through His grace, be kept in that heavenly, happy frame of mind that I shall wish for at the hour of death. We cannot live or die happy without this; and to keep it we must be continually watching and praying."

Again she writes: "Pray, sir, do all you can for the glory of God. The time will soon pass by, and then we shall enter that glorious rest that He hath prepared for them that love Him. I pray God to fill you with that zeal and love which He only can inspire, that you may daily win souls to Christ."

The aged father walks seven miles to hear Mr. Richmond preach, and to bring a letter from his idolized daughter, Elizabeth, with his heart breaking that he must give her up.

"What nearness of access might we have," she writes, "if we lived more near to God! What sweet communion might we have with a God of love! . . . Unworthy as I am, I have found it by experience, that the more I see of the greatness and goodness of God, and the nearer union I hope I have had with Him through the spirit of His love, the more humble and self-abased I have been."

Now and then Mr. Richmond visited the plain cottage, talked with the invalid, and strove to comfort the heart-broken father and mother.

"Oh, my Betsy!" said the father, "what shall I do without her? I thought I should have gone first to the grave; but—"

"But the Lord sees good that before you die yourself, you should behold your child safe home to glory. Is there no mercy in this?" said Mr. Richmond.

"Oh, dear, sir," was the reply, "I am very old and very weak; and she is a dear child, the staff and prop of a poor old creature, as I am. . . I think, sir, we shan't have her here long."

"Leave that to the Lord," said Elizabeth. "All our times are in His hand, and happy it is that they are. I am willing to go; are you not willing, my father, to part with me into His hands, who gave me to you at first?"

"Ask me any question in the world but that," said the disconsolate father.

"I know," said she, "you wish me to be happy."

"I do, I do," answered he; "let the Lord do with you and us as best pleases Him."

One day a soldier came to Mr. Richmond's house to say that Elizabeth was dying. "She is going home, sir, very fast indeed," said the man.

"Have you known her long?" asked the minister.

"About a month, sir. I love to visit the sick, and hearing of her case from a person who lives close by our camp, I went to see her. I bless God that ever I did go. Her conversation has been very profitable to me. . . She is a bright diamond, sir, and will soon shine brighter than any diamond upon earth."

They started together for the dairyman's cottage. When they reached it "No living object appeared," says Mr. Richmond, "except the dairyman's dog, keeping a kind of mute watch at the door; for he did not, as formerly, bark at my approach. . . . He came forward to the little wicket gate, then looked back at the house door, as if conscious there was sorrow within. It was as if he wanted to say: 'Tread softly over the threshold, as you enter the house of mourning, for my master's heart is full of grief."

Soon after Mr. Richmond entered the room; the dying girl did not seem to notice his coming; he read from I. Corinthians, 15: 55-57, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." At the sound of these words, Elizabeth's eyes opened, and beamed with a more than earthly light, as she said: "Victory! victory! through our Lord Jesus Christ."

She seemed to revive, and talked faintly for some time with the young minister. She thanked him for all his kindness, and asked that he would bury her as he had her sister. "I have another favor to ask," she said; "when I am gone, remember my father and mother. They are old, but I hope the good work is begun in their souls; my prayers are heard. Pray come and see them. I cannot speak much, but I want to speak for their sakes."

Mr. Richmond promised, and then asked: "What are your views of the dark valley of death, now that you are passing through it?"

"It is not dark. My Lord is there and He is my light and my salvation."

After a time of pain she said: "The Lord deals very gently with me. Lord, I am thine; save me, Blessed Jesus, precious Saviour! His blood cleanseth from all sin. Who shall separate? His name is Wonderful. Lord, receive my spirit. Dear sir—dear father, mother, friends, I am going—but all is well, well, well—"

She did not speak again. As the minister left the house he pressed her hand as he said: "Christ is the resurrection and the life." She returned the pressure but could neither open her eyes nor speak. Death came soon.

Mr. Richmond conducted the funeral services as he had promised. The little company of friends in humble life followed the coffin on foot from the home to the church a mile away, the aged and bent father and mother weeping for their precious dead, borne just in front of them. As the procession passed along the country road and up the hill to the old church, while the bell was tolling, they all sang a funeral hymn. At the grave a hymn which Elizabeth had selected was sung, and then the stricken household went back to the desolate little cottage. The mother died soon after and the father in 1816. No stones mark their graves.

Elizabeth Wollbridge filled a humble place in the world, but she did her duties well as a servant. Better than all else she was a devoted servant of her God, and her lovely life and triumphant death have been the means of the conversion of very many persons. Truly, "God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world and things which are despised hath God chosen, and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are, that no flesh should glory in His presence! "In 1827, universally beloved and honored, Mr. Richmond died twenty-six years after Elizabeth. He always thanked God for the letters and friendship of this 'humble disciple and faithful monitor."

Cleveland, Ohio.

HILLSBORO CRUSADE SKETCHES.

XXI.

BY ELIZA J. THOMPSON.

From the time of the Dow law victory, March 14, 1887, little occurred of special interest in the Crusade work of Hillsboro. Everything tended to a well defined battle between good laws and bad execution, on the part of the community of voters and their officers,—a battle in which women were powerless. But gospel temperance meetings were continued, the children were not forgotten. Temperance literature was distributed, the prisoners were visited, and the weekly W. C. T. U. prayer-meetings were never omitted.

At one of these services, about the 12th of September, 1887, it was intimated that a carriage was at the door awaiting me for a service that required my attention quite out of town; the meeting would continue in my absence—so a "secret service" was then and there undertaken in which "the blessed tie that binds" the hearts of "these crusaders," was beautifully developed. Let our first secretary, Mrs. Mary B. Fenner, tell the story as appointed by the Hillsboro W. C. T. U. for THE UNION SIGNAL, September 28, 1887, and Rev. D. W. Clark, pastor of the M. E. church, for the Western Christian Advocate.

Some friendly little bird having whispered that the golden wedding was at hand, the idea suggested itself to the members of the W. C. T. U., that here was a fitting and delightful opportunity of testifying their affectionate appreciation of Mrs. Thompson's unflinching devotion to the cause, typified in all its ramifications by the white ribbon, as also their personal esteem and respect; the outgrowth of thirteen years' intercourse and companionship in the work of putting down intemperance, during all of which time she has been the honored president of the local union.

Ideas soon take form when hands and hearts work together, and in a few days little white-winged messengers were flying over the length and breadth of the land, bidding guests to the golden wedding.

The list of invitations included the Crusaders, signers of the Guarantee Fund, members of the Hillsboro bar, mayor and city officials, officers of the churches, the Y. W. C. T. U., state presidents and National officers of the W. C. T. U., in all about four hundred and fifty.

The reception was given in the Methodist Episcopal church, and on the appointed evening, September 21, a large and elegant assemblage gathered in the audience room. Brave men and fair women were there, but the admiration and interest of all the goodly company were centered on the little bride and her tall, and still handsome husband.

Seated on the platform with Judge and Mrs. Thompson, were Rev. D. W. Clark, pastor of the church; Rev. Dr. Kitchum, late pastor of the same; Rev. W. J. McSurely, of the Presbyterian church; Mrs. Monroe, president of the state union; Mrs. Clevenger, corresponding secretary of the same; Mrs. Hart, vice-president of the local union, and several of the older members of the union.

Rev. W. J. McSurely, who presided at the first Crusade meeting, occupied the chair on this occasion. His cordial congratulations were responded to by Judge Thompson in a most characteristic speech, genial, poetical and touching.

Mrs. Hart's address on behalf of the local union was short, but gem-like in its perfect finish, pure color, and chaste setting.

Mrs. Henrietta L. Monroe, of Xenia, president of the state union, followed in an address of rare elegance, strength, and beauty. She gave a brief outline of the origin of the Crusade, the organization of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and its present widespread influence and working power. No one who heard her could fail to be impressed with the importance and influence of the white ribbon organization, and of the immensity of the work it is doing.

Mrs. Monroe closed with a touching and eloquent tribute to Mrs. Thompson, and then presented to her, on behalf of the National W. C. T. U., a testimonial, engrossed in gold on vellum, and framed in gold and antique oak. The reader will at once recognize Miss Willard's facile pen.

"1837—1887. Headquarters W. C. T. U., Chicago, Ill., to Mrs. Eliza Trimble Thompson, of Hillsboro, Ohio, leader of the first praying band in the Woman's Temperance Crusade, on the occasion of her golden wedding, September 21, 1887."

"To have been the first woman who ever attended a National Temperance Convention, to have led the pioneer band in that heroic movement of which the N. W. C. T. U. is the organic form; to have made Hillsboro known to the world as the cradle of the Crusade; to have impressed your name upon the history of your country—all this is much; but to have worn so loyally the crown of daughter, sister, wife and mother; to have won friends, wherever the sacred cause of temperance is loved, and to have exhibited in public life and home's sweet ministries a faith

"That when in darkness knows no fear,
In danger feels no doubt, is more. You stand upon the heights of answered prayer, and we, your comrades, whom your unwavering cheerfulness has many times animated, wave to you from the plain and thickest of the fight our

"'God bless you and yours on this auspicious day.'

"IN BEHALF OF THE W. C. T. U.," ETC.

After the reading of this testimonial, Mrs. Monroe unveiled Ohio's offering; at the sight of which a murmur of delighted surprise ran through the house. It was a tall urn, Etruscan in shape, of gold bronze, exquisitely chased and hammered. Suspended by a gold chain from the handle is a twenty dollar gold piece, bearing on the obverse side the inscription, "1837—1887, Mrs. Eliza J. Thompson, leader of the Crusade, from the Ohio W. C. T. U." On the reverse, an engraved representation of the Crusade Church with the date "December 23, 1873."

Mrs. Thompson's response to these tributes of loving congratulation was made in her usual quiet, conversational manner, and showed her appreciation of the ovation given her, but she confessed herself dazed and bewildered with surprise, and said: "The bride should not be expected to do too much at the wedding."

The pastor of the church, Rev. D. W. Clark, read the congratulatory, telegrams, they had come from nearly every state and territory in the Union, and all bore most kindly greetings.

At the close of these formal exercises the invited guests repaired to the lecture room, where they were seated and served with refreshments, in number about one hundred. At the close of the banquet, Rev. D. W. Clark, on behalf of Mrs. Marie Thompson Rives, presented to the Hillsboro bar a full length, life-size portrait of her father. It was unveiled by Mrs. Sarah Thompson Collins, the granddaughter of Judge Thompson, and accepted on behalf of the bar by Hon. Alphonso Hart, in a pleasant, cordial and appropriate speech.

Then followed the reading of a beautiful poem by J. L. Boardman, Esq., an address and reading of letters by Mrs. Antoinette H. Clevenger, the reading of letters from former pastors and presiding elders, and more telegrams. Among the gifts were noticeable several little satin purses of blue and white, on which, in letters of gold were the words: "Our testimonial, Maryland W. C. T. U.;" "Our testimonial, New Hampshire, W. C. T. U.;" "Our testimonial, New Jersey, W. C. T. U.;" "Our testimonial, Pastors and Elders, Hillsboro, M. E. Church;" "Our testimonial, W. C. T. U." These contained (in various amounts—gold pieces,) the cash value of checks sent by the several state unions whose names they bear, and for whom the time was too short to allow of sending a testimonial in any other form.

At the close of the evening many old friends, one of whom, Judge William Meek, had been a guest at the first wedding, fifty years before, pressed forward to express personally to Judge and Mrs. Thompson their congratulations, and wishes for both a long, happy and useful future.

Rev. Davis W. Clark, A, M.. in the Western Christian Advocate, among many charming incidents of the occasion rendered the following testimony, which however gratifying, has only the effect to make one strive to be worthy of it:

It certainly admits of question whether there has ever occurred in this country a social event which has awakened wider interest or stirred more tender and thrilling memories than the golden wedding of Judge J. H. and Mrs. Thompson, celebrated in Hillsboro, O., on the 21st inst. For over fifty years Judge Thompson has occupied a brilliant position at the bar of Southern Ohio, commanding respect for his legal lore and his uniform urbanity of manner, and of late years rendering distinguished services to the cause of temperance in its local option phase. Mrs. Thompson's petit figure will be cut in high relief upon the memorials of our times as the providential originator of the Woman's Crusade, and the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union looked up to her on her golden wedding day, and addressed her lovingly as "the little mother of us all."

After the banquet, some impromptu exercises occurred, including the reading of an exquisite poem by J. L. Boardman, Esq., the Nestor of the press in Highland county; an apt address by Mrs. Antoinette H. Clevinger, of Wilmington, corresponding secretary of Ohio state union; the presentation by Mrs. Dr. Rives of a portrait of her father, Judge Thompson, to the bar of Highland county, and its acceptance by Governor Hart, who had been appointed by the bar to receive it, the reading of letters from former pastors of the Methodist Episcopal church and presiding elders of the district, and the presentation to Mrs. Thompson of a sack of gold dollars from them, and another sack filled with gold dollars, the offerings of many state unions. This inadequate account of a unique celebration can perhaps be best ended with a letter from Dr. Marlay, a former pastor. It is addressed to the writer:

"My acquaintance with them covers a period of over forty years. Mr. Thompson, when I first knew him in 1843, was a young, rising, and brilliant lawyer, giving abundant promise of the high position he has since held in his profession; his young wife, with the advantage of the highest intellectual training, added to the social culture which her position in society would naturally impart, was admirably fitted to adorn any position to which Providence might call her.

"As Mrs. Thompson's pastor for three years, I had every opportunity to study her religious character and understand it. I esteemed her as one of the most efficient helpers, and as one of the noblest and most devoted Christian women I had ever known. How much and in how many ways she has helped her pastors and her church, eternity alone can reveal. Others doubtless will speak more fully of her connection with the ever-memorable Crusade. That work, it seems to me, must forever stand as the crowning glory of her life, for, undoubtedly, it was a divine inspiration, and it was, moreover, as I believe, the most effective and far-reaching temperance movement the world has ever seen."

The members of the Hillsboro bar had most kindly given a banquet in honor of Mr. Thompson's fiftieth legal anniversary in 1883, and it had been the cherished purpose of "the twain" and their family to celebrate the "golden mile-stone" (should they reach it) by entertaining the lawyers, their wives and sweethearts. But family affliction had cast its shadow over their plans, and when the dear sisterhood undertook the occasion it was felt that some demonstration on the part of the "honored pair" was only a "need be," hence the oil painting of her father presented to the Hillsboro bar by Mrs. Marie Thompson Rives.

The following precious telegram and letter were a part of the joys of this day:

AUBURNDALE, MASS., Sept. 21, 1887.

To Mrs. Eliza J. Thompson, Hillsboro, O.:

"The year of jubilee has come," etc. "Praise ye the Lord, praise the Lord, O, my soul,"

"For far above thy thought
His counsel hath appeared."

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

EDITORIAL OFFICE, UNION SIGNAL,
CHICAGO, ILL., Sept. 10, 1887.

DEAR "MOTHER" THOMPSON:—For the daughter of a "mother passed into the skies" begs the privilege of so calling you, accept from all in this office not congratulations only, but devoted love. You can never know what an inspiration you are to all of us; how, looking at your life, we are encouraged to strive more and more in God's strength to make our own lives to tell for humanity and God. May He long spare you and your husband to each other and to us, and may you have patience to forego heaven's joys for yet a little while that earth may still be blessed by your presence. Lovingly,

MARY ALLEN WEST.

SHALL WE HAVE SCHOOL BOYS TRAINED FOR SOLDIERS?

BY LUCINDA B. CHANDLER.

Women of the American Republic, listen!

"The present Secretary of War has consented (?) to give national military instructors to all the high schools in our great cities whenever the request is made!" Thus writes a prominent and philanthropic editor in a late personal letter. Has consented! Who, or what class of persons has appealed to the Secretary of War for military instruction and instructors in our high schools? What occasion exists for introducing our youth to the military instructor, and rousing the martial spirit in immature boys? Of what use our efforts to promote "peace" and international arbitration if we have the coming man trained in the halls of learning as a part of his education, to respect and depend upon military training as a part of his equipment for manhood and citizenship?

Will not every woman protest. and vigorously, against this proposition to put military instructors into our schools? In the name of all that is humane and sacred let us protest. For the preservation of the republic, let us protest. For the sake of human progress, let us protest. To save youth from the degrading tendencies of a respect for warfare, let us protest.

Who, or what class of persons are apprehensive that fighting will be necessary? Who, or what class of persons propose to resort to fighting?—and for what?

If we wish to promote the fraternal spirit, the spirit of peace, surely we should have youth trained to the idea that thought, reason, and right, and principle, and love are the forces that should rule individuals and communities. Military training is superfluous if men are to be governed by these nobler qualities and powers. Ought not American boys to be taught to use the ballot intelligently instead of a resort to the bullet?

The aforesaid editor wrote further: "The outlook is very dark, and everywhere plutocracy is massing its forces. Arsenals and armories are being built everywhere. and a friend writes that ironclads are being built at Pittsburg for inland use to protect plutocracy from the people."

Is it come to this in our boasted republic that the possessors of wealth are ready to resort to arms? Let us ask the Secretary of War to whom he "consented" to send military instructors into the high schools.

Have we come to this, that the protection of a class of persons very largely in the minority from a possible enemy in the field of labor, is to subvert our institutions, put us on the footing of the despotic governments of Europe, make our institutions of learning training schools for fighters? And why should this class of persons apprehend that there will appear any use for trained fighters?

The wretched army of unemployed surely are not trained soldiers. They cannot build arsenals or furnish themselves with arms. The workingmen who are striving to keep up a standard of decent living and of just remuneration for labor, are not building arsenals and armories. It is not probable they have appealed to the Secretary of War for military instructors to be placed in high schools. It is not probable the Secretary would have "consented" to place them there had they done so. Is there any other class of persons except those who have immense possessions who are afraid of "the people"? Let us do our utmost to prevent the accomplishment of this barbarous project to prepare our youth to become fighters by the use of deadly implements of warrare.

Write personally to the Secretary of War, and the President, and congressman and to teachers in high schools. Will not THE UNION SIGNAL print a protest to be sent to the Secretary of War, against the introduction of military instructors in schools? Then let every reader in this country procure as many signatures as possible and forward to the National W. C. T. U. to be duly presented.

We shall have quite enough of suffering and conflict of ideas and words before we have placed our systems of finance and industry on a right basis, without having complicated the situation by resorting to military training and bullet warfare. Let every woman rise in her might to prevent this disastrous project from becoming a fact, and "LET US HAVE PEACE."

Dansville, N. Y.

W. C. T. U. IN SOCIAL PURITY WORK IN CLEVELAND.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Seeing that you have noted in your columns that "indictments have been returned by the grand jury of Cleveland, O., against four houses of ill repute," it occurs to me your readers may like to know just how the difficult work was so far accomplished; the knowledge may be helpful to others in similar work.

In the summer of 1892, Mrs. Dora Webb, at that time a member of the Cleveland W. C. T. U., and superintendent of purity work in that union, together with the writer of this article, secured a copy of the Cleveland city ordinances pertaining to houses of ill repute. We found the ordinances were very good, and set about seeing if they were enforced.

Very soon after this, Mrs. Webb, who is the wife of a Methodist pastor, removed to St. Clairsville, O., and was subsequently made state superintendent of purity work. In our city government, the head of each principal department, such as police, public works, charities, etc., is called a director. The directors are appointed by the mayor. In this case the director of police is a German, with a German's ideas of womanhood. Almost immediately upon his appointment to office he undertook to foist upon the people of Cleveland the "scheme" of registration and medical examination of women found in houses of ill-fame which has been condemned both at home and abroad as unworthy and hurtful to men and scandalously unjust to women. Our director calls this his own "plan," as he has not the active support of either the board of health or the city council.

Mrs. Webb, hearing of this, wrote to the union in October last, saying she would come to Cleveland and hold a series of meetings if we could arrange for her. We accepted her offer and prepared for two meetings, one at North Dover W. C. T. U., whose president, Mrs. Clarence Oviatt, is an active and worthy leader of the white ribbon women of that place, and one at the Jennings avenue M. E. church, whose pastor, Rev. F. A. Gould, gave us most hearty welcome, he and Mrs. Gould assisting in the service, and taking a generous collection in money. The county convention, being held here at the time, asked that Mrs. Webb should speak for them, which she gladly did, giving the evening address at the Disciple church, East End. She also spoke on the afternoon of that day before the woman's council, by arrangement of Mrs. Perkins. At the close of this last meeting arrangements were made for a mass-meeting at the Old Stone church. This meeting was small and not encouraging, but Mrs. Webb did not on this account "give up the ship," but offered to remain without one cent of pay beyond her expenses. At this juncture Mrs. Louisa Southworth, president of the Ohio Suffrage Association, and now also of the Ohio W. C. T. U. suffrage work, came to the rescue with money and influence. A mass-meeting for women was called at the Sorosis parlors, kindly donated for the purpose, with definite topics for discussion. Much enthusiasm was manifested and most indignant protests made against Director Polner's registration scheme. A society was formed with Mrs. Southworth president; Mrs. C. E. Wyman, secretary, and Mrs. G. P. Oviatt, treasurer. This meeting was followed by another in the evening at the Y. M. C. A. hall, where ringing resolutions were passed, and speeches by both men and women, Revs. Reager and Buxton, Mrs. W. G. Rose, president of Sorosis, Mrs. N. Coe Stewart, and others assisting.

In the meantime Mrs. Webb and the writer were working night and day along the legal aspect of this work. Mrs. Webb came to Cleveland November 7. The very next day she and the writer visited a prohibition brother and laid before him their method of procedure. He fell into line and assisted with money also. We next secured a detective, a man of high rank in his profession, and one who, besides being personally desirous for a clean city, has a beautiful daughter, and says that not one young man in fifty is fit to be the husband of a pure girl. Let me say that this kind of a detective is the only right one to engage. A man of mediocre standing, or one whose heart is not in the work, will not help but will harm your cause. The detective work should be kept strictly in the hands of one or two trusted women, as, if the detective's name is known and bandied about he will be fettered in his service. We stipulated perfect and complete evidence—such as certificates of registration and of medical examination—against as many of the keepers of the "high-toned" palaces of sin as could be secured before the session of the grand jury. Judge Ingersoll was engaged for counsel, a lawyer second to none, and who gave us hearty approval from the first. We also visited Judge Lamson, before whom the grand jury would sit, and he promised that if the cases came to trial before him and were convicted, he should help the cause by giving them sentence of imprisonment instead of a simple fine for which they do not care. At the last moment of that sitting of the jury, indictments were found against four of the cases, all, in fact, that were presented on account of the crowded criminal docket.

In the course of court events the trial of these cases has been taken to the probate court, the plea being as before, "too many criminal cases." We suggested that if more reform work was done there would be less criminal work to crowd the courts, which they admitted to be true. However, Judge White, before whom the cases will come for trial, is one of the best of men, and we hope for justice and square dealing.

In the meantime the Social Purity Association has called Mrs. Webb again to the city in February. The superintendent of this work in our union, Mrs. Fall, held a meeting at the Bethel, Mrs. Perkins giving the address, and at the close fifty persons signed the purity pledge.

The W. C. T. U's must not take the credit of all this work, although they have done the planning and the pushing. The Woman's Council, the Dorcas Society and the Sorosis have given their influence, and, as individuals, their money.

At a meeting in the parlors of the East End union last week, a strong appeal was made to have each union in the city appoint a purity superintendent. We all think Mrs. Webb is the woman for the place, having proved it by presenting this difficult subject in a way which strengthened the weak and aroused the fearful to action. Pray for us, that not only the abuse of registration but the evil of impurity may be driven from our fair city.

MRS. G. P. OVIATT,
Cleveland, O. Pres. Cleveland W. C. T. U.

PENELOPE'S "EXCEPTIONS."

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The very able letter over the signature of "Penelope," which appears in THE UNION SIGNAL of January 25, is brought to my attention, and a friend asks what I have to say to the "Exceptions" which the writer takes to an article of mine.

The question at issue is simply as to whether the work of women should be exhibited by itself, or otherwise differentiated from the work of men. My own argument was that any work should be judged according to the ideal standard of that special phase of art or industry, without reference to the personality of its creator or producer; while "Penelope" says "that the absolute is something quite unattainable in this life," and that "relatively is about all there is in this world as we know it."

Controversy on this point is out of the question because "Penelope's" assertion is deeply true. But are there not two sides to the matter? Two ways of judging—from the artistic and the human point of view?

I was judging by the former, "Penelope" by the latter, and one would surely but illy comprehend the importance of life who did not concede that the human point of view far transcends the merely artistic one. Still, for the former must we not possess the philosopher's scales? Take a statue, or a painting in any art gallery. Its perfection must, perforce, be judged by its fidelity to an abstract ideal of art. That it was done by a man or a woman, by an artist old or young, ill or well, rich or poor—all these are matters that do not, after all, in the faintest degree affect its artistic perfection or imperfection. But if we judge it by the standard of a human achievement, then the purely artistic aspect vanishes, and the condition of the worker becomes a factor in our judgment.

In short, "Penelope" is applying more the divine standard—the way that the Lord "who remembereth we are dust" may look upon our efforts or achievements and judge them—not absolutely, but relatively. And we must thank her for recalling us to that finer and higher and diviner point of view. Faithfully yours,

LILIAN WHITING.
The Brunswick, Boston, Mass.

TEMPERANCE GROWING IN JAPAN.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Last few months I was in Mexico and found the great needs of temperance. Almost every town I saw men lying on ground by the effect of alcohol drinks. In Mexico it seems very hard to work for the people to be temperate, as they are entirely ignorant of the glorious power of temperance. The work must begin by the true Christian missionary in Mexico.

I am glad to say that Japan has been peculiarly blessed in this respect, which will, I believe, bring everything good and successful. You will see the truth by the letter dated the 20th of November I have just received from Mr. Taro Ando, the president of Tokio temperance society, Japan:

"The result of your prayers is richly blessed. In all provinces the temperance work is growing very much, and invitations come to us for temperance lectures and meetings. I cannot refuse the invitations now, so I took Mr. Soyeshima with me and began the work in Gifu, thence we went to Tsuruga. On the way of return we have visited Nagoya, Toyohashi, Shidzuoka and Mishima. Everywhere I was greatly surprised by the young people who began to take the temperance work so earnestly as I can possibly state here.

"The fruits are ripening wonderfully. Hoping your return home." SHO NEMOTO.
Acapulco, Mexico.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee. . . . . For God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power and of love, and of a sound mind.—II Tim. 1:5, 7.

Miss Frances E. Willard, under date of January 1, writes: "Why would it not be well for you to improve the opportunity of the general effort that is being made to 'work up' Gen. Neal Dow's birthday, and secure the necessary amount to have a window in the Temple, or some record of that great man and leader?" Why not, indeed! It has long ago been planned that Gen. Neal Dow is to have one of the memorial windows in Willard Hall set apart to his memory. It was felt that the faces of heroines and heroes of the great reform that are to adorn the thirteen windows in Willard Hall would lack completeness unless the head of the great Nestor of Prohibition, Gen. Neal Dow, should find a place among them. How much better it would be for the friends of prohibition to honor "the grand old man" on his ninety-first birthday, rather than to wait until his ear is deaf to all earthly honors. By all means let us heed the hint thrown out by our beloved leader, and have a part of the collection, taken up at the meetings held on March 20, go toward a memorial window in Willard Hall, for the man whom the temperance people of the nation will honor on that day. The window will cost $500. Shall we have such a memorial? What say our white-ribboners? Five dollars each from a hundred unions holding meetings on March 20 will pay for it.

***

Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D., in an excellent article in The Independent, "Some Lessons of the Hard Times," among other good things says: "Another hint for the hard times is that, in our schemes for retrenchment, let us not begin by cheating God. Some people commence their curtailment of expenses by cutting down their gifts to wise charities; these ought to be the last to come down. The benevolent Henry Thornton, of London, subscribed ten pounds to a religious object, but afterward, having met with a great loss, he sent fifty pounds to the treasurer, with the remark: 'I don't want to lose this, also.' The safest loans are loans to the Lord; He repays with compound interest. Would you be rich toward God? Then give freely. He that saves for self, loses; he that gives for Christ is sure to save."

***

In spite of the hard times, many of our unions, with undaunted faith are sending signed pledges for hundred dollar gifts to the Temple, to be paid within two years. We trust all unions who have thus pledged will send their money as rapidly as they secure it; no matter how small the sum may be, it will not gain anything by lying in the hands of your treasurer waiting for more, but it will save much if sent to us to be used at once. A great many unions are writing to know if they pledge a hundred dollars, will the small amounts sent to the Temple fund in the past by them be credited on their hundred dollar pledge? Most assuredly, every cent that unions have given in the past stands to their credit on our books, and will be counted on the pledges they now make. The following are the names of unions which have pledged a hundred dollars and have not been reported: The W. C. T. U. of Summit, N. J., with its pledge sent a first installment of $20. La Porte, Ind., union sent pledge and $5. The other unions are Walkill, N. Y.; Mexia, Texas; Foeberg, Pa.; Vineyard Haven, Mass.; West Hoboken, N. J.; Pancatuck, Conn.; Butler, Pa.; Osceola, Pa.; Des Moines county, Ia.; Abingdon, Ill.; El Modena, Cal.; Altoona, Pa.; Lowell, Mass.; Chelsea, Mass., Hyde Park, Mass.; (this union has sent $50); Johnstown, Wis., W. C. T. U. sent $31.35 cents; Hygiene, Col. union sent $11.44. This makes $85 paid on its pledge. Sixteen dollars and ninety-one cents are sent by the Perth Amboy, N. J., W. C. T. U. White Sulphur Springs, N. Y., union sends pledge and has paid $30. Austin, Mo., union sends $5. The Scandinavian W. C. T. U., Chicago, Ill., sends $25 which finishes paying up its pledge of $100. The Y. W. C. T. U., of Adrian, Mich., sends $42.25.

The South Africa Y's are at work to secure their name on a tablet in Willard Hall. Under their noble leader, Miss Anna Cummings, who can doubt their success? The deft fingers of these young women painted lovely silver leaves, which were sold at our late World's Fair, netting $27, to be credited toward the South Africa Y tablet. If these brave young women of another continent can do so much for the "House Beautiful," what should we not expect from our own Y's?

***

Let all our white-ribboners remember that if they fill a mite-box, which is to be credited on the pledge of their union, they will receive one of our beautiful Columbian souvenirs. Mrs. J. H. Clark, Winchester, Ohio, writes in regard to the souvenir: "It is a thing of beauty, therefore a joy. It is greatly admired by all. I am more than glad to be the recipient of it. I trust many, very many, white-ribboners will become the happy possessor of the treasure. You have placed it so cheaply that it is within the reach of all." "I have just returned from a few days' visit," writes Mrs. M. Bertrand, Olequa, Wash., "and you cannot imagine my happiness to find awaiting me the beautiful Columbian souvenir. I assure you I will prize it very highly. Every white-ribboner should have one." That is just what we thought when we offered to give one to all persons who send $1 to the Temple. This offer holds good as long as the supply lasts. Never before have we sent out such quantities of mite-boxes. The unprecedented offer of a solid silver, eight ounce, souvenir tea-spoon, which combines in its decoration not only a fine cut of the Temple but the face of our great leader, Miss Willard, has moved our women as never before to send a two-cent stamp for a mite-box, and either fill it themselves or get others to help, and thus secure the beautiful spoon.

AN HONEST VALENTINE.

Thank ye for your kindness, lady, fair and wise,
Though love's famed for blindness, lovers—hem! for lies,
Courtship's mighty pretty, wedlock a sweet sight;
Should I (from the city, a plain man, Miss ——) write,
Ere we spouse-and-wife it, just one honest line,
Could you e'er forgive it, pretty Valentine?

Honeymoon quite over, if I less should scan
You with eye of lover than of mortal man?
Seeing my fair charmer curl hair spire on spire,
All in paper armor, by the parlor fire;
Gown that wants a stitch on hid by apron fine,
Scolding in the kitchen,—oh, fie, Valentine!

Should I come home surly, vexed with fortune's frown,
Find a hurly-burly house turned upside down,
Servants all a-snarl, or cleaning steps or stair;
Breakfast still in parlor, dinner—anywhere.
Shall I to cold bacon meekly fall and dine?
No,—or I'm mistaken much, my Valentine.

What if we should quarrel? Bless you, all folks do—
Will you take the war ill, yet half like it, too?
When I storm and jangle, obstinate, absurd,
Will you sit and wrangle just for the last word,—
Or, while poor Love, crying, upon tiptoe stands,
Ready plumed for flying,—will you smile, shake hands,
And the truth beholding, with a kiss divine,
Stop my rough mouth's scolding? Bless you, Valentine!

If, should times grow harder, we have lack of pelf,
Little in the larder, less upon the shelf;
Will you, never tearful, make your old gowns do?
Mend my stockings, cheerful, and pay visits few?
Crave nor gift nor donor, old days ne'er regret,
Seek no friend save Honor, fear no foe but Debt;
Meet ill-fortune steady, hand to hand with mine,
Like a gallant lady,—will you, Valentine?

Then whatever weather come, or shine or shade,
We'll set out together, not a whit afraid.
Age is ne'er alarming, I shall find, I ween,
You at sixty charming as at sweet sixteen;
Let's pray, nothing loath, dear, that our funeral may
Make one date serve both, dear,—as our marriage day.
Then, come joy or sorrow, thou art mine,—I thine,
So we'll wed to-morrow, dearest Valentine.

—Dinah Mulock.

ST. VALENTINE'S ROSES.

BY MABEL GIFFORD.

It looked so pleasant in pa's and ma's room of a morning. The sunshine came in at the window, and a bright fire burned on the hearth, and if it was just after breakfast, pa—who was quite stout, with a gray beard and a bald head—would be sitting in his big, broad arm-chair, in his comfortable dressing gown and slippers, close by one of the front windows. Ma would be sitting at the other front window in her easy chair. A handsome little old lady she was, in her pretty, old-fashioned flowered gown, white cap and kerchief. And remarkably fair she was even now, with few wrinkles, and the winter roses still blooming in her cheeks.

There they sit and nod at each other, while the fire crackles. Patrick, the cat, purrs, and the icy fingers of a rose vine melting in the morning sunlight, tap softly at ma's window. How still it is in pa's and ma's room!

"They are coming!" cries ma, suddenly awake and leaning nearer the window.

Pa wakes too, and leans nearer his window. A troop of noisy school children are coming up the road, with their book-bags and lunch-baskets, sleds and skates. They nod, and wave their hands as they pass by the windows, and pa and ma nod back, their dear old faces wreathed in smiles.

"Now what," said pa, "do you think they had in their hands? Square white envelopes it looked like."

Ma readjusted her glasses and peered after the vanishing figures. "Why," she said with a bright smile, "valentines. It's the 14th of February, pa."

After the children came the teacher, a pretty young woman, who tripped along briskly, and did not forget pa and ma at the windows.

"It doesn't seem such a long while ago that we were sending valentines, does it, pa?" said ma.

"There are later times that seem farther off," said pa. Then he started for his morning walk to the post-office, and left ma to nod by her window and dream of happy, maiden days, and valentines.

Pa soon returned with the paper, which he read, while ma knit.

"There's something in the hall for you," said pa, when the paper was read. "I'll bring it in."

He looked innocent as a lamb, as he brought in a square box and handed it to ma.

"Why, what can it be?" cried ma, in a tremor of pleasure. She looked at the name on the box, "Mary A. Smiles. Yes, it is for me."

"You don't suppose now, that it could be a valentine, do you?" asked pa.

Ma looked at him quickly with her little bright eyes. "It's his doings," she said to herself, "sure's I'm alive!"

The box on being opened, revealed a bunch of beautiful red "Jacks" as pa called them. There was a tiny note; "Wear the roses to-day, Valentine."

"Now pa never wrote that, it is not his handwriting. He is too cunning for that." She looked at pa. "Ah! he can look so serene, but I see a little smile, I know, under his beard. I'll let him think he has puzzled me for awhile, it will please him so."

"Seems almost like spring, doesn't it, pa?" said ma, after the roses had been duly admired and wondered over, two pinned on her gown, and the rest arranged in a vase and placed in a window.

"Yes," said pa, "it's quite springish."

Ma pushed her chair over to pa's window, pushed it so close to pa that she could reach his hand. "It was just such a day as this when you sent me that valentine,—that valentine that I thought Augustus Spence sent. And I wouldn't wear the lover's knot pinned on the corner because I liked you better than I did Augustus."

"It's wonderful, ma, how you hold your age," said pa.

The roses in ma's cheeks deepened, and she could not have looked happier in her maiden days.

While this dear old couple made love to each other the sunny February day waned, and the children trooped by the windows again on their way home from school, and after them came the teacher. She looked tired and her step was slow, but she brightened wonderfully when she looked up at the windows where pa and ma sat, nodding out at her.

"It's the roses," said ma. "Posies do cheer a body up a sight."

Preston Marshall looked out of Marshall & Pratt's office window just in time to see the school teacher crossing the street to the post-office. He left his desk and looked at her sharply. He turned away with a disappointed face: "She doesn't care a pin for me," he said to himself. "I wonder now if there is some other fellow? And I wonder why so many things go by contraries in this world. Ho, hum!"

Just before tea was called, pa said to ma: "Do you think it was Vesta, ma, who sent you the valentine?"

Ma looked up with a twinkle in her eyes. "Just as if I didn't know," she said.

Pa looked mildly surprised. It never would do to begin to be jealous of ma at this late day, but if Vesta did not send the valentine, who did?

Ma got up and put her arms around pa's neck. "Just as if I didn't know," she said.

Pa looked so queer. "But I didn't, ma; it wasn't me, ma," he stammered; "I've been wishing all day that it was me. Now don't you feel bad about it," for I would have done it if I had thought of it. I'll buy you a valentine to-morrow that will beat this one all to pieces."

Ma couldn't feel very bad about it, sitting there with pa looking at her in such a loverlike way.

"I wish it had been me, ma, truly I do," said pa.

"Now who could it be, if it wasn't you," said ma, jumping up as nimble as a girl, and skipping to the closet where the box had been put.

"It isn't Vesta's writing," she said, holding the box under the light, and examining it sharply.

"Yes, it's 'Mary A,'" she said, as if she had a suspicion that it might have been meant for some one else. "No, I am sure it is not Vesta's handrwiting, nor, nor—pa!" she cried out in a sudden excitement, "it's Miss!"

Ma dropped the box and sank into her chair, with such consternation in her face that pa leaned back in his chair and laughed heartily.

Ma had to laugh when pa did, so they laughed until they couldn't laugh any longer.

Ma got her breath first. "Miss Mary Smiles, that's the school teacher. And she was to wear the flowers. How cut up the young man will be when he sees her without them."

"And supposing," said ma, "that he is some one that she favors; what a shame it would be! We must—"

Just then there came a ring at the door. A man's voice inquired, "Was a package delivered to Mr. Smiles by mistake this morning?"

Ma opened the door into the hall. "I should think there was," she said. "Come right in here, young man."

"Why, it's Preston Marshall!" said ma. "You don't mean to say—" then she stopped.

But Preston Marshall was not listening; he was looking at the roses on ma's gown.

"Mr. Blake's son was at the office this morning," said the young man, "and when I inquired about my package he said he had given it to you."

Such a merry time as they had over it, pa and ma and Preston Marshall. And he would not take the roses back, for he said they were so becoming to ma.

That night Miss Mary Smiles said to her mother: "Preston Marshall is the kindest-hearted and most thoughtful young man I know. When I was on my way to school to-day, I saw him at Clark's buying roses. I thought, of course, they were for some young lady. When I came home to-night, I saw those very roses in Ma Smiles' window. Wasn't it a beautiful thing for him to do?"

Just to be sure that they were Preston Marshall's roses in ma's window, Miss Smiles stepped over after tea, and who should she find there but the young man himself, having a game of chess with pa.

The game came to an end abruptly. Pa smiled his broadest smile, and ma immediately presented the roses in the vase to Miss Smiles, and told her their story.

When she had finished she pinned the roses on Miss Smiles' gown, and that blushing young lady did not object. But she was in great haste to get home, and as she could not be persuaded to remain, ma said to Preston Marshall with a twinkle in her eyes: "If you will be so kind, Mr. Marshall, as to see Miss Smiles home? Pa isn't very sure on his feet in the evening."

Cunning little Cupid ran out after them, shaking his sides with laughter to think his mischief had given ma and pa such a happy day. "Now who would think of the old folks if it were not for me?" he said.

Abington, Mass.

TYPICAL LESSONS FOR LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION TEACHERS.

VIII.

Evaporation of Water.

BY MARY E. RUDD.

Opening Exercises:—New song for to-day, "Exercise Song," page 32, "Marching Songs." Prayer, hymn, repeating of texts with comments; song and finger play chosen by children.

Rhythmical Exercises:—Take this time for practicing new song together with the motions, omitting the third verse for the present unless the conversations of the fifth and sixth lessons have made the thought familiar to the children.

Physiology, 10 minutes:—Look for clean hands and faces. Tell what the finger nails say to you. How Harry is careful to cut and clean his nails, or to ask mamma to do it for him. You didn't know finger nails could speak, did you? Sing "Our Wonderful House," learning the words of the second verse. Speak of the mill and impress upon the children the care of the teeth. Show them that brushing the teeth is one of the whatsoevers that God has said the keepers should do.

Lesson and games, 45 minutes:—Talk a little about the sunbeams or sunbeam fairies, you may call them. Speak of how they dance about everywhere stealing into every nook and corner. A piece of looking-glass held in the sunlight will show the fairies dancing about on the opposite wall. Do not use a prism, for to-day we want to see the sunbeams in their white dresses. The children will be glad to imitate. They may skip about with arms extended, but they must do it very lightly if they would be like sunbeams. Then talk about the sunbeams waking up the children, the flowers and the birds in the morning. Let some of the children be birds asleep, some flowers asleep and some children asleep. One or two may be sunbeam fairies, and skip about touching the others lightly on the head. Then the children may awaken and sing, the birds may fly about and the flowers may lift up their heads to the sky.

When all have become quiet speak of the sand and the cup of water that were put away the previous week. Bring them and find out what has happened. Let all have a chance to see, and if no one knows how the water has disappeared, tell as a great secret that the sunbeam fairies are very fond of water drops, and are always coaxing them to go and play with them.

There is something else that likes the water drops very much. Who know what it is? Try several little experiments to show the presence of air in the room, such a fanning, passing the hand quickly before the face to create a current of air, looking out of the window to see bushes or leaves stirred by the wind. Tell the children that the air fairies that are all around us are almost as fond of the water drops as the sunbeams and they, too, like to coax them to go and play with them.

If possible show the water drops going out to play by means of boiling water. Boil a small amount of water so that you may be able to see that it is actually all gone. If it is not possible talk about the steam they may have seen issuing from the tea-kettle spout. At this point let all have a gay frolic, some being water drops, some sunbeam fairies and some air fairies. The fairies are to coax the water drops to play with them and all are to have a merry time skipping about.

Go back to the story of the brook. Tell what happened to it when the hot summer days come, and how badly the twins felt to see the water going away, a little more every day. And then their mother told them the same things I have been telling you and she said besides, that some day the water drops would come back. So they were happy, for they knew they should see their own dear little brook again.

Closing: March out two by two, a fairy leading away a water drop.

Chicago, Ill.

INDOOR FUN AND FROLIC.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—A jolly or instructive game on a winter evening will make the hours fly happily for both young and old. Here are games which require only a few players; others which will engage a room full. Let us enter into them with a real desire for pleasure or profit. We'll win if possible and accept defeat gracefully, won't we? There'll be no quarreling in the Cozy Corner over this question or that, for each one of us will desire harmony first of all. Otherwise where would be the pleasure we hoped to enjoy?

Just to start out on the right road, we'll take first

A TRIP TO TEMPERANCE TOWN.

In this game the leader begins by saying, "I went to Temperance Town with Mrs. Elizabeth Andrew." Then each person in the room is allowed to add the name of some temperance leader or philanthropist whose name commences with A. Thus, the next will say, and "Miss Jessie Ackermann," and so on until no others can be thought of. Then the letter B is taken and the leader will say, "As soon as we arrived in Temperance Town we met Dr. Kate Bushnell;" the next one can add, Rev. Dawson Burns, Mrs. Helen Barker, Mrs. Frances Barnes, and so on. Then taking the C's the leader will continue, "and we were introduced to General Lewis Cass" which is followed by other names with C. Another remark is started by the leader which is followed by the D's, and so on through the alphabet. Historical names may be taken, instead, or those of persons living at the present time, or the names of boys and girls you know. The players who can add names after the others have failed are the winners.

While we are sitting in this pleasant circle let us try

BUZZ.

Each player gives a number in turn counting up from one; but whenever the number seven, or any of its multiples is reached, the word buzz must be substituted or the player is counted out. The one last remaining wins.

To make the game more complicated we can substitute the word quack for three or its multiple, and the word fizz for five or its multiple, the word "cock-a-doodle-doo" for eleven or its multiple. Thus one, two, quack, four, fizz, quack, buzz, eight, quack, fizz, cock-a-doodle-doo, etc. The count should be kept up at a rapid rate.

I wonder how many have ever played

HUNT THE FEATHER.

The children sit in a circle on the floor, and a large sheet is taken into the middle of the circle, which each one holds under his own chin, stretched out broad and flat. A feather is placed on the sheet, and one of the party remains outside, who is to try to catch the feather as it is blown from one to another. No one in the circle must use his hands. That wouldn't be fair.

PROVERBS,

as the children all know, is also played as a circle game. One member is sent out of the room, while the others choose a proverb, one word of which is assigned to each. When the player is recalled he asks three questions of each one in the circle, to which they must answer and include the word given to them. The one whose word he guesses, thus enabling him to guess the proverb, is the next to go out of the room. A game played in a similar way is

TEAKETTLE.

For this choose a word of several meanings, but the same in sound, such as rain, bow, sea, do, etc., while a player is out of the room. Then call him back, and answer his questions (one to each), by bringing in the word in some one of its meanings. Do not say the right word, however, but substitute the word teakettle for it. For instance, when the word do is chosen; to the question, "Can you play tennis?" the answer may be, "I teakettle (do) a little," or "Not when the teakettle (dew) is falling." This is a very interesting and amusing game. For the players are seated close together. The first person begins by saying, "There's alcohol poison in cider"; the next one, "There's alcohol poison in cider and beer"; the next, "There's alcohol poison in cider, beer and wine." Each person adds one more alcoholic drink until no more can be thought of. If any are omitted, the player drops out. The player naming the last one wins.

A MEMORY GAME

Another way of playing this game I will call

THE EFFECT OF DRINK.

The game begins by the leader's saying, "John drank"; the next says, "John drank a glass of beer"; the next adds, "John drank a glass of beer yesterday"; the next "John drank a glass of beer yesterday in the saloon;" the next adds, "John drank a glass of beer yesterday in the saloon and it made him drunk," each adding a little more to it to show the effect of the drink on John, his business, his family, his neighbors, and what finally became of him. Those persons failing to include everything that has been put into the sentence previously are dropped out of the row. The last one to repeat the whole sentence correctly wins.

MUSICAL MARCH.

Have ready a number of toy whistles, flutes, kazoos, rattles, etc., in a bag. We'll set a number of chairs in a straight row, side by side, alternately facing in opposite directions, one less in number than the players. Some one at the piano plays a lively march during which the players march around the collection of chairs with a quick step, keeping time to the music. Suddenly, and unexpectedly the music ceases and each one then drops into a chair. One player will be left out. He draws a musical favor from the bag and standing by the piano assists (as well as he can) in the music. A chair is then removed from the end of the row, the march is again played, and the music ceases only to leave another player to join the orchestra. Thus the game continues, a chair being taken away each time, the orchestra increasing in numbers until only two players and one chair are left when the fun is at its height. This is a somewhat noisy game, but boys and girls will agree that it is a very jolly one, and the older "young folks" will be willing to hold their ears when they see the merriment it infuses.

After so many romping and circle games, we are all glad to settle down with paper and pencil for a little rest. Perhaps the best known of this sort of games is which is so familiar to you all that I do not need to describe it. A nice way to vary this game is to have each one in the circle write the name of an animal at the head of the slip of paper, turn it down and pass it to the next. Then write beneath a sentence which describes the animal whose name you have just written. Pass to the next; then open and read. The result is often very funny.

CONSEQUENCES.

Another way is to draw

PICTURES

of some event in history, some animal or person, at the head of a strip of paper. Commencing at the foot of the paper each one in turn writes his guess as to whom or what the picture is meant to be, turning up the paper so as to conceal what he has written before passing to the next. When the pictures have been passed all round the circle each one takes his own, gives the right name and then reads the guesses.

CRITICISMS

is very much like the above games. Ask each one to write the name of a book at the top of a slip of paper. Fold it down so as to conceal the writing, and pass it to the left-hand neighbor, who will write the name of an author. The next writes a motto, and the papers are folded and passed twice for remarks about the book. The papers are then read by each one in turn.

FLING THE TOWEL.

is another merry circle game. The player in the center tries to catch a large towel as it is flung from one to another in the circle. When he catches it, he changes places with the one who flung the towel.

In

BABEL

the players stand in a line or circle, the leader holding a pack of author cards. When all are ready, the leader takes the pack in his hand, reads the top name on the cards fast as possible, passing them on to the next person, who does the same. Each player must keep repeating the name of the author until the next card reaches him. This game usually ends in Babel.

VERBARIUM

is a test game and one which everybody likes. A word is chosen which each one of the company writes at the head of a sheet of paper. The game consists in making as many other words as possible in a given time out of the letters which form the foundation word. Suppose this word to be

T E M P E R A N C E.

The time allowed for each letter should be three minutes. Take the first letter T, and make as many and as large words as possible with it and the nine other letters. Abbreviations and proper names are not allowed. Each additional syllable counts one.

I have given you such a variety of merry games that the Cozy Corner has swelled out into the whole of Our Children's page, but I feel already well repaid for the pleasant task of writing them out for you when I think of the bright and happy faces which will join in these good times. If there is any point or direction which you do not understand, do not hesitate to write, and be sure to tell me what you think of our Cozy Corner games. If you are pleased with these, we will have another budget very soon.

Yours for a bright and happy time,

Aunt Jane

NEPHEWS AND NIECES

Blaine Spray Smith, Marjory Main, Cora Keplinger, Clara Keplinger — Illinois.
Mabel Creth Sullivan, Grace Senses — New Jersey.
Carl A. Burrows, M. Etta B. P. Gibb, Jennie S. Wallace, Adelaide Breckenridge — Penn.
Robert W. McClure, Florence Phoebus Butler — Del.
Ruth Florence Lyon, Helen Mauck, Hannah Hockje — Michigan.
Lena Alta Whitmore, Conn.
Lenora Emery, Wisconsin.
Minnie Stella Graves, Maryland.
Jennie E. Lowe, Washington.
Lillian Norton, W. Alfred Read — Mass.
Grace Jenkins, Beth George, Marv M. Freeman — Missouri.
Vina Elrod, Nebraska.
Wm. H. Coye, May C. Bidwell, Florence H. Penrie, Maude S. Ainslie — New York.
Clara C. Statler, Frank G. Statler, Vinnie R. Statler, Belle M. Jordan — Ohio.
Edith Zeran, Winifred Clift — Iowa.
Newman E. Austin, Nebraska.
Hal. Thompson, Minnesota.

PEANUTS.

This is a game we played at our last Loyal Temperance Legion meeting. We hung a bag of peanuts on a nail. Then we blindfolded some of the boys and turned them around three times; then with a stick they tried to hit the bag. Of course, it caused a laugh when they struck in another direction. At last one boy hit the bag and in less time than it takes to tell the story, there were twenty children on the floor after those peanuts.

Shutesbury, Mass. W. ALFRED READ.

WHAT IS IT LIKE AND WHY?

One of my favorite parlor games is, What is it like and why? One person goes out while the others decide on some object in the room. Then the person is called in and asks the others in turn, What is it like and why? The one whose answer shows him what the object is must go out next time. LILLIAN NORTON.

60 Hancock St., Everett, Mass.

SLICED ANIMALS AND TIGER.

I do not know what kind of a game you mean. If an indoor game I like sliced animals. It is great fun to play. If you mean an outdoor game I like t'ger best. I like to run. N. MARION IRWIN.

Suplee, Penn.

THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT.

I will tell you about a game which I received Christmas which I like very much. It is called The House that Jack Built, and consists of 12 long sticks, 12 short sticks, 2 indicators, 1 book, 1 chimney and Jack. Each player in turn spins the indicators and so on around the board until the house is built. The player who holds Jack after all the other parts of the house have been played according to the rules is the winner of the game.

BLAINE SPRAY SMITH.

Utica, Ill.

BIBLE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Papa gave me a new game for a Christmas present of Bible questions and answers. It is called Seek and Find. The directions are as follows: Distribute both the large and small cards among the players. The one holding card A asks the first question of the player on his left. If he gives the correct answer he receives the card containing the answer from the one holding it. If not, the questioner reads the number of the answer card and the one holding it reads it aloud. It is then laid on the table the property of no one.

When all the questions on card A are asked, the holder of card B reads the questions and so on.

When all the questions are asked, the one holding the greatest number of answer cards wins the game. Any number can play the game. It is both interesting and instructive.

FLORENCE PHOEBUS BUTLER.

Newark, Del.

AUTHORS.

I will try and give a description of the game I like best. It is Authors, the Queens of Literature. The way we play it is this: We shuffle them so as not to get any books together. Then give one card to each one that is going to play, and keep giving around until we get them all distributed. They must not let each other see the cards. Then the player, left of the one that shuffled, begins; he may call from any one and continues calling till he fails to get his card. They go clear around that way. Then the one that gets the most books beats. From three to six can play. This is the game I like best.

R. STELLA PAXTON.

Savannah, O.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

268.

BEHEADED RHYMES.

How we enjoy the feath'ry ——
So glad that it is winter ——
Though Jack Frost's sting makes us cry ——!

But when the biting blizzards ——,
And winter's coal is getting ——,
The hungry child may well cry ——!

Can we keep still while others ——?
Not long as there's such a good ——
On for relinguishing our ——!

So out into the snow and ——
With bread and meat (perhaps a ——!)
We'll give the poor some food to ——.

J. A. S.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JANUARY 18.

261. Aunt Jane's Cozy Corner.
262. Love.
263. Beer, bier.

Correct answers: Archie M. Burt; Manora M. Walker; Eva B. Frarey; Cora and Clara Keplinger; N. Marion Irwin; Mildred Cross; Rosa Green; William H. Coye; Abby M. Collester; Maude S. Ainslie; Caroline Mac Minn.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
MANAGING EDITOR—MARGARET A. SUDDUTH.
OFFICE EDITOR—MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—JENNIE A. STEWART.
CONTRIBUTIN EDITORS { LADY HENRY SOMERSET. MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets. Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago. Ill.. as second-class matter.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Secretary.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS. Portland, Me.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, To My Mint-Geranium. By N. W. Hodge..... 2
A Social Study. By Marie J. Hesse..... 2
Temperance in Russia. Translated by Wm. Robert Ebell..... 2
Why We Went to Arreton. By Sarah K. Bolton..... 3
Hillsboro Crusade Sketches. XXI. By Eliza J. Thompson..... 4
Shall We Have School Boys Trained for Soldiers? By Lucinda B. Chandler..... 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
W. C. T. U. in Social Purity Work in Cleveland..... 5
Penelope's "Exceptions"..... 5
Temperance Growing in Japan..... 5
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS..... 5
THE HOUSEHOLD:
Poem, An Honest Valentine..... 6
St. Valentine's Roses. By Mabel Gifford..... 6
Typical Lessons for Loyal Temperance Legion Teachers. VIII. By Mary E. Rudd..... 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Indoor Fun and Frolic..... 7
AUNT JANE'S COZY CORNER:
Soft-Shelled Nuts..... 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
The Message of the New Testament to Women..... 8
Military Instruction..... 9
Business and Philanthropy..... 9
THE WATCH TOWER..... 9
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
Progress in India—Responses to "Butler Appeal"..... 10
World's Wave Crests..... 10
World's W. C. T. U. Directory..... 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Indiana—New Hampshire..... 11
News in a Nutshell..... 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
The Relation of Temperance to Labor and Capital—Sabbath Observance..... 12
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES..... 13
TREASURER'S CORNER..... 13
ORGANIZERS' CORNER..... 13
OUR LIBRARY TABLE..... 14
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT..... 15
SIGNAL NOTES..... 16

Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you.—II Cor. 13:11.

THE MESSAGE OF THE NEW TESTAMENT TO WOMEN.

A correspondent writing us concerning a recent editorial upon "Individual Rights and Duties," says sorrowfully that it has seemed to her that while the New Testament brought help along all other lines, its message to women was either not for us of to-day, or it contained no good cheer.

Of all the unfortunate results of the method of interpretation, which insists upon making the Bible teach the hopeless, everlasting subordination of woman, we think that indicated by the words of our correspondent is the saddest. That any one, but especially women, should turn from those pages, which are so full of cheer for all mankind and which have proved to be the very Magna Charta of woman's liberty, heavy-hearted and despairing is pitiful beyond words. Yet it is true that other Christian women have felt that either the longings of their hearts and their God-given aspirations and gifts were delusions or the Bible was out of sympathy with the teachings of God in their own natures. It has driven more than one woman into skepticism; it has embittered the lives of many others. As firmly as we believe that the Bible is the infallible word of God, so firmly do we believe that the blame for this rests neither with the Bible message for "humanity's gentler half" nor with the awakening aspirations of women, but with a false and pernicious interpretation which "teaches as doctrines the commandments of men."

The passages upon which woman's subordination is based are the curse pronounced upon woman after the fall and certain well-known statements of the apostle Paul. An exhaustive discussion of all of these passages is neither possible nor necessary here. In Genesis 3:16, we have the curse, "Thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee." In I Timothy 2:12-14, are these words of Paul: "But I permit not a woman to teach, nor to have dominion over a man, but to be in quietness. For Adam was first formed, then Eve; and Adam was not beguiled, but the woman being beguiled, hath fallen into trangression."

We have selected this passage from Paul, because it is the strongest one. If we disregard this, we have easy work with the others. The arguments which clear Paul of the charge of teaching that slavery is divinely ordained as a permanent feature of human society, or which renders it possible for the more advanced medical science of to-day to substitute other and better remedies for the wine which Paul enjoined Timothy to take "for his stomach's sake," without throwing discredit upon Paul's inspiration, also sweep away from every other one of Paul's injunctions against women speaking in public, etc. This passage, however, undertakes to give a reason for the subordination of woman, and grounds it upon a fact of creation; therefore, say our opponents, it grows out of the nature of the case, and, as the cause can never change, the command can never change.

Before entering upon a discussion of these passages, it is necessary briefly to summarize what has been supposed to be involved in this subordination. Until very recently, woman's mental inferiority was, logically enough, thought to be presupposed by her subjection. While she has had neither time nor opportunity fully to demonstrate the contrary, her achievements within recent years along all lines of intellectual activity have dissipated this view from unprejudiced minds. There are some persons left, however, who are devoting their superior brain power to the noble task of proving from very insufficient data concerning the relative weight of brain, that woman is and forever must remain the mental inferior of man. Others write labored treatises to establish the perfect equality but essential difference of the masculine and feminine brain. To say nothing of the absolute impossibility of the task which these latter persons have set themselves, if their hypothesis is correct (that of comparing things fundamentally different), it is noticeable that these same people when off their guard are given to speaking slightingly, not to say contemptuously, of woman's capabilities and work and are the ones to urge that women's admission to any conclave formerly composed of men alone will lower the character of the body.

Growing out of this belief in mental inferiority comes naturally the view that woman "unsexes" herself when she attempts to enter any literary pursuits formerly monopolized by men. It was a scandalous breach of propriety fifty years ago when the first woman had the moral courage to enter the Boston public library to read. When women entered the colleges and universities the foundations of society were threatened, but happily withstood the shock. Women public speakers were treated with every insult, nor is the prejudice all dead yet. The women who have entered the professions or public life of any kind are supposed to be undermining our civilization, and the bomb beneath our social structure will be certainly exploded when women get the ballot, say the croakers.

The only place where woman in the near past had any right to be was in a home and there she was little better than a slave. She could own no property and served as housekeeper, laundress, cook, seamstress, nurse, etc., etc., for her board and clothes. Less than a hundred years ago the laws of this "land of the free and home of the brave" permitted a man to whip his wife if she refused to obey him or if for any other reason he judged that she needed the discipline. None of these things are entirely unknown to-day. In the majority of homes where the wife is not the actual breadwinner, she is a mere pensioner upon her husband's bounty. Men still whip their wives, though happily it is not supported by law, and many Christian men can see no other possible way for a Christian man and a Christian woman who profess to love each other, to live together in peace than for the man to have absolute authority to settle any matter of dispute between them by his mere arbitrary dictum.

We confess that from this standpoint we think that the man who whips his wife has the argument all on his side, since if she won't obey him what is he to do? Happily, however, there are countless homes in this land where the "impossible" is being constantly accomplished and with no use of authority, without any "obedience," there is nevertheless—nay, therefore—most perfect harmony. The doctrine of woman's subordination actually carried out in practice always has made and always will make of woman simply the complement of man's sex.

For many centuries men rested content in the assumption that the Bible taught that the world was created in six literal days of twenty-four hours each, that the earth was flat and at rest while sun, moon and stars revolved around it. After a time, however, "God's facts," as revealed by geology and astronomy were found to be in direct contradiction with these views of the earth and solar system. Examination showed that not the Bible but man's interpretation of the Bible was at fault. "God's facts" revealed by the development of the race under Christianity, force us to the conclusion that the teachings of the Bible concerning women have been as grievously misunderstood as have its teachings on science.

It has been work for Christ's kingdom above everything else that has called women out of their homes into fields forbidden them before and His blessing has rested upon them unmistakably in it. The cause of missions was forced to call for woman's aid, and is largely responsible for her training as a parliamentarian, financier and preacher, and has thus disproved many of the conclusions built upon Paul's commands. From one cause and another women have gone out into all fields. Everywhere they have proved themselves good workmen and yet remained "womanly" women. But it has been in their work as Christians, impelled by their instincts as mothers, that women have been driven to rebel against the sex discriminations supposed to be ordained by the word of God.

"It is a singular fact," said one of the oldest advocates of woman's rights, "that we have never been able to enlist women in any considerable numbers to labor for their own emancipation." True, not until women saw that pitfalls of the devil were spread for their sons on every street corner, and that their little girls of ten years of age were left helpless victims to vile men by the abominable laws regarding the age of consent, did they demand with ever growing determination that they be given the ballot with which to protect their homes.

It is useless to argue that such reasoning from the logic of events overthrows all theories of inspiration, etc. If God's blessing clearly rests upon the work of Christian women who are flatly disobeying the supposed teachings of His word, the presumption becomes very strong that those teachings have been misunderstood. Reasoning on this line, multitudes of good men as well as women have come to the deliberate conclusion that it is nothing short of libel upon Paul to suppose that he meant to enforce upon nineteenth century women the subordination actually preached on his authority; but that on the contrary when he enjoins women to be in subjection to their husbands, he means nothing more than he does when he bids, not servants in our use of the word, but according to the original Greek, slaves to "obey their masters in all things." In both cases he instructs Christians meekly to endure the injustice of the times in which they live and win their freedom by a Christlike spirit rather than assert it and cause tumults and commotions disastrous to the infant church.

But on this view, what explanation can we give of Paul's reference to the creation in the passage quoted? If woman's subordination is temporary, this reference to the cause of it back to the creation seems unnecessary. In the first place it is clear that he cannot mean that independently of the fall the creation vested Adam with authority; for subjection to her husband is the curse explicitly pronounced upon woman after the fall. Before this, dominion over all created things was given to them jointly, without a hint of superiority on either side. That this superiority is explicitly stated after the fall is proof positive that none existed before. It is clear, then, that the inequality was brought about as the result of the fall, and the connection with the creation cannot mean more than that the conditions imposed by the creation, taken in connection with the fall, were the cause of woman's position relatively to man.

To our mind the connection between the three facts mentioned by Paul, the creation, the fall and woman's subordination, is clear as sunlight, for no punishment which God inflicts is ever arbitrary; the results of sin are as necessary and inevitable as are the results of broken physical law. The curse upon Eve is no exception. Given the first two elements, and the third is bound to follow. Woman was created physically weaker than man; so long as love ruled on the earth this fact placed her at no disadvantage, and she stood on an absolute, unquestioned equality with her stronger partner; but when sin entered, dethroning love and making force the ruling power, woman, as the weaker vessel, went to the wall. This is Paul's statement of the case, and centuries of history, the condition of the heathen world to-day exemplifies its truth. The more complete the dominion of sin, the more utter and hopeless the degradation and slavery of woman. Does it therefore follow that woman's subjection shall last so long as the world stands? The question seems imbecile. Christ came to remove the curse, and Paul plainly and expressly declares that woman's share in the curse is not excepted.

Evade it as our opponents may, taken in its connection, the words of Paul, "in Christ Jesus there can be neither male nor female," are capable of but one meaning, and that is, that as Christ's coming sounded freedom for the slave, so it proclaimed the emancipation of woman. To argue, as some have, that because divine omniscience foretold that the fate of Ham should be that of a slave to his brethren, it is therefore the duty of those brethren to hold him in bondage, or that because God told woman that the necessary result of sin was her own subjection, it is therefore the duty of her husband to keep her in subjection, is little short of blasphemy. Christ came to remove the curse, and we are called to be co-laborers with him. It is hence not only the privilege but the duty of women to fit themselves through faith in Him for their normal, rightful place in the world, and by every right means seek to regain it. It is equally the duty of man to help restore the reign of love, and welcome woman back again to her throne as equal sovereign of the earth.

MILITARY INSTRUCTION.

The daily press is just now teeming with articles upon the above topic. The Century, The Arena and other magazines of first rank are advocating, as of paramount importance, the plan outlined in the resolutions adopted by the Grand Army of the Republic in its twenty-seventh annual encampment.

These resolutions may be summed up as follows:

1. Resolved, That the Grand Army cordially indorse the words of ex-President Harrison, that "the strength and defense of our institutions, not only in peace but in war, is to be found in the young of the land who have received from the lips of patriotic teachers the story of the sacrifice which our fathers made to establish our civil institutions, and which their sons have repeated on hundreds of battle fields. The organized army of the United States, even if we include the militia of the states, is of insignificant proportions when put in contrast with the armies of the other great powers of the world. Our strength is not in these; it is in the great reserve to be found in the instructed young of our land, who come to its defense in time of peril."

2. That the Grand Army recommends an organized effort to impress upon the various municipal, state and national authorities "the advisability of the adoption of a system by which scholars attending the public and private schools, as well as the high schools and colleges, shall receive instruction in military matters, and to impress upon the rising generation of the country the fact that, as American citizens, it is their duty to bring to the defense of their country, in its need, the education which they may have received in this particular in their youthful days."

3. "That the department commanders give especial attention to this work through a staff officer, and that the various posts give their earnest coöperation and support in securing necessary legislative, municipal and school-board action, as well as to obtain, where required, national aid by provision of arms, equipments and instructors."

This movement, stripped of all the glowing rhetoric of its whereases, means nothing less than that our whole country is to be put under a system of compulsory military education; that our schools are to be turned into recruiting halls for the army of the future; that our boys are to be taught ideas of patriotism after the old standard of military glory. It means that, while the whole world is more and more looking to arbitration as the only rational way of settling disputes between nations, this nation, which should be by virtue of its very existence, in the forefront of all reforms, is turning its face towards the barbaric past rather than towards the true enlightenment of the future.

It is well to face the facts, and briefly stated they are these: For some reason or other, best known to the astute politician, it seems best that there shall be a reserve military force in this country, which can be drawn upon in days to come if occasion for war should arise. At first sight this seems feasible, but let us examine more closely. Does not the very existence of such a force make war more probable? Germany's petty wars throughout the ages would have been vastly fewer had not Germany's huge standing army been always at hand, always ready to take part in knocking the imaginary chip off from some protruding foreign shoulder.

President Harrison, in a letter sent to the Century concerning this plan, argues for it strongly, using for an analogy the late Civil War:

"If all the schoolboys of the North had, from 1830 on, been instructed in the schools of the soldier and of the company, and in the manual of arms, how much precious time would have been saved in organizing the Union army in 1861. We were in a low state as a people in military knowledge and training when the great Civil War broke out; volunteers in plenty, but few soldiers."

The analogy is a most unfortunate one. If there be anything from which we, as a nation, should pray to be delivered it is a repetition of anything like that most unnatural struggle. Its blight is still upon our country, and each year the fact is becoming more apparent that what was needed in those dark days was not more knowledge of military tactics, but more of the spirit of mutual love and good-will, which would have made a peaceful arbitration possible.

We quote President Harrison's closing words: "Nothing will so much aid to enlarge our state militia and to give it efficiency and character as the plan proposed. The military taste and training acquired in the school will carry our best young men into the military organizations and make those organizations reliable conservators of public order, and ready and competent defenders of the national honor." God forbid that the day will ever come when our "best young men" will crowd into the army, when that will come to be regarded as the only "reliable conservator of public order."

There is a nobler training for the boys of our land than the drill of drums and muskets. The principles of true patriotism are the principles of eternal justice, of universal peace and good-will. Let the public schools by all means teach statesmanship; but by no means a narrow partisanship, or even a narrow national-ship, if we may coin the word. Our boys and girls will not love America less by accepting the fact that there are other nations upon earth, and that those other nations have an equal claim upon God's love, and therefore upon human justice. We should by this time have reached a state of evolution in which foreign war would be well-nigh impossible and domestic war absolutely unthinkable.

We hope our local unions will do everything in their power to defeat this measure through the department of peace and arbitration. It is high time that we lift up our voice when we are threatened with such a wholesale inundation of the military spirit and military tactics.

All the benefit, physically, which is claimed for the military drill can be better gained through a system of gymnastics, and our nation, in days to come, will find its true defenders in men who know how to avert rather than to fight a war.

BUSINESS AND PHILANTHROPY.

During the past twenty months these columns have twice spoken with no uncertain sound on the subject of "Real Estate versus Philanthropy." As long ago as July 28, 1892, Miss Willard wrote an editorial under the above head, in which she discountenanced the use of the name W. C. T. U. and official titles of its officers in connection with enterprises of a money making and personal nature. At the same time she disclaimed the idea that the W. C. T. U. or THE UNION SIGNAL had any connection whatever with certain enterprises which were using our name, and quoting our paper as an indorser, and advised would-be investors to inquire for themselves into any business advertisement which they might see in THE UNION SIGNAL or any other paper.

This editorial stated what we have always affirmed, that while we take pains to sift our advertisements and throw out a large per cent of those which are offered, we do not stand as "backers" to the propositions found in our advertising columns. We do not ask a reader to accept any statement in our editorials unless it appeals to his reason and judgment, neither do we expect him to patronize the business department unless its offers appeal to his business sagacity and experience. We aim to be a medium for legitimate enterprises only, but it is impossible to know the end from the beginning, or the subsequent method or management of any business. Many enterprises have failed this past year, which were as "sound as a nut" when the "financial panic" began. Others, doubtless, were built upon sand, and found it a convenient time to be absorbed in the vortex of failures.

Many letters have reached our office asking why we are "so strangely silent" concerning the recent exposure of two woman's companies in Chicago. In reply we can but say that inasmuch as we have never, editorially, indorsed these concerns, and have not advertised them since October, 1892, and all that we did previous to that time was done in good faith, we do not hold ourselves responsible in any sense for the loss realized. But we do feel a profound regret and chagrin because of those failures, and are willing to express it, if it will be any satisfaction to our readers. Furthermore, we desire to protest against these enterprises being spoken of as "W. C. T. U. schemes." They were not that in any true sense. To be sure, the public has some excuse for thinking so, as prominent officers of our society and publishing association permitted the use of their names and official titles, but this was not for the benefit of the W. C. T. U., so far as we have ever heard. THE UNION SIGNAL was the first to condemn this, through its Board of Directors, this step being taken July 13, 1892, and published a week later in our columns.

We have been accused of sharing in the profits and receiving enormous sums for advertising these companies. As a sample of the exaggerated statements which prevail, we offer the following, taken from a Chicago daily: "We learn that the Woman's Baking Company paid THE UNION SIGNAL $5,000 for advertising." As a matter of fact the amount paid was but $420.28. We are glad to record that the person who made the statement was good enough to correct it, but such errors are difficult of retraction.

It is to be hoped that some wholesome lessons have been learned by all concerned in these unsuccessful ventures ("for women only" and "by women only," in which men of supposed ability did the active managing and pocketed, apparently, the bulk of the profits), not least of which is the fact that philanthropy does not necessarily furnish business experience.

"Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new;
You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you—
A hope for me and a hope for you."
—Susan Coolidge.

***

"The prodigal had to travel a long way from his father's house before he could be made willing to feed swine. Men have to get far away from God before they can be induced to sell rum."

***

With fourteen millions of dollars invested in the liquor traffic, three thousand hands are employed, but with that same amount of investment in the legitimate industries one hundred thousand hands are employed on an average.

***

When Jesus Christ came into this world, He found it a grave, dreadful, dark and hopeless, but He made it a tunnel by passing through on the other side, and by faith we follow Him and find beyond the tunnel, "in the land that is fairer than day," a light that exceeds the glory of the sun and passeth not away.—Prayer in Willard Hall.

***

A French evangelist has been visiting the towns and villages of Normandy on his tricycle, carrying with him a stock of Bibles and New Testaments, which he exhibits open on the desk of his box. He has disposed of over two thousand New Testaments in this way, his sales averaging one to every twenty houses. Why cannot temperance literature and pamphlets be distributed the same way by ardent temperance wheelmen?

***

The New Zealand Times contains a very interesting account of the first elections held under the new régime of woman's suffrage. It notes some very amusing blunders made by a few of the women to whom the right had evidently come unsought and been accepted without thought, but it generously concedes that there were very few such blunders and that the women conducted themselves "in the main better than the men." Sentences like the following, plentifully besprinkled through the sketch, delight our hearts: "There was not the slightest sign of rowdyism or disorder of any character." "The women received every courtesy at their approaches to the polling booth, and their presence seemed to have an excellent effect." "It was the best conducted and most orderly general election we have had." Altogether it looks as if the new star of woman's larger hope and power were again to rise in the East. All hail, Australia!

***

He was a man whose like the world again
Shall never see, to vex with blame or praise;
The landmarks that attest his bright, brief reign
Are battles, not the pomps of gala days!
—Abraham Lincoln, by Alice Cary.

***

A young man anxious for success wrote Oliver Wendell Holmes, propounding three questions and the distinguished poet's reply was concise and interesting:

1. The best three books? The Bible, Shakespeare's plays and a good dictionary.

2. To obtain real success? Real work, concentration on some useful calling adapted to his abilities.

3. Shall he smoke? Certainly not. It is liable to injure the sight, to render the nerves unsteady, to enfeeble the will and enslave the nature to an imperious habit likely to stand in the way of duty to be performed.

***

"DEAR ON DUTY:—I am so pleased with what I have found out about using a solution of salt on coal that I cannot forbear complying with your request to your readers to advise you of results of the trial. Last Saturday all the coarse salt I could find in the house was some rock salt my wife had used in the summer of 1892 in freezing ice cream. We had about a gallon jar full. This took about four gallons of water to dissolve it, which I sprinkled from a common garden sprinkler over both my furnace and kitchen stove coal in their respective bins. The coal now burns up brighter and much more quickly in both furnace and stove, and the flame is a beautiful yellow instead of the former blue flame. I believe the heat is more intense also. We are obliged to you for publishing the item, as we find it practically the same as and much cheaper than the patent preparation we formerly used, but which we have been unable to find lately in the market."

J. W. H.

ON DUTY.

World's W. C. T. U.

MOTTO: "For God and Home and Every Land."

OBJECT: To unify the methods of woman's temperance work the world over.

BADGE: A knot of white ribbon.

HOUR OF PRAYER: Noon.

METHODS: Agitate, educate, organize.

DEPARTMENTS: Preventive, educational, evangelistic, social and legal.

THE POLYGLOT PETITION has been circulated throughout the world and signed by representatives of over forty countries. It asks for the outlawing of the alcohol and opium trade and the system of legalized vice. The chief auxiliaries of the W. W. C. T. U. are the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Australia, South Africa, India, Japan and the Sandwich Islands.

PROGRESS IN INDIA.

I wish to speak of one note in Miss Willard's last annual address. On page 32 the three lines in reference to the Salvation Army is rather, I may say, quite unfair to the other missions. Every American mission is total abstinence, both among missionaries and converts. Total abstinence is taught by all other missions from England, Scotland or Germany, and practiced with very rare exceptions by all their missionaries. Dr. J. L. Phillips, of the India Sunday-school Union, who has traveled the length and breadth of India for a year and a half, and been entertained at the homes of missionaries of all denominations, states that he has yet to sit at the second missionary's table where wine is served.

During the month I spent in Lucknow after my last trip, I wrote numbers of letters to arrange for a series of temperance meetings between Lucknow and Calcutta, particularly at towns where numbers of European and Eurasian railway employés live. Some meetings in Allahabad had been for some time talked of. These were to begin November 15. Only two replies were received from letters sent to eight or nine other towns. One from Benares saying a meeting could be held there, and one from an English Baptist missionary who is working specially among the railway people, saying that he thought meetings at most of the places would be impossible, as, owing to the indiscretion of some speakers who had been traveling about, the Railway Institutes were closed to all but himself and the Church of England chaplain. Nevertheless I felt that I should start out and see what could be done, and up to leaving Lucknow looked confidently for replies from other letters. I had taken pains to send to each, copies of the India White Ribbon.

A public meeting was arranged at Allahabad in the Anglo Indian Association Hall, the Bishop of Lucknow to preside. I spoke first and tried to do my best to suit the audience which the Bishop later designated as "too respectable." Then the Bishop followed with, as a friend remarked, "a whole bucket of ice water." The Bishop could not agree with most temperance agitators that alcoholic drinks were wholly bad. He had been a total abstainer for several years, his wife for many more, and yet he remembered that his father and mother, as noble, pious, God-fearing people as ever lived to good old age, had their wine and beer on the table every day, and that he had always been taught to use it with strictest moderation! His experience taught him that many men might take a glass daily and not sin, so rather than an absolute evil, he considered wine a good creature of God! The reason he had become a total abstainer was for the sake of his influence on those who were weak, and could not withstand the temptation which even moderation brought to many, still he often did "long for this good, invigorating glass of beer," and it was only in consideration of others that he refrained. Whatever we deemed best for ourselves as Christians, whether at certain times to have a glass, or to totally abstain, still he must teach these native Christians to use only cold water. This is but a hint of all he said in the same strain. Surely, I thought, there will not be a signer to the pledge this evening. Dennis Osborn followed and without contradicting the Bishop showed our duty to ourselves to abstain, and also for the sake of others.

Pledges and members of the W. C. T. U. were called for and for some time no one moved. One of the most active W. C. T. U. women left the hall, saying that after the Bishop's speech not a person would sign, but at the close of the meeting eight persons joined the union.

The next day I called on the Bishop and his wife, for notwithstanding the "ice water" of the previous evening the Bishop would like to see more vigorous temperance work among his people. He could not promise at present to really support the W. C. T. U. movement, and would consult with his clergy who are to meet in conference in January. One of the topics is temperance and he would present the W. C. T. U., but reminded me that they already have a temperance association in the church. The Bishop does heartily and sincerely hope that when Miss Willard and Lady Henry Somerset visit India "a great wave of public feeling on temperance may be started," when there will be more chance of W. C. T. U.'s being organized among his people.

A drawing-room meeting for ladies was well attended and much interest shown. Three Bands of Hope from different churches also met, and were addressed.

At Benares I addressed a meeting in the Wesleyan chapel. Mrs. Leavitt organized a union there, but it long ago died, and though I made many calls on ladies in Benares, the only result was the conclusion that it would not be best to try to organize again, as it would certainly die out in a very short time. So I obtained a few members for the India union.

On the next evening I addressed an audience of English speaking natives, mostly members of a native men's temperance society, organized with our constitution and pledge by Mrs. Leavitt, and one of the most noble, far-reaching results of her work.

After Benares came the wilderness, great and wide, and I will try to tell you a little of it in my next.

Lucknow. JEANNETTE G. HAUSER.

DURING her nine days' trip in Wales Lady Henry Somerset received twenty-seven official addresses, and addressed 22,000 people.

RESPONSES TO "BUTLER APPEAL."

The following sums have been received in answer to Miss Willard's appeal for Mrs. Josephine Butler, who has gone to Italy to introduce the white-ribbon work in its social purity phases by endeavoring to secure from the Italian legislature a law for the better protection of women.

Miss Willard undertook to raise $250 of the necessary $500, of which $135 yet remained to be secured, and for which she is responsible. Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith is treasurer of the fund. Money sent to Miss Alice Briggs, The Temple, Chicago, will be forwarded to Mrs. Smith.

Mrs. E. W. Blatchford, Chicago	$ 5 00
Miss Abby Turner, Randolph, Mass	25 00
Mrs. A. P. Kelley, Chicago	5 00
Mrs. J. S. Baldwin, Baltimore, Md	5 00
Mrs. Ole Bull, Cambridge, Mass	10 00
Mr. Ferd Schumacher, Akron, O	5 00
Prof. C. C. Bragdon, Auburndale, Mass	5 00
Mrs. Mary M. Durbin, Texas, O	1 00
Mrs. Belle H. Mix, Danville, Iowa	5 00
Miss M. L. Browne, Philadelphia, Penn	1 00
Mrs. F. K. Taylor, Oneonta, N. Y	2 00
Mrs. M. T. W. Merrill, Portland, Me	5 00
W. C. T. U., Marseilles, Ill	1 00
" Wellsville, N. Y	1 00
" Casadaga, N. Y	1 00
Mrs. Susan M. Clark, Syracuse, N. Y	5 00
Eleanor Compton, Millstone, N. J	2 00
Sue T. Smith, Rockland, Mass	1 00
W. C. T. U., Burlington, Vt	5 00
Mrs. Virginia D. Young, South Carolina	5 00
Mr. William Deering, Evanston, Ill	10 00
Capt. Chas. Goodall	5 00
Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, Chicago	5 00
Total	$115 00

WORLD'S WAVE CRESTS.

AN installment of Petition signatures, ninety-four names in seven languages, was sent by Mrs. Jeannette G. Hauser, president of the India W. C. T. U., while on a tour in the work of that union.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET has been holding meetings in North Wales, where the British Women's Temperance Association has been practically unknown until the recent meeting of its executive committee in Cardiff.

THE president of the W. C. T. U. in Melbourne, Australia, writes that the white-ribboners have just had one of the most successful anniversaries ever held in that city, with great processions through the streets, and an altogether unique and striking demonstration.

A SEMI-MONTHLY paper is now published by the Bulgarian temperance union, organized last spring, and composed of both men and women. Rev. M. N. Popoff, who is pastor of the Bulgarian Evangelical church, is an active leader in this union and in the promotion of the new publication, which is opposed to gambling and prostitution as well as intemperance.

A DISTINGUISHED Japanese literary man, Mr. M. S. Nakada, Jogakn Darshi Office, Tokyo, has requested permission to translate "Glimpses of Fifty Years," into that language, and expects to publish the book this spring. This is in anticipation of the trip to Japan that will be made by the Commission appointed to present the Polyglot Petition to the governments of the world.

THE Columbian Y of Spain celebrated the Crusade anniversary on December 23. The young Spanish president presided, the familiar words were read responsively in English, the young Spaniards following each verse in their own melodious tongue. Never was an echo of the Crusade more musical or more significant. Miss Anna Gordon gave an address on the origin, history and development of the Woman's Crusade.

MISS ANNA and Bessie Gordon went with Miss Willard on a visit to Eastnor Castle, after which they left December 15 for Paris and San Sebastian, Spain, to visit their missionary sister, Mrs. Alice Gordon Gulick, vice-president of the W. W. C. T. U. for Spain, where they spent the holidays, returning to England soon after the first of January. They are in excellent health and as constantly absorbed in temperance work as usual.

IT will be a pleasure to the friends in America and England who have so kindly sent papers to Mrs. Helen Macintosh at Port Elizabeth, South Africa, for the railway mission, to know that Mrs. Macintosh writes that, "souls have been won, drunkards have been reformed, and lives completely changed by reading the books we have sent, and that our mission could not be sustained without such help as these kind unknown friends have been giving us. 'Blessed are they that sow beside all waters.'"

THE death of Dr. H. Selmer, of Copenhagen, is a great loss to the Danish temperance workers. He was one of the comparatively few champions of the good cause among the physicians in that country, and he gave his example and influence to the temperance cause when it was yet in its infancy. In those days when the temperance movement was despised and often looked upon as a foolish experiment that would soon come to naught, it took men and women of courage to stand up in its defense, but Dr. Selmer ever showed himself a faithful friend and able advocate. Mrs. Selmer is World's W. C. T. U. vice-president for Denmark, and has the sympathy of the great white ribbon circle in her bereavement.

WHEN Lady Battersea spoke before the W. C. T. U. of Brecon, Wales, women acted as stewards for the first time in history. They attended to all the details of the meeting, which were remarkably well carried out. Miss Gwenllian Morgan, president of the union, presided and made the opening speech. They had upon the wall the motto, "We wage our peaceful war," and they sang the song recently written for the W. C. T. U. by Rev. D. J. Thomas, a Wesleyan minister of Brecon, and dedicated to our National president. It is entitled, "In the Nineties we shall Win," and is characterized by musical experts as "a splendid war song." Copies can be had by writing to Mr. Thomas, at Brecon, South Wales.

AS A result of the municipal agitation in Liverpool in 1892, the temperance and purity party carefully canvassed the women municipal voters with such success that nearly seventy per cent of them were polled, by which means the Reform party carried the day. In Glasgow, the women voters were not only organized so that they might influence men voters to support the cause of temperance, but a large number of women who had never before realized their responsibility and therefore had not voted, were induced to go to the ballot box, in consequence of which five temperance candidates succeeded in obtaining places on the council from one ward alone. The Women's Liberal Federation and the British Women's Temperance Association are combining forces to bring out the full strength of the women's municipal vote in the interest of home protection. This is the most hopeful feature of reform movements in England at this day.

MME. M. W. DE RANITZ, of Groningen, recently made vice-president of the World's W. C. T. U. for the Netherlands, writes in a private letter the following which will prove of general interest:

"It is thirty years ago that I read the book of Mrs. Wightman, 'Haste to the Rescue,' and from that time I was a teetotaler and began the work of temperance, and you know that work takes all our powers, our time and our heart, because we not only wish to save the drunkard from ruin, but to bring him to God. The evangelistic work with grown up people and with children takes a great deal of my time, but then we have also a home for young girls and for children. First it was a small beginning, but the Lord has blessed this work; we have now three houses, one for children, most girls, one for girls of fourteen to eighteen years, and one for those girls who have been on bad ways. These houses are separated and yet quite near to one another, and there I am daily many hours. . . . . I love those girls and children, and am very glad that the Lord will use me for them. Mr. Adam van Scheltama has many years done all he could to bring people to total abstinence without much success, but now a better time begins. The women made this summer a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. I did not wish to be president, as I have so very little time, and I cannot write easily in English, but as I was the oldest teetotaler in our land, nobody else would take this place."

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. DIRECTORY.

Honorary President—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, care of L. H. Clement, U. S. Mint, San Francisco, Cal., U. S. A.
President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
Miss Alice E. Briggs, Office Secretary, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large—Lady Henry Somerset, 25, Memorial Hall, Farringdon St., London, E. C., England.
Secretary—Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, 1115, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Assistant Secretary—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Illinois, U. S. A.
Treasurer—Mrs. Ella F. M. Williams, 26 Chomedy St., Montreal, Can.

AUXILIARIES.

Date of Organizat'n.
1874	United States—Miss Frances E. Willard.
1876	Great Britain—Lady Henry Somerset.
1882	New South Wales—Mrs. Euphemia Bowes, Middleton St., Stanmore, Sydney.
1883	Canada—Mrs. Ella F. M. Williams, 26 Chomedy St., Montreal.
1884	Hawaiian Is.—Mrs. Mary S. Whitney, Honolulu.
1885	New Zealand—Mrs. A. J. Schnackenberg, Auckland.
"	Queensland—Mrs. Elizabeth Brentnall, Coorparoo, Brisbane.
"	Victoria—Mrs. William McLean, 28 Russell St., Melbourne.
"	South Australia—Mrs. E. W. Nichols, Prospect, Adelaide.
"	Tasmania—Mrs. Grace Soltan, Mildmay Cottage, Launceston.
1886	Bulgaria—Mrs. Eleuka Nicoloff, Philippopolis.
"	Japan—Mrs. Kaji Yajima, Tokio.
"	China—Mrs. M. J. Farnham, 18 Peking Road, Shanghai.
1887	Straits Settlements—Mrs. Rev. C. C. Kelso, Anglo-Chinese School, Singapore.
"	Burma—Mrs. Julius Smith, 33 Fraser St., Rangoon.
"	India—Mrs. Jeannette G. Hauser, Deaconess' Home, Lal Bagh, Lucknow. □ Lecturer, Pundita Ramabai, Poona.
"	Cape Colony—Miss Campbell, Wellington.
1888	Madagascar—Mrs. Edith M. Clark, Antananarivo.
"	France—Miss de Broen, 205 Rue Honore, Paris.
"	Denmark—Mrs. Elisabet Selmer, Nyhavn 63, Copenhagen.
1889	Chile—Mrs. Ida A. T. Arms, Colejio Americano, Concepcion
"	Natal—Mrs. Fernie, Sydenham.
"	Sierra Leone—Mrs. Bishop Ingham, Bishop Court, Free Town.
"	Asia Minor—Mrs. J. E. Pierce, Bardezag.
1890	Corea—Mrs. B. S. Ohlinger, Seoul.
"	Bahamas—Mrs. Annie W. Dillet, Nassau, New Providence.
"	Newfoundland—Mrs. J. E. P. Peters, St. John's.
1891	Egypt—Miss A. G. Thompson, American Mission, Cairo.
"	Madeira Islands—Mrs. Smart, Funchal, Madeira.
"	Spain—Mrs. Alice Gordon Gulick, San Sebastian.
"	Italy—Mrs. Menricoffre, Naples.
"	Greece—Mrs. Rev. Kalopothakes, Athens.
"	South African Republic—Mrs. Mary F. Gray, Pretoria.
"	Australasia—Miss Jessie A. Ackermann, 2 Frances St., Sydney, New South Wales.
1892	Argentina—Miss Mary L. Swaney, 949 Calle Commercio, Rosario.
"	Uruguay—Mrs. Marinda Greenman, 242 Calle Tacuaramba, Montevideo.
"	Brazil—Mrs. Francisca B. Nelson, Caixa N 449, Para.
"	Norway—Ida, Countess Wedel-Jarlsberg, Christiania.
"	Jamaica—Miss Constantia Maddix, 17 Laws St., Kingston.
"	West Australia—Mrs. Charlotte Taylor, Albany.
1893	Iceland—Mrs. Sigrid Magnusson, 31 Bateham St., Cambridge, England.
"	The Netherlands—Mme. M. W. de Ranitz, Groningen.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF DEPARTMENTS.

Bible Readings—Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, 44 Grosvenor Road Westminster, London, S. W., England.
Press Reporter—Mrs. M. G. C. Edholm, East Oakland, Cal., U. S. A.
Scientific Temperance Instruction—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, 23 Trull St., Boston, Massachusetts, U. S. A.
Sunday-school Work—Miss Lucia E. F. Kimball, 644 W. Monroe St., Chicago, U. S. A.
Penal, Charitable, and Reformatory Work—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I., U. S. A.
Fairs and Expositions—Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, 519 N. Penn St., Indianapolis, Ind., U. S. A.
Peace and International Arbitration—Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, Winthrop Centre, Me., U. S. A.
Juvenile Work—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.
Young Women's Branch—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 146 W. 103 St., New York City., U. S. A.
Promotion Social Purity—Mrs. Josephine E. Butler, Winchester, England.
Work Among Sailors—Miss Agnes Weston, Sailors' Rest, Portsmouth, England.
Work Among Policemen—Miss Catherine Gurney, Christian Policemen's Association, Strand, London, W. C., England.
Savings Banks—Mrs. S. H. Oberholtzer, Norristown, Pa., U. S. A.
Petitions and Treaties—Miss Gwenllian Morgan, Brecon, South Wales, Great Britain.
World's Archives—Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, The Temple, Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.
Evangelistic—Miss Elizabeth W. Greenwood, 151 Remsen St., Brooklyn, New York, U. S. A.
Associate—Miss Mary E. Green, Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands.

News from the Field.

INDIANA ITEMS.

"The old order changeth, yielding place to new,
And God fulfills Himself in many ways
Lest one good custom should corrupt the world."

Each reform has its enthusiastic advocates, which is necessary to "make the wheels go round." We of the W. C. T. U. think we have most of the reforms within our own organization; consequently we have "wheels within our wheel." It is encouraging to know that many of the wheels are moving nicely in this state.

Our lecturers and evangelists are kept as busy as in more prosperous times. Mrs. Calkins, our new vice-president, in one month, visited twenty towns, organizing and strengthening unions. She wins the hearts of her co-workers, and awakens enthusiasm as a lecturer.

By their

PUBLIC ENTERTAINMENTS

our local unions keep our cause before the public. An oratorical contest in Columbus, Bartholomew county, drew a crowded house. The entertainment was called "The Sear and Yellow Leaf." Married ladies were the contestants. A medal contest was held in December, in Vevay, Switzerland county. Four silver and one gold medal contest are reported by Green county. Grant, at the county convention, reported three Demorest, two Cooper and two Old Folks' contests. Mrs. Balch, our state superintendent of medal contests, says our state has one Dobson and two Cooper diamond medals, twelve grand gold medals in the Demorest system, about 2,000 silver and 200 small gold medals. Mr. Cooper has a suffrage system which Mrs. Balch will introduce into our state this year.

Indiana is the

BANNER STATE FOR L. T. L. WORK

and Wabash and Grant are our banner counties. Grant reports ten L. T. L's, with a membership of five hundred. The L. T. L. of Kokomo gave a thanksgiving dinner to four hundred hungry children from among the poor. Twelve baskets of provisions were sent to poor families.

Our local unions are largely engaged in

WORKS OF CHARITY.

Reports of visits to almshouses and to the sick and poor are given. In one county the flower mission department has taken up the work of furnishing bed linen and delicacies for the sick. This union has converted its parlor meetings into sewing bees, repairing clothing for the poor.

The jail and prison work is also well conducted by this busy Kokomo union, visits being made three Sundays in every month. The most consecrated women in the Evansville union are engaged in the jail and prison work. In some cases permanent good seems to have been effected. Some were brought to Christ, as proved by their daily life since released from prison.

PRESS SUPERINTENDENTS give encouraging reports. The president of Dubois county filled a column weekly for four years without omission, when illness caused an interruption. Such faithfulness should be emulated by others. Many others report faithfulness and success. One relieves the editor of the responsibility of her column by announcing at the head of the column, "Edited by county press superintendent."

OUR Y. W. C. T. U.

is in good hands. Morgan county Y reports 220 visits, and 70 helped during the year. They also distributed 3,304 pages of literature. Grant county and others give good reports. The young lady who is president of the Evansville Y has been admitted to the practice of law at the Evansville bar. Grant county leads an active work, there being thirteen unions, with an aggregate membership of three hundred and sixty-two, and twenty-one departments of work well conducted. They distributed thirty thousand pages of literature during the year.

CRUSADE DAY

will, no doubt, be reported to THE UNION SIGNAL by many local unions. Evansville unions united on the 23d in celebrating the day. The Crusade sermon was delivered by Rev. W. J. Coulston, of the Baptist church. It was a most eloquent, patriotic address. We think good results will follow.

Let us work on, remembering that,

"Work is worship. God, my sisters,
Takes our toil for homage sweet
And accepts as signs of worship
Well-worn hands and feet."

MRS. N. CORNELIA MEADOWS,
State Reporter, Evansville.

DURING hard times consumers cannot afford to experiment with inferior, cheap brands of baking powder. It is NOW that the great strength and purity of the ROYAL stand out as a friend in need to those who desire to practise Economy in the Kitchen. Each spoonful does its perfect work. Its increasing sale bears witness that it is a necessity to the prudent—it goes further.

N. B. Grocers say that every dollar invested in Royal Baking Powder is worth a dollar the world over, that it does not consume their capital in dead stock, because it is the great favorite, and sells through all times and seasons.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL ST., NEW-YORK.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

WORK AMONG LUMBERMEN.

A want that has long been felt is supplied, and the lumberman's work will be pushed even farther than our energetic superintendent, Mrs. Loyne, has been able to do. Mr. Arthur Drury has been engaged to do the work of distribution of reading for the coming winter. Mr. Drury has had several years experience in connection with the Young Men's Christian Association at Wildwood, N. H. One month's wages have been paid (for his missionary work) by Samuel D. Davis, Esq., of New York. Other funds will aid in defraying the expenses, and we look for further aid from any one, anywhere, who has the interest of these lumbermen at heart. Mr. Drury moved his family to headquarters, and began work with the New Year. All boxes and barrels of reading will be sent as heretofore to our superintendent, Mrs. W. A. Loyne, Jefferson, N. H. It is Mrs. Loyne's intention, with the aid of friends, to publish a letter each month giving a full account of the work done in this department, and what is received for the support of the camp and from whom. There is a broad field for work here.

The Penacook W. C. T. U. has ten honorary members instead of sixty, as printed in my last letter.

THE NASHUA W. C. T. U.,

as ever before, is up and doing. Never were seen more devoted workers. They maintain a reading-room; hold Sunday and Thursday meetings in their room, often going to the city farm and other places to hold meetings. The first Sunday of every month they hold a meeting and have a lecture in the City Hall. The two reform clubs are holding meetings every week. The Royal Templar evangelist, William Moull, spoke there not long since. The city is aroused upon the temperance question.

A general movement is being set on foot to drive the saloons from our cities and establish a prohibitory law throughout the state. As a result of this agitation two papers have been started. Manchester has The Times, the leading purpose of which is to "represent and promote prohibition sentiment, and generally to summarize the situation throughout the country." Its editors are J. M. Fletcher and Sol Cutter.

An Italian restaurant was opened in Nashua not long since to which was invited the city officials, members of the churches, the police commissioners and many of Nashua's first business men. Wine was freely drank. The public are greatly aroused that the laws are so ignored and The Times asks this question: "Can the church members who sat by and not only countenanced this wine sipping—but partook—expect the Lord to hear their public prayer, 'Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil' when they have helped to open in their midst one of the devil's strongest temptations and snares to degrade the young men whose souls they are pretending to save?" It is not consistent for those who should enforce a prohibitory law to become the guests who open such a house. No wonder the W. C. T. U. of Nashua feels the need of constant work.

The Weekly Citizen has just been established in Concord with a publishing committee of five gentlemen. It is their intention to have a W. C. T. U. page as soon as arrangements can be made for suitable correspondents from the various unions throughout the state. It is a sixteen page newspaper with the latest intelligence both local and general and has a temperance sentiment, divorced from politics, pervading every issue. Three pages are devoted exclusively to temperance matter.

There was a public mass-meeting in Concord early in January at which the best ways and means for securing temperance were discussed.

Miss C. R. Wendell, our state president, is actively engaged in pushing in our schools. She believes that we must depend upon our coming generations for a better moral and temperance standard; she believes that we must look to the coming man to raise the standard of public, private and social life. Teach the child the injurious effects of tobacco and liquors with the same earnestness that arithmetic is taught and he will reach manhood armed with an intelligent weapon with which to defend himself against temptation. Teach well our boys and girls that they may be clean men and women.

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION

The Mercy Home received Christmas gifts from the following unions: Wilton, Lancaster, Hillsborough, Bridge and Nashua. North Ware W. C. T. U. sent an album quilt and twenty dollars to defray current expenses at the Home. We have just passed the in response to the call. Many unions held a service on that day.

TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE WOMAN'S CRUSADE

We report a successful meeting on Crusade day at Bow Mills, and hope to tell of more next time.

Rev. D. H. Howard lectured in Nashua City Hall the last Sunday in December under the auspices of the W. C. T. U.

COUNTY CONVENTIONS.

Dover entertained the Strafford county convention at their last meeting. The following officers were chosen: President, Mrs. H. B. L. Perkins, of Somersworth; secretary, Mrs. E. A. Dorr, Somersworth; treasurer, Mrs. C. M. Abbott, of Rochester. Mrs. J. A. Winn gave a paper on "Heredity" which was followed by a discussion. Dr. Wallace gave a most excellent paper on "Hygiene." She thinks it is the duty of the W. C. T. U. to inform the people on this subject, and open their eyes to the causes which injure the health of the community. She emphasized the necessity of good sanitary conditions and proper food in all our homes. A paper on the "Relation of the Church to the Temperance Cause" was read by Rev. Mr. Chapin, of Durham.

Grafton county W. C. T. U. met at Lisbon. The meeting was opened by devotional exercises by Mrs. S. Eaton. The president, Mrs. G. W. Richardson, then called for reports from the unions. Littleton was credited the banner union, having raised $527 during the year for various purposes. Mrs. Richardson read an interesting letter from Mrs. Knox, of North Dakota. Mr. A. B. Crawford spoke of the drink cure work, and Mrs. C. Gould presented the work and needs of the Mercy Home. There were papers upon physical culture and "From Contest to Conquest." The Lisbon ladies formed themselves into a union. The convention closed with a gold medal contest, held in the town hall, Miss Danforth winning the medal.

The Rockingham county W. C. T. U. con-

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

MOST PERFECT MADE.

A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

vention was held in Epping; eleven unions were represented by a goodly number. The report of the unions show that there has been a steady increase in the work done throughout the county. A mothers' meeting, conducted by Mrs. Hill, was very helpful. Prayer is the mother's and the child's safeguard. Supply the home with useful and entertaining reading. It is the mothers' duty to know with whom their children associate and by what influences they are surrounded. Rev. Mr. Copp and Mr. C. A. Pollard spoke to the convention.

Before closing this letter I wish to quote a few ideas from a Concord minister, which appear in the minister's column of the Weekly Citizen: "Intemperance is a stubborn vice, wrought into the very structures of society by centuries of habit. To cure such a disease is a very slow and difficult work. In such a chronic case as intemperance no one panacea is likely to prove all-sufficient. Whatever really helps toward a cure, that should be used. If internal medicines are best, give them. If external medicines are best, apply them, but let no one insist that his remedy is the only one. No sentiment, custom or law can be sustained or enforced without the support of the public brain and the public conscience. Men equally wise and good differ as to what political and moral methods society should use to check and conquer intemperance. Without passing judgment upon the convictions of other men, I will express my own conviction that the moral education and elevation of the individual is the chief source to which we must look for hope and help. I do not say it is the only source."

MRS. F. H. BAILEY,
State Reporter, Hopkinton.

CRUSADE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

UTICA, Ill., observed Crusade day by a special meeting in the afternoon. Union church services were held on Christmas eve. Both meetings were well attended.

CRUSADE Day in Chester, Neb., was observed by a consecration meeting, and a mass-meeting later. The young people helped to make the latter meeting a success.

THE Olive Branch W. C. T. U. of Newport, Ky., is a new union full of vigor, which has chosen for its text the coming year, "Lord, increase our faith." Their observance of Crusade day was well attended, and three new members were added.

ANOTHER report of a Crusade celebration comes from Prescott, Ark., where a little band of temperance women had a very entertaining program. The house was full of the best women in the town, and many words of praise were uttered.

MANY heard the story of the Crusade for the first time at the meeting of the Demorest, Ga., union, where twelve women, one of whom was an original Crusader, took part in the exercises. "Many of the present generation were children in those stirring times and it is well for the U's to tell on these 'red letter' days the 'why's' and 'wherefores,'" adds our correspondent.

DELANO, Cal., union did not hold its Crusade meeting until January. The union is small, the day was dismal and rainy, but a few met and enjoyed the service of reading, songs, papers and personal reminiscences by a Crusader member. The president's paper, "Forward not Backward," was highly spoken of. Three new members were obtained and more are expected.

CRUSADE day was observed by the Delaware, O., union, by a meeting on Saturday afternoon and evening and Sabbath afternoon, December 23 and 24,—a fine program all the way through. Among the number taking part in the exercises was Ohio's first president, Mrs. H. C. McCabe, Mrs. Dr. Bashford, Mrs. S. A. Keen, Mrs. M. E. Bing, Mrs. Clerom and several of the pastors also assisted, closing with the Outlook, by Mrs. Morgan.

THREE years ago last November, the Ocala, Fla., union was organized by Mrs. Mary Hunt. At first the struggle for existence was so great that it was very disheartening, but three faithful members "held the fort," were finally reinforced and have worked steadily on increasing slowly but surely. Their L. T. L., after a similar experience, is now in a flourishing condition, and has held two Demorest medal contests this winter, which have awakened considerable interest.

EDUCATIVE work is being done in Colorado, participated in by women. A parliamentary drill led by Mrs. Telford, vice-president of the Colorado W. C. T. U., was held at the reading room recently. The subject of discussion was, "Resolved, that we will religiously stay away from the polls on all election days." Officers and members of the Y's, the Equal Suffrage League, the Woman's Relief Corps, literary clubs composed of women, and missionary and aid societies of the various churches were invited.

"'BETTER is the end of a thing than the beginning,' said the wisest of men. This is true of the W. C. T. U. God grant we of to-day may, with spirits as reverent as they who began this work, lift up our heads with hope and joy, and with freshly girded loins and new faith in God, set out in this new year of work, to do and dare, as the Christ may lead the way," writes an earnest white-ribboner of Greece, N. Y., anent our twentieth Crusade celebration.

AT Bolivar, N. Y., the W. C. T. U. gave a public meeting in honor of the twentieth Crusade anniversary. Rev. Potter gave a history of the Crusade, paying a tribute of honor to Mother Thompson. Mrs. Van Vradenburg, formerly superintendent of the Deaconess Home of Pittsburg, Pa., touched upon the Christian character of the W. C. T. U. work, and Rev. Stone spoke of intemperance, license, and urged "absolute prohibition for county, state and nation." Two new members were received and three new subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL.

A MASS-MEETING preparatory to the Crusade services was held at Sedalia, Mo., presided over by Mrs. Lucy M. Wisker, editor of Missouri Home Guard. Ministers and members of many congregations took part. Earnest addresses were made by Rev. Mr. Marquis, Mrs. Heaton, an original Crusader, and Mrs. Brown, president of the Catholic W. T. U. The Crusade services were held December 23, at the First M. E. Church. Each hour, from ten to four, had special leaders. Delegates from the R. R. T. A. and Miss Sherman, railroad evangelist, were present. A grand temperance revival is resulting.

AN evening session with campfire from 6:30 to 7:30 was the way in which Pendleton, Ore., celebrated Crusade Day. It was made a union service, and all the ministers in the town were invited. It was difficult to tell which was the most pleasing feature, whether the addresses by two of our young ministers, which were filled with encouragement and good cheer, or the singing of the two old songs, "Some Glad Day," and "'Twas Rum that Spoiled My Boy." It was an uplifting service, and they felt truly that "one can chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight." Three new members were the outcome of the "tarrying."

Official Communications.

SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

A NATIONAL SUNDAY REST LAW

for which our organization worked so hard a few yesrs since, is of more importance than ever, and we are making petition work, therefore, this year's specialty, and thousands of petitions are now being circulated, but it is a mistake to suppose we plan to push the matter before Congress this winter. Tariff, silver and Hawaii are all engrossing, and exclude moral questions like ours. We hope the way will be open a year hence, and H. W. Blair, author of "Blair's bill," and who is now in the House of Representatives, promises to re-introduce his bill at the opportune time.

We must prepare the way with a petition of millions, and hence it is given as part of the year's work, that good weather may be chosen and the work be done thoroughly in every street and byway, and every school district in the land. Do not neglect or postpone work till a future time; order headings and "Blair's bill" of which each canvasser should have a copy, from the undersigned, at ten cents a hundred, get all endorsements possible, and names of both men and women. Do not be afraid of repeating unless names have been gathered within a year, which is not likely. Further directions are on the headings.

THE FIRST WEEK OF APRIL

is the central focus of our year's work. The call for a "Union of Prayer for the Lord's Day," leaflet No. 62, is now out, signed by all the leading Sabbath associations of the country, and can be ordered for distribution from the undersigned, ten cents a hundred. It is high time every union was laying its plans to set apart that week for work for the Sabbath cause. Get the promise of one or more sermons from each pastor, of special instruction in the Sabbath school; let this be the subject of all church and W. C. T. U. prayer-meetings that week, and if possible, let every local union put aside at least a dollar for Sabbath literature to be that week distributed at church doors and from house to house as the petition or pledge is circulated.

We cannot afford to let the awakened Sabbath interest die away, but must this year intensify it if we would have a sentiment that shall demand a national Sunday rest law. Forty leaflets are offered by the undersigned for this purpose.

The main work of this year is to be local under the direction of the state superintendent; do not leave her to work alone; let every union make its influence felt against Sunday travel, the Sunday newspaper, Sunday visiting, excursions, base ball, and all the varied forms of Sabbath desecration. Talk about these things, write about them for the papers, ask the pastors to speak of them specifically in their sermons and above all, dear sisters, see that your own example is a safe one to follow.

MRS. J. C. BATEHAM, Nat. Supt.
Williamsburg, Ky.

Treasurer's Corner.

DIMES AND DOLLARS.

We are still cheered by the silver chimes of the tinkling dimes on the office table, and the equally cheering though softer rustle of the money orders and currency. Glad we are, too, for this help. A little from each is not burdensome, and yet the donors can hardly realize how it has helped to tide us over the awful stringency that has so affected all enterprises.

A letter from our chieftain says: "I am much pleased that the money has come in so promptly in response to my 'poor' wail." She then urges me to give all an opportunity as, "It is not fair that some women should give ten cents and the others should not." I think she feels like Paul who wrote to the Corinthians, "I mean not that others be eased and ye burdened; but by an equality your abundance may be a supply for their want and their abundance also may be a supply for your want; that there may be equality." This is the gospel rule.

A good Christian, temperance man in Washington (state) has recently finished his life work and gone over to the better side, and only a few days before his death he sent two notes, secured by real estate mortgage, each for $1,800, one to the Temple and one to the National, the first maturing in 1896 and the other in 1898, each bearing ten per cent interest, so the outlook for the future of our National W. C. T. U. is hopeful, but the present emergency is still upon us.

We have learned that it will probably be a year at least before Mr. Rogers' gift will be available and may be much longer. I greatly hope we may entirely clear the treasury so that the three thousand dollars may be laid aside as a fund upon which we may fall back in a similar emergency, should one occur. It is encouraging that good men are beginning to remember us in their bequests. It shows that the National has passed the experimental period and is recognized as an institution that has come to stay.

From New Castle, Penn., comes the result of a collection that was taken among a few congenial spirits at a W. C. T. U. reception on New Year's Day. It was dropped into a mite-box, suspended by a white ribbon to Miss Willard's picture, with a card attached, bearing the words, "Help me 'make the wheels go 'round.'"

A friend from Melbourne, Wash., sends three dimes from a treasury nearly collapsed from a trip to the World's Fair and World's and National Conventions, and assures us that she is not "done with it," but hopes to "pay in proportion as she has received."

Again I must call attention to the need of giving the state. I have one dollar from Arcadia, and thirteen states have a post-office by that name. I shall be glad to send a receipt if the sender will tell me which Arcadia it is.

A dear old lady from Astoria, Ill., sends $1 and says, "I should have responded to Miss Willard's appeal sooner, but wanted to send a little more. I am in my eighty-seventh year and have earned this dollar by knitting pin cushion covers. One dime is for me and the nine for delinquents." Was not that a sweet spirit? Willing to work for nine poor women that could not or would not give. May richest blessings of peace and joy rest upon this faithful pilgrim, and may we all have some of her unselfish spirit.

From District of Columbia comes a letter telling of the translation of our aged sister, Rachel Jewell Baker, and enclosing a dime for her and one for the writer, for the National debt.

A white-ribboner from Pennsylvania sends $1 and says: "Please accept a few dimes gathered from friends where I am stopping. They are not members, but are friends of the cause. I hope to send more soon." How many others would be glad to give this trifle if given an opportunity.

A gift of $1.50 from West union, Ohio, says, "The prayer of each sister goes with the gift, knowing that with the Lord's blessing upon them they may accomplish wonders."

A family from San Juan sends five dimes, one for each member and says. "We read THE UNION SIGNAL with great interest."

Thin Children Grow Fat

on Scott's Emulsion, because fat foods make fat children. They are thin, and remain thin just in proportion to their inability to assimilate food rich in fat.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod Liver Oil is especially adaptable to those of weak digestion—it is partly digested already. Astonishing how quickly a thin person gains solid flesh by its use!

Almost as palatable as milk.

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All druggists.

Happy As a Clam

is the person who for years has been suffering from indigestion, dyspepsia and general debility, when he discovers the curative properties of

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON.

In all gastric troubles it effects a permanent cure. It is a natural food, easily digested. Stop taking drugs and try it.

Never buy Clam Bouillon for the sick, except in Glass Bottles.

Grocers and Druggists.

Six ½ pint bottles expressed for $1.50. Send stamps for book, "Household Hints."

E. S. Burnham Co., 120 Ganesvoort St., N. Y.

Health! Can you buy it? Yes, when it is possible with a single box of

Beecham's Pills

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

(Tasteless)

to cure Indigestion Biliousness and Sick-headache.

25 cents a box.

5

No local dealer can compete with us

WALL PAPER

in variety or price. Our new designs and colorings are handsomer this year than ever before.

Our "Guide How to Paper and Economy in Home Decoration," mailed free with samples

Beautiful Gold Paper, 5c. per Roll.

We carry the largest stock in the country, and can save you 50 per cent. on every roll of paper you buy. No matter where you live, if you have any use for wall paper, send 10c. to nearest address to pay postage on a large package of samples. One good agent or paper hanger wanted in each town to sell from sample books, price $1.00.

ALFRED PEATS,

80-82 W. 18th St., NEW YORK. 136-138 W. Madison St., CHICAGO.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS,

But save you money on everything you eat, wear or use. Send 8 cts. for full catalogue.

H. R. EAGLE & Co., 68 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BAKER'S COCOA

ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike th Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used

YOUNG LADIES SHOULD WEAR GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS. Permit full breathing.

The giving of dimes seems to inspire poetic effusions. Here is one:

At the call of our Chieftain from over the sea,
"We'll do it and be done with it," right cheerfully,
Though late in the day to respond to the call,
Better late, says the adage, than not come at all.
Here are seven little dimes, all in a row,
Which seven white-ribboners did freely bestow.
The "small drops of water make the ocean," you know,
And "from little acorns the tall oaks grow,"
And also our boundless and beauteous land
Is composed of the tiniest atoms of sand.
So as dimes by themselves, so small do appear,
If numbered by thousands you've nothing to fear.
And soon I will hope the glad news will resound,
We've money in plenty and even abound.

Demorest, Ga., sends $4 expressing "loyalty to our cause and to our Chieftain." Listen to their heroic words: "Although most of our members need their dimes in these trying times, every member has cheerfully responded. I believe all that is necessary is for one or more members with faith and zeal to start out resolved to call on every member. They will be surprised to see how cheerfully they respond." Faith and zeal coupled with love for our cause will not only replenish our treasury but will keep it full. HELEN M. BARKER.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

THE WORK AND WORKERS.

The president of Wisconsin W. C. T. U. writes: "Wisconsin is looking up, and a good many unions have been formed, which betokens that interest is wisely conserved." We acknowledge our obligation to Mrs. Campbell for her appreciative words: "I like THE UNION SIGNAL very much better this year, because it is more helpful; it seems more like an official organ. It is a good deal for our corresponding secretary and treasurer to prepare something for each week's issue, but readers turn eagerly to their columns."

A most earnest appeal comes from our Jennie Smith, who has been in the midst of a continuous revival among railroad men since the late Convention, that these men be remembered by reading matter, scrap books and bright cards sent to her at Mountain Lake Park, Md., as good fruit has been the result of such remembrance in the past. She has been at St. Louis and De Soto, Mo., where, by request of the chiefs, meetings have been held among the police and with firemen, as well as railroad men; and was cheered at Springfield, when she found the Railroad Temperance Association, organized a year ago, has not failed to hold a meeting each Tuesday noon, while organized quartettes and glee clubs have given added interest to the work.

Miss Frances E. Griffin, after good work in Kentucky, has left for a month's service in Louisiana, from which she will go to De Funiak, Fla., by invitation of Dr. Davidson, superintendent of the Chautauqua Assembly, which will then be in session, and returning, will take Georgia en route.

Though Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, superintendent of the department of school savings banks of the World's W. C. T. U., is in Frieburg, Germany, she reaches out to the world, her territory, and writes, "There is much demand for the literature of the department, though we are sorry that there is frequent failure to send postage when ordering leaflets." It reminds us of the man who, when given a sack of flour, notwithstanding the great need of his family, manifested no pleasure, and at length said pleadingly, "Couldn't you carry it home for me?" We extend heartful gratitude to Mrs. Oberholtzer for her expressed wish "that she could gather Headquarters workers into her home where they might rest awhile," and we would delight to be taken in.

Mary Wood Allen, M. D., National superintendent of the department of purity, has issued her plan of work for the year which, as she says, "is directed along three lines, Legislation, Reformation and Education." As everything from her pen is able and educatory, we most heartily commend it to our unions. It not only covers the whole field, but embraces a list of books suitable for young people and for mothers and teachers, and advises all to read "Traffic in Girls and Florence Crittenton Missions," of which, through the kindness of Mr. Crittenton, the W. C. T. U. is conducting five. Address Dr. Allen, 1412 Adams street, Toledo, Ohio.

Surely there are "footprints of great" women, as of "great men" who have made life sublime. We hear from Annie W. Dillet, of Nassau, Bahamas, of the loss of two presidents of the W. C. T. U. of the Bahama Islands, and a third fitted and ready for work has been completely laid aside, yet the union falters not, but presses on with trust and hope. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE.

Organizers' Corner.

[It is the desire of the editors of THE UNION SIGNAL that this Corner should serve the National Organizers as a sort of Lecture Bureau, and to that end they are invited to send their calendar of appointments long enough ahead to secure engagements in the territory to which they are called.]

The following is the list of National organizers for the present year, and whether W's or Y's they are all accredited public speakers and fully prepared to organize W's, Y's, L. T. L's, or speak to the general public and add to the membership of unions.

For terms and dates address as below:

Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.
Mrs. L. H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.
Miss Frances E. Griffin, 69 Maple street, Chicago.
Mrs. Mary Bynon Reese, Chautauqua, Wash.
Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, 1907 Bush street, San Francisco, Cal.
Mrs. E. A. Blair, 936 Cottage Place, Los Angeles, Cal.
Mrs. Maude L. Green, Manitou Springs, Col.
Mrs. E. Norinne Law, Baraga, Mich.
Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.
Mrs. Delle H. Cox, Newberg, Ore.
Miss Ida Clothier, Manitou Springs, Col.
Mrs. Henrietta Skelton, 132 McAllister street, San Francisco, Cal.
Miss S. C. Harris, Franklin, Va.
Mrs. F. E. W. Harper, Bainbridge street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.
Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.
Miss Frances Ensign, Madison, O.
Mrs. E. A. Kenyon, Townshend, Vt.

Mrs. Mary McGee Snell has just closed a series of evangelistic meetings in Tennessee, under the special direction of Mr. W. L. Noell, president of the Christian Endeavor Society. She spoke last week before the Mississippi legislature, in the interest of a prohibition amendment to the state constitution. Mrs. Snell is now in Louisiana, holding evangelistic protracted meetings a week at a time in the larger towns in the southwest part of the state.

PETITION OF THE WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE HOME.

Addressed to the Governments of the World.

Honored Rulers, Representatives and Brothers:

We, your Petitioners, although belonging to the physically weaker sex, are strong of heart to love our homes, our native land, and the world's family of nations.

We know that clear brains and pure hearts make honest lives and happy homes, and that by these the nations prosper, and the time is brought nearer when the world shall be at peace.

We know that indulgence in Alcohol and Opium, and in other vices which disgrace our social life, makes misery for all the world, and most of all for us and for our children.

We know that stimulants and opiates are sold under legal guarantees which make the Governments partners in the traffic, by accepting as revenue a portion of the profits, and we know with shame that they are often forced by treaty upon populations, either ignorant or unwilling.

We know that the law might do much, now left undone, to raise the moral tone of society and render vice difficult.

We have no power to prevent these great iniquities beneath which the whole world groans, but you have power to redeem the honor of the nations from an indefensible complicity.

We therefore come to you with the united voices of representative women of every land, beseeching you to raise the standard of the law to that of Christian morals, to strip away the safeguards and sanctions of the state from the drink traffic and the opium trade, and to protect our homes by the total prohibition of these curses of civilization throughout all the territory over which your Government extends.

NAMES. | RESIDENCES.

Will not everybody who loves the great cause of home protection, send to Miss Alice E. Briggs, Evanston, Ill., for the regular form, and circulate it to the best of her ability, mailing the names to Miss Briggs. Use separate blanks for men and women

Our Library Table.

APPLIED CHRISTIANITY. Under this title there is published a series of sermons by Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, entitled "A New Help for the Drunkard;" "Tobacco the Second Intoxicant;" "Not Institutions but Homes," and "No Sex in Crime." The latter stands without a peer in its fearless handling of the question of purity, and should be read by all who believe in the "White Life for Two." "Not Institutions but Homes," deals with the question of providing homes for homeless children from the individual rather than institutional standpoint. "The Woman's Uprising," by the same author, is a magnificent tribute to woman's powers, as shown in the Columbian Exposition with an earnest note of warning as well.

RELIGIONS OF THE WORLD, by the same author, is a series of seven sermons, bound in attractive booklets and put up in a neat manilla case. Together they may be said to constitute a prelude to the parliament of religions, and treat in fresh, terse thought of Moses, Confucius, Zoroaster, Buddha, Socrates, Jesus and Mohammed. Whether or not one agrees with Mr. Jones, theologically, or sees from his standpoint, his words have always the twofold charm of originality, and courage of conviction. The present series cannot fail of more clearly interpreting these great teachers to the religious world.

A CHORUS OF FAITH. If "Religions of the World" constitutes the prelude to the Parliament, then A CHORUS OF FAITH, by the same author, is its postlude. In it Mr. Jones has chosen carefully and discriminatingly the choicest sayings of the Parliament, and blended them together in a genuine harmony, under the headings of "Greeting," "Harmony of the Prophets," "Holy Bibles," "Unity of Ethics," "Brotherhood," "The Soul," "The Thought of God," "The Crowning Day that's Coming" and "Farewell." The book will prove invaluable to those who have neither time nor money for more elaborate histories of that most notable gathering, which is destined so largely to influence the future in its religious development.

Unity Publishing Company, 175 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

SUSTAINED HONOR; A STORY OF THE WAR OF 1812, by John R. Musick. Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York.

The historical matter in this volume pertains to the period embraced in the administration of Presidents Jefferson, Madison and Monroe. The novel which is interwoven with the history adds the charm of romance, and renders the book fascinating as well as educational. The book deals with some of the remote and direct causes of the war of 1812, our second war with England. It derives its title, "Sustained Honor," from the victory of the patriotic war party over the partisan peace party. It gives a view of the incidents which clustered around, and helped form the events of that time. From Fernando Stevens, the hero of the romance in this novel, some idea may be derived of the sturdy pioneer life of seventy-five years ago. The book is finely illustrated.

HUMBLED PRIDE: A STORY OF THE MEXICAN WAR. Vol. XI., the Columbian Historical Novels. By John R. Musick. Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York, London and Toronto.

This volume supplies a readable and interesting account of historical events pertaining to the administration of Presidents John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson, Martin Van Buren, William H. Harrison, John Tyler, Jas. K. Polk, Zachary Taylor, Millard Fillmore and Franklin Pierce.

In this book the slavery question almost rises to a climax. The romance of the volume is, perhaps, better conceived than in any of the preceding numbers of the series. Dr. Trunnel's underground railroad, the inveigling of slaves into belief that they were escaping their masters, and selling them into slavery in the West Indies, is all told in the story of Major Stevens' yellow boy, John; a tender and pathetic story, which begins in Kentucky and ends in Cuba, with the close of the Cuban insurrection.

The uniting of the family of Stevens with the Estevan family after a separation of nearly three hundred years adds a charm to the story, and further unites the series, both in romance and in history. There are pen pictures of the hard-cider campaign of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." The means which young Stevens took to proselyte Pat from a Democrat to a Whig is a humorous illustration of the peculiar workings of American politics. Old political terms, almost forgotten, are resurrected and incarnated with new life. One of the most amusing chapters is "Arthur's Mishaps," in which there are many humorous episodes.

You Need It!

The Columbia Pad Calendar,

altogether the neatest and most attractive 1894 calendar issued. An indispensable desk necessity. It has daily leaves, with clever pen drawings on some, bright and interesting contributions on others, ample room for memoranda on all. Send seven two-cent stamps and we will mail it.

Address Calendar Dept.

POPE MFG. CO.,
221 Columbus Ave.,
BOSTON.

Mention this paper.

Knox's Sparkling Calves' Foot Gelatine

THE PUREST MADE

Received the only Medal and Diploma at the World's Fair, Chicago, on Package Gelatine for table use, for STRENGTH, PURITY and GOOD FLAVOR.

The only Gelatine positively free from odor or taste. Our new package has Rose Gelatine in top of each package to make fancy desserts. Your grocer has it if he keeps the best.

CHARLES B. KNOX, Johnstown, N. Y.

Send a 2-cent stamp for little book. "DAINTY DESSERTS FOR DAINTY PEOPLE."

THE SIGNAL DID IT!

WHAT? Made hundreds of homes of its readers happy with our "Modern Bath." The thousands who saw them at the World's Fair indorse their merit, for which HIGHEST PRIZE was awarded.

Send 2c. for catalogue illustrating 18 styles.

THE MOSELY FOLDING BATH TUB CO.,
181 K. S. Canal St., CHICAGO.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

FOR MAN AND BEAST.
Manufactured by
THE J. L. Mott Iron Works
84 to 90 Beekman Street,
NEW YORK.
311 & 313 Wabash Ave.
CHICAGO.
Catalogue on Application.

GLOBE SAVINGS BANK

Corner Dearborn and Jackson Sts.,
CHICAGO, ILL.
UNDER STATE CONTROL.
INDIVIDUAL AND SAVINGS ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.
SAFETY ▲ DEPOSIT ▲ VAULTS.

A Swell Affair.

Did You Ever Look Like This?

DENT'S TOOTHACHE GUM
STOPS TOOTHACHE INSTANTLY
DON'T TAKE IMITATIONS
Sold by all Druggists, or send 15c to C. S. DENT & CO., Detroit, Mich.
THIS IS NOT A CHEWING GUM

FAT PEOPLE

YOU can reduce your weight permanently from 10 to 15 lbs. a month at home, secretly, without starving, sickness or injury, by the use of Dr. Clarke's Home Treatment. Perfected in many years' practice. Causes no wrinkles or flabbiness. Stout abdomens, difficult breathing, relieved by sure scientific methods. No experiments. Guaranteed. Best references. Price within reach of all. Write today. Positive proofs and testimonials free.

Dr. F. B. CLARKE, Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

Bickford Family Knitter.

Knits everything required by the household, of any quality, texture and weight desired. A. M. LAWSON, 783 Broadway, N. Y.

Beware of cheap and worthless knitters.

RUBIFOAM FOR THE TEETH

SAMPLE VIAL FREE.
E. W. HOYT & CO., LOWELL, MASS.

SEND TO GOOD & REESE, SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, for their beautiful catalogue of roses and shrubs

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL

Subscription Rates for 1893.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly.

Price per year	$ .50
Young Crusader, monthly, one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago.

SUCCESS OF OUR "PORTFOLIO OF PHOTOGRAPHS" OFFER.

Thousands of our readers are taking advantage of our offer to supply them with the famous John L. Stoddard "Portfolios" at such a phenomenally low price. Everybody expresses their delight with the handsome pictures. While we have no difficulty in filling orders now it is not impossible that in a short time we may be behind some in our orders, but everybody will be supplied in their turn. These views are the finest ever produced by a camera and the sixteen in each portfolio could not be purchased for less than $24. By the plan we have adopted you can get them for almost nothing. It is only necessary to cut out one coupon and send it to our office with five two-cent postage stamps or ten cents in silver to pay the cost of mailing, wrapping, etc., and we will send you the current series. Part 2 is now ready. If you have missed Part 1, you can obtain it by remitting us 20 cents for a copy.

Address,
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

BRIGHT, NEW AND SPARKLING!

Oak and Ivy Leaf
To be Enlarged and Improved.
New Departments.

Handsome Title Page, drawn by our own artist.

Oak and Ivy Leaf,
while maintaining its reputation as the World's and National Organ
OF THE
Y. W. C. T. Unions, will furnish interesting and helpful reading for the Young Woman Reader in general.

Subscribe Now for this good paper.

Special Rates.

To July, 1895, including one year of new volume, one copy..... $ 50
To January, 1895, six months of new volume..... $ 25

For club rates address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

SUBSCRIBE NOW!!

SUBSCRIBE NOW!!

Y's and readers of Oak and Ivy Leaf!

For 50 cents Oak and Ivy Leaf will be sent to you until July 1895,

thus including the whole of the new and enlarged volume and several months of the present series.

For 25 cents, Oak and Ivy Leaf will be sent to you until October, 1894.

These rates take effect on and after this date.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE ADVANCE GUARD

For January

is anxious to enter your homes. Let it in as the avant courier of the special

Neal Dow Number,

which will appear in February, containing, among other things, a fac-simile letter from the "Grand Old Man" of Prohibition.

Subscription price, 50 cents.
Single copy, 5 cents.
Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE RESPONSIVE READING FOR FEBRUARY

is upon LITERATURE, and is now ready.

Each superintendent of literature should place it before her union.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

NEAL DOW PROHIBITION NUMBER

WILL BE ISSUED FEB. 22, 1894

IT WILL CONTAIN

Full page picture of this noted man.
A sketch of his life.
His portraits at different periods.
A short history of the Prohibition movement, statistical from its beginning.
A symposium of opinions of leaders from everywhere on the Prohibition question, and of prominent Maine people as to how it has worked in Maine.

SEND IN YOUR ORDERS EARLY.

PRICE:

Single copies		$ .10
5	"	.25
10	"	.40
15	"	.60
20	"	.75
25	"	.90
100	"	3.00

Orders must invariably be accompanied with CASH.

We give no credit or special discounts on extra issues.

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

SUBSCRIBE NOW

...FOR...

The Young Crusader

A BETTER BRIGHTER BREEZIER PAPER

CANNOT BE BOUGHT.

TERMS: 15c. a year: in packages of twenty-five or over, to one address, at the rate of $1 per 100 each issue.

We are making special terms to boys and girls who will act as agents.

Write for terms to

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
THE TEMPLE,
CHICAGO.

STATE AND LOCAL LITERATURE SUPERINTENDENTS AND OAK AND IVY LEAF SOLICITORS:

All 25c. subscriptions to

Oak and Ivy Leaf

received after this date will send the paper to the subscriber until October, 1894.

For 50c. Oak and Ivy Leaf will be sent to the subscriber until July, 1895.

This, in view of the change in the young woman's paper which raises the rate as above. The change to take place with the July number.

Club rates and premiums to superintendents of literature and Oak and Ivy Leaf solicitors.

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

DEPARTMENT LEAFLETS.

Short, Spicy, Strong.

Just what you need in your department work, and only fifteen cents per 100. $1.25 per 1,000.

Order at once.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

CAN YOU VOTE?

If you are a woman and cannot vote, use your political influence by distributing the Neal Dow Prohibition Number among your gentlemen friends.

See list of prices.

DO YOU WISH IT?

If you do wish the Neal Dow Prohibition Number, to be issued February 22, send in your order at once.

See terms in another column.

WHO WILL SWELL OUR PHILANTHROPY FUND?

Our philanthropy fund is nearly exhausted, yet we continue to receive appeals like the following:

"I see a home, a poor log house, where dwell four orphans who are struggling for a subsistence and an education. The three girls and their brother would read THE UNION SIGNAL with eagerness, and would thank you with tearful eyes if you would send a copy from the philanthropy fund. 'Twas drink that made them poor."

RESPONSIVE READINGS

For February.

The responsive reading for February by our editor of books and leaflets is upon W. C. T. U. literature, and therefore of widespread interest. What is the especial province of literature in our work is a question of vital importance to every superintendent of literature and the answer is ful land comprehensive. First of all we must emphasize the importance of the department and if you would gain an inspiration which will lead you to magnify it make the beautiful thoughts and suggestions of Mrs. Stevenson your own. These readings are designed for the use of local unions. Price one cent each.

LITERATURE SUPERINTENDENTS, OAK AND IVY LEAF SOLICITORS ATTENTION!!

New Rates for Oak and Ivy Leaf to July, 1895, including one year of

New Volume

and the remaining months of the present series,

50 Cents.

To October, 1894,

including both new and old series to that date, 25 Cents.

All subscriptions received after this date, February 1, will be filled according to above rates.

Write for

Club Rates and Premiums

to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

FLOWER MISSION. FLOWER MISSION.

Oak and Ivy Leaf
will issue its special
Flower Mission Number bright and early in
March.

It will contain a variety of interesting reading on this favorite and beautiful work of the white-ribboners.

Letters of Jennie Casseday

to a Y friend will be printed for the first time.

Tried and Proved Plans

of work will be furnished, with pointed suggestions.

Incidents of flower missioner's labors and a capital story by Miss Maude Rittenhouse, entitled, "A FLOWER MISSION CONVERT," are among its contents.

Special price for this number for distribution.

Per 100 copies..... $1 50

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

JUST ISSUED.

Department Leaflets.

No. 18 (For Miners).—ANSWER THIS QUESTION.
No. 43 (Narcotics).—DOES IT PAY TO USE TOBACCO?
No. 44.—EXPERT EVIDENCE CONCERNING TOBACCO.
No. 52 (Y. W. C. T. U.).—WHEREFORE A Y?
No. 72.—A MODERN DEVIL'S MISSION.
No. 73.—THE CUP OF BLESSING.
No. 91.—A WOMAN'S LOGIC.

Others in Preparation.

Price 15 cents per 100.
Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

TEACH THE MASSES.

This is your opportunity to teach the masses the effects of prohibition as illustrated by the life and works of Neal Dow. Send for our Prohibition number.

See prices.
Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE.
Chicago, Ill.

GRANULA:
The Best Food. : :
The Best Medicine.

GRANULA, Originated by Dr. James C. Jackson over 30 years ago, is a scientifically prepared and twice-cooked food containing all the nutritious properties of the unequaled Genesee Valley winter wheat in such form and proportion as to be quickly digested and readily assimilated.

It has been called "The Perfect Food." As such it is a remarkable remedy for certain diseases, and if persistently used will remove Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kindred ailments.

Granula should be eaten daily by children, as it builds up the tissues rapidly and clears the system of impurities.

Manufactured by
OUR HOME GRANULA CO.,
Box 100, Dansville, N. Y.
Trial Box, prepaid, 25c. Pamphlet free.

Is Your Child HAPPY?

Our Beautiful Book for little folks will delight and instruct.

Holds the attention for hours.

The NEW MODEL FIRST BOOK is the first book that should be placed in the hands of a child. It is brim full of object lessons from every day life. Elegantly illustrated by Carqueville and printed in colors on stout paper. Board covers and wire stitched.

A boon for TIRED MOTHERS.

36 CENTS will do it. Send 36 cents NOW and receive copy by return mail.

GEO. SHERWOOD & CO., Pubs.,
306 Wabash Ave., - CHICAGO

Complexion Preserved.
DR. HEBRA'S
VIOLA CREAM

Removes Freckles, Pimples Liver-Moles, Blackheads, Sunburn and Tan, and restores the skin to its original freshness, producing a clear and healthy complexion. Superior to all face preparations and perfectly harmless. At all druggists or mailed for 50 cts. Send for circular.

G. C. BITTNER & CO., TOLEDO, O.

World's Fair Highest Awards
Medal and Diploma on our INCUBATOR and BROODER Combined.
"Old Reliable" Leads them all.

If you are interested in Poultry, it will pay you to send 4 cents in stamps for our 72 page catalogue, giving valuable points on Poultry Culture. Address
45 varieties High Class Fowls.
Reliable Incubator and Brooder Co. Quincy, Ill.

High Arm FREE TRIAL in your own home for 30 days without paying one cent in advance; machine to be returned at our expense if unsatisfactory. We take all risks, pay freight, ship anywhere, to anyone, in any quantity at wholesale prices. $65 Kenwood machine, $24.50; $55 Arlington, $20.50; $45 Arlington, $17.50; $35 High Arm Gem, $12. We sell all makes and styles, from cheapest $7.95 to best "Kenwood," $24.50. All attachments free. THREE HIGHEST WORLD'S FAIR MEDALS AWARDED. Over 100,000 now in use. Buy direct from factory. Save agents large profits. Catalogue and testimonials free. Write at once. Address (in full) CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 W. VanBuren St., Dept. A 151, Chicago, Ill.

Warranted Ten Years.

BICYCLES FREE Organs, Watches, Guns, Etc. TO BOYS and GIRLS Devoting a few minutes after school-hours to our interests. BOORMAN & PARKER, 173 5th Av., Chicago. Ill. Cat. full instruc. 1c stamp.

DOUBLE Breech-Loader $6.00. RIFLES $2.00 WATCHES GUNS BICYCLES $15 All kinds cheaper than elsewhere. Before you buy, send stamp for catalogue to POWELL & CLEMENT CO. 166 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

ALASKA STOVE LIFTER
will not get hot even if left in the lid. Heavily Nickel Plated. Price by mail, postpaid, 30 cents.
TROY NICKEL WORKS, Troy, N. Y.

6.95 FREE ELGIN Waltham or Springfield.

This elegant 14-k GOLD plated watch, with ELGIN, Waltham or Springfield works. Cut this out and send it to us with your name and address and we will send the elegant gold-finished watch to you by express for examination, and if you think it equal in appearance to any $35 solid gold watch, pay our sample price, $6.95 and express charges and it is yours. We send with it our guarantee that you can return it any time within one year if not satisfactory, and if you sell or cause the sale of six, we will give you ONE FREE. Write at once as this offer may never appear again.

CHICAGO WATCH CO.
281 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

6 tubs in one. BATH TUBS, Wholesale & Retail. For "Bath Room" & "Portable." Durable, many long used renewed, light, little water. Agents and others send for circulars. E. J. Knowlton, Ann Arbor, Mich.

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.
$10.50 Buy the Oxford Improved SINGER Sewing Machine, with a complete set of attachments and guaranteed for 10 years. Shipped anywhere on 30 days' trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded. Buy from factory, save dealers' and agents' profit. Write to-day for our LARGE FREE CATALOGUE. Oxford Mfg. Co., 342 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

DEAFNESS & HEAD NOISES CURED by my Invisible Tubular Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Warranted to help more cases than all similar devices combined. Help ears as glasses do eyes. Sold by F. Hiscox only, 853 Br'dway, N. Y. Send for book of proofs FREE

AGENTS CAN MAKE FROM $25.00 TO $100.00 a week by canvassing for the best specialties ever offered. No competition. Address, N. Y. & LONDON ELECTRIC ASSN., Kansas City Mo.

Don't Cost You a Cent! BOYS AND GIRLS who want an elegant high grade SAFETY BICYCLE FOR NOTHING, send your name and address to H. M. CO., 358 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

PILES Instant relief, final cure in a few days, and never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. Remedy mailed free. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N. Y

At 1/4 Price Watches, Guns, Buggies, Harness, Sewing Machines, Organs, Bicycles, Farm Tools, Safes, etc, List FREE. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS clear $100 monthly. 100 New Ladies' Specialties for Old and Young. 64 page Illust'd Catalogue FREE. G. L. Erwin & Co., Chicago, Ill. LADY

CARDS Send 2c. stamp for Sample Book of all the FINEST and Latest Style Cards for 1894. We sell GENUINE CARDS NOT TRASH. UNION CARD CO., COLUMBUS, OHIO.

SALESMEN WANTED to sell our goods by samples to the wholesale and retail trade, sell on sight to every business man or firm; liberal salary, money advanced for advertising and expenses. Permanent position. Address with stamp, KING MFG. CO., A 55 Chicago, Ill.

$3.50 HUNTING CASE GENTS OR LADIES SIZE FREE A fine 14k gold plated watch to every reader of this paper. Cut this out and send it to us with your full name and address, and we will send you one of these elegant, richly jeweled, gold finished watches by express for examination, and if you think it is equal in appearance to any $25.00 gold watch pay our sample price, $3.50 and express charges, and it is yours. Guarantee for 5 Years sent with every watch, and if you sell or cause the sale of six we will give you One Free. Write at once, as we shall send out samples for 60 days only. Address THE NATIONAL M'F'G & IMPORTING CO., 334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER.

If you have seen the January and February number of the children's own paper, The Young Crusader, you will want the March issue. This is more emphatically a temperance number than common, containing the Quarterly Temperance Lesson as a Supplement, and other temperance truths in various bright and attractive presentations. This little eight-page monthly has hosts of friends. Are you one of them? If not, why not?

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ARE YOU A POLITICIAN?

If so, can you not use effectively our Neal Dow Prohibition Number?

Weak Stomach strengthened by BEECHAM'S PILLS.

A BEAUTIFUL AND COMPLETE CATALOGUE.

The Catalogue for 1894 issued by Mr. John Lewis Childs, Seedsman and Florist, of Floral Park, N. Y., is really a marvel and a masterpiece in the art of catalogue making. It consists of about 200 pages, and is in the form of three distinct catalogues bound together, one representing Seeds, another Bulbs and Plants, and the third Nursery Stock. Its stipple lithograph cover and numerous colored plates are radiantly handsome. Each one of the thousand or more cuts are new and of a unique design. All the reading matter has also been rewritten, so that the entire contents of this large Book-Catalogue, cuts, reading matter, designs and make-up is entirely new. The paper used is of a fine finish, and the presswork is done in exquisite bronze, violet and brown colors. It is the most charming Horticultural work ever issued.

Publisher's Notes.

ATTENTION! BOYS!

See our display advertisement which cannot fail to interest you. This opportunity is not for your mother or sister, but for you only. We do not offer many premiums but we are confident this nickel watch is just what you need, just what it claims to be, and for the effort it will cost, you can not obtain a better time-keeper. It is really a clock movement in a nickel case, manufactured by the Waterbury Clock Company, small enough to fit in your vest pocket. The smallest boy can wind it and tell accurate time by it. It is not a toy watch nor as small and delicate as your father's, yet will keep perhaps better time than his. Read our offer and notify us at once that you wish to work for one of these watches and we will be ready to fill your order as soon as it reaches us.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

JUST ISSUED.

Four New National Leaflets.
Two New Y National Leaflets.

THE STORY OF THE CRUSADE.
THE SPIRIT OF THE CRUSADE.
THE CHILD OF THE CRUSADE.
AFTER TWENTY YEARS.
INASMUCH, and
WHAT IS YOUR VALUE?

Each Invaluable.
Try Them.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

One of the best large group photographs we have ever seen is from the 18x22 negative made by Mr. S. E. Norton at our last W. C. T. U. National Convention. It is far superior to any previously taken, as so many of the faces are clearly shown. Among them are Lady Henry Somerset, Mother Thompson, Susan B. Anthony, and more than one hundred others named in the accompanying Key. Readers of THE UNION SIGNAL who send us $2.50 for the picture will receive a copy by mail.

ATTENTION BOYS!

FOR SIX NEW SUBSCRIBERS
to THE UNION SIGNAL we will send this watch to your address, postpaid.

FOR FOUR NEW SUBSCRIBERS
and Fifty Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

FOR TWO NEW SUBSCRIBERS
and Seventy-five Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

THIS OFFER IS

FOR BOYS ONLY

Boys who will thank us for this generous offer to own the best pocket time-piece yet made by any Clock Company. Extreme diameter of case 2¼ inches.

As soon as your mind is made up to secure one of these Watches, write to us. Address

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n
THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO...

Beauty without neatness is a hook without a bait.
FAIR WOMEN should make their houses look fair with SAPOLIO
Try a cake in your next house-cleaning
COPYRIGHTS

A SENSE OF DECENCY

Constrains many people to hide the dirt of their kitchens. They make the kitchen a secret chamber, into which it is forbidden to enter; but half the trouble which they take to hide the dirt and the disgrace which it entails, would keep the kitchen clean, and all its pots and pans bright as a dollar, that is, if they use

SAPOLIO

This pleasant looking group are happy now in the anticipation of great enjoyment from the trip they are just starting on. They are going abroad to see foreign lands, and all the sights and scenes commented on and praised by travelers.

They May Enjoy the Trip from the fact that it involves change, but they will surely encounter much discomfort and danger. We are now making a suggestion to those who

CONTEMPLATE GOING ABROAD

which, while it may not deter them from the undertaking, will be well worth a little attention. What we have to offer will HELP THEM UNDERSTAND to much better advantage all they find interesting. THEY WILL BETTER APPRECIATE all the sights and scenes, all the cities and places of interest they may visit on their tour. What we have to offer is a

GRAND ART COLLECTION

by John L. Stoddard and descriptions of them from his graceful pen. The photographs are contained in portfolios, 11x13 inches in size, each portfolio having sixteen views, worth at least $1.50 apiece. The demand for No. 1 is something enormous, and we are ready now with Series No. 2, in which will be found:

Boulevard de la Madeleine, Paris; Westminster Abbey, London; Sackville Street, Dublin; Casino, Monte Carlo, Italy; Edinburgh and Scott's Monument; North Cape, Norway; Frankfort, Germany; St. Gotthard Pass and Bridge, Switzerland; The Vatican Library, Rome; View of the Alhambra, Granada, Spain; The Kremlin, Moscow; The Ezbekiyeh and Street Scene, Cairo, Egypt; Camp of a Caravan on the Sahara Desert; Houses of Parliament, Ottawa, Canada; "The Thousand Islands," St. Lawrence River; Boston ommon, Boston, Mass.

TRIP AROUND THE WORLD.
ART SERIES NO. 2.
COUPON.

Send Coupon, together with five 2-cent postage stamps, or 10 cents in silver, to our office, and you will receive our Portfolio of Photographs, No. 2.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO...

If you failed to save Coupon No. 1, send TWENTY CENTS ADDITIONAL for Part 1.

Signal Notes.

EIGHTY per cent of the Welsh members of Parliament are teetotalers.

EGYPT is at length prosperous, the year's revenue showing a large surplus.

THE English nation spends over fifty-two millions on its navy and army annually.

IN Sicily the women Socialists give more trouble than the men. They suffer the most, probably, from starvation.

THREE hundred and fifty thousand men and women in Sicily have joined the Socialists and the destitution is something terrible to read of.

FOUR million four hundred and twenty-eight thousand have been convicted of drunkenness and disorderliness in London in a quarter of a century.

FROKEN ELSA ESCHELSEN has obtained permission from King Oscar to plead at the University of Upsala for the degree of doctor of laws. She will be the first LL.D. in Sweden.

THE Russian peasants are hopelessly in debt to the government. For the first time in three years there was an abundant harvest this year, but they were compelled to sell at half the ordinary rates.

RUSSIA is "progressing backwards." It is stated that all women clerks and telegraphers employed on Russian railways are to be dismissed and their places supplied by men. No reason is assigned.

"THAT which is morally wrong can never be artistically right," is well applied in the discussion on the nude in art. John Ruskin believes that it is an artistic mistake as well as a moral wrong to expose the human form in art.

ONE coöperative society started among the poorer districts of New York four years ago announced at its annual meeting a very prosperous year and a large dividend, even in these hard times. Beer and brewers describe the business and the men.

FOR the first time since its foundation in 1868 a woman read a paper before the Royal Colonial Institute of London, January 9. Miss Shaw traveled through South Africa and Australia as special correspondent of the Times, of which journal she is now colonial editor.

RACE-TRACK gambling is under a heavy cloud at present, and it is hoped there will be a total eclipse of it and its attendant evils. It is hoped a bill will pass Congress which will prevent winter racing in the District of Columbia. Why not include summer as well? is a natural query.

THE Young Women's Christian Association of New York City has had remarkable success the past year in its industrial education branch, instructing 1,930 young women in trades and professions. Twenty-five followed photo-engraving, something never attempted by women before.

IT is almost incredible to read that the Amsterdam court of appeals has decided that a young man who kissed a strange young woman in the street against her will committed no offense against the law, inasmuch "as to kiss a person cannot be an offense, because it is the nature of a warm mark of sympathy."

IT is encouraging to read how rapidly the movement to do away with check reins is gaining in England. Railway, coal, brewery and other companies which use draft horses have abandoned the use of the cruel "bearing rein" on all horses under their control. Fashionable women need an arrest of thought on the subject of the cruelty they unintentionally exercise upon their horses.

THE Female Aid Society of London is described as woman's mission to women, for the missionaries are all women and their special work is visiting the streets at night seeking out the lost. It was established in 1858. Figures do not give an idea of the real work done, still they are sometimes of interest. Twenty-five thousand one hundred and twenty-one women have received help since 1858, 7,951 have been placed in homes and 7,198 have been given situations.

AN ASTHMA CURE AT LAST.

European physicians and medical journals report a positive cure for Asthma, in the Kola plant, found on the Congo river, West Africa. The Kola Importing Co., 1164 Broadway, New York, are sending free trial cases of the Kola Compound by mail to all sufferers from Asthma, who send name and address on a postal card. A trial costs you nothing.

Valuable but not Costly.

It may save you a great deal of trouble in cooking. Try it. We refer to the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk, regarded by most housekeepers as absolutely essential in culinary uses, and unsurpassed in coffee. All Grocers and Druggists sell the Eagle brand.

IVORY SOAP

IT FLOATS

IS NOT LOST IN THE TUB.

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CIN'TI.

Our Great Catalogue for 1894

Is an elegantly illustrated book of 200 pages, composed of three distinct Catalogues bound together—one each of

SEEDS,—BULBS AND PLANTS,—NURSERY STOCK.

A work of unexcelled beauty and merit, rewritten and reconstructed in every particular. Every cut new, every line fresh. Printed on fine paper and in lovely bronze violet and brown colors. Many charming colored plates. Nothing like it ever before seen. We offer new and special strains of Flower and Vegetable seeds, all the standard new and rare Plants and Bulbs of every kind. Millions of Gladiolus, choicest Shrubs, Trees, Vines; also new and rare Fruits—some wonderful introductions from Japan. The greatest collection of rare things for the garden ever presented, and all at moderate prices. Do not fail to see this wonderful book catalogue. Sent, post-paid, for 25 cents, with check for valuable new Pansy seed gratis; or sent FREE to those who order the Jewel Rose.

CHILDS' JEWEL, the ROSE of Many Colors.

The greatest sensation among novelties. A perfect ever-blooming Rose, which bears at the same time flowers of several different colors—pink, yellow, buff, crimson—also variegated, mottled, striped and blotched. Flowers large and perfect and exceedingly fragrant. Petals large and silky. Buds exquisite. A free and constant bloomer. It is the most charming and wonderful Rose in cultivation; and a plant bearing 10 to 20 flowers, each of a different color or variegation, is a most exquisite sight and creates wild enthusiasm wherever seen. Strong plants for immediate blooming, by mail, post-paid, 30 cents each, 2 for 50 cents, 5 for $1.00, 12 for $2.00.

SPECIAL OFFER.—For only 40 cents we will send by mail, post-paid, our great Book Catalogue, one Jewel Rose and five lovely named Gladiolus, five different colors—white, yellow, scarlet, pink and blotched. Order at once; this offer may not appear again. Address

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, N. Y.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW

About ZOA-PHORA—

A True Nerve Tonic.
Not a Stimulant or Narcotic.
Expressly for Weakly Women.
Full information and testimonials sent sealed.
Address ZOA-PHORA MEDICINE CO., H. G. COLMAN, SEC'Y, KALAMAZOO, MICH.

D. and C. ROSES

Will grow anywhere, with a little sunshine, water, and care. You can learn how to grow them, and every other flower of import, from our New Guide to Rose Culture for 1894. If you so request, we will send free, this book and a copy of our Floral Magazine, 'Success with Flowers.'

The Dingee & Conard Company, West Grove, Pa.

What a wonderful thing is a live seed. Immature, old or dead it may look the same. How to know? Old gardeners say that Burpee's seeds grow.

This is the proof of life. When grown we give our word you will be satisfied—your success is ours. BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL for 1894, 172 pages, tells all about the Best Seeds that Grow. The newspapers call it the Leading American Seed Catalogue. Yours free for the asking if you plant seeds.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia.

HATCH CHICKENS BY STEAM

With the Improved Excelsior Incubator.

Simple, Perfect, Self-Regulating. Thousands in successful operation. Guaranteed to hatch a larger percentage of fertile eggs at less cost than any other Hatcher. Lowest priced first-class Hatcher made.

Circulars free. Send 6c. for Illus. Catalogue.

GEO. H. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

The History of Prohibition in Maine. With Historical Sketch and fine engraving of Neal Dow. Octavo, 8 pp., only 5 cts; $4 per 100.

Neal Dow Prohibition Song Leaflet. Octavo, 8 pp. Seven first-class Prohibition Songs with Music. Price 3 cts.; $2 per 100.

Trade and the Liquor Traffic. A four-page 12mo tract by Hon. Neal Dow. $3 per 1,000. Send to

J. N. STEARNS, Pub. Agent, 58 Reade St., New York.

LADIES if you have superfluous

HAIR ON THE FACE

send for new information how to remove it easily and effectually without chemicals or instruments. Correspondence confidential in plain, sealed envelope.
Mrs. M. N. PERRY, Box 93, Oak Park, Ill.

SEEDS

WARRANTED. Best in the World.

By mail, postage paid, 1 cent a package and up. Grand lot of EXTRAS given with every order. Prettiest and only FREE Catalogue in the world with pictures of all varieties. Send yours and neighbors' address.

R. H. SHUMWAY, ROCKFORD, - ILLINOIS.

Publisher's Notes.

NEAL DOW'S BIRTHDAY.

Special Prohibition Number of THE UNION SIGNAL Feb. 22, 1894.

Our Crusade issue of THE UNION SIGNAL is entirely exhausted. So will be the Neal Dow Prohibition Number unless you

Order Promptly.

This will enable us so to judge of the demands of our clientele that none shall be disappointed.

A Prohibition number per se could not fail to be of interest, but a Neal Dow Prohibition Number, with the handsome face of this grand man is one you will wish to keep, and one you will be glad to send to your friend, who may not be a Prohibitionist, but will enjoy reading of the Maine law and its results and of the Life Work of Neal Dow.

This number will contain a sketch of his life, his portraits at different periods, a short history of the prohibition movement, statistical from its beginning, a symposium of opinions of leaders from everywhere on the prohibition question, and a symposium of the opinions of prominent Maine people as to how it has worked in Maine. It will also contain a rallying song and two other fitting poems. The editorials and other leading articles will be devoted to various phases of the prohibition question, and taken in its entirety the paper will be one of the finest yet issued from our press.

PRICE:

Single copies	.....	$ .10
5 "	.....	.25
10 "	.....	.40
15 "	.....	.60
20 "	.....	.75
25 "	.....	.90
100 "	.....	3.00

Orders must invariably be accompanied with CASH.

We give no credit or special discounts or extra issues.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

OUR LATEST AND GREATEST ENTERPRISE.

By an arrangement we have made with the publishers of a collection of photographic views we are enabled to put them into the hands of our readers, practically as a gift, our only recompense being the fact that we incidentally interest the people in our publication. The one grand idea is that we have the opportunity to give our readers a great pleasure, put in their hands a work which will not only prove entertaining, but be instructive to both young and old.

Our portfolio of photographs consists of a collection of views which have been selected by John L. Stoddard, the most noted traveler and lecturer of the day. They represent scenes and places he has visited, and each view is accompanied by an interesting and graphic description. As works of art these photographs have never been equalled by any results of the camera. They are each 11x13 inches in size, and would cost any purchaser $1.50. We offer them in portfolios, containing sixteen views, and the cost of each portfolio is but five two cent postage stamps with coupon found on page 15.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

JUST A HUNDRED.

We have just a hundred left of our UNION SIGNAL binders. Do you wish them at 75c. each?

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

FOR GOD AND HOME. WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOUNDED 1883. AND EVERY LAND.

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XX.—No. 7.] CHICAGO, February 15, 1894. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance

Mrs Ursula Hetrick 1029 15th st

OUR COMING SPECIAL.

Our next issue will be the Neal Dow Prohibition number.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The birth of Abraham Lincoln was celebrated Monday.

The Federal Election laws passed in 1870 were repealed by the House last week.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey have commenced a series of revival services in Washington, D. C.

A French troop has been overcome by the Arabs in the Soudan, West Africa, who are threatening Timbuctoo.

A bill for coining the seigniorage silver in the United States treasury was brought before the Senate February 8.

Many changes are being made by the Senate Committee on Finance which has under consideration the Wilson tariff bill.

Fire, set by tramps, destroyed the southwest corner of the beautiful Agricultural Building at Jackson Park, Chicago, last week.

The time of holding the California Midwinter Fair has been extended a month—to July 31, on account of the lateness of opening.

England's premier has denied the report that he is to resign, and signifies his intention of fighting the House of Lords to the end.

Chicago's new civic federation has received a charter from the state, and is now ready to conduct a non-sectarian, non-political reform in municipal interests.

One evening of the Farmers' Alliance National convention at Topeka, Kan., last week was given up entirely to the women members with an immense audience in attendance.

No suffrage for women is the decree of the House Committee on Judiciary which rejected the bill by Representative Bell, of Colorado, for a constitutional amendment granting woman suffrage.

President Peixoto has issued a decree that martial law shall cease February 26 and a general election follow. This, it is hoped, will remove the casus belli and restore peace to the Brazilian Republic.

Sixty-seven thousand two hundred and eighty unemployed persons is the report of the police census in the tenement house districts of New York City, this being about one-third of the population in those localities.

Voters in a number of places adjacent to New York City, by virtue of the act passed by the state assembly, Thursday, will have the opportunity to say by ballot next fall whether or no they will become part of that great metropolis.

A district temperance mass-meeting was held at Mason City, Ia., February 9, protesting against the action of Senator Brower, who has given his support to the Gatch bill in violation of his pledges to his constituency to uphold the present law.

Reports of the United States war department show nine thousand two hundred and seventy commissioned officers, one hundred and two thousand nine hundred and twelve members of the National Guard, and about nine thousand men in the unorganized militia.

The House of Representatives has indorsed the much criticised actions of the President and Secretary of State in the Hawaiian matter, by adopting the majority report of the committee which had the subject under investigation. The minority report of that committee condemned the administration.

THE Woman's Tribune will issue a daily edition during the sessions of the Woman's Suffrage Association in Washington, D. C., February 15-20.

THE national council of the Farmers' Alliance, in session at Topeka, Kan., last week, adopted a resolution favoring the restriction of the liquor traffic through state agents, "so as to eliminate from the business the corrupting element of profit." Alas, the "corrupting element of profit," although great, is not as dangerous as the drinker's appetite, when once aroused and the opportunity for satisfying it is at hand. Then what about the temptation to the state to indulge in the "profit" element?

THROUGH some unfortunate blunder, the cause of which it is difficult to understand, we were made last week, editorially, to class The Arena among the periodicals favoring military instruction in the public schools. The exact reverse is true. Its columns are speaking fearlessly against the proposed measure, while the March issue is to contain a paper by the distinguished editor, on "Christ or Cæsar," which will doubtless be a classic for all future peace work. We beg The Arena's pardon for the mistake and hasten to make all possible amends.

A LARGE number of colored people in Arkansas have expressed their desire to emigrate to Liberia, and have proposed to deed over to the governor of the state their lands, cattle, horses, etc., for the necessary means to take them to New York. The American Colonization Society of Washington, D. C., proposes to provide their transportation to Liberia. While the governor is not willing to neglect his official business to become a real estate broker, he has promised the negroes such assistance as he can render. It is not improbable that such a migration will become general among the colored people. Apropos to this, we may add that recent data furnish the gratifying information that there are twenty-five thousand schools in the Southern states for negroes, and that at least two million of them have learned to read and write. It is also estimated that real and personal property to the amount of two hundred and fifty million dollars is held by colored people in the United States.

THE wresting of parliamentary usages to defeat the very ends they were intended to promote, is one of the sins of the age, and one that is fraught with danger to our institutions. To the best of our knowledge, bodies of women are not guilty of this sin against parliamentary usages. White ribbon women, at least, do not filibuster. We are not, therefore, inclined to boast. We do not believe it is because women are inherently and of necessity better than men. We never took the slightest stock either in the fulsome flattery which represents women as too heavenly to participate in mundane affairs, or in the opposite falsehood, into which the first easily and imperceptibly glides, that women are so weak, morally, mentally and physically that they cannot be trusted outside of a very limited sphere. We sincerely hope that our white-ribboners are so clear of intellect that they will discern at once the true character of these dishonorable tricks of the filibusterer and so right of purpose that they will forever repudiate them. But "there is a great deal of human nature in folks," and we are well aware of the contagion of prevailing example and of the subtle, deceptive influence of general public opinion. It is possible that we have simply not got quite so far along yet in the use of these laws with which, until the present generation, women have been unfamiliar. It is, therefore, with the purpose of guarding our constituency against this prevalent evil that we call attention to it. With all our getting of parliamentary usages (and some of us need to get a great deal more than we have), may we never get this perversion of them. As we value the honor of our great woman's organization, let us strive to keep ourselves clear of the filibustering tendencies which in many organizations have developed into a distinctive art.

THE British Women's Temperance Association has created a new department, that of an Industrial Home for Inebriate Women. Dr. Sarah Anderson Brown is the superintendent, and has outlined a large number of proposed employments, twenty-six in all, under the three heads of the home, garden and manufactures. The funds for this commendable enterprise are to be raised through drawing-room meetings of the local branches, which are to be made commemorative of the twentieth anniversary of the Ohio Crusade. As the Crusade anniversary comes so near Christmas as to make its celebration practically impossible in England, our English white-ribboners decided to set apart the months of January and February for that purpose, each local branch selecting its own special day. If this industrial home succeeds, as there is every reason to believe it will, others will be established in different parts of the country, and it is hoped that government aid will eventually be secured to render the enterprise general and effective. It is believed that arrangements can be made by which local magistrates will have authority to send women to such a home, rather than to jail, consigning them for sentences sufficiently long to give reasonable expectation of their reformation.

OUR National president has sent out the following letter to state presidents, and in order to give it wider circulation we present it here:

"The Neal Dow Commemoration meeting, in honor of his ninetieth birthday, March 20, 1894, will be a success in each state if the white-ribbon leader sets the keynote, and I beg you in the midst of your many cares to turn to account this date to the very best of your ability.

"This birthday celebrates a character which is the temperance century plant, and we must invite our friends and neighbors to see its fully opened blossom. It has taken well-nigh a hundred years to develop such a personality as that of Gen. Neal Dow, a man for whom we need make no apologies and whose record from childhood to white hairs is an honor to humanity and a cause for thankfulness to God. Born in a Christian home, he has lived out the principles wrought into his nature by heredity, environment, and—best of all—the work of the spirit in his heart. He is the 'Father of Prohibitory Law,' and his name will grow brighter as humanity learns better to defend itself from its most subtle enemies.

"Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, of Portland, president of the W. C. T. U. of Maine, has prepared a pamphlet with the history of Gen. Neal Dow and his best sayings. She has also photographs of him as he now appears, and as he was when mayor of Portland at the time when through his influence the famous Maine law was enacted. Mrs. Stevens has also phonographic cylinders into which, by my earnest request, General Dow has been induced to speak some of the suggestions to which his helpful, upright and noble life will give immeasurable authority. Please write her for any of these hints and helps.

"I have hoped that many ministers would take this man and his work for a text; if they do not agree to prohibition in politics they can at least applaud General Dow's total abstinence principles, and his lifelong devotion to what he believes to be to the best interests of humanity. I have hoped that a collection would be taken at the memorial meetings held throughout the world, and that in many instances it would be so large as to leave a helpful margin after all expenses had been paid. In this case no better use could be made of the money than to expend one half in the local work of the societies represented, and send the other half to Mrs. Ella Williams, treasurer of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, 26 Chomedy street, Montreal, Canada, for our treasury is practically empty at this time, and yet the World's W. C. T. U. is to-day one of the most encouraging features of the temperance reform in the minds of all thoughtful men and woman."

THE DOOMED CITY.

BY EMMA PLAYTER SEABURY.

Is there no one to save the White City?
  Must this dream of Elysium flee?
Is there no one to rescue and pity
The doomed and the beautiful city—
  The pride of the worshipful sea?

He brings her his milky foam lilies,
  Caresses, advances and swirls,
He reaches out arms for her glory,
He sobs out love's pitying story,
  And tangles her feet in his pearls.

She hears in the halls of her palace,
  The din of the vandals who wait
Despoiling, and pillage, and plunder.
She listens with terror and wonder
  The thundering ring at her gate.

And the fame of her grace and her beauty
  Has girdled the world with its zone.
Each blow the assiegers are clashing,
The hordes through her vestibules dashing,
  Strike millions of hearts through her own.

The dream of a century blossomed
  In this miracle bloom of the West,
And her memory's scintillant gleaming
Pleads with us like flashes of dreaming
  For her infinite power possessed.

But there's no one to save the White City—
  The poems in stone have no plea
With the sordid, the ugly, the witty;
The artist and poet may pity,
No room for his dream or his ditty!
She is doomed, the immaculate city;
  And love sobs with her sorrowing sea.

Pittsburg, Kan.

THE MEMBER-AT-LARGE.

III.

BY HELEN CAMPBELL.

"The wittiest woman in town," said the chairman of the entertainment committee. "If she could be persuaded to to give us as a club just one or two of the impersonations with which she amuses her friends, one meeting would be provided for. But she won't."

"Why not?" asked the member-at-large, who was rapidly acquiring a knowledge of what might be called the underside life of the town—the phases of people known to their friends, but not to the public at large.

"Oh, I suppose it comes from the clothes question," said the chairman, reflectively. "She is very poor since the failure of the bank that had all her money, and this invalid mother, to whom she is devoted, prevents her trying to earn in any way save by writing a little now and then. That does not pay, because everybody is writing, and she says the only really distinguished people are those who do not contribute to anything, not even to their own support. But she dresses in the simplest way, and she says we are such a flock of gay-feathered birds she should feel lost among us."

"But that is nonsense."

"Of course it is nonsense, but all the same, it seems to stand in the way just as it does with one or two others I know who ought to be with us, but hold aloof for the same reason. I wish one could get at them, for they would be invaluable additions to our force. We want more workers."

"The same old story," said the member-at-large. "The very people who would mean the most to all of us often are shut out, or shut themselves out, because they feel themselves judged by a standard that has no right to exist a moment, yet does exist and so powerfully that it determines more than we know. Is there nothing to be done about it?"

"That is what I cannot decide," was the slow response. "You can't ask people to adopt a uniform in order that dress may not interfere with the social life of the club. But something must be done now that so many are feeling the sort of wall that this excessive dressing puts between them and these walking fashion-plates. It is getting to be a sort of disease. And it is certainly most extraordinary that just now when Delsarte and Greek costumes are being preached to us, we have the most hideous and deforming fashions the generation has known, fat and thin alike, bristling with these huge sleeves, and capes and ruffles hiding every natural line. Perhaps the Delsarte speaker for the next meeting will give some hints. There is to be a discussion afterward and I came round to ask that you would be sure to be there and"—

"Say something," ended the member-at-large tranquilly. "Thank you; I think I will improve the opportunity unless, indeed, you all begin to think me a didactic terror. It is so easy to be didactic, and it is such a bore to always come under that head, that sometimes I think I will keep still for a year."

"Not this year. Next, if you must," said the chairman and went her way.

The member-at-large tucked an envelope into her pocket as she made ready for the next meeting, and looked, first with curiosity and then satisfaction at the delicate and refined yet slightly quizzical face of the speaker for the day, the advocate of the Delsarte theories, who expounded her view of it with the enthusiasm that seems to infect all who follow that cult.

"The point is," she ended, "that the adoption of this system brings about the simplicity of which we talk but of which we practically know next to nothing. It is impossible for the woman who has once studied the beauty of lines and comprehended what they mean, to distort and deform them by following any reigning mode. It would not mean the adoption of a uniform but it would enable every woman to invent her own costume, and to wear what suited her best without reference to mere fashion. I put it to all of you if this would not mean inexpressible relief for many of us—a simplification of one of the most troublesome phases of our everyday life. I pray you think of it."

The member-at-large waited for a moment but no one rose to reply, and she took the envelope from her pocket.

"I want to read the club a letter from an old friend of mine," she said. "A friend who has thought out the methods for her own life, which is as widely helpful as any I have ever known, but who ponders over one small problem in the line of that we have been listening to to-day. This is what she says:

"'I wonder if the same wail comes to you that constantly reaches me, not only from the city but from the country as well, the village seeming to be no less burdened than the town. "Our social life is gone," it cries. "Hospitality is dying out; and conversation is a lost art. What are we to do about it?"'

"Now if this were one form of the mild pessimism fashionable in some circles, one could let it go with the comfortable certainty that the evil complained of had either righted itself before its existence had been positively formulated, or had been taken in hand on the instant of its discovery by the energetic reformer always lying in wait for budding evils, whether in morals or manners. That something more and deeper is involved is soon found to be the fact, and Goodwin Sands are responsible for Tenterden Steeple more nearly in this case than in the original difficulty on that point.

"Clothes and conversation then must be bracketed together, though to the casual observer they seem by no means necessarily related, unless it be through the reflex action referred to by Emerson—the peace of mind enjoyed by the wearer of perfect garments, 'only second in its nature to the consolations of religion,'—and thus admitting that entire serenity and poise essential to the unbiased consideration of any topic. In reality, I have come to the firm conclusion that clothes are at the bottom of half our social difficulties, most of all the present one. In every circle we all have knowledge of at least one woman whose gifts and tastes fit her in the highest degree for a broad social life, yet who avoids carefully any chance which may draw her into such life. 'Perfectly charming when you know her, but she won't allow anybody that satisfaction,' is the puzzled comment; and there it ends."

At this point a faint stir made itself evident at one point in the club-room and two or three members looked at each other significantly, a fact not lost upon the member-at-large though she did not glance in that direction, but went on:

"There are others without all these gifts, perhaps, but with strong social longings and admirable for many social purposes; excellent administrators where management is required, and filling essential places in their own way, who still remain in the background and allow affairs, whether of church or everyday life, to remain in hands often far less fitted to carry them. Each village, shut in and remote as it may be, holds one or more who could mould the daily life and thought if they would, but whose influence remains unfelt and unknown save to one or two. And from all comes the same answer: 'Yes, we know it. We want to do this and we ought to do that, but don't you know this dreadful clothes question is always in the way? We have not money enough to compete with the people who lead in town. Indeed, we do not want to compete; but, say what you will, there is a certain mental depression when alpaca encounters velvet and diamonds which is not conducive to the best relations. It is easier to stay at home and let those who care to do so come to us.'

"'Come to our club,' I wrote once to a woman whose busy brain has worked for others year after year, and whose purse answers to every need but her own.

"'Never till trimming has ceased to be its corner-stone,' was her reply. 'You began beautifully, I know, but you are swamped in fine clothes, and I won't disgrace you by my one unchanging black silk.'

"Here comes the point upon which this matter hinges. Why not one unchanging black silk? Black, while open to some objections, being the one color admitting the wearing of any shade with it, and always capable of simple elegance. Why not, if made in a style which may be always picturesque, no matter what the mode of the moment may be? Worth has reproduced in some of his latest dresses exact copies of pictures of Catherine de Medicis and her contemporary, Queen Elizabeth, and this is more and more the custom. They serve as texts for a general departure. The dress-coat remains much the same from one year to another, the points of variation being discernible only to the eye of the tailor, or the professional dude. Why not, then, the lady's state dress? and why should not some woman of sufficient wealth and assured position inaugurate a fashion which only needs such indorsement to become an established thing? Elaborate toilets have their own place and right and may be beautiful and legitimate in that place, but for all of moderate means and busy lives, a permanent fashion is a necessity. A moderately trimmed dress cut with square or V neck, filled in with soft lace, and a half open or close sleeve, according to age and taste, is becoming to all alike, and once accepted as the standard for all small gatherings, would simplify life and give us the many who now shrink from the demands of trimming."

"Do you suppose," said an excitable member, rising suddenly to her feet, "that any self-respecting woman is going to adopt what would practically be a uniform testifying to her inability to have as good as the rest?"

"Why not? if she is really self-respecting," said the member-at-large, as the gavel sounded lightly for this breach of order, and slipped into her place at the back and out as the motion for adjournment was made.

"No, thank you," she laughed, as a friend strove to detain her. "There are times when facts argue best for themselves and I have said all I ever shall say about this vexed question of clothes."

Madison, Wis.

A REASONABLE BASIS FOR TOTAL ABSTINENCE.

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

Alcohol is thus described in the "Elements of Chemistry," edited by Liebig, than whom a higher authority could not be cited. He says: "Alcohol is a clear, colorless, mobile liquid; it is a non-conductor of electricity; the odor of alcohol is agreeable and penetrating; the drug intoxicates powerfully. Alcohol greedily absorbs water from the atmosphere, and deprives animal substances of the water they contain, causing them to shrivel up, hence its use in preserving anatomical preparations. These properties render alcohol an agent most hostile at once to digestion and to circulation."

But we are confronted by a situation that contradicts this scientific statement. A variety of beverages, in which the attractive and determinative ingredient is alcohol, are in common use among the best as well as the worst classes of our population, and the greatest monopoly of our country is that which makes and sells intoxicating liquors as a drink. In the presence of such a contradiction between the facts of science and the facts of civilization stands the temperance reform, seeking to solve the problem as to the right relation of this drug to the conduct of individual, social and national life; but it would be difficult to mention any other branch of research in which the laws of evidence, elsewhere strictly regarded, are so completely ignored as in the study of the temperance question. The testimony of observation and experience is valued in other lines of study in proportion to the length of time that has been expended in investigation, but the scientific student of the temperance reform—the specialist who has spent years in the investigation of its origin, chemistry, physiology, hygiene, statistics and political economy, is discounted for the sole reason that he is a specialist; and the structure of argument that he has reared with patient care is swept away to the satisfaction of the public mind by a few unwarranted assumptions and time-honored declarations, in which epithet seems largely to take the place of argument. Nor does the public stop to inquire to what extent those who oppose the temperance movement are actuated by such motives as a great monopoly can readily inspire, through promise of gain, either in money or political preferment: all this is a part of the delusion, which word in this connection one is inclined to begin with a capital D, since it denotes the universal effect of alcoholics not only upon individuals, but nations.

But the fact must not be ignored that a large section of people, well-intentioned and intelligent, is to-day indifferent if not hostile to the temperance propaganda, and the reason for this attitude of mind is not difficult of explanation, for the drug known as alcohol is the chief ingredient in beverages immemorially associated with thoughts of hospitality, kindness, and good-will; it has also been invested with a reverence not its due and not its own, from the relation it has been supposed to hold to occurrences and institutions sacred to all Christian hearts; and thirdly, the traditional value attached to it as an adjunct of our physical well-being is still adhered to by good people who are unfamiliar with the investigations of modern chemistry, physiology, and hygiene.

The most casual examination of ancient customs shows us the origin of the association of strong drink with hospitality. The earliest forms of intoxicating liquor were furnished to the warriors of tribes or nations in order to excite in them those passions that were to send them out to the deeds of bloodshed and cruelty that stood for valor in more barbarous times; indeed, the use of fermented liquor was almost entirely confined, in those days, to this class of men. But as the thing which we call "civilization" unfolded its capacities of adaptation, the honors won in warfare were paid to those who, by their genius in administration of the arts, had risen above their fellows, and the wine-cup became the emblem of this wider recognition, until not only in the camp, but in the court and at the civic banquet, alcoholic drinks asserted their supremacy as the chosen tokens of good fellowship and honor.

It is believed, by accredited exponents of the temperance reform, that those are under a delusion who defend the use of alcoholic drinks on Scriptural grounds and in relation to ceremonies of sacred origin. It is not, however, my purpose to enter upon that difficult discussion, but I do ask all thinking men and women who have not yet examined the best that can be said on the temperance side of the question by such eminent specialists as Dr. F. R. Lees and Dr. Norman Kerr, to do themselves the justice to read the books of these honest and scholarly men whose views are the result of a lifetime's observation and research.

Fortunately for us all, we have come to a time when we look upon it as a token of healthful spiritual life, to be willing to probe for the soundness of that which we have long accepted; we seek, so far as may be, to translate "articles of faith" into articles of fact, and we hold that the human mind cannot have a nobler motto than "truth for authority and not authority for truth."

I am aware that the favorite theory of men who make and use intoxicants is that they are a food, but this view is now wholly exploded among scientific men, as could be proved by the ablest and most recent utterance of authorities acknowledged as a standard by all persons of intelligence. For instance, Baron Liebig shows that the whole purpose of brewing is to get rid of the nitrogenous blood-forming elements of the grain, to transmute the useful sugar into alcohol. "We can prove," says he, "with mathematical certainty that as much flour as can lie on the point of a table-knife is more nutritious than nine quarts of the best Bavarian beer; that a person who is able daily to consume that amount of beer, obtains from it in a whole year, in the most favorable cases, exactly the amount of nutritive constituents as that which is contained in a five pound loaf of bread, or in three pounds of flesh."

It was my intention to quote from several other learned authorities, but the limits of this paper do not permit, and I must content myself with giving names of leading lights in the scientific and medical world, to whose statements I beg leave earnestly to refer those reading here who would know the teaching of science and of medical experts concerning the relation of alcohol to health: Baron von Liebig; Professors Bunge and Forel, of the Swiss Universities; Sir Andrew Clark; Dr. W. Boyd Carpenter, F. R. S.; Sir Henry Thompson; Sir William Gull; Sir James Paget, F. R. S.; Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson: Sir John Forbes, F. R. S.; Sir Henry Holland, F. R. S.; Sir Anthony Carlisle; Sir B. C. Brodie, F. R. S.; Dr. F. R. Lees, F. S. A.; Dr. Norman Kerr, president of the Society for the Study of Inebriety; and Dr. N. S. Davis, ex-President of the American Medical Association.

Sir James Sawyer, of Birmingham, a leading English physician, said recently in my hearing, that whatever may be disputed, in one thing modern physicians are practically agreed, namely, the germ theory of disease, which holds that the earth, the air and the water are full of microbes, each disease having its own; but the human body has a set of microbes called macrophays, which may be called sentries always on duty, and ready to destroy the invading enemy. But alcohol, in exact proportion to the amount taken, kills out the sentry microbes from the system, leaving it a prey to the microbes of disease, and this explains why those who use alcoholic liquors cannot resist epidemics as can the total abstainer.

Sir Andrew Clark, a medical authority not only revered but beloved throughout this nation (and alas! to-day mourned) says: "Health is a state of body which cannot be benefited by alcohol in any degree; indeed, I will go further and say, that this state is also in some way or other injured by alcohol—a state in which a sort of discord is produced by the use of alcoholic drinks, for alcohol, even in small doses, will take off both the mental and moral bloom. . . . I will say more; it is not only no helper of work, it is a certain hinderer of work, and every man who comes to the front of a profession in London is marked by this one characteristic, that the more busy he gets the less alcohol he takes. . . . Now let me say that I am speaking solemnly and carefully when I tell you that I am considerably within the mark in declaring that in the round of my hospital wards seven out of every ten owe their ill health to alcohol. . . . I also say one thing further—certainly more than three-fourths of the disorders in what we call fashionable life arise from the use of this very drug that we call alcohol. . . . Can I use stronger words than these? When I think of all this I am disposed to give up my profession—to give up everything and to go forth upon a holy crusade to preach to all men: 'Beware of this enemy of the race!'"

In face of such statements from such sources as these, it is futile to attempt to revive the outworn argument that alcohol is in any wise essential to the physical well-being of man.

It should be noted that temperance experts do not say that under no circumstances should the drug alcohol be administered. Opium, morphia, chloroform and cocaine have all their places in the medical pharmacopœia, but they are dangerous drugs, and we should no more think of trifling with these powerful agents by placing them in the people's hands than we should think of presenting our children with fire-arms or dynamite. Nor do I propose to repeat the well-worn aphorism—so often asserted to be the cardinal doctrine of the total abstainer—that "the moderate drinker is worse than the drunkard"; for I am perfectly aware that there are thousands who do use this drug in such moderation that it does not perceptibly affect their personal well-being, although no student of heredity will deny that the tendency of such a habit is harmful in its results on their descendants. But we, as Christian workers, have recognized the principle that individual happiness, ease, comfort and prosperity cannot be legitimately considered except in relation to the general welfare, and that what I may be or do is slowly giving place to the question: What may we do and what is best for us?

As has been well said: "It will always be true that a certain number of the people must, for their own sake, let intoxicants entirely alone, and that there is a certain amount of danger to any one who uses them. If, then, any one elects to be an abstainer in order that those who must follow that practice shall not be a class by themselves, marked as weaklings and of singular ways in life, and also for the reason that it is more absolutely safe to let liquors alone than to use them, he is in a position wholly scientific, ethical, and in accordance with the Golden Rule. Whoever then laughs at a total abstainer shows himself lacking in a clear mind as well as a good heart, for to take such a precaution on one's own account, as a matter of prudence, is surely conformable to reason, and to take it in order to make it easier for others to do the same, is conformable to the Golden Rule and the highest dictates of brotherhood."

Total abstainers are by no means fanatics; they do not say that in some future age when the race-blood has cooled to temperate heat and the race-brain is balanced by a body more athletic, the moderate use of wine will be harmful to humanity. They do not say because they do not know, and they leave that distant future to solve its own problems; but what is to-day the situation? The authority of specialists and the common consent of the public admit that fifty per cent of the disease, seventy-five per cent of the crime, and ninety per cent of the pauperism are the outcome of using intoxicating liquors as a drink. It is admitted that the misery caused by war, pestilence, and famine all in one are not to-day as great as the misery caused by alcoholic beverages; it is admitted that nothing has imbued the barbarous tribes and Oriental countries with a distrust of Christianity so deep as the fact that Christian nations have fastened upon them the curse of drink. In short, we are in a time of crisis—we are under a military exigency, and the voice of science, public spirit, and the Golden Rule combine to urge upon every patriot and every Christian to pledge himself against the use of that which not only causeth his brother to offend to-day, but, by the inevitable sequences of heredity and habit, may cause even the Christian and the patriot themselves to be offenders to-morrow. How does a nation meet an epidemic of disease? We judge its intelligence by the rigor of the regulations to which it subjects itself, that the infected area may be reduced to the smallest possible dimensions and stamped out altogether with the least practicable delay.

There is no surer indication of the degree of enlightenment that prevails in any individual, any home, any guild, corporation, or state, than the rapidity, skill and devotion with which sanitary measures are applied to the special danger of the hour. But here we have the drink plague raging among us like a strong disease; it spares neither youth nor age; it wreaks its vengeance alike on rich and poor, the cultured and the gross. Loaded down by hereditary tendency, tempted by the dram-shop's open door, our people crowd onward to their doom as sheep to the shambles.

What ought I to do about it? This is the stern center of the whole discussion.

In answer to this query, which every sane mind and honest heart must ask itself a thousand and a thousand times, men and women, who by long observation and experience have become experts in the temperance movement, unite to make this declaration; as one pair of lips we will stop the tawny, seething, nauseous tide; we will so act that if our action were taken as a guide, this curse would be banished from our land ere another sun should rise. The products of the vineyard, the brewery, the still, shall find no place on our tables; the wine glass, the beer mug and the decanter shall never be lifted by our hands. In taking this position, warranted by every law of reason and of conscience, under a military exigency, total abstainers offer no palliative but an absolute remedy for the disease, the germs of which they would destroy.

Would to God that each of us might say in this time of the nation's calamity and woe: "I am but one, but I am one; I cannot do everything, but I can do something; what I can do I ought to do, and what I ought to do, by the grace of God, I will do."

Reigate, Eng.

WOMEN AS REPORTERS.

BY MAUDE WOOD-HENRY.

When I entered the local room of a daily newspaper with my first half column of suburban news, and encountered the bold stare of the city editors' staff, I was embarrassed. Since then I have sat every day among men, plying my pencil undisturbed. There are those who look upon me with pity, and others who shrug their shoulders because of my "unwomanly" occupation, while a few exclaim: "How very nice, for you get free tickets to everything."

Women in the reportorial field are insignificant in point of number. Few are employed outside of the large cities, and they may be counted on one's fingers even there. The writers of art, music, society and fashion columns, or editors of household and children's departments may be classed with reportorial workers, but they do not properly belong there. She who takes the name of reporter must cover whatever is assigned her, from a political convention to a church social, and must enter as willingly a prison cell as a ball room. She becomes a part of the newspaper, is absorbed and loses her identity. But the fascination is so great, that once installed in the work, the woman with true newspaper instinct is satisfied to enjoy the personal contact with all manner of humankind, and to behold her thoughts each day without signature.

The reportorial field is wide open for the right kind of women. It may be that it will some day be invaded. Women are yet too much afraid of what the world will say to fearlessly enter the ranks. In the majority of the sex the essential qualifications for newspaper work are wanting. It is not necessary to unsex one's self, but the knowledge of femininity must not be carried as a burden. Next after that come seriousness of purpose and pleasant address, and a woman may venture into reportorial work, to acquire as she may the other qualifications, or to acknowledge herself a failure.

My first and best advice from the editor of a daily newspaper, concerned a method of news gathering.

"Never approach a man with the question, 'What is new?'" he said. "When I was a reporter I used to take a chair after greeting, and discuss the weather. After that it was an easy matter to lead up to his business."

I soon learned that it was not policy to ask point blank for the information I desired. Better waste a little time in skirmishing and walk away triumphant. Strategy must be resorted to by a reporter. Few men can withstand a well planned and executed attack. When they are astute enough to penetrate the interviewer at the outset, they usually declare that they have nothing to say for publication. This may be met in a variety of ways; by a bit of patience and change of subject; a quiet sting which will arouse a man to conversation; or a convincing argument which will show him that publicity is good for him.

Judgment should temper all that is written after the information is gained. If this is lacking, a reporter is not a success. Men will say hastily and unthinkingly that which will injure themselves or their projects. A reporter's sense of honor should guard her from taking a mean advantage.

Diligence in news gathering is both necessary and commendable, but no matter how much one wishes to use a delicious morsel, there are times when it is wiser to let it wait, with the prospect of being "scooped" by a competing paper. One is required to consider whether that particular article is of more value than all future news from that source.

Men easily contract the habit of saying: "Nothing new to-day." A woman will often find that her sex is taken advantage of. She will be considered gullible, and those looking for free advertising will endeavor to palm it off in the guise of news. She must speedily stop such proceedings in the way she thinks best, though she must often be careful not to hurt her prospects for getting actual news afterward.

One cannot expect to keep the run of every individual, professional or otherwise, outside of her territory, or to be posted upon all subjects. When assigned to write what is a total blank in her mind, the best way out of it is to accept the work cheerfully, and then frankly confide her ignorance to the interviewed. Nine times out of ten he will feel flattered at the admission of his superiority and will take unusual pains to enlighten her. In this way she gains the reputation for remarkable resources in the office. An all-around knowledge may be procured by continual study of newspapers and current literature, or at least a large quantity of information on miscellaneous subjects. The perusal of daily papers is an absolute necessity. A reporter may be sent out at any moment to interview a person with whom she has none but a newspaper acquaintance. That she should read her local paper thoroughly is imperative, for another's assignment may be given her when least expected.

After news is secured, the next thing is to get it ready for publication. The editor cares nothing about how delicately or cleverly a man has been worked, or how difficult was the task. Copy is wanted, clean, legible, accurate, breezy copy, and it is wanted at once. If news of a business failure or absconder is turned in, the legitimate paper wishes it reliable in every detail, so that injustice may not be done, or a libel suit feared.

Eternal vigilance is the price of a reporter's position. She cannot sit long in admiration of her prowess, but must hasten away for more happenings, and cover them in the same painstaking manner. An edition of a daily newspaper dies each night or morning, and the memory of past work is forgotten.

There are mean men and kindly men, valuable and conservative men. The reporter of brains studies each type, and learns how to deal with all. Men as a rule admire women reporters, and will frequently impart news to one that a man could not get. There are a few—and these keep woman from the reportorial field—who are too vulgar and shallow to understand her position. They are sometimes more than rude. But these may be dealt with. What woman does not know how? If the man is necessary for the paper, another from the staff may be sent to interview him. Courage is apt to fail a woman after an experience of this kind. She will rebound so soon as she thinks philosophically on human nature. She cannot afford to treat all alike because of the few. An ease of manner is a necessary qualification; one that will invite immediate confidence. Stiffness and conservatism delay it.

Newspaper work, I believe, should be the first done by a literary aspirant. It is not a difficult matter to reach higher up after a foothold is secured. Magazines and syndicates that handle special matter, or outside papers, offer financial assistance even in connection with the routine of a daily newspaper.

Cleveland, O.

MILITARY INSTRUCTION FOR AMERICAN BOYS.

BY B. O. FLOWER.

A recent news item published in the daily papers is, as nearly as I can remember it, about as follows: "Omaha has requested the war department to furnish military instructors for the children in the high school. Secretary Lamont expressed himself as favorable to the proposition." If this concession is made, the high schools in Boston, Philadelphia and other cities will at once make the same request.

In the Century Magazine for January ex-President Harrison comes out in a letter, which to say the least, is greatly to be deplored. He strongly urges the instruction of children throughout the land in military tactics, for the express purpose, he says, of defending our flag. The arguments he uses are, it seems to me, exceedingly puerile, and show that he is thinking more of the man than the soul of the man. As I see life, "the body is more than the raiment," and the soul is more than the body. Ex-President Harrison argues that military training will develop the physical body of the youths. Even if this were true, there is no force in the argument that they should receive military training, because there are other methods of physical training which are much better calculated to develop the physical body, if that is the end sought to be accomplished. While military drill fills the mind of the youth with dreams of glory, through the slaughter of human lives, the ideal of the youth becomes a military hero and not the moral or spiritual hero, and civilization is thus turned backward.

The Grand Army of the Republic has recently urged the drilling of the children, not only in high schools but in other schools, and the governor of Massachusetts in an interview published in one of the daily papers is reported as favoring the military drill in schools other than the high schools. Boston, not satisfied with her immense armories, is now building a massive granite structure on Columbus avenue for the use of the Boston cadets. Indeed, there seems to be a general fostering of the military spirit. Ex-President Harrison in his article in the Century says that, if the boys of the North had been trained in military tactics from 1830 we would have been in a much better condition to engage in the civil war when it broke out. This appears to me the climax of puerility. Does not President Harrison know that if the boys of the North had been trained the boys of the South would also have been trained?

If we fill the minds of the rising generation with dreams of military glory, we will have turned the dial of civilization back, and will have prepared a nation which will thirst for war. If, on the other hand, we discourage war in all forms and demand, firmly and persistently, that all questions of international dispute shall be settled by arbitration, we will have nothing to fear from war. No European nation would dare to enter upon a struggle with the United States, provided our country had anything like a just cause, as the European nations are all busy watching each other, and it would prove disastrous to any of them to engage in war.

To me it appears the height of criminality to foster the military spirit in the minds of our youth. "Ground arms!" should be the watchword of the republic, and it is humiliating to find an ex-president of the United States, and a man who professes to be a follower of the Prince of Peace, advocating in a republic the fostering of the military spirit. I have discussed this subject somewhat at length in an article which will appear in the March Arena, entitled "Jesus or Cæsar."

Boston, Mass.

DEACON HOMELOVE AND ART.

BY O. B. B.

Yes, Mrs. — and I saw the World's Fair at last. Got the money from somewhere, left Tootsy Wootsy with her grandmother, along with great chunks of our hearts, traveled a thousand miles and back, and saw—well!—the things we did not see would form a shorter list, but we saw some high "art."

Now, I am no artist, that is, in the use of brush and chisel, whatever I may be in thought; and you, dear reader, may not be able to draw a picture that could be identified, but I think we can agree that a picture or a statue, like a house, must first be planned, then made,—conception the real work, and execution the result of training. By which do we judge an artist? By both, of course, and we generally bestow awards according to the execution; but in God's sight the artist gets credit for the conception; just as you judge your child for what it wants to do, and tries to do for you, whether it succeeds or not.

What I have to say then, refers exclusively to conception. But first, I must refer very briefly to execution. There are some pictures that hold my eye like a magnet, and draw me through the densest crowd. They are the ones where execution approaches conception, where the work is truest to nature. In a small frame I saw a face looking out, and a curtain held to one side by the fingers as if one looked through a window at the level of the face. I thought it was cut in relief and actually projected from the frame. But as there was nothing but paintings in the room, I went near, saw its real nature, viewed it from all points, and fixed it in the gallery of my mind.

In another case the ample folds of a dark robe were so perfectly natural, that I was obliged to almost touch the canvas for assurance.

Again, in a life-size group reaching the floor, a man sat in the foreground, while his dog was still in front of him, and with his head away from the spectator at that. At first glance it was almost impossible to believe that the dog was painted, and not a statue on the floor. In these, and perhaps a score of others among the thousands, we found great pleasure in studying execution without having it marred by conception.

What fields are open to an artist's thought? Love: God's to us, ours to Him, parental, fraternal, conjugal—this field is varied and inexhaustible. Life: God's eternal life, human, animal, shading down to vegetable, and, possibly, who knows, to mineral. Beauty: Of face, form, foliage, flower, color, landscape. Goodness:—but I need not go on. These, and a few other fields, cover the universe. Here let the artist roam at will, and we follow him with pleasure. But if he perverts these themes, or introduces unworthy ones, the pleasure does not appear.

Now, when an artist wishes to show a definite idea in the above or similar lines, give him absolute liberty. If nude figures are required, use them. If only certain positions will express the desired thought, place them so. Generally speaking, subordinate everything to the artist's soul-thought. Next, assume that a majority of spectators catch glimpses of the artist's soul-thought, and to that extent follow him in subordinating the details of the work to it.

What next? Simply that when the artist has no lofty theme, the spectator cannot catch glimpses of what does not exist, and is left face to face with the bald details. This is oftenest the case when the human body is under treatment. Admitting that it possesses all the beauty and symmetry that the most ardent claim for it, there can be no necessity, in any of the fields mentioned, for nudity that is quite absolute. If this is true—and I know it is—then absolute nudity is outside of those fields, outside of an artist's proper sphere. And if he is not in his proper sphere we all know where he is.

But I hold that God Himself has set the seal of His disapproval upon absolute nudity. Those who read the Bible for its literal meaning, know that Adam and Eve became painfully conscious in this direction only after they had sinned. Artists like those last mentioned, begin and end with this idea, and claim that they are representing man before the fall. But it must be remembered that "in Adam's fall we sinned all," that is, were born in the condition in which they found themselves after the fall. Against this ocean of inborn tendency, therefore, the teaspoons of a few artists can never make headway.

Those who read the Bible for its spiritual meaning, know that a soul is created dark and void, a natural mind and a spiritual mind, the false separated from the true, the mental (plant) field filled with beautiful things, the faculties (animals) set in order, and the great lights created, and that this soul becomes a man, who, after he has developed a consciousness of self, wishes to conceal his nude form from the world. Thus we reach the same conclusion on literal and spiritual ground.

No, no, friends. Our natural "instincts" are true and right, God-given, and to be followed.

Visitors to the Fair know that these principles have been grossly violated, and without a shadow of excuse. To those who think along the lines indicated, the effect of such work is absolute disgust, with a sense of pity for the artist. That beautiful, but distortable sentence, "To the pure all things are pure" is as much out of place in this discussion as "a jewel in a swine's snout." Because we like good food it does not follow that we wish to eat or gaze upon things that are not food, or that even nauseate us. The question of "purity" is not involved.

I heard a woman say a reasonable thing: "It is not so much the bare nudity I'm thinking about, but the impossible positions and acts in which women are pictured. Everybody that knows a woman knows she is never under any circumstances seen as represented on a thousand canvases here, and my soul resents it for every woman in the world."

If boys are to be "brothers of girls," if men are to be brothers of women, if husbands are to be comrades of wives, if the sexes are to live together on earth as they expect to in heaven, then neither will wish to see or do anything that cannot be enjoyed by both. And may the dear Lord help us to hasten the time when it shall be so!

Vineland, N. J.

FROM A CASTLE IN ENGLAND TO A "CASTLE IN SPAIN."

I.

My Dear Comrades:—"Christmas" is in the air as our dear Miss Willard leaves her rocking-chair in the delightful den at Reigate, transfers her "ideas" to "Old Faithful," and, accompanied by sister Anna and your correspondent, starts for Ledbury. Arriving at that quaint old town, we take a coach for Eastnor Castle, three miles away.

Entering a long beautiful avenue, we look with eager expectancy for the round towers of the castle, which at last rise above the forest of oak trees, but no pennant waves from the flag-staff, as Lady Henry is not arriving with us.

Soon the stately structure, combining beauty and strength, the ancient and modern, the fortress and the home, comes into full view. We speak of castles visited in former years, when, in the midst of our enjoyment, the patriotic, homesick heart has sung, "Mid pleasures and palaces, there's no place like home."

Surely, only a great reform that is "organized mother love," could have made the palatial pile that we are approaching seem so homelike, or could have linked together for humanity's sake, for Christ's sake, a child of the prairies and the daughter of an hundred earls!

We enjoy the rare specimens of trees and shrubs on either side, pass through the castellated gateway into the courtyard, and are welcomed at the door by the small retinue of servants now retained at the castle. Good Mrs. Ellis, the housekeeper, who assists Lady Henry in her philanthropic enterprises in the village, conducts us into the grand hall, sixty feet long by thirty wide and sixty-five feet high. Immense fireplaces are filled with glowing, crackling logs, which cheer the hearts of the New England Puritans, who might otherwise have some wholesome fear of the lifelike specimens of armor around the hall, which once encased the tall, vigorous figures of the bodyguard of the Emperor, Charles V. We rejoice that they do not belong to this age of arbitration, and that the white-ribbon stands for "peace," as well as "purity."

An added sense of serenity steals over one of the party as Miss Willard tells her that the inscription on the walls in letters of ancient Arabic, means, "A perpetual benediction." Then she spies the handsome rocking-chair presented to Lady Henry in Tremont Temple, Boston, and takes pride in observing that it "holds its own" in the midst of grand and stately surroundings. In warmer weather it would be delightful to linger, for there are inviting tables with writing materials, and others covered with books; also carved chairs, Italian chests, Persian incense burners formed as figures of peacocks and set with turquoise; indeed, so many attractions that we decide to return another time, and we follow Mrs. Ellis who leads us to Lady Henry's boudoir, a small room, which speaks of our friend's personality and exquisite taste. Here we are glad to rest, while served with "afternoon tea," by a dignified butler, who has been with the Somers family about twenty years.

The contents of our temperance bags are at once much at home on the writing tables. "The Chieftain" establishes herself in a rocking chair and one falls into a reverie over the fact that our president has a most adjustable and movable den!

Mrs. Ellis coming in, bemoans the fact that Lady Henry has still three days more to lecture in Wales. She is cheered by the news that it is quite a triumphal tour Lady Henry is making. There is nothing this able and devoted housekeeper enjoys so much as a talk about "Her ladyship." It was pathetic to hear her tell of the loneliness since Lady Henry had ceased to make the castle her home. "Think of the change," she said, "for five years she was here all the time, being absent only once for about three months. Now it seems as if the light had all gone out! She used to let me help her in the good work she was always planning. It was then she started the 'mothers' meetings' for the poor women which I keep up every week now. They have learned to earn and to save money; they dress better and can have occasionally a bit of an excursion. They are happier and so are their children. We talk of all these practical matters in the meetings, and close with Scripture lesson and prayer. I tell you, Miss Willard, a better woman than Lady Henry never lived."

We retire early and are escorted through long and lofty corridors lined with paintings, to spacious apartments furnished luxuriously in the finest taste.

Imagination revels in scenes of the past when Queen Victoria, then heir apparent, was a welcome guest. We remember that Princess May and the Duchess of Teck were Lady Henry's visitors the year before her first journey to America. We think of the gracious lady who has a life lease of the vast estate, out on the "war-path" this cold night, and do not pity her one bit, when we compare her glorious investment of time, talent and fortune, with that of my Lord of the chase, and my Lady of the drawing-room! Do we, however, sufficiently realize what it means for her to steadfastly set her face toward a new régime; to act the part of a Christian socialist in a nation whose church hierarchy has "eyes so blind" and "ears so deaf" that it refused to see the misery or hear the cries of distress of the starving wives and children of two hundred thousand miners, who were out of work, solely for the sake of securing a living wage!

Your correspondent in vain endeavors to sleep. She is thinking of the white-ribboners across the great Atlantic, and of those who are carrying the gospel to other lands. She thanks God, too, for the elder sister, who, because she represents a great, white ribbon host, honors this ancestral home by her presence; for she and her comrades the world over bear the titles belonging to a heavenly inheritance, and shine with the light that comes from Him who "for the love wherewith He loved us" "made Himself of no reputation and took on Him the form of a servant."

The next morning we are especially thankful to see our old friend, the sun, rising in splendor, for does he not reveal the beauties of hill and dale about which we have heard so much? During a charming drive behind "Brown Bread and Butter," these are all pointed out to us. We pass through one avenue lined with fir trees, and another that has the sycamore on either side. Here, farther on are oaks, and clinging to the higher branches of one of these monarchs of the forest, is the sacred mistletoe so rarely seen, except on the apple tree.

We drive through parks where the graceful deer browse all the year around, and in the distance are the Malvern Hills whose beauty inspired Elizabeth Barrett Browning in her childhood days.

As we reach a point commanding one of the finest views the last earthly home of Jenny Lind is seen. Of her it is said, that she never seemed elated because of her gifts. "I sing to God," was her answer to any who would have chosen for this rare woman a more worldly career.

On our drive home, we receive our best impressions of the castle in its picturesque position above the lake. Its walls surround forty acres including the gardens and hothouses, which are renowned. The grape vine is seventy-two feet long and is of great age. The estate extends many miles, and the richly wooded forests were once a part of the Royal Chase. The Herefordshire Beacon is over one thousand feet high. It is a British camp that has been used for ages for beacon fires.

An obelisk crowns a hill near the castle, and was erected by John, Earl Somers, in memory of his son, who fell before Burgos, Spain, in 1812.

After her drive it does not take our leader long to attack the work which is "making history," while the writer goes "the round" of the castle under the guidance of the housekeeper, whose unlimited knowledge of its treasures is at the service of the public on Mondays and Fridays between the hours of eleven and four. A small fee is paid which aids a charitable institution.

In this rambling letter the writer's chief desire is to have her comrades see the castle from a white-ribboner's point of view. Were there space, and had she the skill and artistic lore possessed by many who read THE UNION SIGNAL, some detailed description might be given of the valuable paintings, busts, Italian and Gobelin tapestries, carvings, cabinets, inlaid tables, beside many other treasures all of which are of historic interest.

It was Lady Henry's father, Charles, last Earl Somers, whose love of art and the antique made the castle such a splendid museum. One of his personal friends was the famous Watts, and some of his finest paintings are to be seen in the principal rooms. Allusion has been made in THE UNION SIGNAL to the portrait, by Watts, of the Countess Somers when she was a young lady. This, being much admired by Earl Somers, led to the friendship which resulted in marriage, and gave to the British W. C. T. U. its leader.

No one could fail to linger on the grand staircase, in the great hall, the libraries, the state dining-room and the chapel, but of still greater interest is the private suite of rooms so long occupied by Lady Henry.

Passing into the little turret writing-room is like a leap from the mediæval ages into the tense, throbbing life of the nineteenth century.

Not that it is not quiet and artistic, but the pictures of leaders in a great reform, the mottoes and Scripture texts, all tell in eloquent language of convictions that were slowly deepening for years in the heart of the Christian woman, who recognized as a new birthright her incomparable opportunities and responsibilities. One thinks of the family motto, "Spes nescia vinci," and then reads the interpretation of "hope" in the words that meet the eye on either side: "Not I but Christ."

"Only be steadfast, never waver,
Nor seek earth's favor—
But rest;
Thou knowest what God's will must be
For all His creatures, so for thee—
The best."

How familiar is the sound of Miss Willard's voice, as the writer passes from the turret-room into the boudoir, and hears her dictate to the stenographer the words: "You alone, my sisters, can make this true"! It must have been a sentence in some bugle blast blown from this height that has reached the clans ere this!

Lady Henry arrives the next day in time to welcome her son returning from Oxford, and it is thus made possible for the two sisters to leave for awhile and visit the "castle in Spain," which is a verity, and will be described in the next letter. ELIZABETH GORDON.

San Sebastian, Spain, Jan. 5, 1894.

(To be continued.)

WOMAN SUFFRAGE IN MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—There is nothing much to tell as yet about our bill in the Massachusetts legislature. There were any number of petitions for it, both from the suffrage associations and other organizations, the W. C. T. U. in particular. Every local union in the state sent in a petition for municipal suffrage, except two weak little unions in Berkshire.

Three hearings were given before the legislative committee, the joint special committee on woman suffrage, January 30; the committee reported leave to withdraw, five members dissenting, who brought in a minority report in our favor.

At the first hearing no remonstrants appeared, but one of the legislators, Mr. Wardwell, of Haverhill, said he had received that morning a letter from a lady who had been president or secretary of the anti-woman suffrage association, Mrs. C. D. Homans, of Marlborough street. She requested him to state that the remonstrants would not take up the time of the committee with addresses, but would send them documents containing the objections they had advanced at previous hearings.

At the second hearing no remonstrants appeared. At the third, which took place on Monday, January 29, the only remonstrant was a Mr. Jeremiah Donovan, who made a number of speeches in opposition, in very bad grammar and with a strong brogue. His principal objection was the assertion that the women who vote for school committee and who desire full suffrage, have no children. "They don't want to have 'em; they hate 'em," he said over and over. He also said nobody ought to vote who could not carry a musket, and then contradicted that by declaring that he thought widows ought to be allowed to vote. He said if woman suffrage were granted, the ward room would be "packed with disreputable women," who would outvote the good ones, and, in short, he made an insulting and offensive speech, or rather a series of such speeches. The committee called for the suffragists and the remonstrants alternately, and as there was no other remonstrant, Mr. Donovan had repeated innings. Mrs. Trask Hill afterwards valiantly criticised him, and with some severity.

On February 1, the main question of substituting the minority report for the suffrage bill came up and was adopted by a vote of 86 to 72, with about 20 pairs. Mr. Wood, of Boston, moved a reconsideration to be heard the next day, and there the question hangs at this writing.

ALICE STONE BLACKWELL.

Boston, Mass.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain: and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months. And he prayed again and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.—James 5: 17, 18.

Attacks and misrepresentations in regard to the Temple enterprise have been frequent of late in some quarters. Most of them, however, are unworthy of an answer. The latest of these comes from a source where a different spirit might have been expected. We are sorry that the woman whom the white-ribboners of Wisconsin have chosen as their leader for the last year or two, should allow herself to be so prejudiced—from whatever cause, to make such unjust statements as we find in the February issue of The Motor, the state organ of the W. C. T. U. of Wisconsin. The article is addressed by the state president to her co-workers throughout Wisconsin. The first charge made is in regard to the recent letter sent out by the Temple trustees to the presidents of all local unions in the United States, stating that before commencing the campaign for raising money to pay off the indebtedness on the Temple from outsiders, it was necessary to find out how much the unions would pledge themselves to raise during the next two years. The lady says: "I found in my recent tour through a portion of the state that Wisconsin is being flooded with appeals for the Temple." In answer to this charge we would say: Wisconsin is credited with two hundred and forty unions; we sent one letter of the purport above given to the president of each union. Is this flooding the state with our documents? She complains that we sent to towns where no unions exist. We addressed the letters according to the Wisconsin W. C. T. U. roster. If the unions died in the meantime and the letters got into the hands of women who were no longer in office, surely we were not to blame. An impartial judge might hint that the state president was remiss in her duty to have allowed unions that once existed to die out.

***

The next charge our sister makes is that we sent these letters without her permission. She says: "A ruling was made by the National that no one could appeal to unions for financial aid unless given permission to do so by their state president." This statement no doubt is correct as far as it goes, but the intent of this decision was in regard to state, and not National concerns. The National granted the Temple trustees the privilege to ask aid of the local unions for the National building; the same is true of the National Temperance Hospital and the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association. Consequently the "ruling" is inoperative when a National measure is in question. The following is the reason given by the Wisconsin president for her opposition to the Temple enterprise: "The principal reason is because it is impracticable to try to raise $1,200,000 to pay for a building that stands on ground for which a rental of $40,000 must be paid annually in gold, and it is not in accordance with W. C. T. U. principles of work. . . . . The whole scheme is too visionary for the practical women of which our ranks are composed, and too costly for an organization of women who lay claim to so little money."

***

Impracticable, indeed! No doubt to the narrow vision of our Wisconsin sister, unilluminated, as it evidently is, with one grain of faith, the undertaking of raising a million dollars seems like moving a mountain. Her greatest objection, however, seems to lie in the fact that we pay $40,000 a year ground rent. What of that, when we get it paid back over and over again in the rentals from the building? And as the lease runs for two hundred years, there will be ample opportunity for somebody to donate the ground to us. Who knows but the great merchant prince, Marshall Field, who owns it, may be moved to do so?

"It is not in accordance with W. C. T. U. principles of work." Our sister evidently is new in the work, or she would not promulgate such sentiments. The fact is, as Miss Willard has so often stated, "The W. C. T. U. policy is a do-everything policy." "The whole scheme is too visionary," says our critic. It is a wonderfully substantial vision that greets the eye on the corner of La Salle and Monroe streets, Chicago, when a glance upward reveals the magnificent Woman's Temple, which looks substantial enough to last the storms of centuries. Oh, my sister, how little you understand what you are talking about when you make such statements.

Think you it is as great a matter to raise the money to pay for the building now that it is up and in successful operation as it was to get people to have sufficient faith in the undertaking and subscribe money for the enterprise which they were willing to transfer to the W. C. T. U. in five years, if it were ready to accept? That was the test of faith. To raise the money now is a small achievement in comparison. "The building," she says, "is too costly for women that can lay claim to so little money." An investment that pays is never too costly. White-ribboners are only asked to give their mite toward it. The intention has always been to secure money from outside the ranks to pay for whatever might be lacking. There are many other charges made by our sister, which we will reply to in our next week's issue.

***

The offer of a solid silver Temple souvenir teaspoon for filling a mite-box during 1894 is proving a wonderful incentive to our temperance friends, young and old, to enter their names for the contest. We have just let the contract for the first gross of the spoons. We will describe the emblems on the spoon in our next issue. We are also sending out large numbers of mite-boxes to unions which will raise money on their pledges. All who fill a mite-box for this purpose, or send us a dollar will receive one of the beautiful Columbian souvenirs that have so delighted all who have received them.

WAITING.

BY JOHN BURROUGHS.

Serene, I fold my hands and wait,
Nor care for wind, or tide, or sea,
I rave no more 'gainst time or fate,
For, lo! my own shall come to me.

I stay my haste, I make delays,
For what avails this eager pace?
I stand amid the eternal ways,
And what is mine shall know my face.

Asleep, awake, by night or day,
The friends I seek are seeking me;
No wind can drive my bark astray,
Nor change the tide of destiny.

What matters if I stand alone?
I wait with joy the coming years;
My heart shall reap where it has sown,
And garner up its fruit of tears.

The waters know their own, and draw
The brook that springs in yonder height;
So flows the good with equal law
Unto the soul of pure delight.

The stars come nightly to the sky;
The tidal wave unto the sea;
Nor time, nor space, nor deep, nor high,
Can keep my own away from me.

—Sunshine in the Soul.

THE SUCCESS OF RADCLIFFE.

BY EVA JONES.

The two ladies sat busily mending stockings in Mrs. Dickson's sunny sitting room, and eagerly talking one bright morning.

"You see, I could not wait for afternoon," said Mrs. Grant. "I knew you would have that basketful to mend as usual, and I have more than usual, for the children have made lively work with their toes and heels while I have been gone. Only two weeks, and such a mess of holes!" And she poured from her shopping bag a lapful of dilapidated hose, and threaded her needle. "I knew you would be as impatient to hear as I am to tell. And I've found it out, the reason why the Radcliffe union is so much more aggressive and successful than ours. It has puzzled me, for Radcliffe is no larger, and has no better class of inhabitants than Bentonville, yet the showing of their union is far better than ours. But I attended their meetings both weeks I was there, and soon saw how it was. It is a matter of money."

"How?" said Mrs. Dickson. "A larger union and more dues and more wealthy members in their union?"

"Yes, they have a hundred members to our forty-five, though either number is pitifully small for a town of five thousand souls. But they have gained two-thirds of them this year, remember, and the increase in dues is less than twenty dollars added to the local treasury. Yet they have this year gathered and used five hundred dollars, beside a hundred and twenty dollars sent outside to various W. C. T. U. funds. They show some financial courage and keenness, as well as consecration and devotion to our lines of work, and that is the cause of their greater success. All departments feel the benefit of the life blood they draw from a full treasury. Each has a full outfit of its own literature. Good headquarters are rented. A column is paid for and faithfully used in each of their weekly papers. An immense amount of literature is distributed, which is the heaviest item of expense they have. Every member is a committee for distributing literature, and the children of the Loyal Temperance Legion help in the same work. Their literature boxes, too, in depots and a dozen other public places are kept always filled with supplies purchased for that very purpose. They have short term subscriptions to temperance papers for a good many persons who are too poor or too indifferent to be induced to subscribe for themselves and besides,—

"Yes, but wait a minute! Don't crush me with an account of what a union might do if it could. But just tell me, please, where they got the money. It is easy enough to invest it if you once get it. That is what our National W. C. T. U. is rich in—forty plans for spending money, every one of them grand, and every union can think of other needs beside. But I've sometimes thought the National executive ought to create a department, with a superintendent to tell how to raise the money to use in our work. My! How I should like cash in hand this minute to establish a lecture course here for the winter. How do they raise the money? I know they have evolved some way beyond the oyster supper and festival. What is it?"

Little Tom Grant's stockings were finished and rolled up, and some holes in Robbie's were being fast filled as she thoughtfully answered: "They use the same means as for other lines of work. Every sister that led in prayer in those meetings directly besought the Lord to help them to get money to use in their work. 'The gold and the silver are thine, and the treasures of this world, O Lord. Help us to get some to carry on this work for Thee.' That was the petition always ascending, and I wondered that so few of us realize that in our work we need the money which the Lord can send as well as the grace, and strength, and wisdom, and patience which He alone can supply. I've gone to praying for money for our work, and that the Lord would make us fit to trust as stewards for Him."

"And then how are the prayers answered?" softly asked Mrs. Dickson. "Strange how easily we forget that we are King's daughters."

"In various ways," was the answer. "The treasurer keeps a special account of the different funds. One is the economy fund. It consists of money contributed by the members saved through practicing some personal economy for the purpose of getting money for temperance work. You would be interested to hear the items they told me of—the plainer dress, simpler furnishing and less expensive pleasure that those sisters indulged in, and brought the amounts so saved to this fund, and God helping me, I am going to do a little bit for Him in that way. I have to get new lace curtains in the spring, you know, but I shall not get the kind I told you I admired so much. Some very pretty ones for two-thirds the money will make us all just as happy, and the difference shall go right into our union treasury, and I shall love to have it go there. Well, then some of the women are able to make special contributions, which go into the membership gift fund. And don't you see how this earnestness of the sisters must stir up the honorary membership to helpfulness? One of their best women makes 'honorary membership' her special department of work, and she has a long list enrolled, most of whom, beside paying dues regularly, pledge a generous sum yearly to the treasury, and some well-wishers, who are not members, do the same. There is a special subscription for the literature fund, and at the public meetings, which are held every month, generous collections are always taken.

"Another thing that has a most important bearing on the treasury is this: They take the Radcliffe public, the friendly public, at least, from whom most of their money is obtained, into their confidence. At the last public meeting of each quarter the treasurer, or some other woman, makes a statement of the money the union has had to use, how obtained and the purposes to which the union has applied it. Then she outlines future needs of the work, and you would think by her talk that it belonged quite as much to the sympathetic public who invest their money in it as to the W. C. T. U., who plan it. And the money is always so well used, and the account of the work done is so interesting that their receipts from the public are constantly increasing, and the W. C. T. U. is gaining in popularity every day.

"Demorest contests are frequent and popular entertainment, and an admission fee is usually charged. Self-denial week is not only observed, but each one tries, besides, to get some able friend of the cause to share in sacrificing for this good work. Both active members and honoraries joined in an 'Experience Social,' and it would have amused you the ways some of them had invented to earn money. For special outside purposes—as the Temple—they have special meetings with special program. They sent for mite-boxes, and at a Temple fund meeting sold them at auction, registering each buyer, and in six months had another meeting to gather and open the boxes. I did not hear of an oyster supper or a strawberry social, but they did have a W. C. T. U. bazaar for two weeks preceding Christmas, to which old and young had contributed pretty, salable things of every imaginable small sort, and which brought a handsome return. W. C. T. U. members took turns in presiding over it, and you may be sure they made the most of the opportunity for distributing literature and extending W. C. T. U. influence as well as for making money."

"I see!" said Mrs. Dickson. "They believe in having money for this work, and they get it. And what a world of good it must do in their hands."

"Yes, indeed," replied Mrs. Grant. "All good people there are delighted at every dollar the W. C. T. U. has to invest. No woman in that town, now-a-days, is saying, 'I would join the W. C. T. U., perhaps, if I could see that it was doing anything.' The idle and indifferent have to hunt up some other excuse."

Clinton, Mo.

FOR GIRLS.

Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, of New York City, in speaking before the students in a young ladies' college, recently made the following stern arraignment of the purposeless lives of many of their class: "If it happens," he said, "that I am speaking to any young woman whose property, actual or prospective, renders work unnecessary as a livelihood, and who, on that score, excuses herself from actual service of some kind in others' behalf, I am going to say to you, in kindly candor, three things: You are a dishonor to your sex; you are a traitor to your kind; you are a renegade from the cause of the Divine Master. Let me add, for your sake and that of your father and mother, that an aimless life is property upon which the devil regularly holds the first mortgage. Aimlessness is certain to drift, and the drift is never up stream. What begins with aimlessness easily hardens into selfishness, and selfishness, with means to gratify it, is the prolific mother of a large and bad brood." This is a terrible picture of waste and failure. Surely we do not need to keep it before us to make us respect profoundly our girls' longing for work. "'Shall a child ask bread and we give him a stone?'" . . Would a father say to his son, "My boy, your mother and I are lonely without you, you must stay at home, go out to afternoon teas and parties with us, and keep us company in the big, empty house. I have enough for us all so there is no need of your bothering your head about supporting yourself'?" Would he expect his son to be happy under such circumstances? Why then his daughter? "It would distress you," says the writer of a powerful article on "The waste of women's intellectual force," "to have a group of idle sons, thirty or forty years of age, hanging around your home; you would not expect them to be contented, and you would probably blame yourself for having somehow erred in their training. But you like to have a group of idle daughters about you. You think it very strange if they are discontented, and you rarely feel that to them, as well as to their brothers, the real opportunities of life should have been widely opened." . . .

On this high vantage-ground, how clearly marked out is the path before us. Our daughters must bring their womanhood, as our sons their manhood, to help the world, because there is a "difference between them," and their work, "though parallel, is not identical." Many things the one can do that the other cannot possibly do. And for the rest, the only question of "right" is, which can do it better?—The Outlook.

TYPICAL LESSONS FOR LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION TEACHERS.

IX.

The Well.

BY MARY E. RUDD.

Opening Exercises, 15 minutes:—New Song, "Only a Drop in the Bucket," Page 26, Marching Songs, No. 2. Prayer, hymn, songs. Repeat Scripture texts; choose from finger plays.

Rhythmical Exercises:—Take this time again for practicing the "Exercise Song" with the idea of using it as the opening prayer when it is well learned.

Physiology, 5 minutes:—Sing "Raise Your Hands," and "Our Wonderful House," adding third verse. Tell what is meant by fountain and pitcher. Listen to the beating of the heart. Breathing exercises to feel the action of the lungs.

Lesson, 20 minutes:—Review briefly the evaporation of water and find out if the children have noticed boiling water or any other evidences of evaporation such as the drying of clothes, etc. Speak of the brook and help the children to understand that what happened to that brook is happening to all other brooks, to the great lake, to the ocean, wherever there is water. Only there is so much water in the lake it would take many, many years for all of it to go away. But how fortunate it is that all the water is not on top of the ground. Tell about the great rivers and lakes hidden away in the earth where the sunbeam fairies cannot find them.

But how do we get the water that is stored away for our use? Tell about the digging of wells, the bucket that draws the water up. Weave around the well some of the sentiment of the "Old Oaken Bucket," if possible. Tell how the water was always cold because it came from such a depth. Try to give the children some of the feeling of what the well is to the people of hot countries. Tell the story of Hagar, also of Moses smiting the rock as told in Exodus 18.

Repeat words of new song, and sing. March five minutes.

Occupation:—Use small cubes and brick up a well. Cylinders may be buckets, and may be lowered by a thread.

Closing, sing "Only a Drop in the Bucket," while pennies are being taken up. Goodbys as usual.

Chicago, Ill.

A LITTLE CHILD'S VALENTINE.

'Twas only a child who spoke to me
Only a child on her father's knee;
With rosy arms around my body pressed,
And chubby cheeks upon my face at rest.
Only the words of a little child,
But they filled my soul with emotion wild.

"To-day, papa, is Saint Valentine's Day,
And the shops are crowded with presents gay,
But I've no money, so I cannot buy,
A golden pin, or a silken tie,
And yet, dear papa, my heart is thine,
I wish you would be my valentine."

"I need no gift from my darling child,
But a loving heart, and obedience mild;
The choicest gifts that money have bought
Without true love are only naught.
But pure affection, so divine,
Can claim me as thy valentine."

"You love me, pa, I'm sure you do,
And now I'll prove if your love be true:
'Tis only a trifle that I will ask,
No costly gift, but a simple task,
If only you your name will sign,
Then you shall be my valentine."

Then from her pocket forth she drew,
A pretty card, and some ribbon too,
My heart it quaked, my face was flushed,
And for a time my voice was hushed,
I knew that the serpent men call wine,
Had round my soul begun to twine.

I looked at the card and the ribbon band
Through the golden curls I drew my hand,
And I kissed the cheeks so rosy red,
As together we nestled, head to head,
Which should I choose, the sparkling wine
Or my darling child for my valentine?

My heart was moved, I made my choice,
I know that I spoke in a trembling voice.
"Yes, give me the pen, I'll break drink's chain,"
My hand it shook as I wrote my name.
Did a halo around her bright head float
As in triumph she pinned the badge on my coat?

Halo or not, there is no need to say,
An angel spoke on St. Valentine's Day;
That kindly thought of a little child,
Had drawn me back from the lonesome wild,
And placed my feet on the holy road,
That led to peace, and joy, and God.

Ye little ones, then, who read this rhyme,
Think of the feast of Saint Valentine;
There's somebody's love that you can claim,
There's somebody you can save from pain,
There's somebody on drink's slippery ledge,
You can save from woe by the temperance pledge.

—Alfred J. Glasspool.

A HIDDEN ENEMY.

BY S. JENNIE SMITH.

The boys were gathered around a cheerful log fire in Aunt Dora's sitting-room, relating stories of wonderful adventures, in which the narrator always figured conspicuously. Now and then it would seem that he took to himself too much credit, for Uncle Charlie, who sat over by the window, occasionally heard such remarks.

Then one of them said, "Old Carlos was drunk that day. I don't think that a man who attempts to take charge of a boat ought to touch a drop of liquor of any kind."

"I don't think that a man ought to touch a drop of liquor, anyhow," argued one of the others.

"Well, that depends," was the reply. "If a man can take a glass of wine at the proper time and it doesn't hurt him, I don't see any harm in it."

Uncle Charlie had listened with an amused smile until he heard these opinions expressed. Then, drawing his chair nearer the blazing logs, he interrupted the boys by saying, "Speaking of adventures, when I was an urchin I had one that you would never dream of meeting within the city of New York.

"We are all attention," cried Seth, eagerly, while his companions proved by their actions that they, too, were anxious to hear Uncle Charlie's story.

"Well," began that gentleman, thoughtfully, "you have all heard of my Uncle John, who lived at Cutting Place, in East Forty-second street, and you know how fond Brother Rob and I were of visiting there. Now this uncle had a great fondness for boys (being favored with none of his own), and he disliked to see them exhibit girlish propensities of any kind. He taught us how to row and swim, and continually talked to us about the necessity of being brave under all circumstances. 'No matter what happens, show yourself a man,' he used to say, and my brother and I believed we would be able to face a tribe of hostile Indians without trembling. On one occasion when we were visiting at the house, uncle and aunt found it necessary to leave us for a few hours, so Rob and I played around outside during their absence. We found in the front garden a large, wooden box, and we imagined that to be a school bench, store counter, rostrum, or anything else that we required.

"'This didn't used to be here,' said Rob, 'where do you think it came from, Charlie?'

"'Oh! I don't know,' I answered carelessly; 'I suppose uncle has been buying some piece of furniture, and it came in here.'

"'Yes, and was packed in straw,' added Rob, putting his hand into the hole where the lid was partly broken away, and taking out some of the straw that the box contained. If we could have known at that moment what a perilous thing he had done, I believe our hair would have stood on ends, in spite of our bravery, but we were unhappily ignorant of the truth, and so remained for hours in close proximity to a terrible danger.

"After a while I took a seat on the box and became engrossed in a story book while Rob played with the dog in another part of the yard. Suddenly I saw a passing policeman look sharply at me; then with a cry, 'Sit perfectly still, child; don't move!' he sprang over the fence, with his revolver in his hand. At that moment I saw that a large snake was emerging from the box and preparing to crawl across my lap. My blood ran cold as I saw that I could not stir without disturbing it, but remembering Uncle John's instructions, I kept my self-possession and looked to the policeman for assistance. He had his revolver all ready, and just as soon as he found that the creature's head was hanging over one side of the box, he fired. The shot seemed to kill the snake instantly, and it rolled down on the ground, but the man was not satisfied until he had sent several bullets into the enemy. It seemed like an age that I sat there with my heart in my mouth, as the saying is, but the whole thing did not take more than three seconds at the least. When the firing was over, I drew a long breath, jumped from my seat, and as the color returned to my face, said triumphantly, 'You fixed him, didn't you?'

When Uncle John heard the story, he first thanked the policeman, and then said to me, 'Why, I am proud of you, Charlie, you've done credit to my teachings.'

"After that he told us that the snake was a boa-constrictor. The owner had supposed it to be dead, and knowing that Uncle John was a taxidermist he had sent it on to him to be stuffed. Of course, it had only been in a state of torpidity, and the warm weather had wakened it. It was twenty feet long, and about four inches in diameter. These creatures are said to be exceedingly voracious when they waken from a lengthy sleep, so this one must have been in a partially lethargic state when it crawled out, or the consequence would probably have been more serious.

"A few days later some unwise person urged me to take a small glass of wine. I was holding it hesitatingly in my hand—for I had been taught to avoid it—when Uncle John appeared on the scene. 'My dear boy,' he cried, warningly, 'there is a hidden enemy in that glass just as surely as there was one in that box the other day. You can't see this one any more than you could see that at first, but unless you flee from it now it will gradually come to view, and before you are aware of it, you will be completely in its power. You did your part in conquering that; make quick work of this one as well.'

"With a shudder I laid down the glass. My late experience had prepared me to receive the lesson that Uncle John was trying to impress on my mind, and since that time I have seen a serpent in every glass or bottle of intoxicating drink that comes within my sight. I have watched the viper emerging from the glass and taking the victims in its cruel embrace; I have known men to sneer when they were warned of its coming, and have seen them close their eyes to the fact that it was already upon them, dragging them down to destruction. I have seen happy homes broken up, just because men deceived themselves with the idea that they could dally with the tempter and yet keep it under subjection. Then beware, my dear boys, lest any of you start on the road that leads to the hidden enemy, Intemperance."

And Uncle Charlie walked out of the room, leaving behind him five very thoughtful-looking lads.

Syosset, Long Island, N. Y.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—I have a valentine on my desk, a splendid one. Can you imagine what it is like? Let me describe it to you. Imagine a pretty folded card, pale blue in color. On it is the picture of a child beside a cross, grasping a flagstaff from which our country's flag is floating. There are words in pretty letters on the card, and opening it, I read:

PLEDGE.

Trusting in God's help, I solemnly promise to abstain from the use of alcoholic drinks, including wine, beer and cider; from the use of tobacco in any form and from profanity.

Then there's a dotted line for the signature and more words in fancy lettering which I read:

May God help you to keep this pledge which makes you a member of the Loyal Temperance Legion of the United States of America.

There are more lines and decorations on the back of this attractive card which is to my mind more beautiful and expressive than any gold or silver, lace trimmed valentine that was ever sent by a loving child to father, mother or teacher.

What do you think of my Cozy Corner valentine?

Affectionately,

Aunt Jane

NEPHEWS AND NIECES.

I have two sisters and a baby brother. Mamma wears the white ribbon and we are all temperance children.
Stoughton, Wis. HELEN MAUCK.

We are going to do all we can for temperance now and when we get big we want to work together for it.
DELLA AND BELLE HERMANN.
New Duluth, Minn.

I have two brothers older than I and a sister younger. We are all temperance children. BELLE M. JORDAN.
Rockport, O.

My mother and sister attended the National Prohibition Convention in Cincinnati, O., and took me with them. We had a pleasant time. CARL A. BURROWS.
Sharpsburg, Pa.

I would like to belong to your Corner. I read the letters and pick out the puzzles every week.
FLORENCE H. PENRIE.
Oak Dale Farm, Binghamton, N. Y.

My grandpa takes THE UNION SIGNAL. My grandma and aunt belong to the W. C. T. U.
JENNIE S. WALLACE.
2133 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

I am a little temperance girl eight years old, and wear the L. T. L. badge. VINA ELROD.
Juniata, Neb.

We live right next door to the church. I am president of the L. T. L. and secretary also.
Grandin, N. D. E. MYRTLE DINGLE.

I have a little brother and sister. Both are temperance. There isn't any L. T. L. in this neighborhood or I would like to be a member. JULIA G. SLAYTON.
Grant, Mich.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

269.

A RIDDLE.

Of valor, three-fifths we may take,
Then adding one-third of enamor,
Two-thirds of a tie that will make
To separate (two-fifths of) never!

My whole with great pleasure we greet
And celebrate gaily each year;
To the children who send missives sweet
This holiday ever is dear.

J. A. S.

270.

DROPPED LETTER PUZZLE.

T–u–t–n– i– G– d'– h–l–, I s–l–m–l– p–o–i–e t– a–s–a–n f–o– t–e u–e o– a–c–h–l–c d–i–k–, i–c–u–i–g w–n–, b–e–a–d c–d–r; f–o– t–e u–e –f t–b–c–o i– a–y f–r– a–d f–o–p–o–a–i–y.

J. A. S.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JANUARY 25.

264.

WEST
InTo LiEf
LiVe
AMES
RaNK DuST

265.

INTO	ROME	WORD
NEAR	OBED	OVER
TALE	MERE	RELY
ORES	EDEN	DRYS

Correct answers: Ruby M. Cross.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
MANAGING EDITOR—MARGARET A. SUDDUTH.
OFFICE EDITOR—MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—JENNIE A. STEWART.
CONTRIBUTIN EDITORS { LADY HENRY SOMERSET. MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Secretary.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.
President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, The Doomed City. By Emma Playter Seabury. 2
The Member-at-Large. III. By Helen Campbell..... 2
A Reasonable Basis for Total Abstinence. By Lady Henry Somerset..... 2
Women as Reporters. By Maud Wood-Henry..... 3
Military Instruction for American Boys. By B. O. Flower..... 4
Deacon Homelove and Art. By O. B. B..... 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
From a Castle in England to a "Castle in Spain." I..... 4
Woman Suffrage in the Massachusetts Legislature..... 5
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS..... 5
THE HOUSEHOLD:
Waiting. By John Burroughs..... 6
The Success of Radcliffe. By Eva Jones..... 6
For Girls..... 9
Typical Lessons for Loyal Temperance Legion Teachers. IX. By Mary E. Rudd..... 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, A Little Child's Valentine..... 7
A Hidden Enemy. By S. Jennie Smith..... 7
AUNT JANE'S COZY CORNER:
Soft-Shelled Nuts..... 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
The National Disgrace..... 8
Those Unsentimental W. C. T. U. Women..... 8
Empire State Legislative Work..... 8
Temperance Foundation Work—Free Kindergartens in San Francisco..... 9
Helped or Hindered..... 9
Memorial Windows..... 9
THE WATCH TOWER..... 9
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
California—Maryland—District of Columbia—Pennsylvania..... 10, 11
News in a Nutshell..... 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
The Relation of Temperance to Labor and Capital..... 12
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES..... 12
TREASURER'S CORNER..... 13
ORGANIZERS' CORNER..... 13
OUR LIBRARY TABLE..... 14
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT..... 15
SIGNAL NOTES..... 16

PLEDGE.—"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquor, as a beverage, including Wine, Beer and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same."

He restoreth my soul; he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.—Ps. 23:3.

THE NATIONAL DISGRACE.

The Independent, of Feb. 1, contains a very interesting symposium upon "Lynching:—Its Cause and Cure." The subject is treated by Southern men and women, prominent in church and state; and is, in itself, a hopeful evidence that the barbarous custom is doomed to speedy overthrow, since the writers are unanimous in its condemnation, though one or two find palliating circumstances.

It is not, however, of lynching per se that we would treat in this editorial, but rather, of the glaringly capitalized headlines which mark the symposium in question: "THE GREAT NATIONAL DISGRACE." With that statement we take issue. A great national disgrace lynching undoubtedly is, a disgrace which should and does bring the blush of shame to the cheeks of all thoughtful men and women who live under its possible shadow. It is a disgrace that the laws of our country can ever be set aside by mob violence, whatever the nature of the crime or however great the provocation. It is a disgrace that in these latter years of the nineteenth century, it should be possible for even the smallest number of the citizens in the "most enlightened country upon earth" to so poorly apprehend the principles of justice and of decency. All this is a disgrace, but it stands side by side with many other things equally disgraceful, which cannot be said to constitute a peculiarly "national" disgrace. For a thing to be "national" it must have, to some degree at least, the support and sanction of the entire nation. This, lynching has never had.

Indeed, there is but one crime which can stand to-day as the national disgrace, and that is the legalized saloon. From that the country derives a revenue, thus making itself partner in its crime. From the saloon doors go forth the forces which make havoc in society. Who doubts that the men who take part in the lynchings, North or South, derive much of their courage and lawlessness from the products of the saloon? Who doubts that, if the saloon were put out of existence, in nine cases out of ten the crime which made the lynching possible would likewise have no existence? Who doubts that the crime, the poverty, the lawlessness, the misery, the well-nigh everything, in short, which mars this fair world, spring very largely from the saloon? No one doubts this. Both the friends and the foes of total abstinence admit it; and yet the saloon exists. It exists to pour out upon the entire nation its flood of corruption; it exists to be the great power before which our lawmakers bow, the autocrat of our national life. Disgrace! In the matter of a national disgrace we know no North nor South, no East nor West; but from the Capitol at Washington to the shores of Alaska, we are all included in the one comprehensive national disgrace of complicity with this power which everywhere works for unrighteonsness. Drive out the saloon and we shall then have leisure to attend to the disgraces which may linger in its wake, but whose days will quickly be numbered.

THOSE UNSENTIMENTAL W. C. T. U. WOMEN.

Temperance forces in Hopkinsville, Ky., are considerably stirred up over a passage at arms between the W. C. T. U. of that place and the Hopkinsville Hotel company. Having learned that the plan of the new hotel now in process of erection, and owned by a syndicate, provides for a bar-room attachment, the white-ribboners sent in a petition begging that the space thus assigned be used for some other purpose. The secretary of the company forwarded the document to its president in New York—one Mr. Latham—and his reply is given by the local paper as "a letter well worth reading." Coming as it does from one who doubtless considers himself an intelligent and observant person, it certainly is a curiosity in its way.

He says it may be "ungallant to differ with these high-minded moralists," who are "contending for what they believe to be the best interests of municipal welfare and domestic happiness." Yet, notwithstanding it is done in the interests of home and of society at large, these women, he declares, by "invading the realm of unsentimental business relinquish their inborn right to knightly deference!"

Now the thinking woman has long ago discovered that he who is theoretically her "gallant" protector is too often responsible for her own unhappiness and for the invasion of her supposed kingdom by its worst enemy. Modern chivalry takes the form of justice, and if in contending for domestic happiness woman is compelled to "quit the fireside"; if man-made laws have forced her to invade other realms than that to which "knightly deference" would confine her, she is entitled to and has the increased respect of all truly chivalrous men.

"There is no sentimental side to this question." No need to tell W. C. T. U. women that! "Neither is it a question of Christian faith; nor does it involve the fundamental principles of temperance." Mr. Latham is very ignorant of the teachings of the Christianity of Christ and the apostles if he believes that the liquor question cannot be decided upon gospel principles. In our duty to God and to our neighbor as set forth in the New Testament we can find if we will, explicit teachings concerning the modern drink traffic. Christian faith is proved by works, and what of the works of the saloon?

"Christ turned water into wine." This threadbare excuse again! We venture to say that if the Hopkinsville Hotel company will agree to furnish to their customers only the kind of wine provided by Jesus at the marriage feast, the W. C. T. U. will offer no further remonstrance. "He (Christ) taught moderation in all things, and He never hinted at the idea of total abstinence as enforced by prohibition." Neither did He ever hint at many other ideas which the spirit of Christianity as manifested in human progress has since evolved. He never hinted, for instance, at the superior righteousness of a republican form of government. He paid tribute to Cæsar and thus set the example of Jewish subjection to a heathen conqueror. Are we therefore to conclude that republican principles are contrary to the spirit of Christ's teachings?

Mr. Latham does not believe that the proposed bar in his hotel will make a particle of difference in the amount of liquor drank by Hopkinsville fathers and husbands. He does not believe it will add one victim to the list of slaves to alcohol. This line of defense is a common one among liquor dealers. "Somebody will sell it, why not I?" We can't make men moral by law, says the state, therefore let us obtain "revenue" by legalizing immorality. Men will drink and get drunk, agree the state and the saloon-keeper; let us make of their weaknesses and of their vices stepping-stones to wealth.

But the most remarkable feature of this "reply" is the sweeping assertion concerning other hotels. "There is only one hotel in the United States of which I have ever heard where liquor of no kind is sold!" And it is argued from this astonishing statement that the "popular demand of the traveling public and resident boarders is for the bar-room attachment," and that in arranging for saloon privileges in the new hotel the company is actuated by "purely business principles." What have the great mass of hotel-keepers in this country, and especially those in prohibition states, to say to this? Hundreds of hotel men, who are not personally Prohibitionists, will tell Mr. Latham that so far from the bar being a universal demand, they find it expedient on "purely business principles" to dispense with this attachment.

Mr. Latham does not understand the W. C. T. U. aright if he imagines its highest aim and holiest purpose is "to suppress intemperance." If by "intemperance" he means "drunkenness," we do not wonder that he regards our organization as dealing with the "sentimental" rather than the practical. We hope some one will inform him (and others who think as he does) that the aim and purpose of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is to abolish the traffic in intoxicating liquors from the face of the entire earth, and that it intends to "do everything" which in its judgment contributes to that end.

Mr. Latham endeavors to keep the language of his letter within the bounds of courtesy, but between the lines may be plainly deciphered the wrath which consumes him because these petitioners, who are "mostly women," thus interfere with the unsentimental business plans of the company and force its president to the unpleasant task of "antagonizing" such a "goodly company" of Hopkinsville citizens. The absurd misstatements and weak analogies of this "reply" only go to show the need of a widespread education concerning the "fundamental principles of temperance" and especially the plans and methods of the W. C. T. U. It is such rebuffs as these which spur our women to redoubled effort in the endeavor to become something more than mere petitioners in the interests of municipal welfare and domestic happiness. It makes them more than ever anxious to be voters.

We hope that the W. C. T. U. of Hopkinsville will not let the matter rest here, but will act upon the suggestion of Mr. Latham himself and petition the landlord who is to "run" the hotel when completed. He graciously assures them that the "company will not oppose him (the lessee) if he is disposed to answer their prayer."

EMPIRE STATE LEGISLATIVE WORK.

The Constitutional Convention of the state of New York, held in 1821, adopted a section requiring the call of future conventions for the amendment of the constitution on the expiration of each period of twenty years. Such a period of time has elapsed since the last convention was held, and the next constitutional convention will be held at Albany, in May, 1894.

At this convention measures of the highest importance to the state will be considered, but the questions of paramount importance to the state itself and to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are that the traffic in intoxicating liquors as a beverage shall be prohibited, and that women shall be fully enfranchised. Should the convention adopt such amendments we should be very near the goal of all our labors, and victory would seem to be within our grasp. In order to bring about these results it will be necessary to show to the convention that the people want such amendments, and to this end the strength and influence of our organization should be directed during the coming four months.

An earnest appeal has been sent to all New York white-ribboners to circulate the following petitions at every public meeting and county convention held between now and April 1, and cities, towns and villages have been districted and committees are at work.

FOR THE PROHIBITION OF THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Gentlemen:—The undersigned, twenty-one years of age, citizens of the State of New York and the County of .... earnestly and respectfully pray your honorable body to embody in the revised Constitution the following article:

No person shall manufacture for sale, or sell, or keep for sale, as a beverage, any intoxicating liquors, whether brewed, fermented or distilled. The Legislature shall by law prescribe regulations for the enforcement of this article, and shall provide suitable penalties for the same.

FOR THE FULL ENFRANCHISEMENT OF WOMEN.

Gentlemen:—The undersigned, twenty-one years of age, citizens of the state of New York and the County of .... earnestly and respectfully pray your honorable body to so amend the Constitution that the women of the state shall have the right to vote on equal terms with men.

Mrs. Burt, the state president, was the first one to secure signers to these petitions. All blanks, when filled out, will be returned to the state corresponding secretary, Mrs. Frances W. Graham, Lockport, N. Y., who will get them all in shape to be presented in bulk to the constitutional convention in May. Other legislative work will be taken up as soon as Mrs. Burt's health will permit.

TEMPERANCE FOUNDATION WORK—FREE KINDERGARTENS IN SAN FRANCISCO.

We are just in receipt of the fourteenth annual report of Mrs. Sarah B. Cooper, the president of the Golden Gate Kindergarten Association. It is a beautiful pamphlet of 200 pages, bound in red and gold, and is brimful of interest, from the first page to the last. The Association has 37 schools under its charge; fourteen years ago the work began with two schools, an enrollment of 109 children; total receipts, $1,805.70. The past year the enrollment was 3,318; total receipts, $43,196.81. Mrs. Leland Stanford has contributed $174,000 to the work, $100,000 of this being an endowment fund for the perpetual support of the Stanford Memorial kindergartens. These were the first memorial kindergartens in the world, and were the thought of Mrs. Cooper, who, on the receipt of a gift of $5,000 from Mrs. Stanford, at once organized a Stanford Memorial Kindergarten, in memory of Leland Stanford, Jr. The bereaved mother at once requested Mrs. Cooper to organize six other schools. This thought of memorializing little children has taken wide hold upon bereaved mothers, and these schools are now established all over the country.

Over 70,000 reports of the Golden Gate Association have been scattered broadcast, and, as a result, 167 kindergartens have been organized in 103 different cities in this and in foreign countries. A free normal training school is connected with the work, Miss Anna M. Stovall, a noted kindergartner, having it in charge. Professors from the Stanford and state universities lecture before the teachers and normal pupils. The graduates from the Golden Gate Free Normal Training School are in great demand, and are doing good work all over the Pacific Coast.

Mothers' meetings are carried on which are rapidly increasing in numbers and in influence. The report says: It is the misfortune of ignorance that it does not know how to be wise. Our mothers need teaching. It is the aim to group these mothers, that we may thus come into closer relationship with them and learn their needs, their cares, their aspirations, and their disappointments; and as far as possible, bring something of new hope and comfort into their hard and cheerless lives. . . . . When we see from whence many of our children come, the home environments and the hereditary influences, the wonder is not that they are so wretched, but that they are as well-conditioned, physically and morally, as they are. Bodily ailments and soul-maladies in the children are easily accounted for, after visiting some of these homes. The babe is often cursed before it sees the light. More and more, we feel the truth of the old adage: "If you would thoroughly reform a man, you must begin with his grandfather."

The "Willard Kindergarten," named in honor of our great leader, is still doing noble work under this association. Mrs. Cooper has been the warm friend of Miss Willard and her work for many years. The people of San Francisco have given over $450,000 to this work among the little needy children of that city.

HELPED OR HINDERED?

A recent racy symposium in Zion's Herald consists of answers to the question, "Has the Third party helped or hindered the cause of temperance?" Both sides are represented in the answers, and both the men of the Third party and those who honestly believe that separate party action is a hindrance rather than a help, are singularly clear and fair in their statements. To those of us who view the matter from the vantage ground of years in which we have been emancipated from the thralldom of party bonds, who are seeking only to secure the prohibition of the saloon by any lawful measure, but who always make its prohibition the paramount issue, it seems strange that any one can really hope to attain this end through any other medium than that of political action; and that a political action outside of the ranks of either of the existing old parties. We look over the field for any indication that we have more to hope for from them in the future than we have had in the past, and as we look we find nothing which causes us to believe that the future temperance reform can come about in any other way than by rising, Phœnix-like, out of the ashes of past parties, past methods, past ideals.

Whether or not the existing Third party is the one to whom shall be given the honor of bringing in the victory we cannot tell; there may be, nay, must be, mighty turnings and overturnings before the final day of triumph; nevertheless we are sure that, in this thought of independent political action; nay, in this small and despised party itself, there lies the seed from which are to be reaped the glorious harvests of the future. The signs of the times all point to the fact that we are upon the eve of such a crisis as has not come before in the history of reform. The very fact that a conservative religious paper is opening its columns for such a symposium is, in itself, a hopeful indication. The "Thou shalt not" of divine prohibition shall yet be written upon all that can hurt and destroy in our national life. When that day dawns we shall then, for the first time, be ready to prepare for the ushering in of the still brighter dawning, when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord," and when men shall do right, because, with the Master they shall "delight to do God's will."

MEMORIAL WINDOWS.

A short time ago we made mention of a W. C. T. U. window in a Methodist church at Sullivan, Ill., at the same time commending the idea, and asking if other similar windows existed. To this query a number of responses have come, and they are so brief and encouraging that we give them entire. According to the dates given, the memorial window in the Seward, Neb., M. E. church is the oldest so far reported. If there are still others, let us hear from them.

EDITORS UNION SIGNAL:—In the elegant new First Presbyterian church of this place, dedicated one year ago last June, there is a handsome stained glass window bearing the significant letters, "W. C. T. U." We are at work now earning the same amount to place its duplicate in the new M. E. church which is in process of erection, two blocks away. I think it is a good way to keep our work before the people, and is money well invested.

West Unity, O. HATTIE T. HUGHES.

EDITORS OF THE UNION SIGNAL:—I see by a recent UNION SIGNAL an account of a church recently dedicated at Sullivan, Ill., having a window bearing letters "W. C. T. U." and "For God and Home and Native Land," as though it might be the first church window thus appropriated. I would say that the M. E. church in De Pere, Wis., dedicated November 6, 1892, has one very much admired by all who see it. The designs on the window were suggested by Miss Frances E. Willard, who also contributed one dollar toward the expense. Therefore, we claim to have the first W. C. T. U. window. Respectfully yours,

MRS. S. N. WIGHT,
Pres. Local Union.

De Pere, Wis.

EDITORS OF THE UNION SIGNAL:—In response to your request for information regarding W. C. T. U. memorial windows in churches, I have the pleasure to send you the following: Two years ago, the St. James M. E. church, of Manchester, N. H., of which my husband was pastor, built a new edifice. They were pleased to put in a memorial window for him as the pastor when the church was built. They honored me, also, by putting in a memorial window for me as "president of the New Hampshire W. C. T. U." That was the first one so far as I know. I have always considered it the highest title that could be conferred upon me. Yours sincerely,

JANETTE H. KNOX.

Red River Valley University, Wahpeton, N. D.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—In THE UNION SIGNAL of December 28 is an item regarding a stained glass window, commemorative of the W. C. T. U. in the Methodist church at Sullivan, Ill. You add, "We should be glad to know if others exist."

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Seward, Neb., placed at its own expense a beautiful stained glass window in the M. E. church of that city, dedicated June 1, 1890. It is a front window, to the right of the pulpit, in fine view of the spacious and elegant auditorium. It was made to order, the upper part bearing the initials, "W. C. T. U.," wrought in glass, and below, "For God, Home and Native Land." Two smaller ornamental windows, above, bearing the words "Peace" and "Purity," with appropriate emblems, very fitly complete the beautiful picture that cannot but have an educating influence, and is a joy to all lovers of our cause.

At the laying of the corner-stone of this church, "The Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Church" was printed as a topic on the officially prepared program, and was assigned your correspondent.

At the time the appropriation for this window was authorized it was also voted that as other churches should be erected the union would provide a window, irrespective of denomination, if permitted to do so.

The pastor of this church at that time, was, and is still devoted and deeply loyal to the white-ribbon cause, his conversion resulting, I believe, from reading Miss Willard's annual addresses and THE UNION SIGNAL, an annual subscription to the latter being furnished as a "complimentary" by a member of the union.

Yours, with loyalty,

CAROLINE M. WOODWARD.

Seward, Neb.

DEAR EDITORS:—Grace Memorial Church (M. E.), of Oil City, Pa., built the past year, has a window for which the South Side W. C. T. U. paid, and which has the bow of white ribbon as a symbol, and the letters "W. C. T. U.," large enough to be read across the room. It was copied from the title page of Pennsylvania Bulletin, our state paper, and is so white it looks like an illuminated badge. In this church is another window contributed by the Loyal Temperance Legion, bearing as a symbol their badge, with the letters "L. T. L." across it, in a large, readable type. This church has opened its doors to the Legion ever since its organization, six years ago. In addition, the white banner of temperance decorates another window, and five capital letters explain that this is the Y. W. C. T. U. window. Grace Church is always open to our speakers, having already given Rev. Anna Shaw and Miss Ida Clothier immense audiences, though only opened a few months ago. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the South Side has held its regular meetings here ever since its organization, and we claim a goodly percentage of the brethren as prohibition voters. MRS. H. C. MAITLAND,

So. Oil City, Pa.

If the saloons must go, I must "go for" the saloons!—Geo. Milton Hammell.

***

And now the New Hampshire white-ribboners are claiming a local crusade that antedates the Hillsboro Crusade nearly ten years. In the spring of 1864, the little village of Franklin, N. H., owned a restaurant in which the sale of liquor was suspected. One day the village mothers saw a drunken woman leaving the restaurant. The sight was so uncommon and horrible that the good women decided upon immediate action. Dressing up in their best clothes and "velvet bonnets," and taking with them as leader, the foremost lady of the town, a Judge's wife, they marched to the restaurant door and walked in. There were fifty-three in all. A protest which had been carefully drawn up was read to the proprietor, who refused to make any concessions to the ladies, so a suit was brought in the town hall and the Crusaders won the day, the man being obliged to leave the place inside of twenty-four hours. That's the way women do things!

***

Just as the little "rift within the lute makes the music mute," so the "straws" as effectually show "which way the wind blows." One of these indicators fell upon my desk this morning with a drop of balm, and such a new assurance that "all good is eternally reproductive" that it must be enjoyed by the workers in general. The other day, in a far-off chief city of Mississippi two gentlemen waited their turn in a barber shop. One of them, an intelligent and leading citizen, but unfortunately still "in the bonds of iniquity" on the liquor question, said to the barber: "Give me that prohibition paper to read while you are busy; it is the best edited paper I know, and I do enjoy reading it." The barber handed him THE UNION SIGNAL (kept there by the faithful local W. C. T. U.), and the speaker advised his companion to read it, concluding with, "Anybody with brains would enjoy that paper." This is but another indirect assurance to the Prohibitionist

"That time, nor space, nor deep, nor high,
Can keep my own away from me."

***

It appears that Indianapolis has a fine new jail in which it takes great pride. One of the local papers has been publishing a series of reminiscences concerning the old jail which seemed to have sheltered an unusually large number of wrong-doers, and some of the "old-timers" have reveled in the by-gone history of its many famous criminals. But among the pioneers of this enterprising city is a gentleman who was unwilling that the narration should close without a reference to the most remarkable history of all the period, and that was a stretch of nearly six weeks without a prisoner. This was from June 12, 1855, to the end of the following month, and was during a brief sway of temperance law—the only time such a paradox as an empty jail is possible.

***

Every fresh item from Hawaii these days is tinged with peculiar interest. From a personal letter to one of our leaders, I am permitted to make the following extract: "The past year has been one of much excitement, so that it has been difficult to get people together for a temperance meeting, but now there seems to be a more settled feeling in the community, as there is no prospect of 'restoration,' which has been threatened for some time, and no danger of war, for we do not think the United States will declare war against a little country composed so largely of Americans. Annexation is the wish of the Christian people, and the better class generally of foreigners as well as Hawaiians. Those opposed are a few interested foreigners who hope to gain power if the ex-Queen should be restored to the throne, and of natives and half-castes, who have been corrupted by the last two sovereigns. At the beginning of Liliuokalani's reign the Christian people thought she was inclined to be a good Queen, and determined to stand by and encourage her. She sought their society, asked for their prayers, and altogether was as hypocritical as possible. Of course, these Christian families went to the palace when invited, and the Queen was, in turn, entertained by them. A great deal has been made of this by the opposition, but it was only because she pretended to want to do what was right that she received the support of good people. When at last she showed her true colors, was it not natural that there should be a revulsion of feeling? We never want to see her in power again. We have a good government now, but of course it is only provisional, and we hope at some time in the not distant future to be annexed to the home land."

ON DUTY.

CALIFORNIA.

CRISP CULLINGS.

My last letter did not satisfy my constituency, as it failed to give a point they desired to see brought out. At the National Convention, our representative, Mrs. L. P. Williams, told of some things in which we have great pride, and spoke in deep humiliation of some other things. One was the wine exhibit of California at the World's Fair. Referring to the bronze figure of Kate Field in the Viticultural exhibit, a woman said that the viticulturists had to go beyond this state to find a woman who would lend herself to advertise their trade. The wine was produced in California. We are sorry and ashamed of it, but we are glad the woman was not a Californian. Please make a note of it.

The growing length of my last letter shut out several things which it should have included, notably, some account of the work of organization in the year just past. Since the National corresponding secretary gives this state credit for one of the best reports of last year on organization, it is but fair that those who have done the work should see it publicly acknowledged.

Our organizers for last year were Mrs. Henrietta Skelton and Mrs. Emma Pow Smith. Both begun the year most vigorously, as neither of them had any conception of rest, except the promised "rest that remaineth" and their capacity for work was supposed to be unlimited. This land of midwinter flowers and sunshine is too redundant to be smoothly disposed; it rises in mountain ranges, where it may not be so sunny or flowery and throws itself up in innumerable hills, where railroads are yet unknown, and the road overseer is only an annual visitor.

Yet there are people living in these remote and inaccessible localities to whom the gospel of temperance must be preached. And so these dauntless women went on, always at it, and always finding more to do, until early in the year, Mrs. Smith succumbed to physical exhaustion, and was obliged to retire to her cottage by the sea at Pacific Grove, where she passed the weary summer months, cheered by the loving sympathy of friends, and was perhaps tempted by the first idleness she had ever known, to the perpetration of an act, of which, more anon. This left the field entirely to the indomitable and tireless Mrs. Skelton. She has been here, there and everywhere; unceasing and unselfish in her labors, for which California makes grateful acknowledgment. Her report has been published in THE UNION SIGNAL and speaks for itself.

With returning health, Mrs. Smith resigned the office of organizer, retaining the department of capital and labor, of which she has long been the enthusiastic superintendent, and intimated that she had been called to a new field of labor. The nature of this call was soon explained by the appearance of wedding cards.

Now the California W. C. T. U. never had a wedding before so this was not an occasion to be slighted. The affectionate solicitude of the sisterhood during Mrs. Smith's long illness culminated in the cordial and all pervasive tenderness of the good wishes called out by her marriage. The fortunate man is the Rev. T. J. Bauder, presiding elder of the Church of United Brethren. The bride was given away by the state president, Mrs. Peet, Mrs. Skelton being the "bride's best woman," a graceful and unique service having been specially arranged. A reception was given to Mr. and Mrs. Bauder at the state headquarters, and a handsome silver tea set presented to the bride by her comrades in service. The bishop recognizing her gifts and experience in evangelistic work, authorized her to preach, and she immediately took up her new duties by engaging in a revival which Mr. Bauder had already begun, manifesting a rare facility and felicity in supplementing his efforts.

This state has not escaped prevalent financial stringency, and as usual the temperance cause is the first to be restricted for funds. Our women show no disposition to relax their efforts on that account, but realize that more and yet more of sacrifice will be required to make our work an acceptable offering to the Master. Crusade Day was generally observed, but did not bring as many accessions of members as it should.

Temperance sentiment is plainly growing, and crops out, as the miners say, strong enough to indicate that there is more out of sight. Several counties have passed local ordinances closing the saloon on Sundays, but so far they are mostly confined to the rural communities. The larger towns are too much under the political bondage of the saloon power.

In Fresno county the newspapers proudly claimed that their ordinance was secured without the help or interference of the W. C. T. U. Bless their dear souls, there are none so glad as the W. C. T. U. to know that. All honor to the men who do not wait for the W. C. T. U. to go ahead, but if they would keep the lead they must move on.

The prohibitory ordinance of Lake county has but lately gone into effect, and is being hotly contested. Four trials by jury have convicted and fined the respective culprits twenty-five dollars each for selling liquor, but it has taken two or three days to secure a jury. Those mountain men of Lake will stand by their colors; they are making a valiant fight, and will go on fighting as long as a saloon can be found.

The San Francisco society for the prevention of vice has made a raid on druggists for selling opium unlawfully. There is probably no other American city so cursed as this with the opium vice. Forty druggists have been arrested and await trial. Directly in line with this is the cigarette evil. The working of the scientific temperance education law has wrought for good on this line. The city board of education has at last taken notice of it, a prominent physician introducing a resolution calling attention to it, as his last official act, before retiring from the board. The Morning Call, which two years ago did excellent service in defense of our anti-tobacco law for minors, has taken it up, and by personal letters from distinguished educators has brought out valuable testimony against the cigarette. It has also sent an agent through a large number of the city schools pledging the boys against the use of cigarettes.

Speaking of newspapers, the agitation by the women of the city in regard to a purer press has had some curious and some amusing tributes paid to its demand. Reporters have been instructed to be less sensational in the matter of foul murders and indelicate law cases, while the same papers bristle with paid advertising unfit to appear in respectable journals. One of the leading women of the press association sent a story to one of the most reprehensible of the city dailies, the story itself being intended to convey a high purposed moral, but the article was rejected, the editor saying that he had to be careful now or those women would be after him.

The W. C. T. U. have memorialized the grand jury in regard to the violation of the penal code by every daily newspaper in the city, in advertising lotteries. We cannot see the use of a grand jury if it does not indict the guilty parties, so flagrant has their defiance of law become.

The congresses of the approaching Midwinter Fair are now being arranged. The temperance congress will be held late in May. May 18th will be W. C. T. U. day at the Fair. The congresses will be held in the city. The Fair will undoubtedly be very fine, when it is ready, some time hence. California winters are always fine, though they have intervals of moisture suggesting the memory of Mr. Mantilini. Just now the grounds may more appropriately be called the Mudwinter Fair, for work has been retarded by a tremendous fall of rain.

The unemployed and suffering men have been set to work on the parks, to be paid by public subscriptions; but it seems never to have occurred to the men who are giving so generously of their means to alleviate distress, that some of this attention would be better directed to the traffic which produced so much of it.

DORCAS J. SPENCER,
State Reporter, San Francisco.

MARYLAND.

WORKERS FOR THE GREAT CAUSE.

Two interesting celebrations of the Crusade anniversary were held in Baltimore, one by the Baltimore, the second by St. Paul union. Other unions undoubtedly observed the day, but reports have not been sent me. Both of the unions mentioned waited until after the holidays for these meetings, as it has been found almost impossible here to secure a large attendance on the 23d.

Forcible and telling addresses by Edward Higgins, chairman of the executive committee of the Prohibition party, and Dr. F. M. Ellis, of Eutaw Place Baptist church, were on the program of the first meeting, as were also remarks and music, and devotional exercises by various members of the union. A lunch served to all present, between the exercises of the morning and afternoon, added much to the interest and sociability of the occasion.

The celebration by St. Paul union, January 22, was held during the afternoon and evening. The program of the afternoon consisted of devotional services, led by Mrs. Stevens, secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society; and Mrs. Baldwin, state president; an historical sketch of the Crusade, by Mrs. Lake, state corresponding secretary; a few words in the same line by Mrs. Haviland, one of the original Crusaders of New York; the story of the birth of the union in Maryland, by that veteran in good works, Mrs. Murdoch, first recording secretary of the union; a paper on juvenile work, by Miss Mory, state superintendent of this work, and an address by Dr. Townsend, pastor of Mount Vernon M. E. church.

Dr. Townsend emphasized the importance of workers in this cause, bringing facts and figures to public notice, whenever and wherever pertinent and possible, in regard to the part alcohol bears in the production of poverty, misery, insanity, disease and sin of every sort and in the expenditure of money entailed through these. The financial aspects of the matter the speaker considered particularly powerful when brought to minds that cannot be reached apparently by any other method.

The evening was given over almost entirely to Mrs. Layah Barakat, a Syrian evangelist, who was converted at twelve years of age at a Christian mission in her native country. Mrs. Barakat's home is now in Philadelphia, where she is active in work for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Her address, the subject of which was "Mohammedanism and the Koran," was one of the most powerful arguments possible for the abandonment of the liquor traffic by this Christian (?) nation.

I have heard many powerful and stirring arguments on this subject, but never one that brought home to me so forcibly as this, the weakness, the absurdity, the shame and the sin of our position. The request that followed the address, for those present to sign a bill for local option laws, to be presented to the state legislature, seemed puerile, farcical, but for its gravity.

"We bear the name of Christians,
His name and sign we bear:
Oh, shame, thrice shame upon us
To keep"

such a traffic in our midst. Small wonder that the Mohammedans have sent missionaries to us!

Rev. Mr. Fulton, pastor of the church in which this meeting was held, is a Christian of the Christians in this matter, and the union is indebted to him for much valuable assistance. His admirable wife is president of St. Paul union.

Evangelistic services at the Memorial Building on the two days preceding this crusade celebration were addressed by Mrs. Barakat, subjects, "The Message from Mount Lebanon," and "The Three Sacred Covenants." Mrs. Barakat gave also a Bible reading at the home of the Young Woman's Christian Association, Baltimore, on "The Good Shepherd," and her powerful and realistic treatment of these various subjects won universal favor.

Another anniversary celebration of an entirely different character from the above, illustrating the "all things to all men" policy of the union, was that of the United Y of Kent county, held at Fairlee recently, at the close of the union's third year of work. Press notices of this event—one of which consisted of more than a long column—characterize this as "one of the most successful and well-managed fetes that have taken place in that section of the county for many years." Fully two hundred and twenty-five persons attended, representing every section of old Kent. A varied literary and musical program was rendered, and numerous witty replies to toasts relative to the Y work were given by members of the union. The felicitous introduction of each speaker by Miss Crew, the indefatigable president of the union, added greatly to the enjoyments of the evening. A fact of much significance, considering the occasion, was the presentation of a paper by one of these bright young women—a "pointed and interesting paper" we are told—on "Why Whisky is Sold in Kent," the traffic having been outlawed there some years since.

A reception given by the East Baltimore Y, at the Memorial Building, or state headquarters, must also be noted as one of the recent interesting occurrences in the work.

Numerous meetings in Baltimore and in various places in the state have been held during the winter, and addressed by Mrs. Marian B. Baxter, of Michigan, whose first work in the state was in connection with the annual meeting of the state union in September at Annapolis. Among the churches addressed in Baltimore were eight Methodist Episcopal, two Baptist, and two Presbyterian. Mrs. Baxter spoke also at the Friends' meeting house (orthodox) and at the state convention of the society of Christian Endeavor.

Another notable visitor to Baltimore, somewhat recently, was Mrs. Maud Booth, wife of General Ballington Booth, who, with Ensign Edith Marshall, came to arouse interest in the auxiliary league of the Salvation Army, which has been formed among friends of the army who cannot enter its ranks, but believe in its work and are willing to help it along. Mrs. Booth and Miss Marshall, who is also an admirable speaker, were the guests of Mrs. J. F. Dix, one of the most prominent W. C. T. U. workers in the city, and a member with others of her family, of the Salvation Army League.

Other movements of interest here are the protest of the Prohibition party in an "Address to the People of Baltimore," against the appointment as members of the school board, of persons who are engaged in the liquor traffic, and a request to the city council for the passage of an ordinance forbidding such appointments, also a request to the mayor from the same body, to refrain from appointing to office any one who is addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors; and the declaration by the party, in this same "Address to the People," that "women should have representation on the school board."

The executive committee of the Maryland State Temperance Alliance has adopted a resolution "requesting the churches throughout the state to observe the second Sunday in February as a day of prayer that the Alliance bill for local option shall be passed by the legislature."

The executive committee of the W. C. T. U. has decided that every possible effort must be made for the reëstablishment of the state paper, that the interests of the work demand it, as without it, it is impossible for members to keep in touch with one another and with the work in the state.

M. A. L.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

THE QUARTERLY MEETING

was held January 17, at Ryland M. E. church; Rev. S. M. Hartsock, pastor, gave us a most cordial welcome; Rev. Mr. Gotwald, a Lutheran minister in the same vicinity, spoke words of cheer. The wives of these brethren are earnest white-ribboners. Mrs. M. B. Platt, Mrs. Baldwin and Miss Weightman responded to the kindly words spoken.

The devotional exercises of the opening session were conducted by Mrs. S. L. Beiler, after which the superintendents reported Sabbath observance: Mrs. Catlin stated that she had visited two unions and given talks, and distributed some literature; already requests are being received for petition blanks to be filled, and Congress will again be besieged by petitions from the various states to give us a National Sunday rest law.

Prison and jail work, Mrs. H. H. Hendrickson: Jail and almshouse each visited three times, distributed 782 papers, 192 leaflets, 44 magazines, paper, envelopes; letters stamped and mailed. Cards were given to the colored people in the almshouse who cannot read. An inmate of almshouse whom we are trying to suit with a pair of glasses, on our last visit, desired that we pray with him; he also prayed, which did us much good. A local superintendent reports much interest manifested by the prisoners in the salvation of their souls, they raise their hands for prayer and insist that they are in earnest; visits from time to time have been very encouraging; forty-two signed the pledge, two have professed conversion. There is good work being done among the girls also.

At eleven o'clock, Mrs. Rice, of Batavia, N. Y., gave an excellent address on "Mothers' Work"; my regret was that all the mothers of our city were not present, they could have learned many lessons. Mrs. Rice also gave a Bible reading, followed by Miss Delaven, of the Deaconess Home, in prayer, it being the noon-tide hour.

Miss Weightman, superintendent Y. W. C. T. U., reported: Membership, 209; meetings held, 20; dues to district, $8.06; donations to district, $5; raised for local work, $10.85; evangelistic meetings, 4; adults signed the pledge, 71; visits of flower mission department, 43; bouquets given, 74; 2,000 papers and 100 good books distributed; 11 copies taken of Oak and Ivy Leaf. She has held two conferences, visited Y's six times, and paid one visit to an Epworth League, at which she spoke to them. Vermont Avenue Y have a very efficient superintendent of evangelistic work (Miss Noud). The work begun in a colored church in the eastern section of the city is growing. A meeting at a colored church at Bennings was held in November; some good speakers addressed the meetings; 16 signed the pledge. During December a similar meeting was held in a colored church in the central part of the city; 22 signed the pledge. This Y presented a teachers' Bible to a young man who is studying under his pastor for the ministry, also collected a number of religious books for his use.

The following persons were introduced to the convention: Miss Delaven, of the Deaconess Home and Bible Training School; Mrs. S. H. Martin, of Maryland, and Mrs. Marian Baxter, of Michigan.

A recess was taken for lunch; coffee and tea were provided by the South Washington union; each lady brought her own lunch, and sufficient for one or two others, so that visitors were provided for.

The afternoon session was opened with devotional exercises, conducted by Mrs. S. D. La Fetra, after which the treasurer's report was read, showing receipts, $348.71; disbursements, $289.67.

Corresponding secretary reported: Fourteen unions; departments of work, twenty; mass-meetings held, November 19, speakers, Miss De Broen, of Paris, Mrs. La Fetra and Mrs. Clinton Smith. On December 24 a meeting was held at Vermont Ave. church, addressed by Mrs. M. E. Griffith, Mrs. Rice, of New York, and Rev. Dr. Power. Mrs. Clara Holbrook Smith gave a course of lectures to ladies the first week in December.

A New Year's reception was given at headquarters by the executive board from two until ten in the afternoon. The Y's assisted; it was estimated that a thousand called, among whom were some who sadly needed our sympathy and the helping hand; a gospel service was held in the building by the Central Union Mission the better part of the day. A constant stream of poor humanity, made so largely by rum, frequented this service, after having been given all the sandwiches, coffee and cake they could eat. One of our women had charge of a part of this service, and was rewarded by one man coming to Christ.

The superintendent of scientific temperance instruction has visited some of the schools. Superintendent of temperance literature has distributed 27,872 pages. Distribution of papers in barber shops is a specialty. Much no-license literature was used during the fall.

Legislative and petition: This district is now under high license, the present law was enacted March 3, 1893; it "regulates" the traffic by imposing upon liquor-sellers a license fee of four hundred dollars a year; there are more drinking places here now than ever before, so high license works well for the traffic. The excise board openly favors the liquor dealers and ignores the protests of churches and temperance people. In both houses of Congress bills have been repeatedly introduced praying for total prohibition for this District; we are still petitioning that such a bill may become a law. This year we will petition through our general officers to see if this will not prove more effective than the long list of names which elicit only a passing glance.

We are protesting against statehood for Utah.

The files of the ways and means committee were examined for the petitions which the associated press declared the W. C. T. U. were pouring in to that committee, asking for an increase of tax on whisky. We found only two that pretended to come from the W. C. T. U., and they both looked like spurious documents. Inquiries have failed to elicit any replies from the names and addresses signed and we believe both documents frauds.

Evangelistic department: Have communicated with the local presidents; have had responses from ten; have written ten postals and four letters; have visited several presidents and superintendents in reference to some special work; conducted two Bible readings and prayer services, and have endeavored to impress upon the women the need of more earnest and definite evangelistic work. Local superintendents have distributed literature, 100 papers to woman's department of the jail; held meetings, many calls on the sick, also alley mission work; expended, $61.90; Bible readings, 10, 2 of which were given in the home of an invalid; $5 were raised for the poor, also clothing collected.

Flower Mission department: Amount expended $39.98; bouquets, 200; literature, 584 pages; flowers to sick, 28; oranges, 6½ dozens; crackers, 2 pounds; pulpits supplied with flowers; 16 pieces of clothing given to the poor; 54 visits to the sick; ten to hospitals; 31 visits to the poor; sugar, tea, jelly and provisions given; conference held with local superintendents; in November and December accompanied jail superintendent distributing literature in the prison and flowers in the hospital; almshouse visited by a committee of ladies on Christmas, who held a devotional service and distributed a quantity of edibles.

Purity in literature and art: Have visited tobacco stores and kindly requested them to remove any picture displaying the nude form of woman; am glad to report that there is not nearly so much disrespect shown me as on former occasions. The justice and requirements of our union are no longer a subject of jest. These men begin to see that our cause is just and right and must be respected. Succeeded recently in getting the proprietor of a picture store to remove from his window an entirely nude painting of a young girl.

Juvenile and Sunday-school: Have visited and addressed three Legions, one mission school and Christian Endeavor society.

L. C. Kessler,
District Reporter.

DURING hard times consumers cannot afford to experiment with inferior, cheap brands of baking powder. It is NOW that the great strength and purity of the ROYAL stand out as a friend in need to those who desire to practise Economy in the Kitchen. Each spoonful does its perfect work. Its increasing sale bears witness that it is a necessity to the prudent—it goes further.

N. B. Grocers say that every dollar invested in Royal Baking Powder is worth a dollar the world over, that it does not consume their capital in dead stock, because it is the great favorite, and sells through all times and seasons.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 WALL ST., NEW-YORK.

PENNSYLVANIA.

"Work on, work on, for temperance,
Nor let your courage fail,
The Lord is just and mighty,
The right shall yet prevail."

These stirring, beautiful words came on a dainty Christmas card sent me from a cheery Pennsylvania white-ribboner, and seemed so like a prophecy of the good time coming that I decided that as they had helped me so much they might help others who may be discouraged.

As I sat down to write this letter I wished—but wished in vain—for a magician's wand that might penetrate to the remotest recesses of the great Keystone state, and find out for myself just what each county is doing; then I wondered what had become of all the good resolutions and promises with which I was overwhelmed at convention. Maybe this little prelude may "stir up" to remembrance the minds of the various county press reporters.

Mercer county held an important executive committee meeting at Greenville, December 22. This county published a paper, The W. C. T. U. Expositor, containing the names of all applicants for license and their boudsmen. Appropriate Scripture texts were interspersed throughout the columns. It is expected that it will go into every town in the county. We rejoice to state that in one town in Mercer county public sentiment was so much against license that the applicant was obliged to give up obtaining license and burnt his petition instead of filing it. This was at Grove City.

New Lebanon, Mercer county, celebrated Crusade anniversary and had a large audience. An address was made by Miss Crawford, state Y organizer. Mrs. Mina Black, of Grove City, has been appointed superintendent of the department of railroad work in Mercer county instead of Miss Pew who resigned.

Mercer union expects to have Major Hilton with them soon.

The Milton Woman's Christian Temperance union observed Crusade anniversary very pleasantly. Some fine music was furnished by the Glee Singers. Misses Nellie Dildine and Charity Heim recited very beautifully, "The Deacon's Match," and "The Drink Wolf." Misses Bailey, Falls and Miller read papers explaining the various lines of work of the union. Speeches from visitors followed, and then all were treated to coffee and crullers. Several new members were obtained.

Mrs. Anna Belle Morris Holvey gave a delightful lecture recently before the Lancaster Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

The Newtown, Bucks county W. C. T. U., held their annual supper at which the total receipts were one hundred and seventy-five dollars. Can any other union beat that record?

Dollington union, same county, held a most delightful parlor meeting at which the subject of scientific temperance was the theme under discussion.

Bucks county with its indefatigable president who never wearies in well-doing is hard at work to give our House Beautiful, the Temple, a good substantial "lift." Other counties in this state may well emulate this county's noble example and go and do likewise.

Smethport, McKean county, union meets semi-monthly; they sent a contribution to the treasury, and two new subscribers to Oak and Ivy Leaf were obtained.

Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, state president, was expected in Clarion county to do some organizing and lecturing, so the county president, Mrs. Beck, informs me.

Philadelphia union welcomes back to office their former leader, Mrs. Mary H. Jones. The parlors in Logan building, Arch street, will now be open daily from ten to two in the afternoon.

Cupid has been busy among our Y girls. Miss Aggie Huston, of Pardoe, Mercer county, was united in marriage to R. D. Vance, of Allegheny. They will spend the winter in Florida. Miss Emma Smith, corresponding secretary of Mercer Y, was married to Mr. Harry Aspen, of Pittsburg; both these marriages took place December 21.

Miss Jessie Hockley, a charter member of the Harrisburg Y, was recently appointed notary public. She is the second woman in the state to receive such appointment, so you see woman's cause is marching on. Since our last report there have been twenty-two new unions organized throughout the state.

Bucks county pledged itself to raise one hundred dollars for the Temple at the county convention, and two unions in the county, the Newtown and Churchville, pledged each $100 to the Temple. A strong resolution was also passed at convention, "Condemning those who are placing obstructions and otherwise retarding the work of paying for the Temple." We hope all those who have kindly remembered us by sending items from their counties, and all others, will take note of change of address. I have gone back to my first love (school teaching) and am pleasantly located at Smethport, Pa. I have by no means lost my interest in temperance affairs; on the contrary am on the qui vive to catch the latest bit of news in that line.

The W. C. T. U. of Williamsport held a most interesting and very successful "Crusade" meeting in Pine Street M. E. church, December 28. The morning session consisted of praise meeting, led by Mrs. McMinn, from ten to eleven; from eleven to twelve Mrs. J. C. Everett and No. 2 union took charge; noon-day prayer was offered by Mrs. Blynn. Afternoon session was participated in by Mrs. Olmstead, Mrs. Rhoads and Mrs. Crawford. At the evening session very interesting papers were read by a number of workers, the Y's assisting in the music. A generous collection was received, also a number of new members. The temperance cause received fresh impetus from this meeting.

The Sharpsville unions held a most successful "Crusade" meeting; seventeen new members were added to the list of the Young Woman's union and eleven to the woman's union.

Sharon and Middlesex unions both held very successful Crusade anniversaries.

Adda Burch,
State Reporter, Smethport.

Awarded
Highest Honors—World's Fair.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

MOST PERFECT MADE.

A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

DEMOREST union, Utica, N. Y., was organized September 11 and has thirty-three active and twelve honorary members.

A VETERAN and staunch worker in the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Caroline C. Warren, of Three Oaks, Mich., has received promotion at the ripe age of eighty years.

A REQUEST comes from a correspondent for names of eminent physicians who do not use alcohol in their practice. THE UNION SIGNAL would be glad to publish such names.

A CHRISTIAN temperance worker was Mrs. M. A. Gerard, who reached the end of a helpful life, December 10, at Evansville, Ga. She was city missionary at New Orleans for a number of years and found her chief delight in ministering to others.

THE friends of Mrs. M. L. T. Hidden, of Vancouver, Wash., sympathize with her in the recent death of her eldest son, a noble young man of twenty-five years of age. Her work as state organizer of the W. C. T. U. has been necessarily suspended during the service demanded in her afflicted and saddened home.

THE daughter of Mrs. J. T. Ellis, corresponding secretary of New Jersey W. C. T. U., was married January 17, to Dr. F. H. Munroe, of Meriden, Conn., and has gone there to reside. She has been her mother's associate secretary for six years, so New Jersey loses one of its bright girls, and Connecticut gains one.

PLEASANTON, Kan., has a woman mayor, Annie S. Austin, who was formerly president of Linn Y. W. C. T. U. She is a state officer of the I. O. G. T., a radical Prohibitionist, and the only woman mayor in the United States or ever elected by an incorporated city. This election is a great victory for temperance and suffrage.

MRS. MARY E. JONES, so long the impartial reporter of Missouri for THE UNION SIGNAL, is doing her initial work for Colorado. Already the climate has so far restored her health, that the union at Canon City has just held an unusually fine Demorest medal contest, in which she was leader. The new Baptist church was crowded to its doors.

THE attention of superintendents of jail and prison work is called to the following: "I have back numbers of Harper's and Century magazines, which I am desirous of giving in sets of five to ten volumes, to needy prisons that are destitute of reading matter, on condition that they will be bound by the recipients. Please address, Mrs. C. F. Palmer, 782 6th Avenue, New York City."

A CORRESPONDENT writes: "Our ranks are broadening, for a Roman Catholic lady has just joined us according to her mother's dying wish. When they came, strangers to the place, and her mother in her last illness, it was from her W. C. T. U. neighbors that she received visits of comfort and of help. We have long found Father Doyle's tracts that are issued monthly very useful for circulation among Catholics."

THE National City union and the First union of San Diego joined with the San Diego Central union in the observation of Crusade Day on December 21. The program from THE UNION SIGNAL was adapted to an afternoon meeting. The time was most pleasantly and profitably spent. The need of greater spiritual consecration was manifest to those present, and they were inspired to new zeal in the work. Two new members were secured.

AFTER three years of practical prohibition, Tuckerton, N. J., citizens were ordered to hold an election January 8, that the saloon might again reign in their midst. A determined resistance was made, all forces joining hands, the W. C. T. U., Y's and L. T. L. being especially active in distributing literature and holding public meetings previous to election. A largely attended noontide prayer-meeting was held on election day, and a call was sent out to all the W. C. T. Unions in the county to unite simultaneously in prayer. The school children, under the leadership of their principal, paraded the streets with flags flying and drums beating. When the victory, a majority of twenty-two votes only, was announced, a service of thanksgiving was held, and at its close a joyful procession was formed with transparencies and drums, and hundreds of people of all ages marched through the streets. The work of the children of the L. T. L., educated in temperance principles, is especially commended. They were early on hand, bearing on their breasts placards with the words, "For my sake, vote 'No,'" and assisting in many ways. With such sustained and earnest effort everywhere, the banner of temperance can be lifted above reach of partisan ends.

(Continued on pape 14.

Official Communications.

THE RELATION OF TEMPERANCE TO LABOR AND CAPITAL—OBJECT, PLAN, AND METHODS OF THE DEPARTMENT.

There are but few, if any, departments of W. C. T. U. work more difficult to put in successful operation than this one. What is the object of the department? What are the plans and methods of work? Can it be made practical? These are questions often asked.

The object of this department is to awaken among the classes of labor and capital an interest in the cause of temperance and as far as possible, effect a better understanding of their mutual rights and interests.

The plan of the work is not unlike that of the other departments, but as state superintendents are not selected until the annual state convention and as many locals have expressed a desire to acquaint themselves with the work, we recommend that such unions make a study of its various phases and thus be enabled to present its claims at their annual conventions. Other departments have met with more general public favor because they have been better understood and consequently have been readily brought to the front, while this department, the chief corner-stone upon which the final triumph of the temperance movement must rest—has been unconsciously rejected, even by many of our most devoted builders.

It is the duty of state superintendents to introduce the work in districts or counties, and wherever practicable secure the appointment of superintendents. In some states the district system has been omitted, and the state superintendent works directly with counties. This plan seems more effective.

It is also the duty of superintendents to send fraternal greetings—when not practicable to send fraternal delegates—to labor conventions; to address trades and labor unions whenever opportunity is offered; to visit builders, contractors, manufacturers and the employers of labor in the various avocations, interest them in the cause and seek permission to visit the shops, where interest in the workmen, as well as in the work should be manifested. On all these occasions go armed with a plentiful supply of literature; a timely opportunity for its distribution is always open as the employés file out from their places of business, especially on pay day, when, with a week's earnings in their pocket, there is an unusual inducement to dissipation. Instances have occurred where the attention of an employé has been arrested by a single sentence, his purpose changed, and he has instinctively turned to his home instead of the saloon.

Another important duty devolving upon the superintendent is that of presenting the temperance cause to our legislators—not regarding temperance enactments, as that work belongs exclusively to the department of legislation and petition—but to present the cause to legislators as laborers, servants of the people, holding responsible positions and engaged in the most sacred labor that ever devolves upon man. They are workmen—builders of law—our servants and the interest of the people demands that they keep themselves in the best possible condition physically, intellectually and morally to perform the duties allotted them. A drunken senator should be subject to dismissal on the same ground as a drunken engineer; he endangers public safety.

In answer to the many inquiries for literature in this department we would refer all such to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, The Temple, Chicago. Perhaps the most available among these publications are the Signal Lights issued in a series of four-page leaflets, price per 1,000, $1.30 postpaid. The "National Leaflets," by some of our most distinguished writers are also issued by this firm. They contain from sixteen to twenty-four pages. Price per 100, 90 cents; per 1,000, $7.50. In addition to these we would call attention to "Wasted Resources," published by National Temperance Society. "Economics of Prohibition," "Prohibition Facts," "The Duties of Man," published by Funk & Wagnalls, New York City; "The Social Aspects of Christianity," Thomas Y. Crowell, Boston, Mass., and especially "The New Era," by Rev. Josiah Strong.

There are three phases of the work to which we wish to call especial attention.

First.—The relation of temperance to labor and capital from an economic standpoint. Temperance as a good investment both individually and collectively. The drink traffic being the chief source of crime, it increases taxation, and thereby adds to the burdens of capital.

Second.—The relation of temperance to the laborer and capitalist from a physical, mental and moral standpoint. Alcohol degrades the physical man, weakens the intellect and perverts the moral nature. The capitalist, under its influence, becomes conscienceless and tyrannical, oppresses labor and robs it of its rights. Labor, on the other hand, becomes servile and cringing, or sullen, rebellious and desperate.

Third.—The relation of temperance to the government and the governed. The saloon is a dangerous but powerful factor in politics. It controls elections and exerts a baleful influence on legislation. It dupes the voter and defrauds and outwits the honest legislator. It enthrones the classes and enslaves the masses. It pauperizes its victim directly through drink, and indirectly through pernicious laws enacted by legislators in a state of semi-intoxication.

Is this department practicable? is a question not unfrequently propounded. Why not? The object of the temperance movement is to overthrow the drink traffic. Its citadel is in the drink habit; the drink habit is confined almost entirely to social and industrial life. Nearly all classes of labor, from the hod carrier to the President of the United States are, more or less, addicted to its use. True, the accusation and condemnation rests chiefly upon those engaged in manual labor under direction of employers; but the evil effects of drink from which we suffer most is from that class who hold responsible positions, and to whose guidance the public welfare has been entrusted. The latter are tenfold more dangerous than the former, not only because of the responsible positions they hold, but because of the pernicious example of those high in authority. Now, while the object of this department is to induce right thinking and right living among those engaged in industrial pursuits, it also aims to impress upon those occupying high official positions the necessity of temperate habits and pure lives.

MRS. S. E. V. EMERY.
Lansing, Mich. Nat. Supt.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

Are state presidents, corresponding secretaries and superintendents of petitions and legislation watching carefully the action of legislative bodies now in session? Nothing more infamous can have been presented to any legislature than Mr. Dye's bill in the Ohio house of representatives, "to repeal the Phillips law, prohibiting the sale of liquors in brothels," which was reported favorably by the committee on temperance. "This bill," it is stated, "is introduced because such prohibition causes the state a loss of one hundred thousand dollars annually in revenue." Is anything of this character being enacted in your state, dear colaborer?

We learn from the report of the corresponding secretary of the state of New York (found in National minutes, 1893), that "an effort was made in the New York legislature last winter to secure the opening of saloons on Sunday, and at a hearing given by the assembly committee on excise, president Mary T. Burt was present and protested against the bill. Later other ladies appeared, and spoke against it, and as the bill was never reported by the committee, it is believed that the influence of these women was instrumental in securing this result."

In Missouri's report we read, "Hundreds of letters were showered on the legislature against licensing the social evil, and our prayers were heard and answered." May not others do likewise under similar conditions with like results?

Miss Willard made the following recommendation in her annual address:

I wish that every white-ribbon paper might have in each issue a PRAYER COLUMN with the most helpful selections that can be gathered from the Bible and true-hearted writers, and with contributions from our own workers. At the head of this column I would keep standing the picture of a clock with hands pointing to twelve, and under it the words, "Remember our trysting time before the mercy seat." This prayer for our work and workers everywhere ought to become so general that as the earth swings on its axis there should not be an instant of time in which some heart, with a white ribbon above it, was not lifted up for "God and Home and Every Land."

Miss G. T. Stickney, corresponding secretary Southern California, writes: "Fortunately for our cause our young people are showing more interest than usual this year. Mrs. McClees, National superintendent of work among soldiers and sailors, is now in our city and has joined the Los Angeles central union." Mrs. McClees has looked well to her work on the eastern coast and in the states, and having left it in care of well-trained associates is on the alert for the work in the Southwest. Mrs. Blair, organizer and chalk-talker for Loyal Temperance Legions, is also there and "pushing" her department at every opportunity. California with these workers, and their and our Emily Pitt Stevens and Henrietta Skelton, and others who will visit the Fair now in progress, has rare opportunity, through

"Almost as Palatable as Milk"

This is a fact with regard to Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. The difference between the oil, in its plain state, is very apparent. In you detect no fish-oil taste. As it is a help to digestion there is no after effect except good effect. Keep in mind that Scott's Emulsion is the best promoter of flesh and strength known to science.

Scott's Emulsion

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N. Y. - All druggists.

For Busy Men.

Business men with exhausted nerves and tired heads need a stimulating food that will replace the daily wear and tear. The phosphorus, lime and sodium contained in

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON.

is what you must have. It is an acknowledged fact that no other food contains so large a percentage of nerve and brain stimulant as this.

Never buy Clam Bouillon for the sick, except in Glass Bottles.

Grocers and Druggists.

Six ½ pint bottles expressed for $1.50. Send stamps for book, "Household Hints."

E. S. Burnham Co., 120 Ganesvoort St., N.Y.

A world of misery is implied in the words "Sick Headache." A world of relief is wrapped up in a twenty-five cent box of

Beecham's Pills

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

(Tasteless) 6

No local dealer can compete with us

WALL PAPER

in variety or price. Our new designs and colorings are handsomer this year than ever before.

Our "Guide How to Paper and Economy in Home Decoration," mailed free with samples

Beautiful Gold Paper, 5c. per Roll.

We carry the largest stock in the country, and can save you 50 per cent. on every roll of paper you buy. No matter where you live, if you have any use for wall paper, send 10c. to nearest address to pay postage on a large package of samples. One good agent or paper hanger wanted in each town to sell from sample books, price $1.00.

ALFRED PEATS,

80-82 W. 13th St., NEW YORK. 136-138 W. Madison St., CHICAGO.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS,

But save you money on everything you eat, wear or use. Send 8 cts. for full catalogue.

H. R. EAGLE & Co., 68 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BAKER'S COCOA

ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used

DON'T BE CHEATED!

ALL GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS

Have Clamp Buckle at hip for Hose Supporters

which we anticipate great growth. By the by, suppose we all set about a systematic counting of our blessings! Would it not bring each to realize that they far outnumber our discouragements and hindrances, and help us to remember Mrs. Lide Meriwether's words of wisdom?

"There comes no reaping save by patient sowing,
So, 'trust in God, and keep the plows a-going.'"

A much smaller number of copies of the National Minutes of the late Convention have been published than usual, as very many of last year's remained unsold, and their expense is so great that we can publish no more than are wanted. We do not say more than are needed, as a copy is positively needed by every woman who would do effective service in our ranks. But fifteen cents per copy is charged, only enough to cover postage and handling for the mail, while each copy costs many times that sum. Pennsylvania furnishes them free to all her superintendents and county presidents, knowing how indispensable they are to these officers.

The minutes of the World's W. C. T. U. Convention will be ready next week and will contain much of intense interest from the whole civilized world. Fifteen cents per copy.

Mrs. Sophia F. Grubb, superintendent of the department of work among foreign speaking people, is to be congratulated in her live associate, Mrs. M. S. Carey, whose work is among the Chinese, and who is evidently possessed with the very essence of Christianity, the recognition of the brotherhood of humanity on the one hand and the acceptance of individual responsibility on the other. She sends the following reminder of opportunity to all who are in the region of Chinamen. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Temperance and gospel literature for sale in the Chinese language, by Mrs. M. S. Carey, South Second street, San Jose, Cal. Price list sent free. Send for one. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE.

Treasurer's Corner.

JOACHIMS COMING FORTH.

If Martin Luther should look over the battlements of Heaven and see how his calling forth of his beautiful medal, and sending it out on its mission of mercy was, even to-day, bringing forth fruit for the Master by stimulating others to do likewise, his joy would, I am sure, be enhanced. I received a beautiful letter from a good sister a few days since, containing a generous gift, saying, "This Joachim has long been hidden away idle," but she forbade my giving you her inspiring letter reciting the pathetic history of the sacred keepsake. The Master knows all about it.

But, sisters, let me whisper that there are other Joachims more valuable even than those of gold and silver. I mean the talents hidden away in napkins. How many of us are being called upon to-day to bring forth our idle faith, our unspoken prayers, our good resolutions, our ability to speak and act, as well as give, that have so long lain dormant. Let us search diligently for these hidden treasures, and bring them to the Master, whose blessing will abundantly multiply their power for good in the cause we love.

One good sister sends a collection of old coins, and says: "As I sat in the meeting at Willard Hall last Monday and heard men telling what reason they had to bless the Temple I was more anxious than ever before to help." Then she tells how she had some time ago sent some paper money, and then felt like Ananias and Sapphira, that she was keeping back a part of the price, and the most valuable for herself, and she adds: "Now I will send all, and it is my mite to the beautiful Temple." I find this is meant for the Temple, and not probably for the National W. C. T. U. This good sister wishes me to urge all white-ribboners to wear the little white ribbon badge in every spot and place. I wish our sisters would all be thoughtful of this, for it is not a slight matter. An Ohio white-ribboner writes in the following cheery way: "Our union responded to Miss Willard's call some weeks ago, but I wanted to send a dime myself, and kept putting it off. This morning, reading my SIGNAL at the breakfast table, I came to the conclusion that I would not put it off another day. So while I am writing this my work is waiting to be done later, but the dimes will be on their way. I enclose one for myself, one for mother and one for the dear little niece who wears a Y bow on every garment 'cause auntie does."

Bryantsville, Mass., sends $2.20 and says: "Our union is small but courageous and full of love for the work, and we cheerfully send this little to help 'make the wheels go round' in the white ribbon ship, with the fervent prayer that it may safely weather the gale and sail into port on its twenty-first birthday, free from debt and with a large surplus with which to begin the new year. May God inspire the heart of every white-ribboner to send in the dimes and fill up the treasury."

A reverend brother from Georgia, where the good brethren are somewhat divided as to "woman's sphere," writes: "I enclose ten dimes for myself, wife, daughter and five sons and one grandson and one granddaughter—all Prohibitionists, in response to the appeal of the distant chieftain. We long to have her home, strong in body and mind, to stand again among her increasing host on her native heath. Heaven bless the English chieftain who is caring for her. What two men in all the world are as good, as useful and as much beloved, as our chieftains." HELEN M. BARKER.

Organizers' Corner.

[It is the desire of the editors of THE UNION SIGNAL that this Corner should serve the National Organizers as a sort of Lecture Bureau, and to that end they are invited to send their calendar of appointments long enough ahead to secure engagements in the territory to which they are called.]

The following is the list of National organizers for the present year, and whether W's or Y's they are all accredited public speakers and fully prepared to organize W's, Y's, L. T. L's, or speak to the general public and add to the membership of unions.

For terms and dates address as below:

Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.
Mrs. L. H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.
Miss Frances E. Griffin, 69 Maple street, Chicago.
Mrs. Mary Bynon Reese, Chautauqua, Wash.
Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, 1907 Bush street, San Francisco, Cal.
Mrs. E. A. Blair, 936 Cottage Place, Los Angeles, Cal.
Mrs. Maude L. Green, Manitou Springs, Col.
Mrs. E. Norinne Law, Baraga, Mich.
Miss Belle Kearney, Flora, Miss.
Mrs. Delle H. Cox, Newberg, Ore.
Miss Ida Clothier, Manitou Springs, Col.
Mrs. Henrietta Skelton, 132 McAllister street, San Francisco, Cal.
Miss S. C. Harris, Franklin, Va.
Mrs. F. E. W. Harper, Bainbridge street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Miss Clara Parrish, Paris, Ill.
Miss Carrie Lee Carter, Dexter, Mo.
Miss Frances Ensign, Madison, O.
Mrs. E. A. Kenyon, Townshend, Vt.

I look anxiously every week for the "Organizers' Corner" that I may learn where in the field my co-workers are reaping. I have been needed at home this winter and am now engaged in the most interesting work of moving into a little corner of my own, where all white-ribboners will be welcome when I am there. Hereafter my home address will be 1105 Davis street, Elmira, N. Y. Will correspondents please note the change? I hope next week to be able to report one new union organized, and next month considerable aggressive work in New York and Pennsylvania. We are preparing for a Neal Dow meeting in our city, and throughout our state we are working to secure at our constitutional convention in May an amendment to our state constitution, for the full enfranchisement of women, and the prohibition of the liquor traffic. The politicians in our legislature are discussing a new excise bill which will raise the license a little, and limit the number of saloons, but our good women have no interest in such child's play, life is too short and souls too precious. We are hoping to secure a law to "raise the age of consent" to eighteen years. Pray for us. And now let us hear from others. The glow-worm said, "You shine in your little corner and I in mine." Will not some organizer send forth her encouraging light from this corner every week? HELEN L. BULLOCK.

With a light heart and joyous anticipations, I began my journey southward in January, but after nearly three weeks of successful labor in Arkansas was called home by the death of my father, January 24. A sad home coming—to look for the last time at his face, and to place the white ribbon upon the quiet heart, that was so faithful to every interest it represents. As soon as I feel that I can, will return and fill my appointments in Louisiana, for I know that is what he would desire, and the best tribute of love I can pay will be faithful labor for the cause he loved so well.

CARRIE LEE CARTER.

Dexter, Mo.

Our Library Table.

FEBRUARY MAGAZINES.

All lovers of poetry of Robert Browning will be interested in Rev. M. J. Savage's paper on "The Religious Thought in Browning's Poetry," in the February issue of the ARENA. A fine portrait of the poet forms the frontispiece of this number. Another attractive feature is a symposium on "Rational Dress for Women," by a number of well-known American women.

Arena Pub. Co., Copley Sq., Boston.

WORTHINGTON'S MAGAZINE loses none of its freshness and brightness in the present issue. Among its taking short stories are, "A Bolt from a Clear Sky," by Anne Page; "Threads of Fate," by Martha McCulloch Williams; "Disenchanted," by A. H. Holden, and "Auntie Jo's Communion," by Francis Lynde. The departments are ably conducted and full of practical information.

A. D. Worthington & Co., Publisher, Hartford, Conn.

THE AMERICAN JOURNAL OF POLITICS, now well on in its second volume, is gaining a foothold for itself among the magazines. Among the articles of interest in the current number is "Bread for the Hungry," by Mrs. A. L. Cornwall, a lively discussion of the causes of such widely spread need for the necessities of life, and a plea for the overworked, underpaid and barely fed "industrial slaves" whose labor is valuable but brings them no profit.

Andrew J. Palen & Co., 114 Nassau street, New York City.

In the February number of the POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY, edited by William Jay Youmans, there is an intensely interesting article treating of the "Physical Conditions of the Deep Sea," written by S. J. Hickson. It investigates matters of light and temperature in the great ocean depths, and the peculiar conditions of life found there existing. "Heredity in Relation to Education," is the subject of a paper by Prof. Wesley Mills, M. D. The idea made most prominent in it is that teachers could learn much as to the proper treatment of each of their pupils from observing the characteristics of the parents.

D. Appleton & Company, 1, 3 and 5 Bond street, New York City.

The QUARTERLY JOURNAL OF INEBRIETY, under the keen-sighted editorship of Dr. T. D. Crothers, is doing an inestimable work in presenting from the calm standpoint of facts the many-sided question of intemperance. A simple list of articles published in the first issue of the year will speak for itself: "Legal Recognition of Diseased Inebriate Conditions as a Valid Plea," Dr. Norman Kerr; "The Alcoholic Question from a Medical Point of View," Prof. A. Strumpell; "Nitrate of Strychnine in Alcoholism," Dr. J. Bradford McConnell; "Some Legal Relations of Inebriety and Errors of Treatment," Dr. John C. Reed; "Inebriety From a Medical Standpoint," Dr. E. F. Arnold; "Sketch of the late Dr. Thomas Lee Wright," Dr. T. D. Crothers; "Promised Effectual British Legislation for Inebriates," Dr. Norman Kerr; "Alcohol as a Cause of Unchastity," Dr. M. L. Holbrook; following this well supplied table of good things are the carefully called "Abstracts and Reviews," and the outlook from an editorial standpoint.

T. D. Crothers, M. D., Editor, Hartford, Conn.

ST. NICHOLAS, for Young Folks, conducted by Mary Mapes Dodge, has a large constituency of readers who are "children of a larger growth," for only warped and blighted hearts have ceased to derive pleasure from such pure and sparkling contributions as find their way to the pages of this unexcelled periodical. Here are poetry and prose, fact and fiction, sense and nonsence, history and science, biography—a dainty dish fit to set before king or queen. The February issue contains Rudyard Kipling's laughable "Tiger! Tiger!" telling the strange experiences of Mowgli, the jungle-child, who, when he was a boy of ten knew more about the inhabitants of the jungle than he did of the village. "A Skater's Strategem," by Kate W. Hamilton, is a spicy narration of a young man's tilt with Indian warriors. Brander Matthews furnishes a fine sketch of Benjamin Franklin, with portrait and other illustrations. "Good Neighbors" is an amusing giant story, by Tudor Jenks. "The Monkey of North America," by W. T. Hornaday, is valuable in information and richly illustrated. Such are about one-third the contents of this charming periodical.

The Century Company, Union Square, New York.

You Need It!

The Columbia Pad Calendar,

altogether the neatest and most attractive 1894 calendar issued. An indispensable desk necessity. It has daily leaves, with clever pen drawings on some, bright and interesting contributions on others, ample room for memoranda on all. Send seven two-cent stamps and we will mail it.

Address Calendar Dept.

POPE MFG. CO.,
221 Columbus Ave.,
BOSTON.

Mention this paper.

EASY HOME-DYEING

Cotton, Wool, Silk and Feathers Readily Colored a Handsome Black.

It is only within the last few years that it has been possible for an inexperienced person to dye a black that would not crock, fade or wash out.

The advent of three Diamond Dyes, fast blacks,—for wool, for cotton, and for silk and feathers,—has changed all this. Now, with a ten cent package of one of these dyes, the first trial gives perfect success. The directions on the packages are so plain and simple that even a child can get better results than the experienced dyer could a few years ago.

The prevailing fashion for black stockings, feathers, gowns and cloaks, and the fact that anything can be colored with Diamond Dyes a black that will not crock or fade, explains their almost universal use.

The peculiar way in which the Diamond Dye fast blacks are made, gives them a great superiority over all other methods of home dyeing.

There are some forty other colors of Diamond Dyes, each of which is thoroughly reliable, and as superior to imitations as sunlight is to moonlight.

REFRESHING and INVIGORATING.
THE CROWN LAVENDER SALTS
Sold everywhere, in Crown stoppered bottles only.

Alaska Stove Lifter,

NICKEL PLATED.

ALWAYS COLD, even if left in Stove Lid.

Sold by all Stove and Hardware Dealers and House Furnishers, or sent by mail, postpaid, for 30 CENTS.

TROY NICKEL WORKS, TROY, N. Y.

GLOBE SAVINGS BANK

Corner Dearborn and Jackson Sts.,
CHICAGO, ILL.
UNDER STATE CONTROL.
INDIVIDUAL AND SAVINGS ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.
SAFETY ▲ DEPOSIT ▲ VAULTS.

World's Fair Highest Awards
Medal and Diploma on our INCUBATOR and BROODER Combined.
"Old Reliable" Leads
them all.
If you are interested in poultry, it will pay you to send 4 cents in stamps for our 72 page catalogue, giving valuable points on Poultry Culture. Address
Reliable Incubator and Brooder Co. Quincy, Ill.

You Dye in 30 minutes

Turkey red on cotton that won't freeze, boil or wash out. No other will do it. Package to color 2 lbs., by mail, 10 cts.; 6, any color—for wool or cotton, 40c. Big pay Agents. Write quick. Mention this paper. FRENCH DYE CO. Vassar, Mich

(Continued from page 12.)

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

THE union of unions at Detroit, Mich., passed resolutions of appreciation and regret at the resignation of Mrs. Lillian M. Hollister, their president, and her entrance into another field of labor.

A MOST interesting resumé of the W. C. T. U. work was given by Mrs. C. M. Woodward at Chadron, Neb.; fine music was rendered and prayer offered by the pastor. Four new members were the result.

EIGHTEEN hundred and ninety-three was the best year in the history of the Littleton, N. H., union with its sixty-two active and twenty honorary members. The county, too, Grafton, is active and progressive, three conventions having been held during the year, the latest on December 20, at Littleton, with Mrs. J. R. Nichols as speaker, and a goodly attendance.

A HAPPY new year has been inaugurated for the good residents of Summerville, Ga. During its municipal election, January 4, the women of the W. C. T. U. held an all-day prayer-meeting, that the men might be led to vote for right. The church bells were kept ringing all day. At its close, steam whistles blew and the bells rang joyfully for the victory which was won by faith and prayer. The L. T. L. boys worked all day and the little girls, too, helped to keep "wet" tickets from the ballot box.

A TWENTY years' engagement upon the Boston Traveller has just been closed by Mrs. Margaret J. Magennis, who is a woman of marked ability, and may justly be counted one of the pioneers among women journalists. She is not only well known through her profession, but as an active worker in all religious and reform circles. She has served for many years as Suffolk county superintendent of prison and almshouse work in the W. C. T. U., and for seven years she conducted Sunday services in Rainsford and Deer Islands. This necessitated her leaving her home in Dorchester at six o'clock on the only day in the week on which she could rest, but in summer's heat and winter's cold she was always at her post, and her coming was eagerly watched for by those to whom she so lovingly ministered. She is also well known as the author of a series of temperance sketches, "The Foe of the Household."

PETITION OF THE WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE HOME.

Addressed to the Governments of the World.

Honored Rulers, Representatives and Brothers:

We, your Petitioners, although belonging to the physically weaker sex, are strong of heart to love our homes, our native land, and the world's family of nations.

We know that clear brains and pure hearts make honest lives and happy homes, and that by these the nations prosper, and the time is brought nearer when the world shall be at peace.

We know that indulgence in Alcohol and Opium, and in other vices which disgrace our social life, makes misery for all the world, and most of all for us and for our children.

We know that stimulants and opiates are sold under legal guarantees which make the Governments partners in the traffic, by accepting as revenue a portion of the profits, and we know with shame that they are often forced by treaty upon populations, either ignorant or unwilling.

We know that the law might do much, now left undone, to raise the moral tone of society and render vice difficult.

We have no power to prevent these great iniquities beneath which the whole world groans, but you have power to redeem the honor of the nations from an indefensible complicity.

We therefore come to you with the united voices of representative women of every land, beseeching you to raise the standard of the law to that of Christian morals, to strip away the safeguards and sanctions of the state from the drink traffic and the opium trade, and to protect our homes by the total prohibition of these curses of civilization throughout all the territory over which your Government extends.

NAMES. | RESIDENCES.

Will not everybody who loves the great cause of home protection, send to Miss Alice E. Briggs, Evanston, Ill., for the regular form, and circulate it to the best of her ability, mailing the names to Miss Briggs. Use separate blanks for men and women.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail, by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL

Subscription Rates for 1894.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " 3 months	.25
" " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly. Price per year	$ .50
Young Crusader, monthly, one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago.

CHEAP LEAFLETS.

We are constantly having a demand for cheap leaflets. Order our Busy Day leaflets, 15c. a hundred; $1 per thousand. Good paper, clear type, and so to the point you can afford to give a moment to them on a busy day. Here are the titles. There are nine of them:

No. 1. A $200,000 glass of beer.
" 2. Liquid Bread.
" 3. Freedom or Slavery.
" 4. New Method of Training.
" 5. Home vs. the Saloon.
" 6. Intemperance and the Catholic Church.
" 7. Catholics and Prohibition.
" 8. The Yellow Flag.
" 9. An Accommodating Business.

Price 15c. per hundred; $1 per thousand.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

OUR NEW LEAFLETS.

If you have not read the Publisher's Notes with care, you have overlooked the fact that our editor of books and leaflets is furnishing you and your children with many fresh topics for reading and for thought.

Teach the children temperance principles in an attractive form, and order for family and Sunday-school use, the entire series

"For Our Little Folks."

No. 1. HOW DID YOU KNOW?
2. SPOILED BRAINS.
3. TELEGRAPH LINES.
4. SOME MESSAGES.
5. SOME MORE MESSAGES.
6. NERVE THREADS ASLEEP.
7. AN EXPERIMENT.

PRICE.

Per 1,000, postpaid, - - - $1.00
" 100, " - - - .15

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

PICTURE LEAFLETS.

This is notably the age of pictures, and we have yielded to the acknowledged demand, and provided for the young people Picture Leaflets.

Series of Eight.

No. 1. WHAT THE ROBINS TOLD THE APPLE BLOSSOMS.
2. HANDS OUT, YOUNG MAN.
3. JACK.
4. MY SOLDIER BOY.
5. HOW TO USE MONEY.
6. OUR ROOM IN THE HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.
7. THE BOYS' VICTORY.
8. TEDDIE.

In large type, so the little ones can read for themselves.

PRICE.

Per 1,000, postpaid, - - - $1.00
" 100, " - - - .15

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

PROHIBITION DAY.

Have you ordered any extra copies of our Neal Dow Prohibition Number?

THE UNION SIGNAL of February 22, will have a fine half-tone on the cover page worth ten times the cost of a single copy, which is only TEN cents.

Address,
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Remember, if you do not send an advance order for our fine Neal Dow Prohibition Number of THE UNION SIGNAL, you may regret it.

TWO NEW Y LEAFLETS.

WHAT IS YOUR VALUE? By Mrs. O. W. Scott, and

INASMUCH. By Miss Ida C. Clothier.

Both invaluable.

"Shave your Soap" —so the soap makers say, especially if you're washing delicate things. Now, in the name of common sense, what's the use? When you can get Pearline, in powder form for this very reason, why do you want to work over soap, which, if it's good for anything, gets very hard and difficult to cut. Besides, Pearline is vastly better than any powdered soap could be. It has all the good properties of any soap—and many more, too. There's something in it that does the work easily, but without harm—much more easily than any other way yet known.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 392 JAMES PYLE, New York.

ATTENTION BOYS!

FOR SIX NEW SUBSCRIBERS

to THE UNION SIGNAL we will send this watch to your address, postpaid.

FOR FOUR NEW SUBSCRIBERS

and Fifty Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

FOR TWO NEW SUBSCRIBERS

and Seventy-five Cents we will send it to your address, postpaid.

THIS OFFER IS

FOR BOYS ONLY

Boys who will thank us for this generous offer to own the best pocket time-piece yet made by any Clock Company. Extreme diameter of case 2¼ inches.

As soon as your mind is made up to secure one of these Watches, write to us. Address

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n
THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO...

FLOWER MISSION.

FLOWER MISSION.

Oak and Ivy Leaf

will issue its special

Flower Mission Number

bright and early in March.

It will contain a variety of interesting reading on this favorite and beautiful work of the white-ribboners.

Letters of Jennie Casseday

to a Y friend will be printed for the first time.

Tried and Proved Plans

of work will be furnished, with pointed suggestions.

Incidents of flower missioner's labors and a capital story by Miss Maude Rittenhouse, entitled, "A FLOWER MISSION CONVERT," are among its contents.

Special price for this number for distribution.

Per 100 copies..... $1 50

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

$25 to $50 per week, to Agents, Ladies or Gentlemen, using or selling "Old Reliable Plater." Only practical way to replate rusty and worn knives, forks, spoons, etc.; quickly done by dipping in melted metal. No experience, polishing, or machinery. Thick plate at one operation; lasts 5 to 10 years; fine finish when taken from the plater. Every family has plating to do. Plater sells readily. Profits large. W. P. Harrison & Co. Columbus, O.

STUDY LAW AT HOME. Take a Course in the SPRAGUE Correspondence School of Law. (Incorporated.) Send 10c. stamps for particulars to J. COTNER, JR., SEC'Y, DETROIT, MICH. No. 24 TELEPHONE BDG.

High Arm FREE TRIAL in your own home for 30 days without paying one cent in advance; machine to be returned at our expense if unsatisfactory. We take all risks, pay freight, ship anywhere, to anyone, in any quantity at wholesale prices. $65 Kenwood machine, $24.50; $55 Arlington, $20.50; $45 Arlington, $17.50; $35 High Arm Gem, $12. We sell all makes and styles, from cheapest $7.95 to best "Kenwood," $24.50. All attachments free. THREE HIGHEST WORLD'S FAIR MEDALS AWARDED. Over 100,000 now in use. Buy direct from factory. Save agents large profits. Catalogue and testimonials free. Write at once. Address (in full) CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 W. VanBuren St., Dept. A 161, Chicago, Ill. Warranted Ten Years.

BICYCLES FREE Organs, Watches, Guns, Etc. TO BOYS and GIRLS Devoting a few minutes after school-hours to our interests BOORMAN & PARKER, 173 5th Av., Chicago. Ill. Cat. full instruc. 1c stamp.

JENNESS MILLER Specialties. Corset substitutes, Empire Waists, Bust Supports, Divided Skirts, Union Suits, etc. Send stamp for illustrated pamphlet, "Dress." Mrs. S. W. PIKE, 34 Central Music Hall, CHICAGO.

CANCER Its cure by scientific local treatment. 20 Years Experience. Book Free. Drs. McLeish and Weber, 123 John Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAFNESS & HEAD NOISES CURED by my Invisible Tubular Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Warranted to help more cases than all similar devices combined. Help ears as glasses do eyes. Sold by F. HISCOX only, 853 Br'dway, N. Y. Send for book of proofs FREE

AGENTS CAN MAKE FROM $25.00 TO $100.00 a week by canvassing for the best special ties ever offered. No competition. Address, N. Y. & LONDON ELECTRIC ASSN., Kansas City Mo.

Don't Cost You a Cent! BOYS AND GIRLS who want an elegant high grade SAFETY BICYCLE FOR NOTHING, send your name and address to H. M. CO., 358 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

PILES Instant relief, final cure in a few days, and never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. Remedy mailed free. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N.Y.

At ¼ Price Watches, Guns, Buggies, Harness, Sewing Machines, Organs, Bicycles, Farm Tools, Safes, etc, List FREE. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS clear $100 monthly. 100 New Ladies' Specialties for Old and Young. 64 page Illust'd Catalogue FREE. G. L. Erwin & Co., Chicago, Ill. LADY

CARDS Send 2c. stamp for Sample Book of all the FINEST and Latest Style Cards for 1894. We sell GENUINE CARDS NOT TRASH. UNION CARD CO., COLUMBUS, OHIO.

WE WANT YOU to distribute circulars, samples, etc., in your locality for our syndicate of big advertisers. $3 to $5 per thousand. CASH PAID. No canvassing. Enclose stamp. DISTRIBUTING BUREAU, P.O. Box 1925, New York City.

STAYS hooked—turn, twist, wriggle. The DE LONG PATENT HOOK AND EYE.
See that hump?
Trade-Mark Reg. April 19-92.
Richardson & De Long Bros., Philadelphia.

Publisher's Notes.

NEAL DOW PROHIBITION NUMBER

WILL BE ISSUED FEB. 22, 1894

IT WILL CONTAIN

Full page picture of this noted man.
A sketch of his life.
His portraits at different periods.
A short history of the Prohibition movement, statistical from its beginning.
A symposium of opinions of leaders from everywhere on the Prohibition question, and of prominent Maine people as to how it has worked in Maine.

SEND IN YOUR ORDERS EARLY.

PRICE:

Single copies	.....	$ .10
5	"	.25
10	"	.40
15	"	.60
20	"	.75
25	"	.90
100	"	3.00

Orders must invariably be accompanied with CASH.

We give no credit or special discounts on extra issues.

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

SUBSCRIBE NOW

...FOR...

The Young Crusader

A BETTER BRIGHTER BREEZIER PAPER

CANNOT BE BOUGHT.

TERMS: 15c. a year; in packages of twenty-five or over, to one address, at the rate of $1 per 100 each issue.

We are making special terms to boys and girls who will act as agents.

Write for terms to

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO.

DEPARTMENT LEAFLETS.

Short, Spicy, Strong.

Just what you need in your department work, and only fifteen cents per 100. $1.25 per 1,000.

Order at once.
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

SOUVENIR CARD.

This is the very brightest of all our plans for

Neal Dow Day.

It consists of a handsome card containing a fine portrait of the hero, with the dates

1804—1894

conspicuous, and the motto with which he began his life work, "With God's help I'll change all this," signed with his autograph.

The design is chaste and elegant.

Just the thiug to distribute to all at the grand meeting on March 20.

Price, one cent each. Package of 25, twenty cents.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Attention, L. T. L's!

A LETTER FROM NEAL DOW TO THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF AMERICA

is now on sale at The Temple. This will be one of the most valuable souvenirs of Prohibition's Hero, and should be ordered in large quantities.

It is a fac simile of his handwriting, and is sent straight from his heart to yours.

L. T. L. Leaders

and all parents should take heed and order this at once.

Price, 1c.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Do not fail to see the February number of

THE ADVANCE GUARD.

It will be a special

Neal Dow Number,

Containing a fac simile letter of the "Grand Old Man" to the boys and girls of America.

Also a portrait, sketch of his life and

Program for the Celebration of his Birthday on March 20.

This, with the other usual features, makes it an especially attractive issue, and one you cannot afford to be without.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ATTENTION! BOYS!

See our display advertisement which cannot fail to interest you. This opportunity is not for your mother or sister, but for you only. We do not offer many premiums but we are confident this nickel watch is just what you need, just what it claims to be, and for the effort it will cost, you can not obtain a better time-keeper. It is really a clock movement in a nickel case, manufactured by the Waterbury Clock Company, small enough to fit in your vest pocket. The smallest boy can wind it and tell accurate time by it. It is not a toy watch nor as small and delicate as your father's, yet will keep perhaps better time than his. Read our offer and notify us at once that you wish to work for one of these watches and we will be ready to fill your order as soon as it reaches us.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS

Attention!

HURRY in your orders for the QUARTERLY TEMPERANCE LESSON, which is issued as a Supplement to the Young Crusader.

NOTICE OUR TERMS:

Supplement without Crusader.

100	$ .65
500	2.75
1,000	5.00

Supplement and Crusader.

100	$ 1.00
500	4.75
1,000	9.00
2,000	15.00
5,000	35.00
8,000	48.00

Postage paid by us. All orders between numbers named at the rate immediately preceding.

Send order in time to distribute in your schools on the Sunday preceding the date of the lesson.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

CAN YOU VOTE?

If you are a woman and cannot vote, use your political influence by distributing the Neal Dow Prohibition Number among your gentlemen friends.

See list of prices.

GRANULA
"The Perfect Health Food."

ORIGINATED by the famous Dr. James C. Jackson, founder of America's leading Health Institution, over 30 years ago. It is a scientifically prepared and twice-cooked food containing all the nutritious properties of the unequaled Genesee Valley Winter Wheat in such form and proportion as to be quickly digested and thoroughly assimilated by the entire body. IT IS A REMARKABLE REMEDY for certain diseases, and if regularly and persistently used will not fail to remove DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION AND CONSTIPATION.

Granula should be eaten daily by children, as it builds up the tissues rapidly and clears the system of impurities. Granula is sold under a registered trade mark and manufactured solely by OUR HOME GRANULA MFG. CO., Box 100, Dansville, N. Y.
Trial Box 25 cts. Book of Recipes and Descriptive Pamphlet FREE.

WANTED Agents everywhere to sell our Stove Polish Mitten.

You can make from $3 to $5 a day sure, for every lady buys one at sight. It keeps her hands perfectly clean and polishes the stove better and quicker than a brush or rag. Sample 35c. a set. Ad. New England Novelty Mfg. Co., 24 Portland St., Dept. R. Boston.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

THE PRESS CLAIMS COMPANY,
618 F STREET, NORTHWEST, WASHINGTON, D. C.
P. O. BOX 463. JOHN WEDDERBURN, Managing Attorney.

Cut this out and send it with your inquiry.

A DISAPPOINTING FLOWER GARDEN

—A thing of a bloom or two, shriveled leaves, sticks and bare ground—smiled at by your friends, laughed at by your family. Nearly all amateur gardeners have such experiences, but they can frequently be avoided by a wise choice of seeds. The products of the Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, Ohio, have a happy habit of taking root and growing under more than ordinarily adverse conditions. This firm has 28 greenhouses and 1,000 acres of ground, where are raised trees, shrubs, vines, roses, bulbs, plants, seeds, etc. They are making a special 50c. offer now that is well worth taking. An elegant annual of 168 pages will be mailed free on application to Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, Ohio.

Publisher's Notes.

LITERATURE SUPERINTENDENTS, OAK AND IVY LEAF SOLICITORS ATTENTION!!

New Rates for Oak and Ivy Leaf to July, 1895, including one year of

New Volume

and the remaining months of the present series,

50 Cents.

To October, 1894,

including both new and old series to that date, 25 Cents.

All subscriptions received after this date, February 1, will be filled according to above rates.

Write for

Club Rates and Premiums

to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ARE YOU A POLITICIAN?

If so, can you not use effectively our Neal Dow Prohibition Number?

MY WIFE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT AND PAY FREIGHT.

$14 Buys our 2 drawer walnut or oak Improved High Arm Singer sewing machine finely finished, nickel plated, adapted to light and heavy work; guaranteed for 10 Years; with Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, Self-Setting Needle and a complete set of Steel Attachments; shipped any where on 30 Day's Trial. No money required in advance. 75,000 now in use. World's Fair Medal awarded machine and attachments. Buy from factory and save dealer's and agent's profits. FREE Cut This Out and send to-day for machine or large free catalogue, testimonials and Glimpses of the World's Fair.
OXFORD MFG. CO. 342 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

MUSIC SALE To reduce our stock of Music we will send by mail, postpaid, 70 pieces full sheet music size, all parts complete, including Marguerite, Man in the Moon, Mary and John, also Marches, Waltzes, Quadrilles, etc., all for 20c. Satisfaction given or money back. Read this: "Mr. H.: Am very much pleased with the music sent me; it is worth ten times the money. R. J. Allen, Hoosick, N. H." Address V. HATHAWAY, 339 Wash. St., Boston, Mass.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

DETECTIVE We want a man in every locality to act as private Detective under instructions. Experience unnecessary. Send stamp for particulars. Nat. Detec. Bureau, Indianapolis, Ind.

WANTED—INTELLIGENT LADY in every town to introduce the new "Youths Cyclopedia," prepared expressly for Teachers Pupils and Students. This is the one book that in these close times is bringing large profits to capable agents. Our school and installment plan makes quick work and brings big results. No capital required. Address
O. B. BEACH & CO., 216 Clark St., Chicago.

$2.75 GENTS OR LADIES SIZE 14 KARAT GOLD PLATE.

CUT THIS OUT and send it to us with your name and address and we will send you this beautiful gold finished watch by express for examination. You examine it at the express office, and if you think it a bargain, pay our sample price $2.75 and express charges and it is yours. It is magnificently engraved, open face, cut shows back of case, and equal in appearance to a genuine Solid Gold watch. A guarantee for 5 years and beautiful gold plate chain and charm sent free with every watch, write to-day, this may not appear again, mention whether you want gents' or ladies' size. NATIONAL M'F'G & IMPORTING CO., 334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Signal Notes.

ONTARIO, Canada, has sixty-two public kindergartens, twenty-seven of which are in Toronto.

THERE are thirty rescue missions in New York modeled after the Jerry McAuley Rescue Mission.

A HOME farm for poor street boys has recently been opened near Melbourne, by the Salvation Army.

THE Post-office Temperance Society has thirty-six branches and two thousand, three hundred and ninety members.

THE Divorce Reform League is doing good work, for it has persuaded ten states to appoint commissions with a view to uniformity of marriage and divorce laws and to greater restriction. The headquarters are at Auburndale, Mass.

MISS TAYLOR, niece of Bishop Taylor, of Africa fame, has just sailed for Africa as a missionary dentist, and is the first proficient dentist that has ever gone on a missionary tour. Her work will be among the missionaries and families principally.

AS A result of the College Y. M. C. A. movement, over twenty thousand students are reported to have become Christians in America during the sixteen years of existence; three thousand have entered the ministry and over six hundred have gone into foreign mission work.

THE City Vigilance League, of New York, has taken up a practical philanthropic service, by establishing a class of institutions intended to take the place of saloons. They are to be as near like the saloons as possible, leaving out the disreputable features. They will be run on business basis, providing lodgings, smoking-rooms, lunch counters, etc.

FIFTEEN years ago all the alcohol consumed in the Argentine Republic was imported; to-day the output of alcohol from maize alone averages fifteen million dollars per annum. This in addition to the sugar cane alcohol, wine and malt industry induces an Argentine paper to say: "A profitable (!) and rapidly increasing liquor industry has sprung up."

THE new organizer and chairman of the N. Dakota Prohibition central committee, Mr. M. H. Kiff, of Tower City, writes of his desire to coöperate with the W. C. T. U. of the state in more completely organizing the prohibition forces, and there is no doubt that much assistance will be rendered by the white-ribboners. Mr. Kiff is organizing Men's Christian Temperance Unions in connection with his state work.

A PRACTICAL plan to meet the abuses of the pawnbrokers is about to take effect in New York. It is called the Greer Loan Association and is started by Dr. Greer of the St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church. His mission work has revealed the miseries of the poor man or woman in the clutches of the pawnbroker. A chattel mortgage bureau will be operated in connection with the pawnshop. The law that allows the pawnbroker to charge thirty per cent is manifestly unjust and abuses naturally follow.

TEMPERANCE young people in South Haven, Michigan, have invented a novel means of helping to create public sentiment. A "Post-Office Social" is advertised, and each one attending, on payment of ten cents, is given a circular letter in a common stamped envelope and two "golden flakes." These flakes, in shape and size, resemble a postage stamp, each gold surface having printed upon it in blue letters, "Let us pay our money to men who don't drink." The plan is that every one at the social shall send the circular letter to some friend in another town, affixing a "flake" to the foot of the letter and also somewhere on the envelope. The letter describes the social and its object and makes an eloquent appeal to temperance people to keep their funds in temperance channels. The publisher of The Avalanche, South Haven, Mich., will furnish the flakes and letters, in quantities, at low rates.

DO YOU HAVE ASTHMA?

If you do, you will be glad to hear that the Kola plant, found on the Congo river, West Africa, is reported a positive cure for the disease. The Kola Importing Co., 1164 Broadway, New York, have such faith in this new discovery, that they are sending out free by mail, large trial cases of Kola Compound to all sufferers from Asthma, who send their name and address on a postal card. Write to them.

Coffee

is rendered more wholesome and palatable if, instead of using milk or cream, you use the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk, or, if you prefer it unsweetened, then Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream.

IVORY SOAP

IT FLOATS

IS NOT LOST IN THE TUB.

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CIN'TI.

A dirty house creates a strife, between the good man and his wife—

To secure peace

use SAPOLIO. It is a solid cake of scouring soap Try it. SAPOLIO reduces labor but conquers dirt and makes home bright and happy

A complete wreck of domestic happiness has often resulted from badly washed dishes, from an unclean kitchen, or from trifles which seemed light as air. But by these things a man often judges of his wife's devotion to her family, and charges her with general neglect when he finds her careless in these particulars. Many a home owes a large part of its thrifty neatness and its consequent happiness to SAPOLIO.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW About ZOA-PHORA—

A True Nerve Tonic.
Not a Stimulant or Narcotic.
Expressly for Weakly Women.
Full information and testimonials sent sealed.
Address ZOA-PHORA MEDICINE CO., H. G. COLMAN, SEC'Y, KALAMAZOO, MICH.

AFRICAN WATER LILIES.

As easily raised from seeds as Balsams or Poppies. Sown in tea-cups in Feb. or Mch., they will bloom EVERY day from June on. Flowers 4 to 10 inches across and delightfully fragrant. BLUE. Flowers lovely shades of light and dark blue; stamens golden yellow tipped with blue. RED. Exquisite shades rich pink, deep rose or almost crimson; golden yellow stamens tipped with red, superb. WHITE. Flowers pure pearly white and flat like a star. Seeds 10c. per pk't; or all three colors for only 20c. AMARYLLIS EQUESTRE. Lily-like flowers 5 inches across, bright orange-red with white star in the centre. One of the most beautiful and easiest grown Amaryllis in cultivation. Planted now will bloom at Easter. Large bulbs only 15c. each; or for only 25c. we will send this bulb and all three pk'ts of Water Lily seeds, carefully wrapped in beautiful Spanish Moss, postpaid to any address. CATALOGUE OF RARE FLORIDA FLOWERS AND FRUITS for '94, containing 64 pp., elegant colored plate, department of FLORIDA CURIOS, fine illustrations, etc., everything offered at "hard times prices," sent FREE with every order, also to all who ask for it. Don't buy elsewhere until you see it, for we will save you money.

PIKE & ELLSWORTH, Jessamine, Fla.

Headquarters for the Choicest
Seeds, Plants, Trees, Shrubs, Vines, Roses, Bulbs, Etc.
Elegant 168 page Catalog, FREE.
Send for it Before Buying.
Seeds, Small Trees, etc., postpaid. Large by Freight or Express.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. 40th Year, 1,000 Acres, 28 Greenhouses.
Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, Ohio. Box 246

Don't Lose Heart.
PLANT FERRY'S SEEDS this year, and make up for lost time. Ferry's Seed Annual for 1894 will give you many valuable hints about what to raise and how to raise it. It contains information to be had from no other source. Free to all.
D. M. Ferry & Co. Detroit, Mich.

SEEDS
WARRANTED. Best in the World.
By mail, postage paid, 1 cent a package and up. Grand lot of EXTRAS given with every order. Prettiest and only FREE Catalogue in the world with pictures of all varieties. Send yours and neighbors' address.
R. H. SHUMWAY, ROCKFORD, - ILLINOIS.

SEEDS GIVEN AWAY
FOR TRIAL. I have found that the best way to advertise good Seeds is to give away a sample for trial. If you will send me a 2-cent stamp to pay postage, I will mail free one package, your selection, of either Cabbage, Carrot, Celery, Cucumber, Lettuce, Musk or Water Melon, Onion, Parsnip, Pepper, Pumpkin, Radish, Spinach, Squash, Tomato, Turnip, or of Flower Seeds—Aster, Balsam, Celosia, Carnation, Mignonette, Pansy, Phlox, Poppy, Sweet Peas, Zinnia, or Verbena, and one of my 1894 Catalogues. Under any circumstances do not buy your Seeds until you see it, for I can save you money. Over 200,000 people say my seeds are the cheapest and best. I have earliest vegetables on record. Discount and large prizes to agents. 50c. worth of Seeds free with $1.00 order. Write to-day. F. B. MILLS, Box 50 Rose Hill, N.Y.

Magnificent New Flowers
FOR ONLY 25 CENTS.

Including the lovely Orange Scented Tuberose which bears flowers of great beauty and of unsurpassed fragrance, worth more than the price of the collection. One bulb of Orange Scented Tuberose, 1 bulb French Seedling Gladioli, lovely spikes; 1 pkt. Fuller's New Sweet Pea in mixed colors, a grand variety; 1 pkt. World's Fair Pansy, comprises all the finest strains mixed; 1 pkt. Fuller's New Rose Aster flowers of great beauty, 1 pkt. Star Phlox, 30 colors mixed; 1 pkt. Giant Cockscomb, heads over two feet in circumference; 1 large pkt. Mixed Flower Seeds, over 100 different kinds, all the best sorts, which grow and bloom freely. The above fine bulbs and seeds are worth $1.00, will all flower this season, and we send them for only 25 cents. Order at once. Catalogue free.
J. ROSCOE FULLER & CO., Floral Park, N.Y.

HATCH CHICKENS BY STEAM
With the Improved Excelsior Incubator.

Simple, Perfect, Self-Regulating. Thousands in successful operation. Guaranteed to hatch a larger percentage of fertile eggs at less cost than any other Hatcher. Lowest priced first-class Hatcher made.
Circulars free. Send 6c. for Illus. Catalogue.
GEO. H. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED for MOTHER STEWART'S new book, "THE CRUSADER IN GREAT BRITAIN." Is creating great interest on both sides of the water. Crowded full of humor, fun, pathos and valuable history. Just the book that agents like to handle. Price $1. Address
M. CAMPBELL, Springfield, Ohio.

Now is the time to make money by raising early chickens. Get a INVINCIBLE HATCHER for $17, and start out right. Send 4c. in stamps for No. 76 Catalogue to BUCKEYE INCUBATOR CO., Springfield, O.

Publisher's Notes.

NEAL DOW'S BIRTHDAY.

Special Prohibition Number of THE UNION SIGNAL Feb. 22, 1894.

Our Crusade issue of THE UNION SIGNAL is entirely exhausted. So will be the Neal Dow Prohibition Number unless you

Order Promptly.

This will enable us so to judge of the demands of our clientele that none shall be disappointed.

A Prohibition number per se could not fail to be of interest, but a Neal Dow Prohibition Number, with the handsome face of this grand man is one you will wish to keep, and one you will be glad to send to your friend, who may not be a Prohibitionist, but will enjoy reading of the Maine law and its results and of the Life Work of Neal Dow.

This number will contain a sketch of his life, his portraits at different periods, a short history of the prohibition movement, statistical from its beginning, a symposium of opinions of leaders from everywhere on the prohibition question, and a symposium of the opinions of prominent Maine people as to how it has worked in Maine. It will also contain a rallying song and two other fitting poems. The editorials and other leading articles will be devoted to various phases of the prohibition question, and taken in its entirety the paper will be one of the finest yet issued from our press.

PRICE:

Single copies	.....	$ .10
5	"	.25
10	"	.40
15	"	.60
20	"	.75
25	"	.90
100	"	3.00

Orders must invariably be accompanied with CASH.

We give no credit or special discounts on extra issues.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE.
Chicago, Ill.

TEACH THE MASSES.

This is your opportunity to teach the masses the effects of prohibition as illustrated by the life and works of Neal Dow. Send for our Prohibition number.

See prices.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE.
Chicago, Ill.

JUST ISSUED.

Department Leaflets.

No. 18 (For Miners).—ANSWER THIS QUESTION.

No. 43 (Narcotics).—DOES IT PAY TO USE TOBACCO?

No. 44.—EXPERT EVIDENCE CONCERNING TOBACCO.

No. 52 (Y. W. C. T. U.).—WHEREFORE A Y?

No. 72.—A MODERN DEVIL'S MISSION.

No. 73.—THE CUP OF BLESSING.

No. 91.—A WOMAN'S LOGIC.

Others in Preparation.

Price 15 cents per 100.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER.

If you have seen the January and February number of the children's own paper, The Young Crusader, you will want the March issue. This is more emphatically a temperance number than common, containing the Quarterly Temperance Lesson as a Supplement, and other temperance truths in various bright and attractive presentations. This little eight-page monthly has hosts of friends. Are you one of them? If not, why not?

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU WISH IT?

If you do wish the Neal Dow Prohibition Number, to be issued February 22, send in your order at once.

See terms in another column.

JUST A HUNDRED.

We have just a hundred left of our UNION SIGNAL binders. Do you wish them at 75c. each?

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

FOR GOD AND HOME. WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOUNDED 1883. AND EVERY LAND.

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XX.—No. 8.] CHICAGO, February 22, 1894. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

OUR BILL OF FARE.

We are proud of our cover and we are proud of our contents. To Gen. Neal Dow we owe special gratitude, not only for preparing, solely for THE UNION SIGNAL, such an excellent account of the Maine Law, but for furnishing such a fine specimen of a ninety year manhood with which to embellish our cover. To Mary Lathbury with her exquisite poem, to John Woolley and his unique Railroad Ties, and to every one of the forty-six well-known contributors to the Prohibition Symposium we express our sincere thanks. The editorial pages pretty well cover the ground of the faith that is in us concerning prohibition, which we have discussed as a principle per se, as an economic measure and as opposed to high license and local option. Some valuable special matter and the regular departments which were crowded out this time will appear in larger measure in our next issue.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The New Jersey Senate passed the police and anti-race track bills Friday.

A dispatch from Cape Town verifies the report that King Lo Bengula is dead.

A German silver commission numbering sixteen has been appointed to inquire into that important question.

Representatives of nearly every leading daily newspaper in America, one hundred and one in number, met for the first time in Chicago last week.

Fire was again set by some mischievous persons in Jackson Park, destroying a portion of the stately Colonnade, and the Illinois state building.

Twenty-five Parisians were injured by the throwing of a bomb in a Paris café last week. The miscreant, who is an anarchist of the notoriety-seeking sort, was captured.

The twenty-sixth annual convention of the Woman's Suffrage Association convened in Washington, D. C., February 15–20. A full report will appear in our columns next week.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt, chancellor of the exchequer, aroused great enthusiasm by his arraignment of the British House of Lords in a speech at Portsmouth, England, last week.

Hans Guido Von Bulow, a musical composer and pianist of world-wide fame, died at Cairo, Egypt, last week in his sixty-fifth year. During his visit to the United States in 1875, he was received with marked honors.

The United States Senate passed a resolution Friday requesting the complete and additional correspondence, orders, etc., from the President regarding Hawaii. President Dole's reply to United States Minister Willis has been made public.

Senator Hoar has introduced a bill into the United States Senate for the suppression of lotteries, the penalty to be a fine of one thousand dollars, or two years' imprisonment, or both, for conducting a "lottery," which includes raffles and gift enterprises.

James B. Scott, a philanthropist who came to the rescue of the ill-fated town of Johnstown, Pa., in 1889, and was made "dictator" in the revival of its industries and interests, during which seven thousand men were employed and thirty thousand people cared for, died at Pittsburg last week from the effects of the exposure five years ago.

By the will of Charles B. Beck, of New York, just admitted to probate, the Society for the Prevention of Crime, of which Rev. Dr. Charles Parkhurst is president, will receive one million dollars for its noble work. A similar amount was left each, to Columbia College, the Board of Home Missions and the New York Presbyterian Hospital.

UP to the time of going to press, the proposed woman's suffrage amendment to the Iowa constitution is still under discussion. It is interesting to note that its chief supporters are men, and that they argue on the ground of right rather than of expediency. Senator Lewis declared that the strongest argument for woman suffrage was the fact that no good reason existed against it, and the fact that women would be better lawmakers than men because they are better law-minders, as shown by the fifty-four thousand men against the five thousand women in the penitentiaries of the United States.

AMONG the many liquor bills introduced into the Iowa legislature is one providing that druggists shall pay five hundred dollars for permits to sell liquor and that the same shall be sold in the main room, with an entrance upon a public street and unprotected by screens. It looks as though the Iowa solons were determined to force the liquor traffic upon the state whether it will or no, for the sake of the almighty dollar. Instead of making a shadow of a pretence to enforce the prohibitory law, they are utilizing every previous defiance of the law as a vantage ground for hoisting their high-license flag. We have never known a more shameful array than the present roster of "regulating" liquor measures now on file in that so-called prohibition commonwealth.

WHAT shall we do with the liquor traffic? If men's eyes were not blinded by lust of gain, they would just as quickly ask, What shall we do with highway robbery? for the two occupations are merely species of the same class. When the advanced sentiment of Christendom outlawed lottery, it decided that only that is a legitimate business which gives fair equivalent for what it receives. This the liquor trade does not do. It is far worse than highway robbery, for that simply takes and gives no return; at the worst it takes a man's material possessions and inflicts bodily injuries. The liquor trade, however, always inflicts physical, mental and moral injury, and in the great majority of cases, physical, mental and spiritual death. It is an unmitigated curse to society, and reasonable human beings have decided on general principles that the only way to treat such a curse is to prohibit it.

WHILE the horrors of the liquor traffic, like the poor, are "always with us," it is yet true that there are times when a conception of its enormity comes over us with the force of a new revelation. Times when we see the whole universe under the blight of this curse, and cry out in soul anguish, "How long, oh, Lord, how long!" Here is a case in point. A man known and beloved throughout the whole nation, a man, the fire of whose wit and the gleam of whose rare humor are only equaled by the depth of his pathos and the breadth of his thought; a man gifted in tongue and pen, set apart, too, to highest, holiest ministration; one whom the nation delights to honor, was to return not long since to his native township to address the county teachers' convention assembled there. An immense audience filled the large hall when a telegram was received stating he had missed the train. A special was sent for him, and till half-past nine the audience waited. Then a cab drove up to the door and he was hurried out upon the platform, amidst deafening rounds of applause. He began his address. "Oh, God! the pity of it!" It was the wild drivel of an idiot; and that man looked out upon the sea of people, many of whom were kinsfolk and old friends, drunk, hopelessly drunk. A storm of hisses well-nigh sobered him for an instant, and the white, dazed, piteous face he turned upon his audience was enough to melt a heart of stone. But the awful fact remained. Curses upon the liquor traffic! Curses upon that which thus turns man's strength into an idiot's weakness! Curses upon that which wrecks hopes and hearts and homes together! But does not the curse strike deeper yet and fall upon those who either consciously protect or supinely permit this evil in our land? There is a question in God's Word we would all do well to ponder: "Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which frameth mischief by a law?" Shall it? In so far as we fail, by every power to oppose it, we are answering "yes"—and in just so far the blood of its victims is upon us as a nation.

ONE very important item in the Neal Dow celebration March 20, is the collection. As the idea for the birthday observance originated in the World's W. C. T. U., it seems but just that that organization should share in the benefits. So it is proposed by the World's officers that the collections should be equally divided between the treasury of the World's W. C. T. U. and that of the local union. In her official statement our World's treasurer, Mrs. Williams, says: "The World's W. C. T. U. is, so far as we know, the only temperance organization having a world-wide constituency and engaging in foreign mission work. The salaries of the secretaries, with that of the missionary in India (to say nothing of the necessarily enormous postage and stationery bills), are regular expenditures for which funds are greatly needed. A small grant just at this time would greatly help the work of our missionary in Africa, and the doors of China and Japan are open to us could we but raise the money to send out workers." All contributions should be sent to Ella F. M. Williams, 26 Chomedy street, Montreal, Canada.

IN the beginning of the high license movement, liquor dealers strongly opposed it, but, with the proverbial wisdom of the children of darkness, they speedily recognized their mistake. It was in 1885 that temperance leaders became thoroughly convinced "that high license was a whisky devil in temperance garb." They found that the liquor men had anticipated them in the discovery, and were, as they have ever since remained, a unit for high license. Alas, there are temperance people still to be found who advocate high license as a temperance measure! In addition to their well-known attitude on the question, we have the written statement of many of the leading liquor dealers concerning high license. In confidential letters written to supposed liquor men who wrote them for advice during temperance campaigns in different states, they have thus expressed themselves: "The two most effective weapons with which to fight prohibition are high license and local option." "As to the trade repealing the high license law, if the question were left to it, I do not think, so far as my acquaintance is concerned, that it would do so. I have an extensive acquaintance through the state, and I believe if it were put to a vote of the liquor dealers and saloon men whether it should be high license, low license, or no license, that they would almost unanimously be for high license." "I would be in favor of high license rather than trust to the non-enforcement of the law under prohibition. If you undertake to do your business without protection you are blackmailed by one-horse attorneys, which in the end amounts to many times the cost of a license every year, even if the license be very high." "We have had a great deal of business in the state of Iowa, both before it was prohibition and since, and we can say positively that there is very little satisfaction in doing business in that state now. Ever so often the goods are seized, and it causes a great deal of delay and trouble to get the goods released. . . . . It is like running a railroad under ground. You don't know where you are going or what is ahead. In all my experience of ten years in Ohio before the temperance movement and twenty years' experience here previous to high license, and since, I believe that high license is one of the grandest laws for the liquor traffic." Do these unanimous sentiments of liquor dealers indicate that high license is a "temperance measure"?

"AFTER MANY DAYS."

BY MARY A. LATHBURY.

There shall be an handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains: the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon.—Psalm 72:16.

A CHILD stood by the Eastern sea;
The dawn-light of the century
Lay radiant within his eyes
As flame within an opal lies.
And round his brows a nimbus played
That the ascending morning made.
A woman saw the light, and smiled,
And mused upon the prophet child;
But others said: "The dawn is gray,
And brings another sunless day."

The day unfolded like a flower
Above the boy, and brought the hour
In which an angel passing by
Dropped some strange seed, all brown and dry,
Into his small, unconscious hand,
Saying, "Go, sow it through the land."

He sowed it in the city streets,
Where wrong in deadly conflict meets
With righteousness. It sprung to life,
And in the pauses of the strife
Uplifted first the blade, the leaf,
And then the promise of the sheaf
That, ripening slowly through the years,
And harvested with toil and tears,
And half destroyed by craft and hate,
Was yet the seed that sowed the state.

These were the "years of the right hand
Of the Most High," and this the land—
The alpha of the states—that threw
A second banner to the blue;
And on its white folds, fair and plain,
Men read the righteous Law of Maine.

Along the line of rugged rock
That crowds to meet the breaker's shock;
Across the hills of singing pine;
Across the silent lakes that shine
Like sapphires on a silver thread;
Where great Katahdin lifts his head
To kiss the clouds: where men have wrought
The fortunes of the state from naught:
Where in a net of highways stand
The homes and cities of the land;
O'er inland fields and sunny isles,
The seed of God in fruitage smiles.

The seed was borne to other sod
By wings and winds prepared of God.
It sowed our battlefields; it fell
Where men had reared the gates of hell.
And women watched, through heat and cold,
Each heaven-planted seed unfold
And lift its little leaf and blade
In the spring warmth their love had made.
They fed and fostered it through years
With breath of prayer, and rain of tears,
Until the plains and mountains passed
It touched the circling seas at last.

And now? The breath of God has blown
The holy seed through every zone;
And royal men who breathe the breath,
And do the deeds that conquer death,
Are sowers going forth to sow
The seed of seventy years ago.

What of the child? Though he was born
At daybreak in the century's morn,
He lives to see its wheeling sun
Descend upon a victory won
For the round world. The golden light
About his head has changed to white,
And, like a "crown of glory," now
Rests on the Grand Old Man—Neal Dow.

New York.

NEAL DOW.

BY A FELLOW TOWNSMAN.

1804—1894.

Neal Dow was born March 20, 1804, in Portland, Me. He is a lineal descendant of John Dow, who died in Tyler, Norfolk county, England, in 1561, a grandson of whom, Henry, was the first of the family to come to America, settling in Hampton Falls, N. H., in 1637, where Neal's father was born in 1766. His parents were Josiah and Dorcas (Allen) Dow; the latter died in 1851 at seventy-five and the former in 1861 at ninety-five years of age. His father, as a young man, was a school teacher; entering the tanning business he accumulated a competency and was a highly esteemed and influential citizen of Portland. His longevity is hereditary, two of his ancestors having lived over a hundred, and several over eighty years. His family on both sides were Friends, which society he left before he was of age. He has never been connected since with any denomination, regarding religion more a matter of heart and life than of profession of faith.

Neal Dow, January 20, 1830, was married to Maria Cor-

NEAL DOW IN 1851.

nelia Durant Maynard. She died in January, 1883. The surviving children are Mrs. Louisa Dwight Benton, of Lancaster, N. H., Mrs. Emma Maynard Gould, of Conway, N. H., Frederick N. Dow, a prominent citizen of Portland, and Cornelia Maria Dow, who presides over her father's home.

He attended public and private schools in Portland and the Friends' Academy in New Bedford, Massachusetts. Leaving school when fifteen, he found employment in his father's business, but to indulge his taste for reading his pocket money went for books, and he then began to gather his library which compares favorably with most private collections. Through his life books have been his closest companions and choicest treasures, the Bible especially, a portion of which he has not failed to read daily for many years.

As a young man his vitality exhibited itself through athletic sports. He could ride, swim, row or sail a boat, box, fence and shoot as well as any of his companions, and the skill early acquired in some of these recreations has proved of service in not a few exigencies.

As a boy in the village debating societies and as a young man in the town meeting, he acquired facility in extemporaneous speaking; as an employer and as chief for years of a large volunteer fire department, an attractive field of usefulness to the young men of his time, he became accustomed to the command of men. Active as a Whig in the politics of his day, he was a frequent and acceptable speaker in the conventions and popular assemblages of that party. An earnest anti-slavery man, he became accustomed to the advocacy of an unpopular cause, strengthening the courage of his convictions by maintaining them in the face of all opposition.

Even before his majority his employments had become varied, and while yet young he was engaged in various business enterprises and rendering public service in several departments of the municipal government. For his time he was an extensive traveler, coming in contact with men as well in the lumber camps of Maine as in the larger cities in the country. Through the confidence of business associates in his judgment and integrity he was placed in the directories of banks, manufacturing, railroad and other corporations.

Through many and multiform occupations, he obtained experience, a knowledge of men and affairs, and, with a sound body, well stored mind and a self-respect, which his disgust for all that was degrading had preserved, he was early in life well equipped for the work to which so much of his after life was to be devoted. Later, at an age when most men are unequal to the hardships of army life, he volunteered in the war for the Union, serving as colonel of a Maine regiment, and afterward as brigadier-general of volunteers, was twice wounded in battle, and for many months a prisoner of war. Of his long, varied and eventful life much of interest might be told, but space permits only the most casual reference to his private activities and public services.

To Neal Dow world-wide, enduring fame has come through his long and self-sacrificing services for temperance. With his devotion to this he has allowed no personal interest to interfere. The present generation has little conception of the task which he undertook more than sixty years ago. It was to reverse a public opinion founded in the custom of centuries, and to change the policy of legislation touching the liquor traffic which had obtained for a period as long. A man with less than iron nerve and without an unconquerable will would have faltered before it. In the community in which Mr. Dow found his immediate field of labor, as everywhere else, intoxicating liquor was then deemed as indispensable to the health, comfort and happiness of man as flour. It was believed necessary to preserve the health of those who were well and restore that of those who were sick. Regarded as a gift from God, to refuse its reasonable use was considered a reflection upon the Almighty. It was as much a matter of course for employers of labor to furnish it to their employés as to pay them wages, and the town bell was rung twice daily, at eleven a. m. and four p. m., at the expense of the municipality, as a notice to laborers to take their dram.

The liquor traffic then constituted a large part of the business of Portland; her leading merchants were engaged in it, her wealthiest citizens had secured their fortunes through it. Authorized by law, it was a legitimate trade supplying an almost universal demand, it was sustained by an overwhelming public sentiment. Seven distilleries were run, often by night as well as by day, enriching their owners, indirectly paying dividends on wharf, shipping and other property, and furnishing profitable employment to many. The trade in liquor was as respectable as any other calling. No man lost caste in society or influence in state through connection with it, while the sale of liquor was deemed as consistent with Christian profession, and as appropriate to saintly life as dealing in Bibles and hymn books. To be lawfully engaged in it was a patent of respectability, the proper authorities having declared the licensees to be men of "sober life and conversation."

In the midst of such conditions, to declare the liquor traffic hurtful in effect and wrong per se was regarded as an insult to the intelligence and an impeachment of the integrity of most respectable citizens. To urge its suppression was to incur the hostility of leaders in every walk of life, to arouse the opposition of those who thought business would suffer thereby, and to lose the countenance of conservative citizens favorable to reform but opposed to going "too fast or too far." But convinced that no progress could be made while the liquor trade was legally considered necessary and respectable, Mr. Dow aimed to strip it of its legal indorsement, and to this end to convince the people that the trade was infamous, through exposing it as the prolific parent of poverty, misery and crime.

NEAL DOW AT NINETY.

It is impossible to follow him through this work; it covered years. He addressed the people in meetings large and small, traveling hundreds of miles each season in his own conveyance, over country roads, wretched with rocks and mud in summer, and well-nigh impassable with snow drifts in winter. No hamlet was so small or so remote that he did not reach it. He prepared and circulated petitions to the legislature for a prohibitory law, he looked up evidence of violations of existing license laws, forced unwilling officers to present it to grand juries, and to make a pretense at least of attempting to convict violators. Prosecuting officers, irritated by his persistency in this, insulted him in open court, sometimes bringing upon themselves the rebuke of the bench for so doing. He accompanied witnesses to and from the courts to protect them from personal danger from angry crowds avowedly gathered to mob them. In season and out of season, upon every available opportunity and reasonable pretext, whenever and wherever he thought it would aid his object, he proclaimed abhorrence of the liquor trade and his determination to suppress it and to oppose all those who supported or favored it.

HOME OF NEAL DOW.

He became the object of hostility in various forms. Incendiaries fired his buildings, rascals assailed his house with missiles, ruffians, hired and volunteer, attacked him in the streets, sometimes by day, sometimes by night, though always to their own discomfort. Nor was opposition of this kind the worst that he encountered. Boycotting as a term was then unknown, but it was resorted to remorselessly against all engaged in the work in which he was leader. Even temperance societies of the day formally disclaimed sympathy with his views. But undaunted, he kept on his course, convinced that he was making progress, perhaps slowly, but surely.

Again and again he appeared before a legislative committee with enormous petitions urging the adoption of prohibition, only to be repulsed. Now a committee would report unfavorably, then one house or the other would reject a favorable report, and again a governor would veto a bill which had passed both houses. After all such disappointments he appealed to the people, who, through action at the polls, manifested their determination that the liquor traffic should no longer be shielded by legislation, but should be outlawed as accursed.

In April, 1851, Mr. Dow was elected mayor of Portland by a larger vote than before given there to a mayoralty candidate. Though a nominee of the Whig party, his selection as such was in deference to the temperance sentiment of the community he had been instrumental in creating. Clothed now with the influence of official position, he again appeared before a legislative committee with the draft of a prohibitory law, pledging himself if this was enacted that within nine months the open traffic in liquor in the city of Portland should be annihilated. This pledge he subsequently amply redeemed. The bill was reported, passed both houses without change, and was approved by the governor, June 2, 1851, and has ever since been known as "The Maine Law."

In telegraphing the fact of the passage of the law to a friend, Neal Dow said, "The Maine Law, more than any other measure, will bless the people who adopt it." He has never lost faith in that prediction, and believes that time has amply justified it. No law ever attracted more attention. It changed the character of the temperance reformation and stimulated everywhere a demand for legal protection from the liquor traffic. The ablest lawyers attacked the law, but it successfully ran the gauntlet of the courts, and to-day most of the legislation of Christendom touching the liquor trade has borrowed features from it.

The enactment of the law and his successful enforcement of it as mayor of Portland, widened the field of Mr. Dow's influence and labors. It could not be otherwise than that the man who had had the talent to frame, and the courage to enforce the Maine Law, should attract great attention. Lawyers could not detect a flaw in a statute which had been drafted by a layman, and neither the threats of mobs, nor the more potent opposition of wealth and influence had prevented that layman from successfully applying the principle the courts had sustained.

In the spring of 1852 Mr. Dow was defeated for reëlection to the mayoralty, an event generally considered abroad as showing a reaction in the place of its birth against prohibition. But he had received a larger vote than the year before, and at home his defeat was attributed, by friends, to fraud. However this may have been, his defeat gave him leisure to respond to many of the invitations to speak, which poured in upon him from all parts of the country, and during the next few years he addressed large meetings in all the New England and Middle, many Western and some Southern states. Nor were his addresses confined to popular assemblies. By invitation he explained to the legislatures of several states the principles of prohibition, and urged its adoption. His services, given without money and without price, took him away from his family and business for months at a time.

In the spring of 1855, Mr. Dow was again elected mayor as the first candidate for that position of the then just organized Republican party, and again successfully enforced the law. During this year occurred the famous riot which was inspired by leading opponents of prohibition to break down the Maine Law and its author. But Neal Dow had faced the liquor traffic too long to be intimidated by any mob it could direct against him. He summarily suppressed the riot, but was severely criticized by the liquor interest and his political opponents. A trial followed, in which the late Mr. Justice Clifford, of the United States supreme court appeared against, and the late Senator William Pitt Fessenden for Mr. Dow, whose prompt acquittal followed. His action was also formally approved by a non-partisan investigating committee, appointed by the authorities. Two or three years after Mr. Dow was elected unanimously to the legislature, the withdrawal of all opposition to him being a tacit and courteous acknowledgment on the part of political opponents that he had been unjustly assailed.

NEAL DOW'S LIBRARY.

In 1857, and twice thereafter, at the invitation of the United Kingdom Alliance for the suppression of the liquor traffic, he visited Great Britain, and without compensation, devoted more than four years of time to the advocacy of prohibition before great audiences in every considerable city in the three kingdoms. It may be noted here that the present government of Great Britain is committed to the measure he then supported. It is doubtful if any speaker, not a professional lecturer for pay, has covered in his labors so large a territory. By far the larger part of his time and strength for more than forty years has been thus freely given, save only the three years which found him in the army during his country's peril. He is still the recipient of many invitations to address meetings far and near. Most of these during the few years past, he has felt compelled to decline, though during the last year he has frequently spoken at large gatherings, some of them in the open air, for two hours at a time, with all the apparent force of his younger days.

Through his long and active life he has shrunk from no exposure or danger that duty called him to encounter. He has been accustomed to great and prolonged physical and mental exertion, while care and responsibility in many forms have drawn unceasingly upon his vital forces, yet he carries the burden of his many years more lightly than do most who have only reached three score and ten. His mind, strong and alert, stored with his various experiences and enriched by the reading and observation of many years, is as deeply interested in current events as at any other period of the century, so much of which his active life has spanned, and to one of the highest phases of the progress of which he has contributed so large a part.

Neal Dow is still leading the movement which enlisted the strength of his youth. Since two generations ago he put his hand to the plow, he has not looked back. Whoever else has faltered, he has not wearied in well doing. Never underestimating the magnitude of the task before him, no success has elated and no reverse has discouraged him. For this reform, at ninety years of age, he is laboring with a hope and enthusiasm worthy of youth, the determination of mature life and the earnest conviction and calm faith of a ripe old age. But far down the western slope of life, he is looking with unwavering eye and treading with unfaltering step to the close which he knows is not far off, when he may say, "I have fought a good fight I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

Portland, Me.

NEAL DOW'S LIBRARY.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

The most interesting room in the Dow mansion is the library, a long, well-lighted apartment occupying the southwestern wing of the house. General Dow probably has one of the finest and largest private libraries in the state of Maine and he may be found there almost any time in the day. The General does not care much for fiction and there are not many books of that class found in his library. He says so many works of that kind are ground out nowadays that it is impossible to keep up with them all, so he prefers to leave them severely alone. History and biography are his favorites and his library is particularly rich in them. In one bookcase are about five hundred French books which Mr. Dow reads as readily in the original as in the English language. He is a splendid French scholar and thinks the language is delightful.

The time the General does not spend in his library he may generally be found in his study, occupying the eastern corner of the house. Here is where the writer found him one morning, seated at an old-fashioned desk with the cheerful sun shining in upon him and writing as actively as a man of thirty instead of being nearly three times that age. The General's study is a small room, large enough to hold the desk above mentioned, a few reference books and his invaluable collection of scrap books which he proudly displayed to the writer. These scrap books are worth more than their weight in gold, not only to the owner but to future generations, who are interested in the cause and history of the leader of the Prohibition party. This collection consists of twenty-two large volumes of five hundred pages, each numbered and bound neatly in morocco leather. In them the General keeps anything which relates in any way to himself or to his cause. Here are to be found souvenirs, handbills, invitations, autograph letters from some of the world's greatest celebrities, photographs, hotel bills, programs, menu, newspaper clippings relating to himself, editorial communications which he has answered through the columns of the papers, and in fact a perfect mine of wealth.

Reigate, Eng.

A SONG FOR THE NEW REVOLUTION.

BY KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

(Air:—"Yankee Doodle.")

O H, have you heard the glorious news
That's going round the nation,
From North to South, from East to West,
It sweeps o'er all creation;
Bells ring out the glad refrain,
Breezes tell the story,
Children's voices shout in glee,
While all hearts echo—"Glory."

Chorus.—
Glory, glory, praise the Lord;
Prohibition's dawning,—
Brave Neal Dow is prophet true
Of Prohibition's morning.

Just ninety years ago to-day
God sent him on his mission
To banish whisky from the land
And bring in Prohibition.
Ninety years of bravest toil;
Ninety years of daring;
Ninety years of faith and hope
And patient burden-bearing.

The record of those ninety years
Is wrought in history's pages,
'Twill bear his name o'er all the earth
Through all the coming ages.
Children's lips shall lisp his praise,
Fathers tell his story,
Mothers shall shed tears of joy;
And all hearts give him glory.

The seed he's sown is taking root,
The harvest is a surety;
This world shall captured be for God,
For temperance and purity.
When that glorious day shall dawn
We'll lift aloud glad voices
And shout, "Huzzah for brave Neal Dow!"
While heaven with earth rejoices.

Chicago, Ill.

THE MAINE LAW.

BY NEAL DOW.

The Maine Law was enacted on Saturday, May 31, 1851. It was the last day of the session of the legislature, which was Democratic, as were all its officers and the governor, who personally was in favor of license to grog-shops and opposed to prohibition; on these points he was pronounced. During the ten years of active and persistent stumping of the state, in every part of it, winter and summer, for the purpose of urging upon the people the fact that the liquor traffic was a deadly enemy to every interest of the state and people, public and private, we found everywhere that the Democratic party was thoroughly opposed to prohibition, so that the word Democrat implied a friend of grog-shops, or, at least, an enemy of prohibition. But personally, independent of party ties, there were a great many Democrats who were friends of temperance and prohibition and enemies of the rum-shop system.

It was by such a legislature that the Maine Law was passed through all its stages in one day, by a vote of eighteen to ten in the Senate and eighty-six to forty in the House, and it was approved by the governor on Monday, June 2. I believe in Providential interference in the affairs of men; how else can we account for the enactment of such a measure by such a legislature? The law overturned the settled policy of all the civilized world relating to the liquor traffic, which was in the condition of Cain after the death of Abel—everybody who saw it could slay it; it could claim no protection of law if held with intent to sell; it could be seized wherever found; it could be searched for as stolen goods wherever it was supposed to be, and, if found, it was to be seized and held to answer, and unless the claimant could show to the satisfaction of the court that it was not intended for sale, it was to be confiscated and destroyed.

No action could be had in any court for the recovery of liquors intended for sale, nor for the value thereof. All discretion was withdrawn from the courts in the administration of the law; no case could be continued for trial or for sentence, and the penalties of the law were to be imposed promptly, with no change or diminution by the courts. No alcoholic liquors could be sold lawfully in Maine, nor could any be transported except for medicinal and mechanical purposes and the arts. It was that amazing bill which passed a Democratic legislature in one day without any change or modification whatever.

There were many distilleries in the state, seven of which and two breweries were in Portland. This bill struck them all down and wiped them all out.

The telegraph spread the news through the country that Maine had outlawed the liquor traffic. The wires delivered it to Rev. Dr. Lyman Beecher at a prayer-meeting in Park Street church, Boston. The Doctor read it to the company and exclaimed: "Why, brethren, that hits the devil a stunning blow right between the eyes. Praise the Lord." The next day I met in the streets of Portland an importer of molasses on a great scale, the largest importer in the state. He said: "I'm glad your law has passed, though it will ruin my business."

"How will it do that?"

"My sales are almost entirely to distilleries, and your law will suppress them all."

"Yes, it will do that; but for every gallon of your molasses going to the distilleries two gallons will go into the homes of the people as an article of food and a luxury."

Before the year was out, my friend told me my prediction was verified; he had never before had so good a business year, though every distillery had been closed.

The railroads and the steamboats must, of course, suffer, as they supposed they would no longer have the transportation of liquors, which had always been a large part of their freight, but they found that for every barrel of rum which they had transported they had now two or three barrels of flour, pork, sugar, beef and other goods intended for families who formerly spent their money for drink. Liquors were seized at steamboat landings, at railroad stations, on trains transporting them at night, everywhere that they could be found.

A large quantity of them had accumulated at the police station in Portland; they were to be poured out through a trap leading into the main sewer. The Board of Foreign Missions was in session in the city, and many of its members and a crowd of citizens were in attendance. The first hogshead was rolled over the trap minus the bung, and it made a loud, gurgling protest at such treatment. A stranger was standing near the mayor, and said indignantly,

"What a shame!"

"What is a shame?" asked the mayor.

"Such a waste of property."

"It's very much as it used to be; formerly it went into the gutter, drunkard and all; now it goes into the gutter alone and the drunkard is a sober man. Isn't that better?"

"Ugh!" said the stranger, and turned away.

That was forty-three years ago; an entire generation has grown up in Maine never having seen a licensed grog-shop. The state is entirely changed in character; from being the poorest state in the Union it has become one of the most prosperous; it formerly spent in drink the entire valuation of all its property in every period of twenty years, as the nation is now doing in every period of thirty-five years; now one million dollars will far more than pay for all the liquor smuggled into the state and sold in violation of law. The state saves annually, directly and indirectly, more than twenty millions of dollars which, but for prohibition, would be spent, lost, wasted in drink, as in the old rum time. This great saving is added, year by year, to the accumulating wealth of the state, so that Mr. Blaine, at a great meeting in the City Hall, Portland, felt himself warranted in saying, as he did: "Maine is the most prosperous state in the Union." Before the Maine Law it was undoubtedly the poorest. The benefits and blessings, in many ways coming to our people from prohibition, are so great that they cannot be estimated by any mode of computation now known to us.

What! Is the liquor traffic no longer known in Maine? Yes, a small fraction of it yet lingers there upon the sly; it is in public opinion an infamous crime, made so by the law; it is in the same category with gambling houses, and with those that take hold on hell; wherever it exists in the state it leads a hang-dog life, like a mangy cur who has no master, and is kicked by every thoughtless boy he meets and cannot avoid.

But if the traffic is suppressed in the larger part of the state, why cannot the same thing be done in all its territory? That question is often asked by anxious friends, and tauntingly by others, unfriendly. The answer is simple: It is because of some defects in the law which its friends have not been able yet to amend satisfactorily, but which shall be accomplished in the near future. It is also because of what looks like corruption in some of our courts.

But then it seems by this account that "the law is yet a failure." That is what a great many most respectable and intelligent people say. I had a funny illustration of this a few days ago. A prominent citizen of Portland brought to my house and introduced to me a gentleman from the West, who was interested in the temperance question and wanted to find out all about prohibition. I asked him:

"How long have you been in town?"

"A week; I'm stopping at the Falmouth Hotel."

"Do they sell liquor there; have you tried them?"

"No; they say they keep no liquors; I have seen no signs of any."

"Have you tried elsewhere?"

"Yes; at the Preble House, with the same result."

"Have you tried any other place?"

"I tried at a druggist's shop, and had the same answer."

"Did you try anywhere else?"

"Yes, at a barber's shop. Barbers know everything that's going on in any town where they live, and I thought I'd find out what I wanted to know, and I asked one if he would please tell me where I could find some liquor, and he said he knew of no place where it could be had except at the agency, where it's sold only for medicinal and mechanical purposes."

"Well, what do you think of the law?"

"I think it is a failure."

"Now, you have been in town a week, and have tried your best to obtain liquor, and have not succeeded. Why do you think the law a failure?"

"I was at the park one morning, and saw a man lying upon the grass there drunk, with a bottle by his side, and concluded that the law was a failure."

"Do you know whether the man came from Boston in the early morning steamer, bringing the liquor with him, or that he obtained it in Portland."

"No; I know nothing of that."

"Well, this is how it is. The quantity of liquor now sold in Maine in violation of law is not one-twentieth of its former volume. In Portland, the largest city in the state, it is far within the fact to say that not one hundredth part so much liquor is sold now as before the law, and the city is twice as large as it was then. We think it a great success."

"I think it is a failure because liquor continues to be sold."

"Ocean steamship navigation is a wonderful success, though many steamships are lost every year. Ocean electric cables are a great success, though often out of order and refusing to work. Consumption is a fatal disease. but any remedy that would cure nineteen cases out of every twenty would be regarded everywhere as a great blessing to mankind, and no failure."

"But I think the Maine Law a failure," he reiterated.

The Maine Law is a great endeavor to deliver the people from the infinite sin, shame and crime of intemperance, which can never be accomplished except by the suppression of the liquor traffic, through which and by which all intemperance comes. It is wonderful to see how quietly and with what indifference the great body of educated men and of church membership look upon this struggle "between heaven and hell," with apparently no choice as to which side shall win. The liquor traffic is a tremendous power; its weight is all and always against the right and on the side of every wrong. It controls the nation, the states, largely the courts, and the churches, as a body, are silent, if not cowed in its presence. But for all that, as sure as God reigns, the right will eventually triumph. When that time comes, as come it will, I would not like to be one of those compelled to admit that this great triumph for God, civilization and humanity had been won with no help from me.

Portland, Me.

"We forbid the bans between rum, ~~and~~ religion and politics of every ~~sect and whatever~~ party and whatever sect; and in the name of God and Humanity, we proclaim a Union Holy and Indissoluble of affection as well as of interest! between Temperance, Religion and Politics of every party and every sect."

Neal Dow

The Original Maine Law.

AN ACT FOR THE SUPPRESSION

OF

DRINKING-HOUSES AND TIPPLING-SHOPS.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in Legislature assembled, as follows:—

SEC. 1. No person shall be allowed at any time to manufacture or sell, by himself, his clerk, servant or agent, directly or indirectly, any spiritous or intoxicating liquors, or mixed liquors, a part of which are spiritous or intoxicating, except as hereafter provided.

SEC. 2. The selectmen of any town, and mayor and aldermen of any city, on the first Monday of May annually, or as soon after as may be convenient, may appoint some suitable person, as the agent of said town or city, to sell at some central and convenient place, within said town or city, spirits, wines or other intoxicating liquors, to be used for medicinal and mechanical purposes and no other; and said agent shall receive such compensation for his services as the board appointing him shall prescribe; and shall, in the sale of such liquors, conform to such rules and regulations as the selectmen, or mayor and alderman, as aforesaid, shall prescribe for that purpose. And such agent, appointed as aforesaid, shall hold his situation for one year, unless sooner removed by the board from which he received his appointment, as he may be at any time, at the pleasure of said board.

SEC. 3. Such agent shall receive a certificate from the mayor and aldermen, or selectmen, by whom he has been appointed, authorizing him as the agent of such town or city, to sell intoxicating liquors for medicinal or mechanical purposes only; but such certificate shall not be delivered to the person so appointed, until he shall have executed and delivered to said board, a bond with two good and sufficient sureties, in the sum of six hundred dollars in substance as follows:—

[Know all men that we, as principal, and and as sureties, are holden and stand firmly bound to the inhabitants of the town of (or city, as the case may be,) in the sum of six hundred dollars, to be paid them, to which payment we bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, and administrators, firmly by these presents. Sealed with our seals, and dated this day of A. D

The condition of this obligation is such, that whereas the above bounden has been duly appointed an agent for the town (or city) of to sell within, and on account of said town, (or city,) intoxicating liquors for medicinal and mechanical purposes and no other, until the of A. D., unless sooner removed from said agency.

Now if the said shall, in all respects, conform to the provisions of the law relating to the business for which he is appointed, and to such rules and regulations as now are, or shall be, from time to time, established by the board making the appointment, then this obligation to be void; otherwise, to remain in full force.]

SEC. 4. If any person, by himself, clerk, servant or agent, shall at any time sell any spiritous or intoxicating liquors, or any mixed liquors, part of which is intoxicating, in violation of the provisions of this act, he shall forfeit and pay on the first conviction, ten dollars and the cost of prosecution, and shall stand committed until the same be paid; on the second conviction he shall pay twenty dollars and the cost of prosecution, and shall stand committed until the same is paid; on the third and every subsequent conviction, he shall pay twenty dollars and the cost of prosecution, and shall be imprisoned in the common jail not less than three months, nor more than six months, and in default of payment of the fines and costs prescribed by this section, for the first and second convictions, the convict shall not be entitled to the benefit of chapter 175 of the revised statutes, until he shall have been imprisoned two months; and in default of payment of fines and costs provided for the third and every subsequent conviction, he shall not be entitled to the benefit of said chapter 175 of the revised statutes, until he shall have been imprisoned four months. And if any clerk, servant, agent or other persons in the employment or on the premises of another, shall violate the provisions of this section he shall be held equally guilty with the principal, and on conviction shall suffer the same penalty.

SEC. 5. Any forfeiture or penalty arising under the above section, may be recovered by an action of debt, or by complaint before any justice of the peace, or judge of any municipal or police court, in the county where the offense was committed. And the forfeiture so recovered shall go to the town where the convicted party resides, for the use of the poor; and the prosecutor or complainant may be admitted as a witness in the trial. And if any one of the selectmen, or board of mayor and aldermen, shall approve of the commencement of any such suit, by indorsing his name upon the writ, the defendant shall in no event recover any costs; and in all actions of debt arising under this section, the fines, and forfeitures suffered by the defendants, shall be the same as if the actions had been by complaint. And it shall be the duty of the mayor and aldermen of any city, and the selectmen of any town, to commence an action in behalf of said town or city, against any person guilty of a violation of any of the provisions of this act, on being informed of the same, and being furnished with proof of the fact.

SEC. 6. If any person shall claim an appeal from a judgment rendered against him by any judge or justice, on the trial of such action or complaint he shall, before the appeal shall be allowed, recognize in the sum of one hundred dollars, with two good and sufficient sureties, in every case so appealed, to prosecute his appeal, and to pay all costs, fines, and penalties, that may be awarded against him upon a final disposition of such suit or complaint. And before his appeal shall be allowed, he shall also, in every case, give a bond with two good and sufficient sureties, running to the town or city where the offense was committed, in the sum of two hundred dollars, that he will not, during the pendency of such appeal, violate any of the provisions of this act. And no recognizance or bond shall be taken in cases arising under this act, except by the justice or judge before whom the trial was had; and the defendant shall be held to advance the jury fees in every case of appeal in an action of debt; and in the event of a final conviction before a jury the defendant shall suffer and pay double the amount of fines, penalties, and imprisonment awarded against him by the justice or judge from whose judgment the appeal was made. The forfeiture for all bonds and recognizances given in pursuance of this act, shall go to the town or city where the offense was committed, for the use of the poor; and if the recognizances and bonds mentioned in this section shall not be given within twenty-four hours after the judgment, the appeal shall not be allowed; the defendant in the meantime to stand committed.

SEC. 7. The mayor and aldermen of any city, and the selectmen of any town, whenever complaint shall be made to them that a breach of the conditions of the bond given by any person appointed under this act, has been committed, shall notify the person complained of, and if upon hearing of the parties it shall appear that any breach has been committed, they shall revoke and make void his appointment. And whenever a breach of any bond given to the inhabitants of any city or town in pursuance of any of the provisions of this act, shall be made known to the mayor and aldermen, or selectmen, or shall in any manner come to their knowledge, they, or some one of them, shall, at the expense and for the use of said city or town, cause the bond to be put in suit in any court proper to try the same.

SEC. 8. No person shall be allowed to be a manufacturer of any spiritous or intoxicating liquor, or common seller thereof, without being duly appointed as aforesaid, on pain of forfeiting, on the first conviction, the sum of one hundred dollars and the cost of prosecution, and in default of the payment thereof, the person so convicted, shall be imprisoned sixty days in the common jail; and on the second conviction, the person so convicted shall pay the sum of two hundred dollars and costs of prosecution, and in default of payment, shall be imprisoned four months in the common jail; and on the third and every subsequent conviction, shall pay the sum of two hundred dollars and shall be imprisoned four months in the common jail of the county where the offense was committed; said penalties to be recovered before any court of competent jurisdiction, by indictment, or by action of debt in the name of the city or town where the offense shall be committed. And whenever a default shall be had of any recognizance arising under this act, ascire facias shall be issued, returnable at the next term, and the same shall not be continued unless for good cause, satisfactory to the court.

SEC. 9. No person engaged in the unlawful traffic in intoxicating liquors shall be competent to sit upon any jury in any case arising under this act; and when information shall be communicated to the court that any member of any pannel is engaged in such traffic, or that he is believed to be so engaged, the court shall inquire of the juryman of whom such belief is entertained; and no answer which he shall make shall be used against him in any case arising under this act; but if he shall answer falsely, he shall be incapable of serving on any jury in this State; but he may decline to answer, in which case he shall be discharged by the court from all further attendance as a juryman.

SEC. 10. All cases arising under this act, whether by action, indictment or complaint, which shall come before a superior court, either by appeal or original entry, shall take precedence in said court of all other business, except those criminal cases in which the parties are actually under arrest, awaiting a trial; and the court and prosecuting officer shall not have authority to enter a nolle prosequi, or to grant a continuance in any case arising under this act, either before or after the verdict, except where the purposes of justice shall require it.

SEC. 11. If any three persons, voters in the town or city where the complaint shall be made, shall before any justice of the peace or judge of any municipal or police court, make complaint under oath or affirmation that they have reason to believe, and do believe that spiritous or intoxicating liquors are kept or deposited, and intended for sale, by any person not authorized to sell the same in said city or town, under the provisions of this act, in any store, shop, warehouse or other building or place in said city or town, said justice or judge shall issue his warrant of search to any sheriff, city marshal or deputy, or to any constable, who shall proceed to search the premises described in said warrant, and if any spiritous or intoxicating liquors are found therein, he shall seize the same, and convey them to some proper place of security, where he shall keep them until final action is had thereon. But no dwelling-house in which, or in part of which a shop is not kept, shall be searched unless at least one of said complainants shall testify to some act of sale of intoxicating liquors therein by the occupant thereof, or by his consent or permission, within at least one month of the time of making said complaint. And the owner or keeper of said liquors, seized as aforesaid, if he shall be known to the officer seizing the same, shall be summoned forthwith before the justice or judge by whose warrant the liquors were seized, and if he fails to appear, or unless he can show by positive proof, that said liquors are of foreign production, that they have been imported under the laws of the United States, and in accordance therewith—that they are contained in the original packages in which they were imported, and in quantities not less than the laws of the United States prescribe, they shall be declared forfeited, and shall be destroyed by authority of the written order to that effect, of said justice or judge, and in his presence, or in the presence of some person appointed by him to witness the destruction thereof, and who shall join with the officer by whom they shall have been destroyed, in attesting that fact upon the back of the order, by authority of which it was done; and the owner or keeper of such liquors shall pay a fine of twenty dollars and costs, or stand committed for thirty days, in default of payment, if in the opinion of the court said liquors shall have been kept or deposited for the purposes of sale. And if the owner or possessor of any liquors seized in pursuance of this section, shall set up the claim that they have been regularly imported under the laws of the United States, and that they are contained in the original packages, the custom-house certificates of importation, and proofs of marks on the casks or packages corresponding thereto, shall not be received as evidence that the liquors contained in said packages are actually imported therein.

SEC. 12. If the owner, keeper or possessor of liquors seized under the provisions of this act, shall be unknown to the officer seizing the same, they shall not be condemned and destroyed until they shall have been advertised, with the number and description of the packages as near as may be, for two weeks by posting up a written description of the same in some public place, that if such liquors are actually the property of any city or town in the State, and were so at the time of the seizure, purchased for sale by the agent of said city or town, for medicinal and mechanical purposes only, in pursuance of the provisions of this act, they may not be destroyed; but upon satisfactory proof of such ownership, within said two weeks, before the justice or judge by whose authority said liquors were seized, said justice or judge shall deliver to the agent of said city or town an order to the officer having said liquors in custody, whereupon said officer shall deliver them to said agent, taking his receipt therefor upon the back of said order, which shall be returned to said justice or judge.

SEC. 13. If any person claiming any liquors seized as aforesaid, shall appeal from the judgment of any justice or judge by whose authority the seizure was made to the district court, before his appeal shall be allowed, he shall give a bond in the sum of two hundred dollars with two good and sufficient sureties to prosecute his appeal, and to pay all fines and costs which may be awarded against him; and in the case of any such appeal, where the quantity of liquors so seized, shall exceed five gallons, if the final decision shall be against the appellant that such liquors were intended by him for sale, he shall be adjudged by the court a common seller of intoxicating liquors, and shall be subject to the penalties provided for in section eight of this act: and said liquors shall be destroyed as provided for in section eleven. But nothing contained in this act shall be construed to prevent any chemist, artist or manufacturer, in whose art or trade they may be necessary, from keeping at his place of business such reasonable and proper quantity of distilled liquors as he may have occasion to use in his art or trade, but not for sale.

SEC. 14. It shall be the duty of any mayor, alderman, selectman, assessor, city marshal or deputy or constable, if he shall have information that any intoxicating liquors are kept or sold in any tent, shanty, hut or place of any kind for selling refreshments in any public place on or near the ground of any cattle-show, agricultural exhibition, military muster, or public occupation of any kind, to search such suspected place, and if such officer shall find upon the premises any intoxicating drinks, he shall seize them, and arrest the keeper or keepers of such places, and take them forthwith, or as soon as may be, before some justice or judge of municipal or police court, with the liquors so found and seized, and upon proof that said liquors are intoxicating, that they were found in possession of the accused, in a tent, shanty or other places as aforesaid, he or they shall be sentenced to imprisonment in the county jail for thirty days, and the liquor so seized shall be destroyed by order of said justice or judge.

SEC. 15. If any person arrested under the preceding section and sentenced as aforesaid, shall claim an appeal, before his appeal shall be allowed, he shall give a bond in the sum of one hundred dollars, with two good sureties that he will prosecute his appeal and pay all fines, costs, and penalties, which may be awarded against him. And if on such an appeal the verdict of the jury shall be against him, he shall in addition to the penalty awarded by the lower court, pay a fine of twenty dollars. In all cases of appeal under this act from the judgment of a justice or judge of any municipal or police court, to the district court, except where the proceeding is by action of debt, they shall be conducted in said district court by the prosecuting officer of the government—and said officer shall be entitled to receive all costs taxable to the State in all criminal proceedings under this act, in addition to the salary allowed to such officer by law—but no costs in such cases shall be remitted or reduced by the prosecuting officers or the court. In any suit, complaint, indictment or other proceeding against any person for a violation of any of the provisions of this act, other than the first offense, it shall not be requisite to set forth particularly the record of a former conviction, but it shall be sufficient to alledge briefly that such person has been convicted of a violation of the fourth section of this act, or as a common seller, as the case may be, and such allegations in any civil or criminal process in any stage of the proceedings, before final judgment may be amended without terms and as matter of right.

SEC. 16. All payments or compensations for liquors sold in violation of law, whether in money, labor or other property, either real or personal, shall be held and considered to have been received in violation of law, and without consideration, and against law, equity, and good conscience, and all sales, transfers and conveyances, mortgages, liens, attachments, pledges and securities of every kind, which either in whole or in part, shall have been for or on account of spiritous or intoxicating liquors, shall be utterly null and void against all persons and in all cases, and no rights of any kind shall be acquired thereby; and in any action either at law or equity, touching such real or personal estate, the purchaser of such liquors may be a witness for either party. And no action of any kind shall be maintained in any court in this State, either in whole or in part for intoxicating or spiritous liquors sold in any other State or country whatever, nor shall any action of any kind be had or maintained in any court in this State, for the recovery or possession of intoxicating or spiritous liquors or the value thereof.

SEC. 17. All the provisions of this act relating to towns, shall be applicable to cities and plantations; and those relating to selectmen, shall also be applied to the mayor and aldermen of cities and assessors of plantations.

SEC. 18. The act entitled "an act to restrict the sale of intoxicating drinks," approved August sixth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, is hereby repealed, except the thirteen sections, from section ten to section twenty-two inclusive, saving and reserving all actions or other proceedings, which are already commenced by authority of the same; and all other acts and part of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed. This act to take effect from and after its approval by the Governor.

APPROVED, June 2d, 1851.

OPINIONS OF ADHERENTS OF PROHIBITION.

A "BLOCK OF TYPE."

How is it possible to express in a few sentences my appreciation of the noble, courageous, persevering work of Gen. Neal Dow? Most reformers are willing sheets of paper circulating widely the truths with which they have been impressed; Gen. Neal Dow is a block of type, and he has imprinted on the human race the eternal truth:

"Hereditary bondsmen, know ye not
Who would be free himself must strike the blow?"

When I was his guest at Portland I was deeply impressed by his gentle courtesy, his luminous intellect, and his elevated moral sense. The world is the better that he has lived. (CANON) BASIL WILBERFORCE.

Deanery, Southampton, Eng.

THE LAW MUST EDUCATE FOR ETERNAL JUSTICE.

I am a Prohibitionist and would close the dramshops because the universal experience of society is that their existence is a perpetual menace to the morals, health, wealth and happiness of the community. I would close them upon the same principle that I would quarantine smallpox; or fill a pitfall which jeopardizes the safety and lives of men; as we prohibit the carrying of concealed and dangerous weapons—not because of the abstract wrong but because of the perilous consequences which might result from doing so. It is no attack upon the personal liberty of any that we demand prohibition; public safety requires it; no man has a right to injure in order that he may have the will and make the opportunity. He has not the right. There is no power or government that can legally or justly give it to him. The supreme court of the United States, and the superior court of the common sense of justice have declared that a government or people have not a right to barter away their best and highest interests; hence all license or local option laws are unconstitutional and contrary to the very spirit and purpose for which governments are organized among men.

I would abolish the liquor traffic and make the saloon an outlaw because the law should be an educator for sobriety and temperance. A nation that will license and protect crime in any form, that will, by law, first tempt, then debauch, and slay, and sell its citizens for a revenue must suffer. When will the people learn that vice is an expensive and intolerable burden, that nothing is so fruitful of poverty and disease as national and individual sins. No amount of legislation on the financial question, neither a gold standard or bimetallism, high tariff or free trade will give permanent prosperity to a nation or people which habitually forgets to deal justly with one-half of its citizens. We must learn that justice, virtue, industry, economy and temperance with intelligence, make the best investment for a revenue for the government.

"Except the Lord build the city they labor in vain that build it," is as true as that men do not "gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles." It is no argument against prohibition that it will be sometimes disregarded; the same logic would repeal every law upon the statute books against evil. We have as yet never had the will of all the people expressed with authority at the ballot-box whether we will have prohibition by law and enforced by the will of God as voiced through the majesty of public opinion. When that day comes the voice of the people will be the voice of God. ZERELDA G. WALLACE.

Chicago.

AN ENGLISH LABOR LEADER'S TRIBUTE.

I have always looked upon Neal Dow as a most interesting personality, and one of the few brave men a century can own.

For vital, practical reform, he deserves to be ranked above most of the miscalled "great" statesmen, who, after all, never reach at the thralldom of men—whether poverty or passion.

His fight for prohibition marked an epoch in Democratic government, and placed the first effective civic power in the hands of the people. May his spirit and power stimulate us to remove the drink curse (one of the many curses of a diseased social organism) and also to remove the misery resulting from the vice of alcoholism.

BEN TILLETT.

Leytonstone, Eng.

HURRAH FOR MAINE'S PATRIOT!

The world takes off its hat to Neal Dow as he reaches his ninetieth mile-post. It is exceedingly appropriate that the hosts of temperance the world over should stand in review as he marches past. Here is health and long life to this valiant champion of cold water. Let total abstainers rejoice and prohibition exult on this anniversary occasion. We have a living embodiment of our principles before us. Our principles are true and righteous altogether. It was the drink that produced the woe, misery and mischief about him. He fought the traffic in intoxicating drink with all the impetuosity of his nature. He traversed the state of Maine from one end to the other, and sowed it "knee deep" with temperance literature until the sentiment was crystallized into law. There is no short cut to prohibition. It comes from an enlightened conviction of the people that the "entire suppression of the traffic would be of an infinite advantage to the nation and an incalculable blessing to the people." All honor to the "grand old man from Maine."

J. N. STEARNS,

New York City. Ex-Pres. Nat. Temp. Society.

IOWA WILL HAVE PROHIBITION.

Prohibition is doomed for the present in Iowa. The era of the Missouri compromise is here, and perhaps it is well. For years the treachery of the Republican party has been evident to all clear-sighted people. Their action is opening the eyes of all but the willfully blind, and the old battle, so well begun in 1875, will be renewed with the experience of these long years to direct and strengthen it, and can have but one ending—the prohibition of the liquor traffic with a Prohibition party to enforce the laws and help on the national struggle.

MARION H. DUNHAM,

Burlington, Ia. President Iowa W. C. T. U.

"THE PUBLIC NUISANCE" MUST GO.

The coming doom of the liquor traffic is written in characters of blood on the hearts and homes of the people, and they will soon be declaring, through their sovereign will at the ballot-box, that this curse of all curses must be prohibited, or (what seems to promise a more certain and effective remedy) this monster evil is to be annihilated as a public nuisance by the exercise of common sense through common law, which method is now fully confirmed by the decision of the highest tribunal in our land—the Supreme Court of the United States.

W. JENNINGS DEMOREST,

New York City. Member Nat. Pro. Ex. Com.

REPEAL THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE OR THE GIN-MILLS.

In the contest for prohibition forty years and more ago, it is a significant fact that the saloon, as a political power, was hardly mentioned or seemingly recognized. Because of the vast moral and industrial evils imposed by the liquor traffic, such leaders as Neal Dow, Abraham Lincoln, Horace Greeley, Henry W. Raymond, Henry Ward Beecher, Dr. John Pierpont, James Gordon Bennett, Lucy Stone and William Lloyd Garrison were sweeping the nation into line for prohibition, and had fourteen states redeemed from the legalized dramshop, when the more urgent, though no greater, issue of African slavery forced all other issues to the rear.

The moral and industrial evils of the liquor traffic have increased manifold since then. We have all the reason they then had for relentless war upon this curse. But, in addition, the saloons have in our day become an organized and arrogant political power, with its grip on both old parties, giving orders in legislative and congressional halls, dominating in caucus and primaries, and selling special privileges to corrupt moneyed corporations and trusts.

It is a reign of gin-mill statesmanship, and it is a struggle of far greater import to redeem this nation from the rule of the gin-mill than was the struggle in 1776 to redeem it from the rule of the king of England. Better a thousand times repeal the Declaration of Independence, burn up the Federal Constitution, and turn this nation over to England, than to turn it over to the gin-mills and the elements that are typified by the gin-mills. Better dismember the Union, state by state, than hand it over to the saloons. The fight which Neal Dow began it is ours to finish.

E. J. WHEELER,
New York City. Editor The Voice.

"GETTING ALONG."

Sir Wilfrid Lawson said in a recent address: "I will strike a balance sheet and see how we are getting along." What a "balance sheet" General Neal Dow could strike on his ninetieth birthday! A balance sheet covering the period of his active service would show a getting along in his "Pine Tree State," from a day when,

"Their only wish and only prayer
For the present world or world to come,
Was a string of eels and a jug of rum," to constitutional prohibition adopted by a majority of over forty-seven thousand.

It would show a "getting along" in the church from free drinks over the bar to all who attended the installment of Dr. Leonard as pastor of the First Congregational church in New Haven in 1825, to the declaration that "license high or low is a sin," adopted by the highest tribunal of the largest Protestant church in the United States.

It would show a "getting along" from the bottle on almost every sideboard to an army of white-ribbon housekeepers demanding home protection from bottle, barrel and bar-room. It would show a "getting along" from general ignorance on the question to scientific instruction in the public schools of nearly all the states of the Union.

With such a "balance sheet" the grand old hero can celebrate his coming birthday on Pisgah's top, viewing with eye of faith the promised land, and hailing the coming of the day when an American flag will no longer float over an American saloon, when an American citizen will no longer flaunt a government permit in the face of wronged womanhood and childhood, the glad day when universal prohibition will be the law of the land he has blessed by his life work.

GEO. W. BAIN.
Lexington, Ky.

POLICY STRONGER THAN EVER,

Very few reformers have been so staunch, steady and unflinching in proclaiming the truth as Neal Dow has been. He got hold of the truth which one of our medical papers declared the other day that it had arrived at, viz.: "That the cause of drunkenness is DRINK." Basing himself on this truth for the generations he has worked for the overthrow of drink. Of course the numerous people who love to "tinker at symptoms" rather than strike at causes have slighted and despised his efforts, but yet his policy is stronger to-day than it has ever been. Let us hope and trust that he may live to see it virtually triumphant on both sides of the Atlantic. At any rate on his coming birthday we can show how gratefully we appreciate his labors and honor his devotion to the cause of justice, progress, and humanity.

(SIR) WILFRID LAWSON.
Brayton, Carlisle, Eng.

FACT AND NOT A FANCY.

Maine and the world owe Neal Dow great gratitude for his noble pioneering into the sober kingdom—that he and his fellow workers have placed it on record as a fact and not a fancy that a community without intoxicating drink is more prosperous, safe, and level-headed than any other.

LAURA ORMISTON CHANT.
London, Eng.

WOMAN'S MUNICIPAL BALLOT AND PROHIBITION.

That the power of prohibition has been greatly increased by the woman's vote no intelligent person will deny. As soon as women became factors in elections, politicians grew immensely more careful what candidates they nominated for office, for only those pledged to sustain the prohibitory law, either by previous record or by character, could be elected. Women would not vote for known violators of the law. Because of their arrival at political power, a law was enacted, by which no druggist could obtain a permit to dispense alcohol as a medicine unless his petition was signed by twenty-five reputable women. In some towns women would not sign any petition for permits, and in all towns the number has greatly decreased. But municipal suffrage has but slight power, compared with county and state vote, in enforcing a state law. When women reach these, prohibition is assured forever.

SOPHIA F. GRUBB,
Ex-President of Kansas W. C. T. U.
Kirkwood, Mo.

LICENSE UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

All saloon licenses are unconstitutional, unpatriotic, ungodly and barbarous, and the courts of last resort will before very long so declare—and thus prohibition will triumph, the saloon will go down and out forever, our homes will rejoice and be glad. May God hasten the day! And no one will be entitled to greater credit for this result than our brave old leader, Neal Dow.

JOHN P. ST. JOHN,
Olathe, Kan. Prohibition Presidential Candidate.

THE AMERICAN GLADSTONE.

I reverently join in the many noble tributes which will grace the anniversary of Gen. Neal Dow. My father, many, many years ago worked by his side. For ninety years he has lived, a mighty vindication of sobriety, bravery, nobility and Christian virtue. As citizen, reformer, soldier and statesman, he ranks without peer. He is the Gladstone of our best American doings.

Had he devoted himself to the popular and truculent element in American politics, the little general would have been taller in history than any man the Pine Tree State has produced.

Friend of the widow and orphan, father of Prohibition, orator and battle-scarred veteran, mayor of Portland, humanitarian and disciple of Christ, all these, ninety years old, and not a spot upon the bright escutcheon of thy grand aggressive years! God bless thee, and spare thy life to see the Christian men of America sane on the temperance question.

(REV.) H. A. DELANO, D. D.
Evanston, Ill.

ONE OF ENGLAND'S LEADING PARLIAMENTARY ADVOCATES.

A few lines, indeed, expressive of my appreciation of Neal Dow and his work in the world—a few reams would not do it. His line is gone out through all the earth, and his words to the end of the world! I won't begin, lest I should never stop. All I can say is that there is no speech nor language where his voice has not been heard.

W. S. CAINE.
London, Eng.

CONTRIBUTES TO HAPPINESS AND PROSPERITY.

I have carefully noted the result of the "Maine Law" with its various amendments from the first enactment, and have no hesitation in saying it has always contributed largely to the happiness and prosperity of our state, and in proportion to the promptness and fidelity with which it has been enforced. It is well enforced, except in the cities and larger towns, where it is at times, and might always be enforced.

HIRAM KNOWLTON.
Portland, Me.

THE OUTLOOK TO-DAY.

As our majestic monument of reform, Gen. Neal Dow, approaches his ninetieth birthday, he may thank God that his life has not been thrown away in the grandest reform the world has ever reluctantly acknowledged. A wonderful impression has been made on the thought of the world during the past fifty years. Drunkenness has almost disappeared from the pulpit and liquor-drinking church members are in the minority to-day. The twentieth century will either witness the divorce of the Christian church from the saloon or the present church will be swept out of power by the followers of Christ. The night of political immorality reigns to-day in church and state alike, but the morning cometh.

Reforms fight their way against the windmills of prejudice, superstition and political hatred, and then the world wakes up and quickly embraces the new faith. God grant that this most devilish system of human bondage shall perish soon in this beloved country, already stained with the blood of millions of murdered victims.

A. G. WOLFENBARGER,
Member Nat. Prohibition Committee.
Detroit, Mich.

ONE OF THE PIONEERING FEW.

I am glad of an opportunity to express my thanks for the immense services rendered to the cause of temperance by Gen. Neal Dow. He has held aloft the true ideal of national life—total freedom from the desolating and depraving influence of strong drink; and though men question the completeness of his success, it is undoubted that he is one of the brave, pioneering few who make sure paths for those who come after them. Long will the fruit of his work abide and be reproductive.

J. CLIFFORD, D. D.,
N. Kensington, Eng. Pastor of Baptist Church.

"MERCY AND TRUTH HAVE KISSED EACH OTHER."

I think that the proper observance of Neal Dow's ninetieth birthday will give to many a better knowledge of his life and characteristics than hitherto possessed. They will learn that he was a good soldier, that he has fine literary tastes, that he is a strong advocate of woman's suffrage, that he is not by any means a "one idea man." It is my privilege to live so near him that I see him very often and so know him very well, but one day not long ago I had a new glimpse of his character which deeply interested me. His daughter, Cornelia, and I were attending a convention together and stopped at the same hotel. One morning she handed me a postal card which she had received from her father. It contained a line about the time of her return, but the larger part of it read: "The squirrel is gone again. Shall we not try to catch him so as to give him a warm home for the winter? I do not know where he can find a warm place for himself." Cornelia explained that the squirrel presumably came up from "Deering's Oaks," the park where Longfellow played when a boy, and to which he so feelingly refers in his poem, "My Lost Youth." The next day the postal card from General Dow contained these words: "The squirrel has returned, well and bright. Saw him this morning—not frightened—found many nuts—came up to the window for them."

I asked her to give me the cards, and while I have many letters of his, and various documents, I prize none so highly as this token that this great man had in his soul that element of righteousness which regardeth even the life of a squirrel. I believe in some future day the grateful children of a nation redeemed from the blighting curse of the liquor traffic will erect to his precious memory a monument as grand as any ever dedicated to freedom's cause.

L. M. N. STEVENS,
President of Maine W. C. T. U. and Portland, Me. Rec. Sec. of Nat. W. C. T. U.

MAINE SPEAKS AGAIN.

In the country towns prohibition has been generally enforced to their great advantage. They once abounded in signs of poverty. To-day, after forty years of the Maine law, no part of the United States or any other country surpasses, and few equal, the signs of prosperity in the state of Maine. Our schools, churches and colleges are of the best, and our villages are the prettiest in the world; public libraries are numerous and much frequented, but of visible saloons there are none. All this good fortune could not have been without the Maine law, and in it all Neal Dow has been the principal factor, deserves the chief credit, and is held in highest respect in the state where he has lived all his life.

ASA DALTON, Rector St. Stephen's Church.
Portland, Me.

ANOTHER MAINE TESTIMONY.

The state of Maine stands a beacon light to the world to-day. Temperance sentiment is in the very air. Its people are rooted and grounded in the Maine law and prohibition, which to them is as steadfast and enduring as their granite hills. Its true representative is a temperance man or woman.

Maine stands against the world to-day for no liquor; all that wealth, eloquence, intrigue and boasting from "over its border" can do has not been able to overthrow its temperance laws, its God-given prohibition, while realizing, too, that eternal vigilance must be the price of its continued success. Gladly do we lead the world in doing honor to the venerable father of the Maine law—Hon. Neal Dow.

HELEN B. C. BEEDY.
Bangor, Me.

THE POWER OF INDIVIDUALITY.

Why is it that Maine has not to-day a single distillery, a legal saloon, a single whisky sign over her stores or rum advertisement in her newspapers? Why have thousands of the little children of the Pine Tree State never seen a drop of whisky or a single intoxicated person? Why is he who sells even a drink of rum within the bounds of the state, arrested like a forger or a highway robber when brought to justice? Why? Because one man, Maine's "Grand Old Man," once said that such things should or should not be; and meant what he said, and worked for it. Maine, as well as New York, has a statue of Liberty, hers being the individuality of Neal Dow.

One feels honored by having a worthy namesake; and the Pine Tree State has Neal Dow to thank that a prohibitory law, wherever it is spoken of or about to be enacted, is called "the Maine Law." And there are few, if any, commonwealths where such a law could not be passed and enforced, provided one strong character were willing to throw his whole life into the task. It was Neal Dow that gave Maine her world-famed law. "One with God is a majority." HANNAH J. BAILEY,

Nat. Supt. of Peace Dept. of W. C. T. U.

Winthrop Centre, Me.

HAS ENRICHED THE STATE.

I remember very vividly the time when General Dow commenced his crusade, the indignation his conduct aroused, inciting even mob violence. His efforts resulted in the enactment of the well-known "Maine liquor law," in its character sternly prohibitive. At first this law encountered violent opposition, affecting jurors to the extent that verdicts of "guilty" were hard to obtain, even when the evidence was clear and overwhelming. The enforcement of the law created a public opinion in its favor, so that for the last twenty-five years the majority in our state favorable to it has been constant and very large. Our people could not now be persuaded to repeal it. Where it has been persistently enforced it is the strongest, and has proved a great success. In certain cities where it has been neglected, and thus brought into contempt, its benefits are not of course so apparent. Outside of these few localities, it has practically stopped the sale of intoxicating liquors. It has saved thousands of men from drunkard's graves and thousands of homes from destruction. It has immensely increased our prosperity, multiplied the savings of our workingmen and added immeasurably to the sum of our comfort and happiness.

WM. P. FRYE,

Portland, Me. Member of Congress.

ANOTHER VOICE FROM MAINE SAYS: "IT DOES."

In my opinion the operation of the prohibitory law in Maine has been in every respect advantageous to the material welfare of the state. Wherever the law is thoroughly enforced, and it can be wherever the intention so to do exists, in my judgment it contributes not only to the moral welfare but to the material advantage of the public.

Rockland, Me. C. E. LITTLEFIELD.

A WOMAN'S GRATITUDE.

After thirty-five years of work in the temperance cause I unhesitatingly say that the prohibitory law of Maine has been of great moral and financial value to the state. Although the opponents of prohibition declare it does not prohibit it is true that in large towns liquor is sold but not openly) public sentiment is so opposed to the traffic that in no less than one hundred and fifty towns it cannot be found, whereas before the passage of the law it was sold in every country store. After a trial of forty years the voters of Maine were so impressed with the good effect of prohibition that by a two-thirds vote, irrespective of party, it was made a part of the constitutional law of the state. The women of Maine thank God for Neal Dow.

ANN F. GREELEY,

Ellsworth, Me. Secretary for local W. C. T. U.

LICENSE VS. PROHIBITION.

License and prohibition are both set forth as remedies for the acknowledged evils of the liquor traffic, and the claim is made that each will reduce these evils to a minimum.

License has had a fair trial in this country—with the support of law, officers and majority of public opinion. Under these best conditions, license has failed to accomplish anything on which to base the claim made for it as a reformatory measure.

Prohibition has never had a fair trial in any state, because opposed by the following forces:

1. The attitude of the general government.
2. The attitude of political parties dominated by saloon influence and votes.
3. The treason of sworn officials who betray the law at the bidding of the lawless.
4. The inertia and cowardice of the moral elements of citizenship that allow these wrongs to exist without rebuke at the ballot box.

It is time prohibition had chance for success because under worst conditions it has established its claim as a remedy, and does cure both the moral and political crimes which license allows and fosters.

Proof of these propositions can be found by a fair consideration of the two methods as they have been applied.

In seeking the truth it is not fair to compare a prohibition state making its unequal fight with the forces above enumerated, with an ideal state where, obedient to law, nobody drinks and nobody sells; there is no such state, and will not be while human nature remains as we know it.

The only just judgment is to compare the prohibition state with the state under the best form of license, and ask this question: Does prohibition, with all that opposes it, begin to do what license fails to do? And is the tendency of the principle in law, if backed by executive fidelity, toward the cure of the evils growing directly from the liquor traffic? There is but one answer to these questions which can be accepted by honesty and intelligence.

Prohibition breaks the guilty partnership of the state with the traffic, and puts the law against the lawless; it puts out the fires in distillery and brewery, and, in spite of official treachery, blots out a large percentage of the saloons, and makes of the rest hunted outlaws already under condemnation.

License does none of these things, but throws the purple of law over the shoulders of the assassin of the Republic, and gives him place where rulers sit.

If prohibition is thus potent, why should it not succeed? The answer of history is this: It succeeds towards the ultimate ideal in the hands of the sturdy and faithful. Behold—Maine! It fails among political tricksters and traitors. Behold—Iowa! MARY T. LATHRAP, Jackson, Mich. Pres. Mich. W. C. T. U.

THE CAUSE OF GOD, AND GROWING.

The cause of total abstinence and prohibition is the cause of God. We have a Captain who never lost a battle, and the final triumph and success of our cause is assured; and the time is coming in which a man would no more be allowed to sell strong drink as a beverage than he would be allowed to sell clothing infected with the smallpox. While it is still true that "the harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few," yet in my lifetime, which spans a little more than half of that of Neal Dow, I can look back and see that great progress has been made. I bid the friends of our great cause be of good cheer. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." In no place in the country is the cause of temperance and total abstinence more marked than in the capital of the nation. It was no uncommon thing twenty years ago to see intoxicated members on the floor of the House and Senate. I have not seen one such in the five years I have been here, and I am sure there is less and less drink being used in the hotels and public places. And the list of total abstainers is yearly growing larger, showing the progress of our cause. Again I say to our brethren and sisters, be of good cheer.

ELIJAH A. MORSE, M. C. from Mass.

Washington, D. C.

A SUCCESS IN NORTH DAKOTA.

North Dakota has, perhaps, the best soil of any state in the Union in which to develop the principle of prohibition. Ninety per cent of her people live upon farms. No great cities exist in which social abscesses of any alarming size can form. Her inhabitants are young, active and intelligent. Her foreign population is largely of Scandinavians, who are strong believers in temperance reform. It is not strange, therefore, that when coming into the Union as a state we inscribed upon our constitutional banner the word "Prohibition."

Four years of trial have convinced all reasonable, and many unreasonable, people of the correctness of the principle. The isolated "blind pig" is occasionally found rooting around in some back street, but the open saloon as a system has gone—let it be hoped—forever.

Gen. Neal Dow, we come and present this state, with its present fortunate condition to you, as one of the stars in the diadem with which a grateful people propose to crown you on this, your ninetieth anniversary. You were indeed father of the prohibition thought, and fortunate beyond measure are you, in thus living to see the fruitage of your labors. Hail, mighty Chief! May scores of years yet be yours to enjoy, and may your eyes never close in death until the last vestige of the saloon power shall be driven from our land. CHAS. A. POLLOCK.

Fargo, N. Dakota.

PROHIBITION IS JUSTICE TO THE YOUNG.

Gen. Neal Dow was certainly an ideal reformer,—clean physically and politically as well as morally. His work in Maine was so well done that even the corrupt politician of our day has been unable to overthrow it. In discussing the prohibition of the liquor traffic I fear that many of our friends overlook one of the gigantic wrongs that flow from it, to wit: the robbing of the boys and girls—the children of the land—of the inherent right of a fair opportunity in life. They are not only robbed of parental care and affection, but are robbed of proper food to make them physically strong, of proper care and raiment to make them physically clean and healthy, of proper opportunities for school to develop them intellectually and morally; of the social opportunities that round the rough points and put a polish to the crude production. This is a greater robbery than that of the millions of money squandered, because it underlies the most sacred right of the natural citizen.

Alliance, O. L. B. LOGAN.

OVERTHROW GOVERNMENT PROTECTION OF RUM.

The alcoholic drink traffic was primarily intrenched in our national institutions in 1862, as the basis or cornerstone of our national revenue system, to which the state license systems are corollary. This fact constitutes the specific liquor question of to-day. It is impossible to make headway against the rum power until its national intrenchment is overthrown. The local option policy, whether by town, county or state, is simply the old-time policy of "squatter sovereignty" in modern disguise, and under it we are intrenching rum in its strongholds, and exhausting temperance energy by concentrating it on minor points of vantage. Let us follow Neal Dow's lead all through, and we shall prove him Salvator—Prophet of the Republic! ALLEN B. LINCOLN,

Hartford, Conn. Editor "New England Home."

MY TWO ARTICLES OF FAITH.

I BELIEVE that the prohibition of the liquor traffic by the national government will do more to hasten the coming of the reign of Jesus Christ on the earth than the fulfillment of any other social or political dream now under discussion by the vanguard of the hosts of reform.

I BELIEVE that we shall obtain prohibition and gloriously enforce it very soon after we obtain equal suffrage for women with men. Therefore I regard the late woman suffrage victory in Colorado as the greatest Prohibition victory in twenty years. LOUIS ALBERT BANKS, Prohibition nominee for governor of Massachusetts.

Boston, Mass.

PROHIBITION IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The first law ever enacted in New Hampshire was one to regulate the sale of liquor. The first Prohibitionist on record was an Indian chief, and the common drink of the first governor was cold water. The present prohibitory law was enacted in 1855, the year before the Republican party was organized in this state, and signed by a Democratic governor. By not forbidding the manufacture, as well as the sale, that law nursed a viper in its bosom. The two leading parties are so evenly matched that the balance of power is held by the rum vote. As a result, neither party dares allow its officials to enforce the law, as a rule, even when the burden of prosecution is borne by private individuals.

Like David before Goliath stands the Prohibition party, hated, feared, despised, abused, to be a member of which one needs a face of flint and backbone like a crowbar. As a buffer to this party a state temperance union was organized a dozen years ago by Republicans.

Ex-Governor Goodell, a good man, is now at the head and under his lead a league has been organized for the enforcement of the law; but the average man in the pulpit and the rumseller vote the same ticket. To say that in the face of all these difficulties about one-third of our towns are free from the sale of liquor, is to say that prohibition is a great success in New Hampshire.

GEO. D. DODGE,

Hampton Falls, N. H. Ex-Member of Congress.

STRONGER FAITH.

My faith in prohibition for state and nation grows stronger with each year's experience. With woman suffrage and as good laws in every state as Kansas has, with a man in each like Neal Dow or John P. St. John, the liquor traffic would soon be a thing of the past.

MRS. R. G. STUBBS,

Sterling, Kan. Member State Prohibition Committee.

POLITICAL ECONOMY AND PROHIBITION.

I hold it one of the profoundest lessons the world is learning that the temperance reform is more than a matter of sentiment, or a question of partisanship; that it is rooted in some of the deepest and most abiding principles of natural, physical, moral and political law.

If, as the greatest French writer on economic science has said, "political economy and law underlie one another," it follows that whenever any element or influence enters life and the state to paralyze energy, to impair morals, to decrease production, to render distribution unfair, to destroy credit, to pervert desire, to banish the spirit of thrift and to waste capital, political economy should find some law to eliminate that element or influence, and to protect life and the state from its baleful effects. The liquor traffic is precisely such an element or influence—paralyzing, damaging, destroying. Political economy, for individual welfare and national prosperity, must meet it by and through some underlying law. National prohibition is that law—the only law that logically meets the case, the only law applicable to the liquor traffic which is closely in correlation with the natural laws of human life and social ethics, the only law concerning the liquor traffic that can stand the tests of applied political economy and wise statesmanship. A. A. HOPKINS,

Harriman, Tenn. Amer. Temperance University.

(Concluded on page 10.)

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
MANAGING EDITOR—MARGARET A. SUDDUTH.
OFFICE EDITOR—MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—JENNIE A. STEWART.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS { LADY HENRY SOMERSET. MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Secretary.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.
President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, "After Many Days," By Mary A. Lathbury 2
Neal Dow. By a Fellow-townsman 2
Neal Dow's Library. By Frances E. Willard 3
Poem, A Song for the New Revolution. By Katharine Lente Stevenson 4
The Maine Law. By Neal Dow 4
The Original Maine Law 5
Opinions of Adherents of Prohibition 5-7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Prohibition as a Principle 8
The Provinces of Gospel Temperance and Prohibition 8
The Licensed Saloon from an Economic Standpoint 9
Local Option Versus Prohibition 9
THE WATCH TOWER 9
Opinions of Adherents of Prohibition, Continued 10
Railroad Ties. By John G. Woolley 10
Poem, General Neal Dow. By A. A. Hopkins 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.:
Burma—W. C. T. U. Movements in India 11
World's Wave Crests 11
CANADIAN FIELD:
Temperance News from Across the Border 11
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Colorado—Tennessee 12
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES 13
TREASURER'S CORNER 13
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS 13
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, When Whisky Reigns No More 14
The Little Home Protector. By Ada M. Melville 14
AUNT JANE'S COZY CORNER:
Soft-Shelled Nuts 14
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

PLEDGE.—"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquor, as a beverage, including Wine, Beer and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same."

I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have no other gods before me.—Ex. 20:2, 3.

PROHIBITION AS A PRINCIPLE.

The principle of prohibition is older than Mt. Sinai. It dates back to the dawn of history, and to the cradle of the human race. Man's earliest record places him under a prohibitory law; a law which was only an outward manifestation of the eternal principle that, through the avoidance of evil, he must seek the attainment of good.

We come down through the ages and we find everywhere this principle working in the Divine economy. Man must achieve good through knowing and shunning evil. He must evolve righteousness through the voluntary rejection of unrighteousness. Thus, eight-tenths of the Decalogue consist of prohibitory laws.

History shows that this has been the method found necessary in human law through all the ages. Read our own statute laws to-day and see how largely they consist of prohibitions. Men are not told what they must do in order to become true, virtuous, happy citizens; but they are told what they must not do. A reward is not placed as an incentive before the man who does not steal; but a punishment is placed, as a determent, before the man who does.

Everywhere the path of citizenship is guarded by a line of "shalt nots," the overstepping of which brings upon one the swift penalty of a violated law.

It is true that Christ came with no stern prohibitions; that He uttered no "shalt nots." His mission was to "fulfill the law"; in other words, to fill it full of the spirit which should make possible the obedience of that law. Men point with a triumphant air to this fact in Christ's ministry, as if it alone were sufficient to do away with the force of all arguments in favor of prohibitory law. They forget that "the law is a school-master to bring us to Christ"; and that until the grand consummation of moral education be attained, the office of the school-master must remain in full force.

Everywhere, in our code of living, men recognize the twofold necessity of laws to forbid, and incentives to inspire. The working of righteousness furnishes its own incentive in the glad apprehension of the soul that righteousness is the better part, but until each individual comes into that apprehension there must be, side by side with the incentive, the prohibition.

Men recognize this everywhere except in the matter of applying the principle of prohibition to the legalized sale of intoxicating liquors; there they tell us prohibition is contrary both to Divine law and to human expediency.

Men may be forbidden to steal, but that which largely inspires theft cannot be forbidden. Murder must bear upon it the brand of a national prohibition, but the sale of that which causes nine-tenths of the murders of our land is, in no sense, a national matter.

The state must hedge about its citizens from possible danger on all sides save one; but upon that side, not only must the path be left open and unimpeded, but there must be allowed free course for a mighty torrent of evil which sweeps men to eternal ruin by its resistless force.

Is there any reason why, in the case of the liquor traffic as in all other evil, the human prohibition should not be joined with the Divine?

Ought it not to be true that, in this case, also, the wholesomely enforced law is the school-master which is to bring the world to the Christ-plane?

What else so hinders the stately steppings of Christ's kingdom as the law-encircled, though lawless saloon? Can Christ's kingdom be built up in a world where the saloon is recognized as an integral part of the social economy? Does not the very existence of the legalized liquor traffic set aside the fundamental principles of that kingdom? Can one love his neighbor as himself while he passively suffers to exist aught that could hurt or destroy in God's holy mountain—His created universe?

Can an institution, the perpetuity of which depends upon the twin evils of appetite on the part of the victim and greed on the part of the victor, be overthrown by any other method than the bringing in of another force as victor? What is that force save the consensus of public opinion wrought into the framing and enforcement of law?

No Prohibitionist seeks prohibition as an end; it is the means to the attainment of an end. The Decalogue itself is but a ladder by the rounds of which men are to ascend into the glorious liberty of the children of God; but until wings become a fixed fact in our evolution, a ladder is a most necessary factor in all human ascent.

The day is coming when, as the ceremonial law was swept away by the bringing in of a better covenant, so the Decalogue shall have no need of existence because there shall be nothing in the nature of man to correspond with its prohibitions. But, until that day shall dawn, revelation, reason and experience unite in affirming that the principle of prohibition is a divine principle, and they who are working for its enforcement against all forms of evil everywhere, are working in harmony with the trend of the eternal purpose.

THE PROVINCES OF GOSPEL TEMPERANCE AND PROHIBITION.

Some time ago a subscriber accused us of having deserted prohibition and gone over to "namby-pamby gospel temperance." It is of course possible and not uncommon for persons to keep entirely quiet concerning an unpopular phase of a subject and dwell wholly upon another phase concerning which all men are agreed. This is perhaps what our friend supposes we have done. Nevertheless, her way of stating the case indicates a real and quite common confusion of thought.

"Gospel temperance" and prohibition, "moral suasion" (in whatever form) and prohibition can never be set over against one another as alternatives. It is utterly illogical to attempt to choose between them as methods of dealing with the rum curse, for they pertain to essentially different aspects of the question. Prohibition is solely a question of law, and gospel temperance has nothing, can have nothing, whatever to do with law. We may believe thoroughly in gospel temperance, and hold any conceivable view concerning what should be the attitude of the law. In the last analysis, the gospel of Jesus Christ is our sole dependence to banish evil from the earth, and therefore it is our constant duty to preach that gospel to every creature.

But no one for a moment supposes that we are in the meantime to dispense with the "thou shalt not" of the law against crime. Yet while every one will accept this statement without dispute, there are many who fall into precisely this most illogical error in their treatment of the particular subject in hand. The man who stays at home to pray on election day is as criminally negligent of duty as the man who stays home from prayer-meeting to read the newspaper. Prayer can never be a substitute for action when action is possible. "Why cry ye unto me? Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward," said Jehovah to Moses. It is blasphemy to pray for protection from the liquor curse and yet make no effort to overthrow the liquor traffic. Of that blasphemy the W. C. T. U. is guiltless. Neither does our organization undervalue any method by which the inebriate may be reclaimed and the young saved from falling. Its educational, evangelistic and other departments, with their magnificent achievements, prove its appreciation of all these means, but it does not for one moment suppose that all of them put together can form a substitute for aggressive action against the saloon as a political power.

The question can therefore never be prohibition or education, prohibition or gospel temperance. Prohibition is entirely a question as to how the law shall treat the liquor traffic and must be compared with other legal measures. Moral suasion, of which gospel temperance is but a form, belongs to the side of the question which pertains to the drink habit, and it is from looking at the question from this side alone, from the early view that there was no other side, that the present confusion of thought has arisen. The mistake was not an unnatural one.

The truth which the failure of merely total abstinence efforts taught is that the saloon is the most terribly aggressive business on earth. In the fierce competitive warfare which we call modern civilization, the man who in any line of business undertook simply to supply a need with no effort to create that need would be doomed to utter failure, and no enterprising business man fails to press, by all kinds of devices, his wares upon the public. But in the shrewdness, unscrupulousness and success of his methods the saloon-keeper stands par excellence far in advance of all others. Walk the streets of our cities at night, what are the brightest, most attractive places that meet your gaze? No one will hesitate to say the saloons. In them light, warmth, music, flowers, social enjoyment combine to draw irresistibly homeless young men from their dreary rooms in comfortless boarding-houses.

We go before a city mayor with a petition eighty thousand strong for the enforcement of the laws actually existing against the liquor traffic. He coolly informs us that he considers his duty fulfilled if he sees to it that the Sunday trade is carried on through the back door instead of the front, and superciliously asks how many of the eighty thousand petitioners are voters. We make strenuous efforts to get the police to arrest those who are breaking the law, they snap their fingers in our faces and we are forced to organize citizens' leagues to do the work for which these guardians of the peace are hired. With great difficulty we secure the arrest of a flagrant breaker of the law only to learn that the courts are all but in league with the enemy, that our case is hopeless unless we are prepared to meet enormous expense, and even then, the merest legal quibble will suffice to defeat us. We go before legislatures, state and national, asking for protection from the assaults of this arch enemy of our homes. But the liquor traffic has been there before us. The legislators tell us unequivocally that they owe their positions to the votes of liquor dealers and they dare not meddle with the business. Or they ignore our petitions altogether, and affect great contempt for women who have "left their sphere."

We go to the conventions of the great political parties, beseeching them in the name of "God and Home and Native Land" to take up our cause. We are treated with scant courtesy and one party, to allay any uneasiness on the part of its liquor dealing constituency that our visit may have caused, and at the same time maintain its high moral character in the eyes of its respectable followers, declares that, while as the party of moral reform it is deeply interested in the temperance movement, it considers that the other issues which are pressing for settlement are of so much greater importance that it dare not jeopardize them by taking up at present the temperance question. It then clinches the nail by a temperance resolution less strong than similar ones previously passed by a liquor dealer's convention. The other great party consistently declares itself unalterably opposed to all sumptuary legislation.

The truth which these facts bring out and which it behooves the Christian people of this nation to recognize, is that the liquor traffic is less a trade for selling liquor than an organized institution for making drunkards, and that it has chained municipal authorities, courts, legislatures and political parties to its chariot wheels. Education and gospel temperance are invaluable instruments to use when we are dealing with the actual or possible victim of the drink habit. They sustain just the relation to the drink trade that they sustain to the trades of piracy, highway robbery and murder. We are far enough from the ultimate victory; we have had some skirmishes with the enemy, the shock of the battle is yet to come, but one thing the W. C. T. U. has done, it has found where the enemy is. Henceforth we waste no ammunition on dummies erected to deceive us. Yes, the W. C. T. U. has indeed gone into politics, because the enemy is there and we must fight him where he is, not where he is not. We have gone into politics and we have gone there to stay. Legal prohibition is the ultimatum.

LOCAL OPTION VERSUS PROHIBITION.

Two circumstances, besides the situation in Iowa, just now bring the method of dealing with the liquor traffic by local option to public notice. One of these is the recent great ovation at Covent Garden, London, in the interest of the Direct Veto which it now seems probable will soon become the English and Australian mode of regulating the dramshop.

This will be a long step ahead for the British, incomparably better than anything they have hitherto evolved for restricting public houses. While American temperance people are almost as much interested in the success of their bill as the English themselves, we know they pursue the ignis fatuus of our long tested and found wanting local option, and that this method, at best, will be but the educator of John Bull in the futility of any means for the suppression of the liquor traffic that fall short of absolute prohibition, with a party behind it to enforce it.

The last assertion finds proof in the fact that a contest is now in progress in the Mississippi legislature for state prohibition, pure and absolute. This is significant because Mississippi boasts the most rigid local option law that has ever been enacted, and sixty-six out of seventy-five counties enjoy all the prohibition local option can furnish. Local option, too, has been tried there since 1880, though the present state law was an offspring of the legislature of 1892; probably half the area above referred to had driven out the rumshop long before under an old right of petition given to counties.

Besides protecting the interests of the temperance people in most of its provisions as faithfully as local option is capable of doing, the Mississippi law afflicts the liquor dealer most grievously; the state tax is probably the heaviest the saloon pays in America, ranging from six hundred dollars in a village to two thousand dollars in a city; yet any town or city may add to it ad libitum, provided the additional tax be not less than twenty-five per cent of the state tax; no debt for liquor is recoverable by law, nor are notes for it collectable; the business can be carried on only in the front part of the dramshop, and no coat of paint on windows or flimsiest screen may protect the drinker at the bar or hide the orgies of the place; games of no kind can be allowed on any part of the premises covered by the license; no solicitor or drummer for whisky is permitted in a dry county; any violation of the law vacates the license, and the holder cannot recover his license money, and there are other heavy penalties.

Yet the Prohibitionists of Mississippi are not happy, and have a resolution before the legislature for a prohibitory amendment—to be submitted to the vote of the people. They give as a reason that "the time has now come when the inherent error and insufficiency of local option and the delusive fallacy of non-political prohibition, must be plainly understood by the people at large."

Some of the weaknesses of a local option law are patent to the most indiscriminating observer, such as the anxiety and expense of perpetual biennial elections at the call of liquor or temperance, as either sees its opportunity; the unending warfare caused by contiguous whisky and prohibition areas; the eternal vigilance necessary to keep down the eternal lawlessness of the saloon; and the unequal conditions of the contest—prohibition ever defending its life against an outlaw, mounted and armed, by order of the government.

But there are graver errors which court public investigation and judgment. First, local option, in its origin, made no higher claim than to be a compromise, proffering to prohibition and the saloon equal chance of life according to the will of the majorities. It is in no sense a prohibitory law, but cries to the people: "Whom will ye that I release unto you, License or No-license,"—and the alternative is always license.

In making such a law the government shifts its own responsibility to the shoulders of the people, transfers the lawmaking power to them (contrary to the letter and spirit of the constitution) and makes them bear the expense of doing what they have already elected and paid legislators to do.

When prohibition threatens, local option is always the resort of the politicians to hold the liquor vote, and the choice of the traffic itself for a protracted life. By it the voice of the majority fixes the moral quality of the act and decides that it is right for one community to be half or whole drunk and for another to be half or whole sober.

But the deadliest sin of local option is that it substitutes expediency for the "Shalt Nots" of God's law. It trains a people in the damning doctrine that the end justifies the means. It bewilders the moral sense with its makeshifts until the startling spectacle is seen of church dignitaries leading its battles. If the shepherd's voice calls in false notes how shall the sheep know whom to follow?

The verdict of majorities has no cleansing power to make black white. The voice of the people will never be the voice of God till the will of God has become the will of the people,—and this can never be while right and wrong are variable quantities in the great equations of law,—which some of the temperance people are trying vainly to solve under the inconstant and inconsistent rule of local option.

THE LICENSED SALOON FROM AN ECONOMIC STANDPOINT.

Chicago being a representative city, its efforts in the line of municipal reform possess more than a mere local interest. The official investigation into its financial and economic conditions now in progress furnishes a lesson in municipal financiering which other cities may profit by and which the country at large will do well to ponder.

To the popular mind a question of money is of more importance than a question of conscience—in fact, the shortest way to the conscience of the average American citizen of to-day is through his pocket, and without doubt a financial "showing" is the best method at the present time of arresting thought in a city of money-worshipers. We rejoice, therefore, that the search-light is being turned on and the more so because we realize that prohibition doctrine has nothing to lose but everything to gain by a "figuring up" of profit and loss under the present financial policy.

The "reform" under the present mayor's administration has progressed thus far: A list of the city employés, with their salaries, has been published by order of the council in the daily newspapers, and the new comptroller has submitted to that body estimates in detail of the amount necessary to carry on the city government. According to his report, over sixteen million dollars will be needed to maintain the several municipal departments for the year 1894. Of this sum the boards of education and public library, which are only partially dependent on the council, receive about six and a half million, leaving something more than nine and a half million to be expended for the city government proper.

To Prohibitionists the significant point of interest in Chicago's financial status is the fact that although the city has been "run" for so many years under the popular high license system it is to-day, says its comptroller, "wofully behind in meeting its just obligations" and has "no means available to pay debts contracted." With its seven thousand saloons, each paying a license of five hundred dollars, the city government is forced to "constantly anticipate its receipts," is unable to pay its employés promptly (which is "demoralizing in its effect upon the men") or to make the best terms with contractors, and is compelled to "purchase materials and supplies of current operations on time," which means at the highest market price. In short, the report declares, "the best interests of the city are held in jeopardy by its objectionable financial tactics."

Under the existing order of things the city has two chief sources of revenue, property taxation and saloon licenses. The former covers about one-half of the amount needed to keep the government machinery in motion. The other half comes from saloons and miscellaneous sources. Liquor licenses for the present year are estimated at $3,266.846.70, and the estimate of expenses for the police department alone foots up to $3,721,810, which is considerably over one-third of the total for corporate purposes.

Political economists do not hesitate to state that eighty per cent of crime and pauperism is chargeable to the saloon. The press and the police service itself likewise testify to its productiveness as a breeding place of lawlessness and anarchy and no one will deny that the seven thousand saloons of Chicago add enormously to the expense of its police department. When to this are added the funds necessary to purchase sites for and erect station houses, jails and charitable institutions (of which the comptroller makes no estimate because with one exception,—a police station for which an appropriation of $8,000 was made last year—no additional ones are to be built this year), together with the numerous miscellaneous expenses which are the direct and indirect results of the drink traffic, it is safe to say, that as a financial investment for the municipality the licensed saloon is a miserable failure. The "gain" from that source, if it were possible to accurately compute it in dollars and cents would be "nowhere" compared with the loss.

Instead of being, as is claimed by high license advocates, a source of revenue, the liquor traffic is the greatest existing drain upon the city's resources. We state it mildly when we say that for every dollar it puts into the treasury it draws out two. On the eighty per cent basis it is no exaggeration to say that for every dollar put in it draws out four. Certainly on this basis it is not unreasonable to conclude that if the liquor traffic were entirely abolished within the corporate limits of Chicago, the expenses of city government would be reduced to a sum sufficiently small to be covered by property taxation.

To all who are willing to be convinced, official figures prove that while the liquor business piles up wealth for whisky trusts and saloon-keepers, it never fails to impoverish the city or state which fosters and protects it under a license system, however "high."

Dr. Anna Shaw says that whether women are statesmen or not it is generally conceded that they have considerable gumption and that the way women would manage the liquor traffic would be to find out what liquor dealers didn't want done and promptly go and do it. Men on the contrary seem to find out what liquor dealers want done and do it. This may be very fine statesmanship but it's awful poor "gumption." Every consideration of morals, religion and "gumption" demands the total prohibition of the liquor traffic.

***

Dr. Talmage affirms that men talk more gossip over their cigars in one evening than women in twenty years do over their tea-cups.

***

Miss Willard furnishes the following account of the occasion which led to the creation of the famous Maine Law:

"There was a certain Portland citizen who occupied a government position and who was addicted to periodical intemperance. One evening his wife came to the young Neal Dow, who was even then a power in temperance circles, and told him that her husband was at a certain saloon, and that if he was absent from his duty on the morrow he would surely lose his position. Would Mr. Dow go after him and try to induce the rumseller not to sell him any more liquor? Mr. Dow found him in the saloon and said to the proprietor, 'I wish you would sell no more liquor to Mr. B.'

"'Why, Mr. Dow,' said he, 'I must supply my customers.'

"'But,' was the reply, 'this gentleman has a large family to support. If he goes to his office drunk to-morrow, he will lose his place. I wish you would sell him no more.' The rumseller became angry at this and said that he, too, had a family to support, that he had a license to sell liquor, and he proposed to do it, and that when he wanted advice he would ask for it. 'So you have a license to sell liquor?' said Mr. Dow, 'and you support your family by impoverishing others. With God's help, I'll change all this.' He went home fully determined to devote his life to suppressing the liquor traffic. 'The Maine Law,' says he, 'originated in that rumshop.'"

***

Miss Clara Barton has asked to have the famous World's Fair Columbian Caravels turned over to her and the proceeds from the exhibition of them at different places will be used to relieve the sufferers on the sea islands. Would that some such good use might be made of these antiquated war vessels.

***

It will be remembered that three weeks ago these columns reported an interesting incident of the conversion of a German saloon-keeper in Iowa, and the burning of his liquor and saloon paraphernalia in the presence of the entire population of the little town, the school being dismissed so that the children might be witnesses of the impressive object lesson. The item was extracted from the daily papers and there was just a little doubt that it might turn out to be a little less genuine than it appeared on the surface. Hence we are delighted to be able not only to confirm the report but to furnish to our readers a letter from this honestly converted ex-saloon-keeper. We make no alterations whatever but give it just as it was written to a good woman who had often prayed with him in the county jail:

WELLMAN, IOWA, Janury 28, '94.

DEAR FRIND:—I Received yours of 26 and Was Glad to here from you. Well I have fange (changed) my Way of live and think I Will Stay that Way I Feele like a New man I and my Wife and one of my Girels (girls) jind meten (joined meeting) and Wee live habey (happy) and Guit (get) a longe Nice But the Folks thiges I Woulte Not Stick to it But I Will Show them I hat Truble a Nuff in my live time you Now that as Well as I can Tell you I am in Buger (butcher) Bisnes Now and Duing Well and Get over have of the Trate in Wellman. Now I got me a Good Buger he is from Ills, he is a Good Boy his mother is Witter (widow) and Belonges to the church and he is going to jine in a Shorte time. I think I will see you Befoure long than I will Call and See you my best Regardes to you all and to all the Boyes in jale you Tell them in the jale to look up to God and he Will help them I now it

HENRY GLIDER.

The sincerity of this man's conversion cannot be questioned after reading his simple, trustful letter. The "I now it," gives the keynote. May the good Lord ever keep him!

ON DUTY.

(Continued from page 7.)

PRESENT SAFETY AND ULTIMATE JUSTICE.

Prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is the only safety to any people from the immeasurable curse of intemperance. It is the only position as to the liquor traffic that insures ease to the conscience of the individual. All policies which violate the dictates of the educated and enlightened conscience, are wrong and doomed to overthrow. The prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, whatever may be thought of its practicability. violates the conscience of no one, and saves the people of the state or nation from untold misery, does injury to no one, hence it is right.

All enlightened nations are tending toward prohibition. Every successive year increases the stigma which attaches to liquor selling. This is simply the advance of prohibition. Every agitation of the restraint of the sale of intoxicating liquors in any community, whatever the apparent results, is an onward movement for prohibition. Reforms never go backward. I. A. PICKLER,

Member of Congress from South Dakota.

Washington, D. C.

IOWA TESTIFIES.

I have been in the fight against the saloon since 1856, and was the author of the constitutional amendment passed by our eighteenth general assembly. I know much of the benefits of prohibition to the people of the state and regard the efforts of politicians to repeal or annul our prohibitory statute as a most villainous conspiracy against the best interests of the people of Iowa.

Polk City, Ia. J. A. HARVEY.

STAND BY THE FAITH.

I am proud to put my name on record in favor of the "great movement" for prohibition in state and nation. I am the wedded friend to the W. C. T. U. and have greater faith in its workings to accomplish actual and complete prohibition than all other means yet adopted, and I am always willing to follow when and wherever good women lead. JOHN T. TANNER,

Chairman Prohibition Committee of Alabama.

Athens, Ala.

LET THE NATIONS REVERENCE HIM.

Yes, with uncovered head would I stand with a multitude to pay the warmest tribute of the heart to the man who, grasping the beginning of the century's chain in one hand, reaches forth with the other for its ending with no greater ambition than to see the star principle to which his life car has been hitched, the star line by which his course has been divined, enthroned in all governments—for the light and guidance of generations to come across the most dangerous seas which the advancing columns of civilization have confronted. Let the young of the nation behold the power of a great principle to make a great man! J. H. SOUTHGATE.

Durham, N. C.

CANADA TESTIFIES FOR PROHIBITION.

In reading reports of the evidence given before the Canadian Royal Commission, the past year, concerning the value of the Canada Temperance Act, it has been amusing to note the anxiety of the liquor sellers to prove that it is useless as a prohibitory measure. "The Scott Act," they declare, "has never stopped the sale of liquor and can never be enforced." If this is their honest conviction it is pertinent to ask why, invariably, they do their utmost to prevent its adoption?

The government returns for 1889 are significant. In that year eleven of the eighteen counties of Nova Scotia had adopted the Scott Act, while only seventeen of the thirty-eight counties of Ontario were under prohibitory law. The per capita consumption of liquor for that year was about one and three quarter gallons in the former and over four and one-half gallons in the latter province. Still more striking is the fact that, in the same year, while the province of Prince Edward Island was entirely under the Scott Act, its per capita consumption of liquor, for all purposes, was less than three-fourths of a gallon, while in British Columbia, then entirely under the license system, it ran up to over ten gallons!

Verily, prohibition does prohibit, and loyal temperance workers should rest content with nothing short of stringent prohibitory laws which should be rigidly enforced.

ELLA F. M. WILLIAMS,

President Canada W. C. T. U.

Montreal, Canada.

KANSAS SAYS IT IS A SUCCESS.

Five things are necessary. We must believe in it, work for it, vote for it, pray for it, and "last but not least," KEEP AT IT.

Kansas has tried prohibition for more than a dozen years, and while its thorough enforcement has been hampered by the treachery and unfaithfulness of public officials, we point with pride to the statement of the Brewers' Journal, that the sales of beer have fallen off from 32,000 barrels in 1880, to 2,050 in 1891. Revenue reports show a similar reduction in the sale of spirituous liquors. The people of Kansas know when they have a good thing, and they propose to stand by prohibition. Neal Dow is the father of statutory prohibition. May he live to celebrate the victory that shall come in the opening of a new century. A. M. RICHARDSON,

Lawrence, Kan. Prohibition Nominee for Governor.

MAINE AGAIN UPHOLDS.

To those who remember Maine before the enactment of the Maine law there can be no question as to the benefits which this state has derived from prohibition. Except in a few of the larger cities, open rum-selling with its attendant evils has been almost entirely unknown since 1851. Public sentiment has repeatedly and overwhelmingly sustained prohibition at the ballot-box whenever assailed in Maine, and to Gen. Neal Dow justly belongs the honor and credit of having originated and constantly upheld it on every occasion. R. W. LORD.

Kennebunk, Me.

HAS INCREASED PROSPERITY.

There is the entire absence of drinking places in towns where before the days of prohibition from three to twenty dram-shops existed in each. Thrift has taken the place of squalor, the condition of the people has improved, good order exists at public gatherings, general sobriety prevails and the number of paupers has decreased, a large number of towns reporting none. Thousands of men who would drink if dram-shops were conveniently accessible, now refrain almost entirely.

NELSON DINGLE, JR.,

Washington, D. C. M. C. from Maine.

THE SALOON A MODERN DELILAH.

Four decades of legislation have settled, beyond cavil, two things. First, the easiest, cheapest and most effective method of suppressing the drink traffic and its thousand attendant evils is prohibition. Second, the easiest, cheapest and most effective method of raising revenue from the weaknesses of our people, without in the slightest degree lessening the evils of the drink traffic, is license.

So thoroughly effective is prohibition as a means of suppressing the saloon that, in localities where the law is openly violated within prohibition states, it will be found that criminals are in office, and the church is as silent and almost as impotent as the mummy of centuries ago.

Sometime we are going to learn that the saloon is the Delilah by which the church is being shorn of its power; sometime labor will learn that it is the saloon that absorbs the fruits of her toil; and when that time comes a twelve-month will be sufficient time to sweep from our land the infamous traffic by state and national prohibition.

Aberdeen, S. Dak. S. H. CRANMER.

IOWA W. C. T. U. TRUE.

No state and no women more earnestly call to-day for our prayers, sympathy and help than Iowa and its W. C. T. U. Supposed friends of righteousness have doffed their masks and stand forth anti-prohibition advocates. The old parties are vying with each other in effort to destroy the prohibitory law, and to sign the death warrant of Iowa's children through license, or (to the uninitiated) its less hideous counterpart—tax.

Iowa, that scarce a decade ago adopted constitutional prohibition by nearly thirty thousand majority! Iowa, whose electors, incensed by the hiding of the people's will beneath judicial ermine, enacted a prohibitory statute, stands before the world a dishonored spectacle, condemned by her own acts. But there are more than Gideon's three hundred left; more than seven thousand that have not bowed the knee to that Baal. The Prohibition party and the W. C. T. U. have been tried as by fire; they "have been sifted as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet not the least grain has fallen to the earth." All hail courageous souls who cry, "compromise avaunt!" and wield boldly "the sword of the Lord" and of prohibition.

MARY A. WOODBRIDGE,

Chicago. Cor. Sec. Nat'l W. C. T. U.

PROHIBITION OR NATIONAL DESTRUCTION.

The necessary antagonism between civilized society and the drink traffic brings on the inevitable and irrepressible conflict. The American Republic must destroy the liquor traffic or the traffic will surely destroy the republic.

How may our battle be successfully fought? It would seem that in any country where the will of the people makes the laws it must be

1, Agitation,—the education of the republic. 2, Organization,—putting the public opinion formed into position for action. 3, Legislation,—the will of the people expressed in law There is nothing but this that the traffic really fears. 4, Enforcement,—and here the long pull of the whole struggle surely comes.

Ravenna, O. S. W. MEEK.

RAILROAD TIES.

BY JOHN G. WOOLLEY.

"It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord,"—and a good time—when we stand beside the King's highway and cheer the most desperate optimist of the century entering his "nineties" with swinging arm and springing instep, a white rose in his buttonhole, a white glory on his temples, a white life in his veins, in his wake a white record, and hard by, ahead to the right, God's great white throne.

Neal Dow is his own celebration. Eulogy would be inane; he lives to see his native state his personal monument and his own soul's travail coined into millions of poor men's savings, fast locked away for wife and child and creeping age, in honest banks that rose upon the ruins of saloons.

Let us silently salute this modern Arnold Winkelreid who cried, "Make way for liberty!" and lives to see it.

. . . . . .

Let us give thanks!

For seven states—not won but winning—dim but sure pleiades among our stars—Kansas holding hard against the muddy wash of party politics, and Iowa that sheds perfidy like a swan's wings the wave.

Georgia's southern cross of one hundred and seventeen clean counties and Massachusetts safe to enter the twentieth century without a lawful drink shop.

. . . . . .

For the church's renaissance of "works," to chasten but steady and complement an over-polished heirloom "faith."

For womanhood's sweet, sad exodus into the open with a challenge to every enemy of God and home and native land.

For the confusion of tongues in the Godless Babel in the District of Columbia.

For Colorado, where the hand that rocks the cradle bears the sinews of the state.

For Eli Ritter, the pertinacious Indiana lawyer, who carried two Marengoes to the supreme court and got them changed into one Waterloo which breaks the heart of the saloon and brands it "outlaw" and "attaint" wherever civic virtue lifts its hand.

For the Prohibition party stunted and storm-cleft but holding the brute idiot Caliban till Prospero comes to tame or slay him.

For the white ribbon silently and graciously weaving forever into the warp of state and church and school and home the face of Jesus Christ, the human soul's true lover and the human hand's true friend.

The time is long to wait, but "God inhabiteth eternity." Forward!

En route near Blanerhasset's Island, Feb. 9, 1894.

GENERAL NEAL DOW.

BY A. A. HOPKINS.

Our older Gladstone! Hail to him,
Whose life is rounded as the rim
That rounds complete the century!
Upon his brow its glories be,—
The crown of manhood kingly bright
With royal daring for the right!

His rounded cycle grows complete:
How far have walked his patient feet
Since it began!—how bravely they
Have borne him on his rugged way,
Since our old century was young,
And listened to his prattling tongue!

Brave Century! Brave Citizen,
Who wielded tongue, and sword and pen,
To smite the Wrong; whose gallant cheer
Men heard and followed, year on year,
As at the front their flag he bore
And struck for truth all else before!

God send the David now we need,
As true of heart and brave of deed
As he who, when his heart was young,
To fight the Giant gladly sprung;
Nay, more,—a million Davids bring,
With each his courage and his sling!

Beside His brook, for age and youth,
God's pebbles wait of mighty truth;
The arm of man is needed still
To wield them with His mighty will,
As Giant Wrong defiant stands
And mocks us with unholy hands.

Be kind, oh, white-haired Century,
To him who once was young with thee!
Deal gently with him as he goes
With thee to peaceful, sweet repose;
And may thine eyes to slumber sink
Ere he earth's Lethe draught shall drink!

Harriman, Tenn.

World's W. C. T. U.

MOTTO: "For God and Home and Every Land."

OBJECT: To unify the methods of woman's temperance work the world over.
BADGE: A knot of white ribbon.
HOUR OF PRAYER: Noon.
METHODS: Agitate, educate, organize.
DEPARTMENTS: Preventive, educational, evangelistic, social and legal.
THE POLYGLOT PETITION has been circulated throughout the world and signed by representatives of over forty countries. It asks for the outlawing of the alcohol and opium trade and the system of legalized vice. The chief auxiliaries of the W. W. C. T. U. are the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Australia, South Africa, India, Japan and the Sandwich Islands.

BURMA.

LETTER FROM A MISSIONARY TEMPERANCE WORKER.

Our Burman society is kept up with no loss of interest or numbers. Our English speaking society is yet young, only recently entered upon its second year. They plan to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the Crusade by a public evening meeting.

So far as I know, all of our missionaries in Burma are total abstainers in full sympathy with the work of the W. C. T. U. Total abstinence is, I think, almost unknown among the English here. There may be a few total abstainers. If so it is not generally known. The subject of temperance is an unpopular one.

Many of our Burman men are being ruined by the drink habit and among the natives of India in this land, intemperance is almost universal.

The scholars in our mission schools and Sunday-schools are being well drilled in the principles of temperance and we hope becoming firmly established in them.

Our great hope is in work for the young. I think if the Burmans had it in their power to vote away the saloon, they would do it. Remember us in your prayers.

Maulmain, Burma. ELLEN E. MITCHELL.

W. C. T. U. MOVEMENTS IN INDIA.

I wonder if the twentieth anniversary of Crusade Day was observed in Japan. If not, then we in Calcutta were probably the first to begin the prayer and praise of that occasion. Our meeting was held at eight a. m., on the 23d. The special topic laid on hearts was the need of a home in which to receive the poor little girls who are being rescued through the activity of the recent purity movement in and about Calcutta. They cannot be received in mission girls' schools or orphanages, and a new Home must be established. We prayed earnestly that the Lord would send or show us the woman who could take the charge of such a Home, and send the means. The superintendent must be a woman who understands the Bengali language, and is thoroughly acquainted with the people and their ways.

I am trying to stir up the W. C. T. U. women of Calcutta, as soon as the rush of the holiday season is quite over, to make an effort to organize unions in several suburban towns near Calcutta. Unions organized by friends from Calcutta will have a much better chance of success than if I, as a stranger, go among them and organize. Some of the arrangements are already made for two places, and I hope within another month to have something to report.

I have met Mrs. Ganguli, and a few evenings since I addressed about a thousand of the people of the Somaj of which she is a member. It was an enthusiastic meeting, and I hope that a total abstinence society may result, but the members of these Somajs are so proud of their passive stand on temperance that it is very difficult to persuade them that any active work is necessary among themselves, and the caste feeling keeps them from having any responsibility in regard to others. I am to go to an entertainment at Mrs. Ganguli's to-day to meet Messrs. Wilson and Pease of the opium commission and others.

The India union is bringing in results both in English and native communities, and will give the W. C. T. U. in some places a welcome, that would be impossible without the entering wedge of the India union.

Now I must write to you that in April at the close of a year of work, as president of the W. C. T. U. for India, I shall be obliged to give up and return to America. I have taken passage for myself and daughter on the "Oceana," April 7, from Bombay. I am very sorry to leave the work just now, but duty to my daughter requires it. She is not ill, but so far from robust that her whole future health and happiness depend on a change from this climate before another hot season. We hope to spend a little time in France, so cannot tell just when we may reach the United States. I have been spending a month in the temperance work in this part, but shall return to Lucknow in two days in connection with the temperance work in the Northwest provinces.

During March I shall travel from Calcutta to Bombay, organizing unions if possible, at several of the stations on the route.

Dr. Bushnell and Mrs. Andrew left Calcutta yesterday for Burma. We greatly enjoyed the short visit with them; they are both in good health and spirits. No public meetings were held for them here as curiosity regarding their work of two years ago in India is still too high, and the temptation to print scurrilous articles about them would have been too great for some of the Indian-English newspapers to resist, had our dear ladies appeared in public meetings. The articles could not hurt them; but they would prejudice many against our W. C. T. U. work.

JEANNETTE G. HAUSER,
Vice Pres. World's W. C. T. U. for India.
Calcutta, India.

THE Bangalore, India, Daily Post kindly grants a column a month to the W. C. T. U. which is filled with the reports of meetings, original articles by the members and selections. During one month three hundred tracts were distributed by the Bangalore union which keeps a wall-pocket of temperance literature upon the railway platform.

WORLD'S WAVE CRESTS.

NEARLY eighty pupils have signed the pledge in the Lucknow Band of Hope.

MISS M. J. GEORGE, of Adelaide, Australia, is National superintendent of L. T. L. for that country.

A NEW union has been organized among the missionaries of the Free Baptist mission of Balasore, Orissa.

THE "Willing Y" of Halifax, N. S., is still marching on. Their fifth Demorest silver medal contest recently was a great success.

MISS ELLA DUDLEY, Huguenot Seminary, Wellington, will act as Colonial Y superintendent during the absence of Miss Anna Cummings.

MISS THERESA M. CAMPBELL, Wellington, one of the editors of The White Ribbon for South Africa, is the new president of the W. C. T. U. of Cape Colony.

FIFTY-FIVE native lady members, and twenty European members, comprise the membership of Pundita Ramabai's temperance union for native women in Poona.

THE Christian students at St. John's college, Agra, resolved to become total abstainers, and a dozen of them have recently formed an organization, adopting the pledge of the World's W. C. T. U.

ONE of the leading papers of Cape Colony, South Africa, the Natal Witness, published at Pietermaritzburg, has given the Natal W. C. T. U. entire charge of two columns weekly; these are edited by Mrs. Bridgman.

OF the 297,261 pledge cards sent by the temperance children of the world for exhibition at the World's Fair, 202,866 were sent by the children of the United States; 46,989 from England; and 25,065 from Canada.

THE literature department of the India W. C. T. Union is preparing a series of "white ribbon scrap books," to be made up of temperance items from all sources, but particularly of such items as relate to the subject in India.

TEMPERANCE work has been commenced in Banda, where the drink habit has become very prevalent among the natives. Thirty-two signatures to the pledge were obtained at the first meeting and the number was subsequently increased.

Y's and Otherwise, the organ of the Y. W. C. T. U. of Cape Colony, is an interesting and helpful eight page sheet, edited by Miss Rose J. Sears, and is now in its fourth volume. There is much that is wise and very little "otherwise" to be found on its pages.

THE Calcutta W. C. T. U., of which Mrs. Thoburn is president, carries on flower mission work, distributing also quantities of religious papers and magazines. On Sunday afternoon, a committee visits the grog-shops mostly frequented by sailors, and from even these low places some have been led to a better and temperate life.

THE Temple medals were greatly admired by the workers in Kingston, Jamaica, where six of these chaste souvenirs have been received. Miss Constantia Maddix, vice-president of the World's W. C. T. U. for that island, reports a revival of L. T. L. work since the holidays and active preparations for a second public temperance meeting in Kingston, which it is hoped will be as well attended as the first.

SHO NEMOTO, our much honored friend, now in Mexico, whose memory will ever be dear to us because of his interest in our W. C. T. U. of Japan and kindness to Mary Allen West, writes: "Our Tokyo temperance society is three years old and has one thousand six hundred and seventy-five members. On the 22d of June, I received the last report from Tokyo. In that month we had seventy new members."

A NEW department has been created in the World's W. C. T. U., that of proportionate and systematic giving, and Mrs. Esther Tuttle Pritchard has been appointed its superintendent. Hereafter we may expect a more methodical plan of bestowing our support to benevolent institutions, as Mrs. Pritchard is an intelligent enthusiast on this subject, being also general secretary of this department in the Friends' Woman's Foreign Missionary Union.

A PARTY of white-ribboners from South Africa, who are playfully called "the Huguenot Pilgrims," have started from Huguenot Seminary, Wellington, Cape Colony, for an extended trip in which they will combine instruction, sight-seeing, pleasure, with a study of temperance efforts in different lands. The company consists of Miss Pride, former president of Cape Colony; Miss Solomon, colonial press superintendent; Miss Ferguson, Mrs. Allen and Miss Celliers, active colonial white-ribboners, and Miss Anna Cummings, the earnest superintendent of the Colonial Y's. The itinerary includes Egypt, Palestine, Greece, Italy and France. Miss Cummings goes to England for a short visit, and expects to arrive in America in June, where she will visit the Temple and the World's Fair city. A warm welcome at Headquarters is insured her.

ALMOST phenomenal is the spread of the temperance movement in Japan. The Temperance Tidings, a Japanese periodical, unreadable to the unlearned, save for one page in English, contains in that one page compact statements that are alive with hope for the redemption of this noble empire from the slavery of alcohol. Forty temperance societies are reported, aggregating a membership of over ten thousand men and women. In the Tokyo society alone there are two thousand members, having an average increase of nearly one hundred per month. An interesting incident is related of a poor laborer who had once been a drunkard but became converted, and, by closest economy, was able to save from his earnings the sum of fifteen dollars (a fabulous amount in that country). This he gave to the Tokyo society, which added to the money and purchased a magic lantern for use in temperance lectures. It is said that the self-sacrifice represented by this lantern wherever it is exhibited has a wonderful influence on audiences, and always aids in the winning of new members.

Canadian Field.

TEMPERANCE NEWS FROM ACROSS THE BORDER.

Canada starts 1894 with a full and strong temperance pulse.

The fifteenth anniversary of the Quebec branch of the Dominion Alliance was held in Montreal last week, and was of unusual interest in view of the recent prohibition plebiscites taken in Manitoba, Prince Edward Island and Ontario.

Mrs. C. T. Williams, president of the Dominion W. C. T. U., and many other members of the Provincial and local unions were present. Mr. Dougall, the chairman, explained that the Dominion Alliance represented the organization of all those ecclesiastical bodies who numbered prohibition of the liquor traffic as one of their principles.

Mr. Carson alluded to causes for gratitude during the past year, specifying the reduction of licenses, thirty-seven being struck off the roll; also the passing of a by-law making it possible to close the liquor places at ten o'clock on week days and seven on Saturdays.

Mr. Spence, of Toronto, the main mover in the recent campaign in that city, said that the Royal Commission, which had been so ridiculed, would do the prohibition cause no end of good. The report would be a perfect magazine of information. Canada holds a high place among the nations for temperance, the drinking bill amounting to four and one-half gallons per head; across the line it is seven gallons, and in Britain thirty gallons.

The question of taking a prohibition plebiscite in the province of Quebec was discussed, but left over for further consideration. Montreal has been chosen as the place of meeting of the Dominion Alliance convention in July, and to add to its attractiveness and success it was arranged to invite Sir Wilfrid Lawson, president of the United Kingdom Alliance of Great Britain, Lady Henry Somerset, to represent the temperance women of England, and Miss Willard and Gen. Neal Dow to represent the United States.

News comes that the people of Nova Scotia are circulating a petition to obtain signatures asking for a plebiscite.

The province of New Brunswick, in answer to a petition from the W. C. T. U., is issuing a Canadian edition of Health Readers Nos. 1 and 2 for use in the public schools. New Brunswick is thus the third Canadian province to print scientific temperance books for use in the public schools, the others being Nova Scotia and Ontario. The Qu' Appelle union, in Assiniboia, and Edmonton union, in Alberta, are both working to secure scientific temperance text-books in those territories.

Crusade Day was pretty generally held throughout Canada. The W. C. T. U. in Moncton, New Brunswick, held a most successful entertainment. Mrs. Achinson gave a capital condensed history of W. C. T. U. work around the world. Calgarry union (Alberta Territory) observed the day by a union prayer-meeting.

Montreal (Central) union held all day meetings, which were well attended and interesting. Mrs. C. T. Williams spoke of the wonderful work done by Dr. Kate Bushnell and Mrs. Andrew in India. In Toronto the unions united in observing the day by meeting in Mrs. Youmans' house, who received an ovation in the form of telegrams, flowers and fruit. It was a graceful and fitting compliment to pay one who has done so much for the cause of temperance in Canada. The collections taken on that day are to be divided between the World's W. C. T. U. missionary department and home missions in the northwest.

During the recent plebiscites a good deal was said about the number of women on the municipal lists who did not avail themselves of their privilege to vote, and, as the enemy is always ready to seize upon any advantage, the inference was drawn that women were not really in earnest on the suffrage question. To get an expression of sentiment from representative Canadian women the Dominion president, Mrs. C. T. Williams, had the bright thought of holding a symposium on the subject in the Woman's Journal, Ottawa. Correspondents were asked to answer in condensed form, "Do you believe in parliamentary suffrage for women? If so, why? If not, why not?" From the responses received it appears that there is no diminution of interest on the subject.

Richmond, Quebec, is rejoicing in the possession of a beautiful new hall, built and presented to the temperance cause through the generosity of a former townsman, Mr. Herbert Foster. It was opened with heartfelt gratitude by the Quebec provincial president, Mrs. Sanderson, who was ably supported by many of the influential men and women of the neighborhood. The furniture of the hall was given by Mr. George Goodhue, of Danville, a constant friend of temperance.

Ontario is still rejoicing over the plebiscite triumph of January 1. The prohibition majority is now known for a certainty to number between eighty and one hundred thousand. On to further victory seems to be the watchword of the temperance army. An assured feeling prevails everywhere that the labors of the years in behalf of the cause have not been in vain.

A grand rally of representative workers from all the churches and societies in the province is to be held in Toronto this week to plan for and push a further advance, and the much desired prohibitory legislation is bound to come sometime.

Never before has there been so much written and read on the temperance question as at present, and never before has the subject been so much discussed from every possible standpoint, and never before has the W. C. T. U. had such work thrust upon it as now.

The Canada Citizen of Toronto, and the Canadian Home Guard of London, have amalgamated with the name Citizen and Home Guard, to be published simultaneously in London and Toronto, with a promise of increased usefulness because of united strength. A goodly portion of its space is to be devoted to the interests of the W. C. T. U.

Miss Macarthur of Cornwall, is arranging for a school of methods to be conducted in that town in February, which will very materially help the work in the eastern part of the province. MARGARET G. URE, Canadian Reporter, Montreal.

News from the Field.

COLORADO.

W. C. T. U. MOVEMENTS.

The camp fire on Crusade Day was held in the state headquarters in Denver, lasting from ten o'clock in the morning until four in the afternoon. Mrs. M. A. Cassell, president of Arapahoe county union, was most helpful by her faithful presence the entire day. Personal reminiscences were given by Mesdames Westley, Lounsbery, Roads and Teetor. Memorial service was led by Mrs. E. M. Craise; then followed, "The outlook for the nation and the world," by Mrs. J. K. Howard, president of Jennie Smith union.

The day was observed in different localities; but one special report has reached me, the meeting at Canon City, where the ministers joined in the service; creating much enthusiasm. Twenty new names were secured for membership and a liberal offering was made for the local treasury.

The missionary for Arapahoe county sends report for the year 1893: Addressed 304 meetings, the largest audience, 800, and cash received from all sources, $802.10. In addition to this work, Mrs. E. M. Craise is the president of Roxanna Brainard union and is associated with Mrs. E. M. Wiley in scientific temperance instruction, where her best opportunity was presenting this department before the State Teachers' Association at Colorado Springs. There also, Mrs. Higgins and Miss Helen Dewey led in the discussion that was so much appreciated. Assurance was given that our W. C. T. U. shall have representation at all their future annuals. This is an advance step and we can say with the prophet of old, "ye shall rejoice in all that ye put your hand unto" "wherein the Lord thy God, hath blessed thee."

In this connection Mrs. Wiley has been most thorough, hearing personally from the superintendents of schools in all the counties. Teachers are faithful and conscientious in their duty as to liquor and narcotics.

The local superintendent at Idaho Springs writes: "In all the work with boys, tobacco is the greatest obstacle, for it is easy for them to look upon the effects of drunkenness with contempt, but not so with the cigarette habit."

We are happy to mention a recent interview with the matron of our county jail, Mrs. James Havens, where by her gentle, refining influence no fumes of the noisome weed can pervade the wards under her control, thus as she said: "I am carrying on my department of opium and narcotics that was so dear to me when at work in the W. C. T. U." Blessed privilege, though our surroundings and avocations in life may change, the all-pervading influence will prevail for the right, and be wielded by the true worker.

Our rights of citizenship are taken advantage of in Denver, by the growing numbers on the registration list, as evidenced by the weekly gathering at the court house, and frequent meetings held over the state for the "study of the civil government and election laws." "Our new duties and methods of procedure," "Parliamentary Law," "Question Box," etc., etc. All are "pressing forward, onward."

With the practical work, it is cause for rejoicing that gospel temperance and our spiritual needs are interwoven, as at Greeley. Mrs. Trego, of Ohio, has spent some time and delivered a lecture under the auspices of the temperance union. The regular meetings of the various unions, are greatly helped in the devotional experience by suggestive quotations, comforting words from the Bible and fervent prayer.

There has been a revival of work at Holyoke, with Mrs. L. M. Reynolds as president, and her equally efficient co-laborers. Superintendents have been appointed for twenty-one departments, and further good news may be heralded of their achievements.

Many hindrances have caused delay in transmitting news of our work and workers; one avenue of communication has been closed because of the suspension of our state paper, the Bulletin, per action of the executive committee, owing to retrenchment in many lines of work of the different unions and avoidance of debt at the end of the year.

A new union was organized in North Denver by Mrs. Cassell, with a membership of eight, and much interest manifested. The following officers were duly elected: President, Mrs. Emma McKenzie; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Hattie Newell; recording secretary, Mrs. Ellen Ault; treasurer, Mrs. Maggie Flesher.

Other organizations in this county will be effected in the near future. Our vice-president, Mrs. M. J. Telford, has addressed several unions en route to her home in Grand Junction, having previously been invited to appear before the Arapahoe county quarterly convention in the interest of the franchise movement.

Our president, Mrs. Higgins, has been in Lafayette, Colorado Springs, Colorado City, Monument and Fort Morgan where she was well received. Her appeals were to the Christian people to be more in earnest for the prohibition of the liquor traffic, and the vivid portrayal of the evils of intemperance made a good impression on many who were before indifferent. At Fort Morgan the house was crowded to its fullest capacity.

Since that time she was summoned to her La Veta home by the death of her father, Henry McClintoch, at the advanced age of ninety years. He was a man of sterling integrity, and greatly esteemed in the communities where he has lived. He was one of seven brothers, five of the number, ministers of the gospel, and Dr. John McClintoch, late editor of the New York Central Advocate, and compiler of the "Encyclopedia of Methodism," was a relative. The funeral services befitting a life so prolonged was attended by personal friends of the family, and letters of sympathy have been received from some of the workers in the state.

SARAH LEE TEETOR,
State Reporter, Denver.

MISSOURI.

SEEDS AND FRUITS.

Missouri workers will sadly miss their comrade and state reporter chosen for this year, Mrs. A. A. Hawley, of Kansas City, who has removed to Denver, Col. There is for all the W. C. T. U. a new interest in that land where men are so chivalrous and just that they dare divide civil rights, honors and responsibilities with women. Her predecessor as state reporter, Mrs. Mary E. Jones, writes hopefully from Colorado as to her returning health, but declares that she shall stay there until she votes.

In taking up the work dropped by these skillful hands, I feel keenly the disadvantage of my brief residence in the state, and earnestly urge all unions to coöperate with me by promptly sending me reports of their work. The recently held in Warrensburg, was full of good things. Cheering reports from unions and superintendents of departments, were given, earnest papers, and a fine address by the president, Mrs. Golliday.

SEMI-ANNUAL CONVENTION OF JOHNSON COUNTY

DEMOREST MEDAL CONTEST

work is going bravely forward. The names of eighteen winners of silver medals scattered over the state from contests lately held have been reported this month, and a gold medal to Miss Georgia Orr, of Kansas City. Missouri hopes to have a diamond medal contest at her next state convention.

The South Side Y's of St. Louis have recently held a Demorest contest at the working girls' home. This earnest union is doing much good work, and cheering us all by not forgetting to report it. They hold prayer-meetings at the Bethesda Home, and distribute Bibles. At one of their evangelistic meetings lately, they had with them Mrs. Stewart, district superintendent of that department. A lemon social at the home of one of the members was an enjoyable affair. They are pursuing a course of scientific temperance study under the leadership of Mrs. Washington, a most valuable thing for every union to do.

AMONG THE WORKERS.

Craig W. C. T. U. has upon its membership roll every minister and his wife in the town. This ought not to be any special distinction, but Craig challenges other towns to show as good a record. Let us hear from every town who can answer, "So do we!" Surely the chorus of replies ought to be enough to shake the state.

Oregon W. C. T. U. has had two old-fashioned spelling bees which netted over thirty dollars, and the public are so much pleased that there will be another in which the ladies will be pitted against the gentlemen.

The Rocheport Y, organized in November with ten active and four honorary members, are giving entertainments, lunches and Demorest contests and filling their treasury.

Eldorado union keeps up a public Monday evening temperance meeting, usually led by the various ministers of the town. These meetings are a splendid educational force and will make conscientious conviction and Christian voting. This union has a gold contest in preparation, also expects to have a matron's contest this winter. Who can speak these home-saving prohibition truths with more force and feeling than mothers?

Grant city had such an old folks' contest lately, seven ladies over thirty-five years of age being the contestants. The prize, "Glimpses of Fifty Years," was awarded Mrs. Kate Lewis. It was a success, not only in point of earnest sentiment but financially. There is much good L. T. L. work being done, and a very general use made of space offered in county papers. Many thanks are due to friendly brothers of the press.

Our state president is constantly in the field, and is greatly strengthening and building up the work. At St. Joseph she had an overflowing house, where she occupied the Congregational pulpit by invitation of the pastor, Dr. Bushnell.

Henry county hopes to organize several new unions soon, and will have a series of lectures from Mrs. Hoffman in January. Clinton has been gaining new members of late, is holding meetings oftener and taking up new work. They held a mass-meeting, assisted by city pastors, January 21, and are planning future meetings. Mrs. Emma A. Cranmer, of Dakota, will lecture through the state in February and Dr. Anna Shaw later on.

State Reporter, Clinton.

EVA JONES,

TENNESSEE.

NEW UNIONS.

Our state has been more than usually active this winter along some lines of work.

At our state convention an invitation was extended to Mrs. Harriet L. Adams, of Cleveland, Ohio, to come to our state as an organizer and helper along all lines, and to that action is due our unusual activity. Mrs. Adams arrived in November, and has been steadily reclaiming old and preëmpting new territory ever since. She has organized eight unions, and spoken in twenty-five towns, making in all thirty-five public addresses.

The unions organized by her are Milan, Huntingdon, Gleason, Ripley, Dickson, Lebanon Gordonsville and Cookeville.

Her last address (at this writing) was delivered at Fayetteville, and was well received by all who heard her. Mrs. Adams is an ideal organizer. Many organizers will pass through a place, make an address eloquent with beautiful thoughts and smoothly flowing sentences, and pass on, after organizing a union, which barely survives its birth, and we wonder what is the matter. Mrs. Adams is an eloquent, forcible speaker, and withal a practical worker. She organizes her unions to live because she shows them what there is to do, how to do it, and then puts them to work. She has some more work to do in middle Tennessee, and then she is off to East Tennessee, where I am sure she will receive a most hearty welcome.

We are making a specialty of scientific temperance instruction, and hope to send to our next legislature petitions of such length as to convince our law makers that the "voice of the people" is in favor of the children, instead of the saloon. Our new petitions just out, will be signed by both men and women, though in separate columns, as we are determined that the motherhood of Tennessee shall be heard.

Springfield, one of our newly organized unions, is a live, healthy union, doing good work. They have done some charitable work, have mothers' meetings, have done some jail and prison work, and have raised twenty-five dollars for local work.

The Jonesboro union began the new year with the determination to make this year more profitable than ever before. They meet weekly, and are doing good work in nearly all the different departments. They make special mention of their press work, their jail and prison work and their juvenile work. In the latter, their L. T. L. has grown so large that they have been compelled to divide it into two societies. They have had three entertainments during the winter, and make special mention of their chrysanthemum show, from which they realized a fair profit.

Harriman is, as usual, very much alive. They are working actively along many lines, and doing good work. They are making special arrangements for Mrs. Adams' visit to their district, and hope to accomplish much through her, in their district. The State Minutes are being published at Harriman, and will soon be ready for distribution. All wanting a copy of the Minutes should send the money, (the usual price has been ten cents per copy), at once to Mrs. T. H. Thayer, Harriman, who is chairman of the publication committee.

All our unions are urged to secure the services of Mrs. Adams while she is in the state. She should be sent to every town in the state. She will be sure to do good wher ever she goes. Her terms are simply entertainment and the collections at the close of the meetings. Perhaps never again may they have an opportunity of securing so gifted a woman on such terms. Let every union in the state at once make arrangements to have her speak, not only in their own town, but in all the surrounding towns. No state ever needed stirring as our state needs it. And Mrs. Adams will certainly stir up and organize the state if we will only give her appointments enough. All she asks is that we make the appointments for her, and our unions should unite as one woman to see that she has them everywhere.

SELENA MOORE HOLMAN,
State Reporter, Fayetteville.

In the Early Days of cod-liver oil its use was limited to easing those far advanced in consumption. Science soon discovered in it the prevention and cure of consumption.

Scott's Emulsion

of cod-liver oil with Hypophosphites of lime and soda has rendered the oil more effective, easy of digestion and pleasant to the taste.

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All druggists.

A GOOD BROTH IS HALF A DINNER

EVERY ONE can afford to use Clam Bouillon for Lunch, Dinner and Tea at 20 cents a quart. Enough for a whole family. Prepared in five minutes from a bottle of

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON

Quality improved, price reduced, larger bottles. All Grocers sell it.

E. S. BURNHAM CO.,
120 Gansevoort St., N.Y.

Sample bottle, 10 cents; makes a pint.

A Clock out of order shows it on the face. When the human machine goes wrong, the physiognomy tells tales. If you do not look well, take

Beecham's Pills

(Worth a Guinea a Box.) (Tasteless)

25 cents a box 7

No local dealer can compete with us

WALL PAPER

in variety or price. Our new designs and colorings are handsomer this year than ever before.

Our "Guide How to Paper and Economy in Home Decoration," mailed free with samples

Beautiful Gold Paper, 5c. per Roll.

We carry the largest stock in the country, and can save you 50 per cent. on every roll of paper you buy. No matter where you live, if you have any use for wall paper, send 10c. to nearest address to pay postage on a large package of samples. One good agent or paper hanger wanted in each town to sell from sample books, price $1.00.

ALFRED PEATS,

80-82 W. 13th St., NEW YORK. 186 188 W. Madison St., CHICAGO.

GLOBE SAVINGS BANK

Corner Dearborn and Jackson Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

UNDER STATE CONTROL.

INDIVIDUAL AND SAVINGS ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.

SAFETY ▲ DEPOSIT ▲ VAULTS.

6 tubs in one. BATH TUBS, Wholesale & Retail. For "Bath Room" & "Portable." Durable, many long used renewed, light, little water. Agents and others send for circulars.

E. J. Knowlton, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Cor. Secy's Notes.

A GLANCE OVER THE FIELD.

The Iowa senate committee on constitutional amendments and suffrage has reported favorably upon Senator Jamison's resolution to submit an amendment allowing women full suffrage. Senator Rowan's bill granting women the ballot at school elections was also recommended. The house having taken similar action, the cause has a hopeful outlook.

A cheering letter is received from Mrs. Mary E. Garbutt, president of Southern California W. C. T. U., in which she writes: "Our work is growing; we have added about two hundred and fifty members in the last three months. Many of our unions are intensely alive." Like all other (especially western) presidents, she speaks of "the great need of money." Why will not some millionaire, whose treasure is stored within vaults, endow the National W. C. T. U., that it may help the work in these needy states, where faithful women pray and labor and sacrifice?

After our last column had gone to press, we learned of the severe illness of Mrs. Mary T. Burt, president New York W. C. T. U., and rejoice that with our sympathy, we may now offer our congratulations in her convalescence, and unite with her constituency and National co-workers in hope of her speedy restoration to health and return to the field of usefulness where her absence is a sore trial.

Unusual activity characterizes the prohibition forces in many states, and we note with pleasure the hearty coöperation of W. C. T. U. women in the work. Sixteen Prohibition party conventions are already called to meet in Indiana within the next month, and an equal number in Ohio; New York is wide awake and New Jersey is ablaze.

MARY A. WOODBRIDGE.

Treasurer's Corner.

COLLECTING DUES.

What are treasurers for? In other words, what are the functions of the treasurer? Many constitutions read: "It shall be the duty of the treasurer to collect all dues, hold all money and pay out the same upon the order of president and secretary," etc. Now all treasurers are careful in holding and paying out money belonging to the society. They are painstaking and conscientious, but I wish to call attention of all treasurers, local as well as county and district, to the other duty that I fear is sometimes overlooked, namely, collecting the dues. This more especially falls upon the local treasurer. How many members are allowed to fall out of the union every year because their dues are not paid. She forgets all about it, and the treasurer who is her neighbor feels delicate about reminding her. At the end of the year she cannot be counted and after another year her name is dropped and the union has lost a member,—the loss is felt not only in the local but in county, district, state and even in the National.

Now suppose the treasurer had been lovingly faithful and had said to her, "The union has made it my duty to collect the dues, and I find you are one of our members, and so I come to you for the mite that we call membership fee." No woman of sufficient sense to be an acceptable member of a W. C. T. U. would be offended, but on the other hand she would gladly pay the fee and feel honored that she was not overlooked and that they regarded her of sufficient worth to look after her.

I know what some will say, "She knew she was a member and it was her duty to pay the fee without being asked." That is true, but some of us are so busy we forget, and need a gentle reminder. I heard one woman say, "I joined the union and paid my fee, and went to the meeting occasionally, but did not know when the year was up. It ran along and they never asked me for my dues and the next thing I knew, they had dropped my name and I was no longer a member." She was hurt and grieved and felt that for some reason they did not care to retain her as a member. She added, "If my dues were not worth asking for, they were not worth having. I would have paid it at any time they had asked for it." This is not an isolated case, but I am led to believe a very common one. Others wish to have some part in the work, and are willing to pay dues, sign the pledge and wear the white ribbon, but cannot attend the meetings or work on committees, and these are almost sure to forget to pay yearly dues.

HELEN M. BARKER.

GRANŪLA.

"The Perfect Health Food."

Ready for immediate use. Unequaled for children, invalids and persons of sedentary habits. A delicious diet, unsurpassed for Constipation and Dyspepsia. Contains the life-giving principle of wheat, easily digested, readily assimilated. Trial package 25c., by mail post-paid. Send for FREE pamphlet. Manufactured solely by Originated by Dr. James C. Jackson, (founder of the Famous Health Institution of Dansville, N.Y.) 37 years ago.

Our Home Granūla Co.,
(Box 100) DANSVILLE, N. Y.

Sankey Model.

STYLE 481.

Used by MR. IRA D. SANKEY.

One Hundred Different Styles of Organs and Pianos ranging in price from $27 to $2,200. Inspection Invited.

Catalogues Free.

Mason & Hamlin
ORGAN AND PIANO CO.
BOSTON, NEW YORK, KANSAS CITY, CHICAGO.

HON. NEAL DOW SAID THE CHRISTIAN is "very, very good; worth far more than the price" (only $1.00 a year.) "The best paper that comes to me."—C. H. SPURGEON. Agents wanted! Good pay! Sample free! H. L. HASTINGS, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.

WHAT IS THE CHRISTIAN?

It is the "BEST PAPER that comes to me." —C. H. SPURGEON.

It is an Illustrated Semi-Monthly, Religious, Temperance, Family paper; comprising four 4-page papers: The Christian, Safeguard, Armory, and the Common People.

$1.00 a year. Send for a Sample Copy Free!

It is filled with true stories, music, poetry, religion and common sense. It is free from sectarianism, politics, pills and patent medicines. The young read it eagerly as well as the old. It is a safe paper to have about the house.

It is "about the BEST PAPER in the country." —D. L. MOODY.

AGENTS WANTED! Good Pay! Send for Terms!

H. L. HASTINGS, 47 & 49 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.

Free to You, Ladies!

We will assist you to secure this handsomest of all Ladies' Bicycles entirely without cash outlay; or if you wish to buy a wheel outright, we can save you money! Try us! Wheels for Men and Youths on the same terms. J. K. HASTINGS, Manager of THE CHRISTIAN, 47 and 49 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.

Longfellow for Every Home.

Cambridge Longfellow.

Poems Complete in a New Edition.
From New Plates, Large Type.
Printed on Opaque Paper.

A Biographical Sketch.
Picture of Longfellow's Home.
Fine Steel Portrait.
Index to First Lines.

Bound in Attractive Style,
With a Flexible Back,
So as to lie open at any page.

Crown octavo, gilt top.
Cloth, $2.00; half calf, $3.50.
A beautiful, perfect book.

Sold by all Booksellers. Sent, postpaid, by

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., Boston.

ALASKA STOVE LIFTER

will not get hot even if left in the lid. Heavily Nickel Plated. Price by mail, postpaid, 30 cents.
TROY NICKEL WORKS, Troy, N. Y.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

By faith, Abraham when he was tried, offered up Isaac; and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten son.—Heb. 11: 17.

The president of the Wisconsin W. C. T. U. says: "We claim to be 'the women who have heard the cry of the world.' Is that cry for fine buildings or freedom from the thralldom of intemperance?" One woman whom the writer can bear testimony for, claims that she heard "the cry of the world," but it came as a voice from the heavens saying, "Arise and build." The voice kept sounding in her soul and would not down. The vision that was shown her was a beautiful structure containing a hall which should be daily used as a Bethel for souls. The rest of the building was to become a source of income, and for this purpose was to be converted into offices. The rentals, when the building was all paid for, were to be devoted to National and state W. C. T. U. work, in order that men and women might be saved "from the thralldom of intemperance." Three different plans by the best architects were presented during more than as many years, but only the third seemed thoroughly acceptable. It is now to be found embodied in stone, brick, marble and iron on La Salle street, Chicago, and is known as the Woman's Temperance Temple, architecturally considered the most beautiful office building in America. When the woman to whom the above command was given was in search for knowledge in regard to its erection, she would sometimes pause in front of a monster sky scraper in course of construction, awed by its immensity, with limbs trembling beneath her, she would inwardly exclaim, "Oh, Lord, how can I ever undertake anything like this?" Then a voice would answer back, "Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed; for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest. Death will not touch thee until the work I have given thee is completed, and your eyes shall behold it." Our sister says: "We must lay aside all sentimentality and carefully view the facts that are before us." The above impressions she may consider sentimentality. If so, we had better divorce from our religion as sentimentality all of God's leadings, and admit in this world of "fact" that there is no such thing as a life of faith.

***

"An expensive, ornate building," says our Wisconsin sister, "has been erected, in no way adequate to our needs, and we are asked to put forth every effort to pay for it. Our National headquarters are small and cramped and we are obliged to pay a high rental for the rooms occupied as such. Willard Hall is too small for us to hold a National Convention in, and yet, when it was planned we were told that it would afford a place for the National convention whenever it wished to meet in Chicago. To raise $100 for the Temple means long, hard work for every union that attempts it, and it means for the time a cessation of temperance work." It is true the building is expensive because it is entirely fireproof, but not one dollar has been spent in its finish except in Willard Hall, but what is now considered to be absolutely necessary to the completeness and comfort of a first-class office building. As to its architecture being "ornate" it is anything but that. In fact, it is monumental and stately in its character to a marked degree. "In no way adequate to our needs," adds our sister. That is indeed a most singular and startling assertion. It is answered most admirably in the same number of The Wisconsin Motor (in which appears Mrs. Campbell's article) by the corresponding secretary of the Wisconsin W. C. T. U. and editor of The Motor, Mrs. M. F. Hanchett. She says, "The rooms occupied by our National officers consist of a reception room, an office for the corresponding secretary, an office for the treasurer, a small, light room for the typewriter and a large store room. The present occupants consider them ample and visitors are delighted with them." It would not seem from this statement, which is perfectly correct, that the National headquarters in the Temple are "either cramped or inadequate." Our critic complains that a high rental has to be paid. The rental is no higher than would have to be paid in any other first-class centrally located office building, and when we become entire owners of the Temple the W. C. T. U. need not pay any rent. The statement that we promised to make Willard Hall large enough to accommodate the National Convention when it wished to meet in Chicago is entirely erroneous. In no printed report of mine can any such statement be found. A few points are left unanswered which will have to go over for another week.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

Knox's Sparkling Calves' Foot Gelatine

THE PUREST MADE

Received the only Medal and Diploma at the World's Fair, Chicago, on Package Gelatine for table use, for STRENGTH, PURITY and GOOD FLAVOR.

The only Gelatine positively free from odor or taste. Our new package has Rose Gelatine in top of each package to make fancy desserts. Your grocer has it if he keeps the best.

CHARLES B. KNOX, Johnstown, N. Y.

Send a 2-cent stamp for little book. "DAINTY DESSERTS FOR DAINTY PEOPLE."

CHOICE 50c. TRIAL SETS.

Set B—16 pkts. Vegetable Seeds, - 50c
" E—20 pkts. Flower Seeds, - - 50c
" F—10 Lovely Carnation Pinks, 50c
" G—10 Prize Chrysanthemums, 50c
" H—4 Superb French Cannas, 50c
" J—10 Elegant Roses, - - - - 50c
" M—24 Fine Gladioli Bulbs, - - 50c
" P—6 Hardy Ornamental Shrubs, 50c
" R—6 Choice Grape Vines, - - 50c
½ each of any two sets, - - 50c

No two plants alike in these sets.

Any 3 Sets, $1,25; 5 for $2.

By mail, postpaid. Safe arrival and satisfaction guaranteed. Order by the letters from this advt. NOW as these are introductory sets not in catalogue, an elegant annual of 168 pages, free. Everything of the best for Orchard, Vineyard, Lawn and Garden. 40th year, 1,000 acres, 28 greenhouses.

STORRS & HARRISON CO.,
PAINESVILLE, OHIO, Box 246.

What a wonderful thing is a live seed. Immature, old or dead it may look the same. How to know? Old gardeners say that Burpee's seeds grow.

This is the proof of life. When grown we give our word you will be satisfied—your success is ours. BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL for 1894, 172 pages, tells all about the Best Seeds that Grow. The newspapers call it the Leading American Seed Catalogue. Yours free for the asking if you plant seeds.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia.

SEEDS
WARRANTED.
Best in the World.

By mail, postage paid, 1 cent a package and up. Grand lot of EXTRAS given with every order. Prettiest and only FREE Catalogue in the world with pictures of all varieties. Send yours and neighbors' address.

R. H. SHUMWAY,
ROCKFORD, - ILLINOIS.

Roses

How to get the best, and how to grow them successfully—that's the text of our new

Guide to Rose Culture

for 1894. It tells you how to get the famous D.&C. Roses on their own roots; gives the very latest and best information for the culture of all kinds of flowers. We send it free to anyone, together with a sample copy of our interesting floral Magazine

"SUCCESS WITH FLOWERS."

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO.
Rose Growers and Seedsmen, West Grove, Pa.

HATCH CHICKENS BY STEAM
With the Improved Excelsior Incubator.

Simple, Perfect, Self-Regulating. Thousands in successful operation. Guaranteed to hatch a larger percentage of fertile eggs at less cost than any other Hatcher. Lowest priced first-class Hatcher made.

Circulars free. Send 6c. for Illus. Catalogue.

GEO. H. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

THE SIGNAL DID IT!

WHAT? Made hundreds of homes of its readers happy with our "Modern Bath." The thousands who saw them at the World's Fair indorse their merit, for which HIGHEST PRIZE was awarded.

Send 2c. for catalogue illustrating 18 styles.

THE MOSELY FOLDING BATH TUB CO.,
181 K. S. Canal St., CHICAGO.

WHEN WHISKY REIGNS NO MORE.

Air.—"When Johnny Comes Marching Home."

Get ready for the jubilee,
Hurrah! hurrah!
When this our country shall be free,
Hurrah! hurrah!
The girls will sing, the boys will shout,
When alcohol is driven out,
And we'll all feel gay when whisky is no more.

We're only children now, you know,
Hurrah! hurrah!
But temperance children always grow,
Hurrah! hurrah!
The girls will all be women then,
The boys of course will all be men,
And we'll all fight rum till rum shall be no more.

From Maine to California,
Hurrah! hurrah!
From Delaware to Canada!
Hurrah! hurrah!
The struggle now is going on,
And when the mighty victory's won,
We'll all feel gay that whisky reigns no more.

It will not do to simply say,
Hurrah! hurrah!
But do your duty, then you may,
Hurrah! hurrah!
Assist the weak, yourself deny,
Stand by the right and by and by
We'll all feel gay that whisky reigns no more.

—Edward Carswell.

THE LITTLE HOME PROTECTOR.

BY ADA M. MELVILLE.

A broad beam of sunshine streamed across the floor in Mrs. Thornton's pretty sewing-room, and in its warmth her curly-headed daughter Alice was basking, looking like a lively little flower that could not get too much of the brightness. But the child did not look very happy. How could she when mamma lay on the lounge with tears rolling down her cheeks and brother Walter had just gone out banging the door? Papa went away without kissing her that morning, too. It was really dreadful. And all because of a bow of white ribbon that mamma would wear.

While Alice was thinking about it mamma shut her eyes, and the child, thinking she was asleep, stole softly to her side, and stretching out her dimpled fingers, tugged gently at the offending bow, but it was too securely tied for clumsy baby fingers. Mamma's eyes opened, and quickly stretching out her arms, she caught the rosy little thief. "What is it, sweetheart? Do you want mamma to take off the white ribbon, too?"

The curly head nodded, and the blue eyes looked gravely into mother's gray ones.

"I think mamma will have to tell you a story. Let us go and sit in the big rocker. Does my Alice like really, truly stories?"

"Is it all really, truly?"

"Yes, every word of it."

So they "snuggled" down in the big chair, and the white kitty curled herself up at their feet to catch a nap while Alice was still. Poor kitty! Alice was not often "still," and she was very fond of making her four-footed friend play with her.

What do you suppose the story was Alice listened to, as she played with the bow of white ribbon that had made mamma so much trouble? If your mamma wears a white ribbon she can tell you one just like it. It was all about the dreadful "liquor traffic" that had grown so powerful in the nation that it was not safe in a great many places for women and children to venture out alone after sunset, since drunken men are dangerous—no matter how kind they may be when they are sober.

Then Alice listened to the story of the Crusade, and her eyes grew big and solemn at that part of the story, for was there not a dreadful saloon she had to pass on her way to school every day, and who would dare go near it even to pray? Those must have been brave women, just like her own pretty mamma. And then Neal Dow—"Our Neal Dow, mamma?"

"Yes, dear, our Neal Dow," for Alice had lived in Maine the year before and had learned to love "the grand old man," who was never too busy to pat her curly head and talk kindly with her when he and papa were together.

"How could he help to make Maine pro'bition, mamma?"

So mamma explained carefully (your mamma can explain it to you) and then Alice asked ever so many more questions.

"Why doesn't papa believe in prohibition?"

"He thinks it is not good for the country, dear."

"Does he believe in drinking?"

"He does not drink, Alice."

"Does Walter?"

"I am afraid Walter will some day, unless he learns to hate it now, sweetheart."

The sun had slipped away around the corner by this time, and the white kitty was wide awake and ready for a romp, so the big chair was vacated and mamma went to dress for dinner.

"Wear your prettiest dress to-night, mamma," called out the little daughter, so a black one with sparkling trimming was put on and a fresh white bow tied right in front. At supper what should come up for conversation again but the question of prohibition and Alice was "all ears."

"Understand once for all," she heard her father say, "you may persist in your temperance notions, but I give no sanction—Walter and I cannot indorse such nonsense."

Alice could not understand it all but she knew mamma was seriously troubled, so after father and brother had gone to business she put her arms about her mother's neck and whispered, "I'll be your protector—I'll stand by you."

That was how she came to be called "The Little Home Protector."

It would take too long to tell you all that happened—how she went to W. C. T. U. meetings and listened to the plans for outwitting Enemy Alcohol, and how at night she knelt by mamma's side and prayed God "to make papa understand" and "keep brother from ever drinking."

That spring there was a W. C. T. U. convention in the town where Alice lived, and she went to a great many of the meetings with her mother. At the close of the convention a mass-meeting was held, and stirring speeches were made for temperance and prohibition. Then the pledge was offered. But it was not a temperance town, and no one could be persuaded to sign the pledge. All the W. C. T. U. ladies (there were not many of them) sat on the platform, and one after another rose to plead with the audience.

At last Alice's mother rose to speak. Away back in the audience sat her husband and son, who "came to see what was going on." Tears stood in many eyes before Mrs. Thornton sat down, and her last words were full of beseeching. "Is there not one here," she said, "who loves home more than power and position—who will dare public opinion for the sake of right and truth? You would rise to a man if thieves or murderers invaded our homes. Is there no one to protect us from this which is worse? No one to stand by us in our fight for God and Home and Native Land?"

Alice had been listening hard, and could stand it no longer. She slipped her hand away from the lady who was holding it, and walking shyly across the platform, reached up both hands to her mother and said in a clear voice that reached every corner of the room, "I'll stand by you, mamma, I'll help!"

Her mother lifted her in her arms, and amid a dead silence the little one signed the pledge. As she laid down the pen and turned to go back to her seat some one in the audience called out, "Three cheers for the Little Home Protector." They were given with a will, and when Mrs. Thornton offered the pledge again there were a great many who stood up to sign it—among them her husband and son, and after that there were no more troubles in the pretty home, all because Alice "stood by" and became its faithful temperance protector.

Chicago, Ill.

A HORSE belonging to a grocer had been severely injured. How severely and how terrible his suffering must have been was not fully known till developed by a post-mortem examination. On the last morning of the faithful creature's life he heard the whistle sound for seven o'clock. This was the signal which usually brought his master to harness him into the delivery wagon, to commence the work of the day. Summoning all his remaining strength, he walked out, unbidden, and placed himself between the shafts. In a moment or two he dropped dead.

"Force of habit," some will say. That we allow. But shall not all honor be conceded to the dumb animal even, whose habit of right doing is so strong, that though suffering unto death, he will strive to respond to its call?

THE PEACE-MAKER.—"Don't you know it is very wrong to fight, little boy? What does the good book say?" Tommy (who has just polished off the class bully)—"I dunno. I ain't read no further than David and Gerlire."—Puck.

DEAR CHILDREN:

Would you happy be
From care and want and sorrow free?
Just make a vow
Like brave Neal Dow
To annihilate old King Whisky.

Won't you bridge sin's dark abyss,
And fill sad souls with joy and bliss,
Like good Neal Dow
Who made this vow:
"With God's help, I'll change all this!"

His birthday gay we celebrate,
Our hero true and temperate—
He's ninety now,
Is General Dow—
A sturdy soldier, good and great.

Oh, won't you make your life like his?
To do aught else you'll go amiss;
Pray take this vow,
Of wise Neal Dow
"With God's help, I'll change all this!"

Aunt Jane

NEPHEWS AND NIECES.

Lloyd Daniels, Georgia.
Ethel Pierce, Florence Wildrick, } New Jersey.
Mary L. Fishburn, Viola P. Reese, Carroll Leon McHenry, Edna M. Dale, } Penn.
Lucia B. Blake, Orra L. Hurd, Homer G. Applegate, } Iowa.
Amy L. Phelps, New York.
Minnie Sweet, May Harley, } Ohio.
Ruth Van Deman, Virginia.
Mabel E. Whitman, Oregon.
Ruby N. Cross, Canada.
Agnes E. Volentine, May Hussong, } Illinois.
Bertha B. Pacey, Clara Willard Pacey, } Missouri.
Joseph B. Read, Massachusetts.

I have a great many temperance pieces that I speak, and I will always stand up for temperance.

H. R. HANSON.

8 1-2 Antrim St., Cambridge, Mass.

I have a little baby brother named Wilbur Fisk. I am going to try to make a little Prohibitionist of him.

Pennsville, N. J. GRACE SENSES.

I am a member of the L. T. L. of Atlanta, and hope to vote the whisky out of the United States of America.

Atlanta, Ga. LLOYD DANIELS.

There are no saloons here and we are very glad. We are all in favor of prohibition in our family, and I have five prohibition uncles. I wish some of the cousins would write to me. VINNIE R. STATLER.

Reedsburgh, O.

We are all friends to the Temple. My friends are all Prohibitionists and we are working for that cause.

Hebron, Neb. FANNIE L. COOK.

I would like to step into your Corner. I guess it must be a nice place there are so many temperance boys and girls in it. My papa does not use any kind of liquors, smoke or chew. There is no saloon in this place and we don't want any, and if it comes we will fight it down.

Lisbon, Mich. EVA FRAREY.

I belong to Company O of the Baltimore City L. T. L. I am twelve years old. Our Legion has one hundred and twenty-seven members, and sixty-seven that have signed the pledge. There are plenty of saloons in our city, 2,164, but we hope to see the day when there will be none.

Baltimore, Md. MINNIE STELLA GRAVES.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

271.

ANAGRAM.

Down ale!

272.

NUMERICAL ENIGMA.

My whole is that for which temperance people are working.

I am composed of 11 letters.

My 2, 10, 6, 9, 11 is a winter bird.
My 4, 7, 1 is a part of the body.
My 5, 8 is an impersonal pronoun.
My 3 is an exclamation.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED FEBRUARY 1.

266. 1, Wine, mine, mile, milk. 2, Cider, wider, wader, water. 3, Rum, rug, pug, pup, pop. 4, Beer, seer, seel, sell, sill, silt, sift, soft, sofa, soda.

267. Direct my footsteps by thy Word
And make my heart sincere.
Let sin have no dominion, Lord,
But keep my conscience clear.

Correct answers: L. C. Sweet; Eva D. Cooke; Caroline MacMinn; May Hussong; Rosa Green.

Kernels.

PATIENT waiting is often the highest way of doing God's will.—Collier.

EYES raised toward heaven are always beautiful, whatever they be.—Joseph Joubert.

FROM the plenitude that waits on one life, falls a crumb that stays the craving of another.—A. D. T. Whitney.

THE battle of our life is won,
And heaven begun,
When we can say, "Thy will be done!"
—Lucy Larcom.

NATURE is too thin a screen. The glory of the One breaks in everywhere.—Emerson.

WE never graduate in religion; because the nearer we are to God, the more we see there is to be learned.—M. H. Seelye.

NOTHING but the infinite pity is sufficient for the infinite pathos of human life.—John Inglesant.

SORROW'S stern form and gentler face,
If kept by faith in firm control,
Becomes, through God's remedial grace,
A trusty servant of the soul.
—William H. Hayne.

IF you want your love to God to run smooth, have the channel full, you can have enough to float your whole business though you be heavily freighted with responsibilities.

A QUIET life often makes itself felt in better ways than one that the world sees and applauds; and some of the noblest are never known till they end, leaving a void in many hearts.—Louisa M. Alcott.

WE should accustom ourselves to self-denial and patient waiting; for the blessings that God reserves for His people are like fruit which will be wholesome when it has time to ripen, but will certainly be noxious if greedily and prematurely gathered.—Scott.

THERE is always room at the top, especially for the largest strawberries in the box.

"HAVE you any room for poetry?" she asked timidly.

"Yes," replied the editor, "the lumber-room."

"MAMMA," said little Ethel, who has been vainly trying to make the preliminary preparation with a needle and thread, "I do believe this needle is cross-eyed."

"Is your father in favor of patronizing home industry?" asked a visitor of Freddy.

"I think he is, judging from the way he makes me work," replied Freddy.

NERVOUS PASSENGER (on Providence steamer): "That's a very peculiar noise in the water to-night. Do you notice it, Captain?"

Captain: "Yes, madam; that's the reg'lar Long Island Sound."

THE teacher asked, "And what is space?"
The trembling student said,
"I cannot think at present,
But I have it in my head."

IT is not the biggest pipes in the organ that are used the most.

SOME churches are dark because some people want to do all the shining.

OLD LADY (to druggist)—"I want a box of canine pills." Druggist—"What is the matter with the dog?" Old Lady (indignantly)—"I want you to know, sir, that my husband is a gentleman." Druggist puts up some quinine pills in profound silence.

A GERMAN citizen of Hoboken was informed that a lady had called to see him in his absence. "A lady," he mused aloud, "a lady!" Upon an accurate description, he suddenly brightened up, and added: "Oh, dot vos no lady; dot vos my vife."

THE two most absent-minded men on record are the fellow who thought he had left his watch at home, and then took it out to see if he had time to go back and get it, and the man who put on his office door a card saying, "Out, will be back soon," and on his return sat down on a stair step to wait for himself.

THY God shall supply every need. Here is a key to open every door before which we pause, saying, "How shall I get through?"—a mighty master-key for the regions of Giant Despair, for every lock in Doubting Castle. "I have a key in my bosom called Promise," said Hopeful; and he had forgotten to take it out.—Anna B. Warner.

THE daily labor we are called upon to perform seems mercifully ordered in a world where suffering prevails, to tear away our minds from too much brooding over our troubles. The poor, who have so much to contend with, find, doubtless, great relief in the necessity of constant occupation.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER.

If you have seen the January and February number of the children's own paper, The Young Crusader, you will want the March issue. This is more emphatically a temperance number than common, containing the Quarterly Temperance Lesson as a Supplement, and other temperance truths in various bright and attractive presentations. This little eight-page monthly has hosts of friends. Are you one of them? If not, why not?

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

One of the best large group photographs we have ever seen is from the 18x22 negative made by Mr. S. E. Norton at our last W. C. T. U. National Convention. It is far superior to any previously taken, as so many of the faces are clearly shown. Among them are Lady Henry Somerset, Mother Thompson, Susan B. Anthony, and more than one hundred others named in the accompanying Key. Readers of THE UNION SIGNAL who send us $2.50 for the picture will receive a copy by mail.

Indisputable Evidence.

Of the Successful Treatment of Consumption and Chest Diseases by the English Method, as Discovered and Practiced by George Thomas Congreve.

THIS WEEK'S INTERVIEW.

By the Special Commissioner.

At Torquay, with Mr Fred. Heath, of St. Leonard's Terrace, Newton Abbot, Plumber, whose case appeared in the weekly papers December, 1891.

TWO YEARS AFTER.

The "plain, unvarnished tale" told by Mr. Heath, of Newton Abbot, Devon, is worthy of attention of all those who are suffering from any form of chest disease. It would be very easy to describe the statements therein made as "wonderful," "remarkable," or even as almost passing belief, but I prefer to tell the story "just as 'twas told to me."

Mr. Heath had a severe attack of bronchitis, following on Russian influenza, and this was accompanied by terrible cough and night sweats.

"I cannot tell you what I suffered," said Mr. Heath, as we sat chatting in a Torquay hotel recently. "My health entirely gave way. The attacks of hemorrhage were dreadful, and they left me very weak. The expectoration was offensive and purulent. I became very thin, with the exception of my legs and feet, and they commenced to swell. I had the best available medical advice both in Torquay and Newton Abbot.

"No less than eight doctors had me in hand at different times, and they all said I was in a decided consumption, with ulceration proceeding at the back of the lungs."

"Of course you were not able to work?" I asked.

"No; I was laid up for eight and a half months, unable to earn anything."

"Some portion of that time you spent in the hospital?"

"I was in Teignmouth Hospital for three weeks, and in the Consumption Hospital at Torquay for four months. I was discharged from the latter, my case being given up as hopeless. I was so thin that you could see through my hands, and every one who knew me said I was a dying man. One of the doctors who attended me told my wife that I should never do another day's work—in fact, that I couldn't live very long."

Mr. Heath to-day is a man in the best of health, possessing an amount of strength which he rightly describes as wonderful, so I naturally asked him how the change—miraculous, almost—was brought about.

"Well," he answered, "when I was so bad that they watched by my bed for a fortnight, expecting me to die, I heard of Mr. Congreve's treatment, and, as a last resource, I commenced to take it. After about the first four days I mended rapidly. For a time I brought up a little blood, but that soon ceased after taking special medicine prescribed for me by Mr. Congreve. In about two months I was well enough to go to work."

"Then, do I understand that after being so ill for between eight and nine months, in so short a time you were enabled to go to work?"

"Yes, and more than that. I have never ailed anything since. My occupation is a trying one. Perhaps for a time I am standing before a fierce fire, and immediately after I am exposed to the cold air."

"I suppose plenty of persons have witnessed your recovery?"

"Hundreds of people who knew me well. After I got to work again, one of the doctors who had treated me asked me to come up and be examined. After the examination was over, he told me he was never more surprised in his life; there was absolutely nothing the matter with me except a little weakness. He said he thought I should have been dead and in my grave. People who saw me when I was so ill regard me as a living wonder."

"You certainly appear in good health now?"

"My health is perfect. From the time Mr. Congreve cured me I have not had an hour's ailment. Many strangers who have heard about me come to my house to inquire, and I tell them exactly the same as I have told you."

"Then you won't mind my publishing your case in the Torquay papers, Mr. Heath?"

"I shall be only too pleased for you to do so, and I will gladly answer any inquiries which may be addressed to me. I ought to add, to show how strong my chest is now, that I belong to a band connected with a religious organization, and play a wind instrument four nights a week, and nearly all day on Sunday."

This is Mr. Heath's testimony. Any one who doubts it can communicate with him at the address above given, and he will be happy to answer any questions.

NOTE.—While in Newton Abbot I met several persons who corroborated Mr. Heath's statement. One gentleman, Mr. Churton, Rock Villa, Wolborough Hill, who knows all the facts, vouches for their correctness. He has also seen the good effects of Mr. Congreve's treatment in other cases, and speaks of it as the most wonderful medicine he ever knew.

The case of Mr. Heath is one of a number in the neighborhood of Torquay visited by the special commissioner.

Every person suffering from Chest Disease, and all of weak lungs and delicate habit, should read Mr. Congreve's book on Consumption of the Lungs or Decline, and its successful treatment, showing that formidable disease to be curable in all its stages, with observations on Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Chronic Bronchitis; together with accounts of nearly 400 successfully cured cases, any one of which may be like yours, to be had post free for 35 cents, or the book will be sent free with every first order of $1.00 bottle of Balsamic Elixir.

CONGREVE'S BALSAMIC ELIXIR can be obtained from many drug stores, but it will take some time before it will be introduced into all of them throughout this vast country. If your druggist has not yet put it in stock, it will be sent you, carriage paid, from my own depot, on receipt of 50 cts., $1.00, $1.75, $3.75 or $7.00, according to the size of the bottle ordered.

GEO. THOMAS CONGREVE,
London, Eng., and 4 Wooster St., NEW YORK.
Druggists supplied by Charles N. Crittenton Co., NEW YORK.
☞Mention this paper.

THE ADVANCE GUARD
For January

is anxious to enter your homes. Let it in as the avant courier of the special

Neal Dow Number,

which will appear in February, containing, among other things, a fac-simile letter from the "Grand Old Man" of Prohibition.

Subscription price, 50 cents.
Single copy, 5 cents.
Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ARE YOU A POLITICIAN?

If so, can you not use effectively our Neal Dow Prohibition Number?

PICTURE LEAFLETS.

This is notably the age of pictures, and we have yielded to the acknowledged demand, and provided for the young people Picture Leaflets.

Series of Eight.

No. 1. WHAT THE ROBINS TOLD THE APPLE BLOSSOMS.
2. HANDS OUT, YOUNG MAN.
3. JACK.
4. MY SOLDIER BOY.
5. HOW TO USE MONEY.
6. OUR ROOM IN THE HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.
7. THE BOYS' VICTORY.
8. TEDDIE.

In large type, so the little ones can read for themselves.

PRICE.
Per 1,000, postpaid, - - - $1.00
" 100, " - - - .15

Address,
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

CAN YOU VOTE?

If you are a woman and cannot vote, use your political influence by distributing the Neal Dow Prohibition Number among your gentlemen friends.

See list of prices.

ATTENTION! BOYS!

See our display advertisement which cannot fail to interest you. This opportunity is not for your mother or sister, but for you only. We do not offer many premiums but we are confident this nickel watch is just what you need, just what it claims to be, and for the effort it will cost, you can not obtain a better time-keeper. It is really a clock movement in a nickel case, manufactured by the Waterbury Clock Company, small enough to fit in your vest pocket. The smallest boy can wind it and tell accurate time by it. It is not a toy watch nor as small and delicate as your father's, yet will keep perhaps better time than his. Read our offer and notify us at once that you wish to work for one of these watches and we will be ready to fill your order as soon as it reaches us.

SOUVENIR CARD.

This is the very brightest of all our plans for

Neal Dow Day.

It consists of a handsome card containing a fine portrait of the hero, with the dates

1804—1894

conspicuous, and the motto with which he began his life work, "With God's help I'll change all this," signed with his autograph.

The design is chaste and elegant.

Just the thing to distribute to all at the grand meeting on March 20.

Price, one cent each. Package of 25, twenty cents.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Attention, L. T. L's!
A LETTER FROM NEAL DOW TO THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF AMERICA

is now on sale at The Temple. This will be one of the most valuable souvenirs of Prohibition's Hero, and should be ordered in large quantities.

It is a fac simile of his handwriting, and is sent straight from his heart to yours.

L. T. L. Leaders

and all parents should take heed and order this at once.

Price, 1c.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE RESPONSIVE READING FOR FEBRUARY

is upon LITERATURE, and is now ready.

Each superintendent of literature should place it before her union.

THE ADVANCE GUARD.

It will be a special

Neal Dow Number,

Containing a fac simile letter of the "Grand Old Man" to the boys and girls of America.

Also a portrait, sketch of his life and

Program for the Celebration of his Birthday on March 20.

This, with the other usual features, makes it an especially attractive issue, and one you cannot afford to be without.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

OUR PHILANTHROPY FUND

Is about exhausted and yet there come to us in nearly every mail letters whose tone is as heartrending as the extract given herewith:

"We think almost as much of THE UNION SIGNAL as mother did, but cannot renew until we have shoes and socks and a change of clothes and eatables. . . . Reading from her last UNION SIGNAL on February 6, about 8:30 o'clock, p. m., mother said: 'I am so sorry we must stop it—the children need it. It is food to me.' After ten o'clock, p. m., she said she must 'go to town in the morning and notify the publishers to stop the paper.' At 3:50 a. m., on the 7th, she was 'at rest' after having 'done what she could.' The mother of ten children, five of them under twelve years of age—the wife for twenty odd years of an invalided veteran of the war. Her last conscious words were, 'Dear Jesus, give me rest, one way or the other, quick.' He answered as He always does the prayer of faith in the best way."

Our philanthropy fund is used to supply just such families as these with THE UNION SIGNAL—but it is nearly exhausted. Who will aid us?

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Signal Notes.

If we like a man's dream, we call him a reformer. If we don't like his dream we call him a crank.—W. D. Howells.

The population of Japan now numbers over forty-one millions, being increased by nearly four hundred thousand this last year. As the census reports seventy-five hundred persons over ninety and one hundred, and forty over one hundred years of age, long life seems to be the lot of the Japanese.

Four things were agreed upon at the National Conference on Good City Government, in Philadelphia. First, the executive should be concentrated. Second, municipal should be separated from state and National elections. Third, the importance of extending civil service rules was impressed, and fourth, in a sense, every city has the government it deserves.

The report of the forty-first anniversary of the Y. M. C. A. of New York City bristles with statistics of interest and encouragement. System and system systematized is a great factor in the success of this grand organization which confidently states that a total of nearly half a million young men in New York alone are within reach of the Association's influence, every week day in the year.

Most contractors allow and day laborers demand what is called "beer time," which means about ten minutes intermission forenoon and afternoon, for going for beer. As long as cold buckwheat cakes soaked in gravy, sausage, chunks of baker's bread, hard boiled eggs and such food constitute the contents of the dinner pail, beer will be bought, and until hygienic cooking is taught at the same time as the three R's, the saloon will be patronized by the workingman.

Organization is the order of the day, but it is slow in entering the ranks of working women. In England, in 1870, there was not a working women's organization; there are now several unions, but they embrace only sixty thousand women. In France matters are much worse. There are seven hundred thousand working women in Paris whose condition is deplorable. Many needle women working from twelve to fourteen hours a day earn only twenty cents. In order to earn fifty cents a woman must be an expert and not leave her machine for twelve hours. The cost of living, excepting rents, is as high as in New York City. The sugar workers and match makers have worse evils to contend with, as in the former they stand out all night in all weather, and in the latter the white sulphur used brings on terrible maladies, destroys the teeth and poisons the mother's milk. Children are often left alone all day. Is it any wonder that family life is impossible, and that the population is decreasing every year? Hard is the fate of the baby girl born of working parents in France.

The student volunteer movement for foreign mission, (headquarters, 80 Institute Place, Chicago) is one of the noble outgrowths of an era in which mankind is making a study of his brother man with the single purpose of that brother's highest good. In The Student Volunteer, the organ of this movement, a correspondent speaking from Ningpo, China, says in referring to the spiritual deadness of the heathen: "During his college days he (the volunteer) has been faithful to his Y. M. C. A. work and to his Bible. Yes, but under it all there have been growing up habits of soul life, which here, by some alchemy, are brought so prominently to the surface as to startle him. They are fatal to his success and he never knew he had them. And every day this very deadness of heathendom will bring them into prominence and his weaknesses will dwarf into insignificance his supposed good qualities. Now then, after I have said that all this darkness is relieved in his daily life by the lives of the church members, weak as they may be, and by the faithfulness of many of his helpers, and also to some extent by the better elements in heathen life, I want to lay stress upon the point toward which I have been coming, namely, the great need of spiritual preparation in the volunteer."

A NEW CURE FOR ASTHMA.

Medical science at last reports a positive cure for Asthma in the Kola plant, found on the Congo river, West Africa. So great is their faith in its wonderful curative powers, the Kola Importing Co., 1164 Broadway, New York, are sending out large trial cases of the Kola Compound free to all sufferers from Asthma. Send your name and address on postal card, and they will send you a trial case by mail free.

A Great Secret

underlies the principle that has brought success in the production and sale of the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk, and this partly accounts for the fact that competitors do not successfully imitate it. Thirty years in the lead.

IVORY SOAP

IT FLOATS

IS NOT LOST IN THE TUB.

THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CIN'TI.

HERE IS Something IN Flowers, Both new and distinct.

NEW SWEET SCENTED PANSIES.

NEW HYBRIDS, in which are blended the rich perfume of the Violet, with all the beauty characteristic of the Pansy.

This new race is the happy result of crossing Pansies and Alpine Violets, and no American garden in 1894 will be complete that does not contain them.

THE FLOWERS OF THE NEW FRAGRANT PANSIES RETAIN THE DELIGHTFUL PERFUME of the violet, combined with form, size and colors of the pansy. In fact, critics consider that the flowers of this new class are even more beautiful than pansies, the colors of the selfs being purer and the blotchings, markings, pencilings, etc., of the variegated sorts being more delicately blended.

THE PLANTS OF THE NEW FRAGRANT PANSIES possess the hardy, tufted or spreading habit of the wild violet and continue to grow and bloom in increasing abundance for years.

PRICE, PER PACKET, OF SEEDS IN MIXED COLORS, 25 CENTS.

A complete description and colored plate of this new floral beauty will be found in our 1894 Catalogue of "EVERYTHING for the GARDEN," which we will send FREE with every order from this advertisement, when this paper is mentioned. If Catalogue alone is wanted, it will be mailed on receipt of 20 cents. As every copy, however, with postage, costs us 25 cents, you will find it more advantageous to order the NEW SWEET SCENTED PANSY and get for nothing a catalogue of 160 pages, containing nearly 500 engravings and six beautiful colored plates—in fact, the most superb publication of its kind ever issued. Postage stamps accepted as cash.

PETER HENDERSON & CO.

35 & 37 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK.

WANTED Agents everywhere to sell our Stove Polish Mitten.

You can make from $3 to $5 a day sure, for every lady buys one at sight. It keeps her hands perfectly clean and polishes the stove better and quicker than a brush or rag, Sample 35c. a set. Ad. New England Novelty Mfg. Co., 24 Portland St.. Dept. R, Boston.

DONT GO TO SCHOOL

TO LEARN BOOK-KEEPING WHEN you can learn it AT HOME, within 100 hours' study, without aid of a teacher, FROM "Goodwin's Improved Book-keeping and Business Manual."

40,493 Copies Sold. 4,028 Testimonials. Write to J. H. GOODWIN, 601, 1215 B'way, N. Y.

DO YOU OWN TOKOLOGY?

Mrs. L. N. A. writes: "If I knew I was to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of TOKOLOGY." This book, a complete ladies' guide in health and disease, is written by Alice B. Stockham, M. D., who practiced as a physician over twenty-five years. Prepaid, $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agts.

ALICE B. STOCKHAM & CO., 277 Madison-st. Chicago

When writing please mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

The Par Excellence of LUNG GYMNASTICS is found in the use of our IMPROVED BREATHING TUBE.

Unequalled for developing Throat and Lungs, thus preventing and Curing Consumption, Asthma and Throat Diseases. Also invaluable for Preventing Colds. Send for Circulars to HYGIENIC SUPPLY CO., P. O. Box, 1951 N, Boston.

SENSIBLE EGG WHIP AND CAKE MIXER.

This article gives perfect satisfaction. As an Egg Whip it surpasses all others, while as a Cake Mixer it is equally serviceable. NEAT, NOVEL AND DURABLE.

A SUPERIOR VEGETABLE SKIMMER.

Good for skimming out doughnuts, eggs, etc., from the hot liquid in which cooked. Mailed, postpaid, 25c.

WOODS, SHERWOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass

The Columbian Raisin Seeder

Has received the World's Fair Award.

A perfectly simple device that anybody can use. Every housekeeper will appreciate it. Sent by mail to any address for 25 cts. Liberal terms to agents.

JAS. L. HALL, Box 24, Kingston, Mass.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS,

But save you money on everything you eat, wear or use. Send 8 cts. for full catalogue.

H. R. EAGLE & Co., 68 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

WHY DO YOU WORRY along with dull knives and shears when . . . . . 75 CENTS will buy an 8-in. Grafton Family Grindstone? Each stone is mounted on a neatly japanned iron frame and will last a life-time. Notice that each stone is provided with an iron screw clamp for fastening it securely to the table. Shipped by express on receipt of price. Agents wanted.

GRAFTON STONE CO., 51 River St., Grafton, O.

The Natural Body Brace

Cures Female Weakness, restores health and vigor

After wearing your Natural Body Brace for nine months, the most extreme and painful female weakness has vanished.
MRS. JESSIE FISHER, Spruce Creek, Pa.

I am pleased beyond expression with the Brace. I would not part with it for any money.
MARY F. ADAM, Neosho Falls, Kas.

I have been afflicted with falling of the womb for 23 years, and have never had anything to help me like the Natural Body Brace has. I could not stand up long enough to wash dishes before wearing it, and now (after wearing it 3 months) I am cooking for a large family. I also help wash and do any kind of work.
MISS LUCINDA FIELD, Oscar, Texas.

Money Refunded if Brace is not Satisfactory.

Send for Full Information.

Natural Body Brace Co., SALINA, KANSAS.

Howard C. Rash, Man'gr.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

FOR MAN AND BEAST. Manufactured by THE J. L. Mott Iron Works 84 to 90 Beekman Street, NEW YORK. 311 & 313 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO. Catalogue on Application.

A Swell Affair.

Did You Ever Look Like This?

DENT'S TOOTHACHE GUM

STOPS TOOTHACHE INSTANTLY

DON'T TAKE IMITATIONS

Sold by all Druggists, or send 15c to C. S. DENT & CO., Detroit, Mich.

THIS IS NOT A CHEWING GUM.

The History of Prohibition in Maine. With Historical Sketch and fine engraving of Neal Dow. Octavo, 8 pp., only 5 cts; $4 per 100.

Neal Dow Prohibition Song Leaflet. Octavo, 8 pp. Seven first-class Prohibition Songs with Music. Price 3 cts.; $2 per 100.

Trade and the Liquor Traffic. A four-page 12mo tract by Hon. Neal Dow. $3 per 1,000. Send to

J. N. STEARNS, Pub. Agent, 58 Reade St., New York.

MUSIC SALE To reduce our stock of Music we will send by mail, postpaid, 70 pieces full sheet music size, all parts complete, including Marguerite, Man in the Moon, Mary and John, also Marches, Waltzes, Quadrilles, etc., all for 20c. Satisfaction given or money back. Read this: "Mr. H.: Am very much pleased with the music sent me; it is worth ten times the money. R. J. Allen, Hoosick, N. H." Address V. HATHAWAY, 339 Wash. St., Boston, Mass.

Now is the time to make money by raising early chickens. Get a INVINCIBLE HATCHER for $17, and start out right. Send 4c. in stamps for No. 76 Catalogue to BUCKEYE INCUBATOR CO., Springfield, O.

DOUBLE Breech-Loader $6.00. RIFLES $2.00 WATCHES GUNS BICYCLES $15 All kinds cheaper than elsewhere. Before you buy, send stamp for catalogue to POWELL & CLEMENT CO. 166 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

BAKER'S COCOA ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used

WANTED—INTELLIGENT LADY in every town to introduce the new "Youths Cyclopedia," prepared expressly for Teachers Pupils and Students. This is the one book that in these close times is bringing large profits to capable agents. Our school and installment plan makes quick work and brings big results. No capital required. Address C. B. BEACH & CO., 216 Clark St., Chicago.

EVERY LADY WANTS OUR STOVE-POLISHING MITTEN. Will polish a stove better than anything on earth, and keep your hands clean at the same time. Ladies buy it at sight. They all want it. Big Profits to Agents. Sample Mitten and Dauber by mail, 30 cts. BOSTON NOVELTY CO, BOX 1540, BOSTON, MASS.

Fine Blooded Cattle, Sheep, Hogs, Poultry, Sporting Dogs. Send stamp for Catalogue. 150 engravings. N P. BOYER & CO., Coatesville, Pa.

UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XX.—No. 9.] CHICAGO, March 1, 1894. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

Ursula D Henrick
1029 15th st

THE "GREAT PETITION."

Unions are asking, What is the next thing to do? We reply, Circulate the Great Petition. Every union in a college town should begin an active canvass among the faculty and students at once. Other unions can divide up the citizens into classes, as ministers, merchants, mechanics, etc., and appoint a committee to visit each class with the Petition. System reduces labor one-half, and secures better results. Send to Miss Briggs, The Temple, Chicago, for the Petition blank.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The New Jersey legislature difficulties are to be settled in the state supreme court.

Washington's birthday was celebrated with the usual display of patriotism last Thursday.

Emperor William, of Germany, has paid a friendly visit to Prince Bismarck, at Fredericksruhe.

A deficit of one hundred and fifty-five million lire is announced by the Italian minister of finance.

Michigan's barber shop Sunday closing law has been declared constitutional by the state supreme court.

The English government has recognized the Hawaiian provisional administration by sending its Consul his exequatur.

News from Brazil indicates great gains by the insurgent troops. An anxiety for the speedy termination of the war is felt by the people.

At the reassembling of the Italian Chamber of Deputies last week, the session had to be suspended owing to disorder among disagreeing factions.

General Bonilla and his followers are in possession of Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, and the conquered president, Vasquez, is being pursued.

The employers' liability bill has been withdrawn from the House of Lords by the English premier on account of the amendments attached by that body.

By the withdrawal and modifications of its amendments to the Parish Councils bill, the House of Lords has removed the obstacles to the bill becoming a law.

A bronze tablet to mark the spot where the continental congress met in December, 1776, was placed in position with public ceremonies in Baltimore, February 22.

The trial of the anarchists, arrested for conspiring against the life of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, has resulted in the imprisonment of all for varying terms.

Unemployed men in a body, numbering ten thousand, marched to the state house in Boston last week and petitioned the governor for work. A committee was appointed by the house of representatives to consider the question.

The Senate committee on Foreign Relations reported Monday on the Hawaiian situation. The majority report favors annexation and gently criticises the Cleveland administration. A minority report was submitted indorsing the president's policy.

Chlorine gas was liberated during the freshman banquet in a hall at Ithaca, N. Y., by which several students have been made seriously ill, and from the effects of which the colored cook has died. Sophomore students are implicated and a searching investigation is being made.

Twenty-five representatives of the National Woman's Suffrage Association visited the national Capitol last week, headed by Susan B. Anthony, Dr. Anna Shaw and others, and were given a hearing by the House Judiciary Committee, four of whose members listened to their request. In the Senate marble room they were received and given an audience by Senators Hoar, Wolcott, Blackburn and Hill, of the Senate Committee on Woman Suffrage.

THE Iowa W. C. T. U. is now in the thick of the battle for righteous law in her commonwealth. Aside from the numerous liquor license laws which she is alertly opposing, Mrs. Dunham, the state president, has organized her loyal lieutenants and faithful following into a brave brigade which is charging the legislative heights with the home protection guns. Her letter on page 17 will be read with great interest.

AMONG the valued contributions which arrived too late for insertion in our Neal Dow Prohibition number were those by Miss Willard and Lady Henry Somerset. Miss Willard's will appear in next week's issue, and Lady Henry's will be found on page 4 of this issue. We are also glad to be able to insert Chairman Dickie's and Hon. Henry W. Blair's on our pages this week, as they did not reach us in time for the special number.

WE hope our readers will not miss any of the valuable reading matter on pages 14, 15, 16 and 17 of this issue, because it is out of its regular position. A pressure of material, particularly Correspondence, News From the Field and Official Communications, has obliged us to increase the capacity of our paper this week. We trust the National superintendents and state reporters will bear with us in the unavoidable delay in giving publication to their articles. Those already in hand will now be published promptly.

THE social purity crusade at Lincoln, Neb., was inaugurated last Sunday by a plain, earnest sermon to men only on "Secret sin against chastity our national peril." Every known or suspected evil house in the city will be raided, March 1, the inmates prosecuted, and a policeman stationed at the entrance to warn visitors against entering. The local W. C. T. U. have offered to furnish temporary shelter for all and permanent homes for those who care to reform. This is showing the true love of Christ, who freely forgave the repentant Magdalene.

CHAIRMAN DICKIE confesses to an "agreeable disappointment" in the generosity and promptness with which Prohibitionists are pledging their support to the party expenses for the current year. He is sending out weekly reports just now, in which all contributors to the fund are credited. Those who can afford it are doubling their subscription during these depressed times, recognizing that there must be many who cannot contribute at all. Mr. Dickie solicits one dollar pledges per month, and a cent per day for 1894. As Mr. Dickie says, "We ought to have a thousand responses at that figure within a week, for who cannot afford a penny a day for prohibition?"

Two Peace documents have recently come into our hands, one from a representative meeting of the Society of Friends, held in York, England, January 25, and the other from the Pennsylvania Peace society. The former is a most rational and dignified protest to the proposed addition to the British navy. It sets forth many terse facts, such as the appropriation of every two pounds out of three raised by parliamentary taxation to warlike expenses, and that Great Britain cannot recommend the reduction of the military forces of Europe, so long as she leads in naval power. The other document is a valuable résumé of the progress and blessings of the Peace movement up to the present time, and, being too long to reproduce in these columns, we advise our readers to send for it to the office of the Universal Peace Union, 1305 Arch street, Philadelphia. It is fortunate in these days of "rumors of war" that we have so many well-organized and far-seeing peace societies, which are strengthening the anti-war sentiments of the nations through their excellent arbitration literature.

THE Catholic Total Abstinence union of the diocese of Pittsburg has issued a strong appeal to all Catholics who are applying for a saloon license in Allegheny county, Penn. It is as follows:

"For the following reasons we appeal to you to get out of the saloon business: Because the signs of the times are that it is un-American to sell liquor; because your family suffers most keenly on account of your business and respectable people look with pity upon your grown up sons and daughters; because as the law imposes a license it shows that it regards your business as a dangerous one. Why does not your grocer or butcher need a license? Because no matter how carefully you think you handle the business, drunkenness, misery and crime are the outcome of it; because public opinion is now on the side of temperance and coming to regard saloon keeping as an unsavory business; because if you are a Catholic, your church has declared against saloon keeping, has called it a dangerous business and advises all Catholics to get out of it; because the greatest minds in the church to-day declare that your business is doing more to injure the church than all other evils, and until intemperance is wiped out, religion can make but slow progress in America; because the late Catholic Congress held in Chicago, composed of representative laymen from all over the country, declared: We urge Catholics everywhere to get out and keep out of the saloon business, because health, family, society, life and the soul itself are endangered through you; because you would be loth to see your son the patron of a bar-room. Then heed well how many sons you ruin. In God's name, turn to some other business. What if your income is less? It will be free from the curses of widows and orphans, mothers and wives. Think before you enter upon another year of this detestable work. Make the effort to get out of it, and God will bless you."

A FEW weeks ago a paper of little standing in Chicago published a sensational article of great length concerning Mr. William T. Stead's views of spiritualism. Not content with divulging Mr. Stead's attitude on the question (which we do not undertake to defend), it managed adroitly to turn the odium of the whole thing on the W. C. T. U., Miss Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, Miss Helen Hood and other prominent white-ribboners. To the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL, who have read our denunciations of Mr. Stead's avowed temperance policy, the statement that "Mr. Stead is now the oracle of the W. C. T. U." is simply absurd. If the article in question had been confined to its original disreputable columns, we would not have given it the dignity of a reply, but we have just discovered that it has been published in papers of some repute in other cities, and fearing that it may leave at least a mistrust in some good minds, we take this occasion to quote from the private letters of two of the parties concerned. Miss Willard says: "Lady Henry and I do not regard ourselves as at all complicated in Mr. Stead's 'spooks,' and think it would be undignified on our part to take any notice of the subject. I never had the slightest belief in Mr. Stead's 'manifestations,' but always stood in the attitude of a skeptic, and have told him again and again that he had never given me the slightest reason to believe that his communications originated anywhere outside of his own ingenious cranium." Miss Hood writes that she was interested at first in Mr. Stead's telepathy, but soon became convinced of its fraudulency and that she has no faith whatever in his pretended communications with the spirit world. She has frequently talked with him about the absurdity of the whole matter, and has insisted many times that the publication of her friend's revered name in this connection should cease, to which Mr. Stead had agreed. If there is any device of the devil of which the W. C. T. U. has a greater abhorrence than any other, it is spiritualism, and the unfriendly press of this country are on the wrong track if they think to find our vulnerable point there.

"SATISFIED."

BY ELIZABETH HATTON.

By any path He please,
By ways we have not known,
So that it leads us unto Him,
And leaves us not alone.

The way is dark, O Lord,
Guide Thou our feet;
And if Thou hold us by the hand
Then any path is sweet.

We cannot know what it will be
To wake and see Thy glory,
For human eyes can't bear the sight,
Nor human ears the story.

We look now darkly through a glass,
Trusting Thy love and grace;
But when this mortal life is o'er
We'll see Thee face to face.

Just now we only know a part,
Only see a little way;
And if the "little" be so sweet,
What waits the dawn of day!

And when our hearts seem almost broken
Over some bliss denied,
We hush our sorrow, whispering,
"There we shall be satisfied!"

MRS. CHIPPINFIELD'S "CALL."

BY ELIZABETH CUMINGS.

"I never prayed in public, and I don't feel any call to." The line between Mrs. Chippinfield's bright black eyes came out very strong. "I don't think women ought to assume public duties so long as there are men to attend to them. No, you cannot count on me, and I shall not permit you to saddle the church debt on the sisters, either. They have helped more than enough already."

The Rev. Archibald Loyde was thirty, but he had given more of his attention to dead languages than to live human beings. "My dear madam," he urged eagerly, "times have changed since you were young. It is most surprising how the ladies are coming to the front in all lines of work." He cracked his knuckles nervously and repeated, "In all lines. Why, they are doing everything."

"Precisely, and that's just what I object to," retorted Mrs. Chippinfield, a peachy bloom rising in her comely cheeks. "Now what part can the brethren take in the work of the church, if they are relieved of all the public duties, and the heavy burdens? What are they good for?"

In desperation Mr. Loyde again cracked his knuckles, taking one long finger after another, while his prominent Adam's apple worked up and down in his throat, as if moved by the piston of a reluctant pump. A driving rain beat against the windows, emphasizing the cozy warmth of the pleasant sitting-room and reminding him that he must face its chill and sting uncheered by the consciousness of having gained his point. It was useless to attempt to coax the women to take part in the orthodox prayer-meetings, or to shoulder the church debt, if Mrs. Chippinfield refused to lead the way. He was, however, a sensible little man, and after a minute admitted there was reason in her argument.

"But, sister Chippinfield, the men won't," he went on. He had been reared in the Methodist connection and rasped Mrs. Chippinfield's feelings by calling her by that endearing name. "I don't know what to do, sister. You must see for yourself our meetings are deader than—nails. I have to call on the few brethren who come,—and you know how slow they are to rise. As for the church debt it'll never be paid unless the women tackle it."

"That is just as Timothy Dowdall says," Mrs. Chippinfield replied firmly, moved in spite of herself by the appeal in that word, sister. "If Timothy Dowdall can be interested to give what he can and ought, the rest can be done. But you must talk to him, and the brethren, not to me. With all the commands Paul laid upon women he nowhere is recorded as saying, 'Sisters, perform the duties rightfully belonging to the brethren.'"

If Mr. Loyde went away in low spirits Mrs. Chippinfield bustled about preparing her noon dinner in anything but a pleasant frame of mind. Though she was perfectly willing to admit her sixty years, she did not like to be reminded of them, nor did she like to be instructed by persons younger than herself. The former pastor, though he was a D. D. and had published a book upon the Psalms, had never presumed to advise her, had in fact deferred to her as a woman to whom the church owed much since she had a daughter, a missionary in China. But even the mistakes of Idoletta Peele, who was supposed to be a "help," and was, for the most part, a hinder, could not divert her attention from a quiet voice, that would go on whispering disapprovingly, "Each person ought to do what he can. You care a great deal for your own way and for the speech of people, Lucy Chippinfield. You were brought up an old-fashioned Presbyterian, and you never have taken any public part in meetings and you think that is reason enough for always keeping silent. It is no reason at all. And you might stir up Timothy Dowdall yourself. You have known him these forty years. It would not be pleasant, and you might not accomplish anything, but you might try. In any event Mr. Loyde is right about the debt. The church never can do the work it ought till it is paid."

Into reflections such as these came the sound of a timid knock, and a moment later Idoletta had admitted a slim girl of ten, who was very wet, and evidently very much frightened. A shawl was tied over her head, and under her arm was a little basket. "Go down cellar and get me six eggs," commanded Mrs. Chippinfield, and the instant Idoletta was gone she turned to the newcomer with, "What is it, Sally?"

"Oh, if you please, mother, she—sent me," she cried under her breath, her color coming and going. "If you please, we've nothing to eat. Mother said cold victuals. You see she can't go out washing on account of the baby, and father,—why, you see father's been sick considerable this winter. He has so," she added glibly, as Idoletta reappeared.

A half hour later when Tom Chippinfield, his grandmother's pride and darling, came home to dinner he saw little Sally slowly coming down the steps, dry and snug under an old umbrella. Her basket and her stomach both were full, but in spite of it Sally looked wan.

"Pat Shannon's been spending all his earnings on wet groceries," he said lightly, as he closed the door. "I don't recollect ever seeing a child carrying cold victuals in a basket here in Brookline afore. It's a pity it should be Sally."

"What do you mean by 'wet groceries'?" demanded Mrs. Chippinfield, and closing the kitchen door.

"Oh, whisky, and rum, and beer," said Tom, dropping into a chair and taking up a paper.

"Do you mean to tell me there's a saloon here?" asked his grandmother, incredulously, "and our old Nora's husband is drinking?"

"It isn't a regular saloon. Sabin, the grocer, has taken out a government license," explained Tom from behind the Brookline Exchange. "He keeps his boxes and barrels and ice chest, you know, in that big store-room back of his grocery, and he's had a part enclosed looking on the court off the street. He's fixed it up in very good shape."

A sudden darting pain clutched at Mrs. Chippinfield's heart at hearing Tom speak as one who knew all about the "wet goods" department of Sabin's grocery. She wanted to question him, but he was like the Chippinfields, and she had learned the Chippinfields' characteristics somewhat in the forty years she had lived with his grandfather, and it was not till dinner was over that she asked how Mr. Sabin got his license. "Did he get it of the President," she queried, "or how, and what did he get it for?"

Mr. Chippinfield rubbed his leathery cheeks a moment with a dry hand. He never made haste except to vexation, did Mr. Chippinfield. "I don't know to just what officer he applied; I suppose it was the internal revenue man at Zoar," he said pompously. "As for the reason, I reckon he was after money. Sabin's a man who knows what he's about."

An ungovernable indignation, the gathered result of the morning, shook Mrs. Chippinfield. "And do you mean to say, Abner, that the men in this town are going to sit down and put up with such goings on? That you're not going to stop it?"

"I don't feel any call to meddle with Caleb Sabin," said Mr. Chippinfield coldly, as he got into his great-coat, "and I reckon you'd better not, either. If he chooses to sell whisky, he chooses, and I don't see that there's anything to be done."

Mrs. Chippinfield set out as soon as possible after dinner to visit the Shannons. Nora, Mrs. Shannon, had been her cook before marrying Pat, and her wages had helped buy the bit of land and snug cottage in which the two had set up housekeeping. Mrs. Chippinfield's kind heart was rent thinking of her whilom neat and pretty domestic. Pat had been a hard working man for his class. But he had always let the hard end of life's burden fall upon his wife, and the last baby had left her with enough ailments to have sent a fine lady to bed. And now he was drinking! Mrs. Chippinfield called him hard names as she plashed through the wet. But she called Caleb Sabin still harder names. He had not the excuse of poverty to plead in behalf of his liquor selling. It was he who held the mortgage upon the church. The building was not worth much, but the lot was one of the most desirable in the town which was growing. And the mortgage was almost due. She found her old servant shivering over a handful of fire, her baby in her arms, while she tried to mend little Pat's breeches. Little Pat, himself, was whimpering in the bed in one corner of the kitchen.

"Sure, me'm, Sally'll be home soon and help me. Yes, me'm, she's a blessing. She's gone to the railway yard to pick up coals. Patsy went this mornin', but he's only five, and his arms is weak. Well, me'm, if you know it, I'll not deny it. Th' drink's th' matter. 'Tis heart scaldin' sorrer I've had," and her voice broke into a sob. "Ye see, mem, 'tis the temptation av th' shmell," she resumed after a moment. "My man has a good heart, an' he loves company, an' there it is all ready to his hand at Sabin's place, an' whin he shmells th' drink, he tells me it comes all over him, he must have it. He sez to me only yesterday, sez he, 'Nora, 'tis no use signin' the pledge,' sez he. 'I'm like the people as are enchanted. Whin I shmells the stuff, I'd sell me shirt, aye, an' me soul,' thim's his words, the Lord forgive him, 'me soul,' sez he, 'to have it.' Kind? Ow, no, me'm. 'Tis kind he is sober, but not in th' drink."

Little Pat sat up and put his hand to his freckled forehead. "He threw a boot at me wanst, did my faver," he said solemnly. "He was drunk. I won't let nobody sell him drink stuff when I grow up."

"Something has got to be done," exclaimed Mrs. Chippinfield, starting up as she noted the yellow spot yet in evidence upon Patsy's forehead. "Something shall be done."

"Holy mother o' God!" cried Mrs. Shannon, bending forward over the baby. A footstep sounded at the door. "'Tis Pat come home!"

In all the sixty sheltered, respectable years of her life Lucy Chippinfield had never seen a drunken man, and as Pat Shannon lurched into the room, his bloodshot eyes set, his fair cheeks flushed, her face blanched and she stepped back instinctively. He sat down heavily, and glared at her. "Mebbe you think I'm drunk," he began thickly. "They told me up at the paper mill I'm drunk, an' sent me off. Well! It's my business. You hain't no call to look at me that-a-way. I say you've no call."

The warmth of the room soothed him. He settled back in his chair and closed his eyes. "Wrap up the baby and come with her and Patsy to my house," said Mrs. Chippinfield in a whisper. "I'm afraid to leave you with him, Nora. We can speak to a neighbor about Sally."

"Sure, me'm, 'tis kind of ye," said the poor woman under her breath. "But I can't leave him. After all, ye know he's my man. But, oh, me'm, if ye could stop his chances o' gettin' th' drink! But ye can't. I know ye can't. But may th' heavens be your bed for thinkin' av me, me'm."

A half hour later Mr. Sabin was astounded to see his best customer open the baize-covered door of the retired little room in which he sold "wet groceries" at retail. He was in the act of shaking some drops of bitters into a tumbler containing slices of lemon, and a solution of rum and water, and his surprise was so great he shook the bitters upon the floor instead. The group of men before him somehow melted out of sight as Mrs. Chippinfield appeared. Only Tom Chippinfield, standing by the stove and warming his hands, remained. Mrs. Chippinfield was born a Von Vogle, and the Von Vogles had been the great family of the county when Caleb Sabin was a boy. He eyed his unwelcom visitor with almost abject respect as she glanced about her speculatively, then saying slowly to herself: "It's true then," turned and went out.

Tom Chippinfield hurried after her. "My!" he exclaimed gleefully, "you doubled old Sabin all up."

They walked on in silence a few minutes when he added soberly: "Grandfather sent me there with a package of particularly fine glass. He don't care what he pays, Sabin don't. He buys glass to make your eyes snap."

Nothing but pain or the possibility of losing money ever disturbed Mr. Chippinfield's sleep. Nora Shannon's woes did not cost him a moment's sympathy. Not so his wife. She lay open-eyed till almost morning picturing her old servant's trials, and seeing Tom, her own dear grandson, smiling amidst Caleb Sabin's bottles. Mr Chippinfield prided himself upon what he called "minding his own business," and had won a reputation for considerable sagacity by covering his mental vacuity with the vail of silence. It was useless to ask him what could be done to shut up Caleb Sabin's groggery so long as he found there a market for extra quality of glass ware. Mrs. Chippinfield was not a woman to spread her difficulties before any one. Had the dear daughter so far away been home, she would have discussed the matter with her. As it was she rose unrefreshed hearing the voice repeating the words it had whispered all night, "Something must be done, be done. Something, something."

She attended to her morning duties automatically, but scrupulously, then impelled still to movement carefully dressed herself for the street. Strangers in the town often turned to look at Mrs. Chippinfield and called her distinguished looking. Brookline, if it said nothing about her looks, significant fact! accepted what she did without criticism. A nipping north wind had driven off the rain. The sun was shining brightly and turning the willows amber yellow for the spring, and high up in the blotchy cottonwoods the jays called out cheerily. Mrs. Chippinfield noted all these trifles with keen interest until she saw a little fellow with a basket slipping round to the minister's back door.

"Ah!" she murmured aloud, "more than one paper-mill hand is in the grip of 'the shmell.'" She went on rapidly as if intent upon urgent business. But she had no plan, no idea of the "something" the voice told her "must be done." "My feet took me," she explained humbly afterward. Certain it is she went straight into Caleb Sabin's side door, and entered the room he had with unconscious grim humor named his "health office." A dozen or more men all talking at once were crowded about the bar. She advanced straight upon them, and they, in sudden silence, fell back, while Tobe Sandford, the bartender, nervously whisked a napkin along the marble before her. She put her elbows down upon the bar, and bent her head upon her hands. Her fingers clenched each other in entreaty. The waves of her white hair hid her face. All the listeners heard was a whisper repeated over and over and over. "God! God! God!" How long she stood there she did not know. When she came to herself the place was vacant.

When Mrs. Chippinfield went down the street that afternoon little Mrs. Dwight, the next neighbor, followed her Mrs. Dwight was a widow. Rumor said she had left her husband "in a drunkard's grave" up in busy Chicago. She had been born in Brookline, and she had come back to her old home to bring up her twin sons, now eight. Each sect has its traditions. Mrs. Dwight was a Methodist, and when orthodox Mrs. Chippinfield again stood at the bar of the "health office" in prayer, Mrs. Dwight knelt beside her, hiding her face in her widow's veil. The frequenters of the place went out on velvet feet. Pat Shannon looking in, stayed until he had mutely and reverently touched brow, shoulders and breast, as before the sacred cross. As for Caleb Sabin, he chewed a great deal of feeling off upon sticks that evening. He wanted to swear, but he did not dare to. In point of fact he did not dare to say a word.

The next morning it was worse, for after Mrs. Chippinfield came ten women, mothers all, and little Mrs. Teeple sang in a voice that went to the heart,

"One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and o'er;
I'm nearer home to-day
Then ever I was before."

The Sabins were a stubborn tribe, cross-grained, and with no legends of gentle blood to deter them; but Caleb's mother had been a pious woman, and one night his stock of "wet groceries" mysteriously disappeared. But he revenged himself for this concession by sending a slip of paper to Mr. Chippinfield, addressing him as "Secretary of the Board of Orthodox Church Trustees." Now Mr. Chippinfield's private opinion of his wife's conduct for the past week had been beyond his power of expression, and this slip of paper made him speechless, absolutely full to the lips with the wrath of a slow man. He put on his snuff-colored overcoat and went slowly over to see Timothy Dowdall, the president of the board. He had deep respect for Mr. Dowdall, as a man with money to lend and spend, all of his own collecting, and withal as a man prone to keep his money. His tone was distinctly apologetic as he laid the paper down before Timothy, saying, "I reckon the women have stirred up the animals with a vengeance."

Mr. Dowdall put on his glasses. Like Mr. Chippinfield he was a skinny, leathery-visaged man with his thoughts and feelings well put out of sight. His visitor was therefore entirely surprised by what he said, which was simply, "I'll pay this mortgage." Then waving Mr. Chippinfield into a chair he continued: "I feel deeply indebted to your wife. I have two grandsons of my own whom I have seen," his dry, business voice faltered, "whom I have seen," he repeated, "going into Sabin's 'health office.' I did not know what to do." Mrs. Dowdall was a hopeless invalid. The boys' mother was dead, and their father was in South America. "I will confess too, I didn't know how to go to work upon Sabin. Can you tell me,"—he paused a moment to put his hand to his lips; "I would really like to know what caused Mrs. Chippinfield to do—what she has done?"

"She hasn't said much," said Mr. Chippinfield, feeling things were turning out in the most unexpected manner, and rejoicing that he had not disclosed his disapprobation of his Lucy's proceedings, "but once—the one time I spoke to her, she said she had felt a call. That was the word she used, 'a call.'"

Mr. Dowdall punched the fire and put a great lump of coal upon it before he spoke. "I believe it was—'a call' he said at last. "Don't mention it, but I know privately that Sabin contemplated a big liquor business. His brother-in-law was coming to go in with him, and they were going to open up on Main street. Now he is going to leave town. You may depend upon it your wife did have 'a call.'"

S. Evanston, Ill.

THE PLEBISCITE IN CANADA.

BY ELLA F. M. WILLIAMS.

Since 1867 (the date of federation) the temperance people of Canada have repeatedly endeavored to secure prohibitory legislation concerning the drink traffic, but have always been met with the assertion that the country was not yet ready for prohibition. When the question again came up in 1891, backed by petitions bearing over three hundred signatures, the main issue was temporarily avoided by the appointment of a Royal Commission of investigation.

The taking of a plebiscite, or expression of the wishes of the people, had often been suggested by the opposing party, who claimed that it would plainly show how little real temperance sentiment there was in Canada, and naturally, coming from that source, the proposition had not seemed attractive to Prohibitionists. Now, however, that the Dominion government would do nothing during the two or three years required for the work of the commission, the temperance people began to look about them to see what could be done to educate public opinion and secure provincial legislation. With this in view, the stirring young province of Manitoba arranged for the taking of a plebiscite a year ago, and scored three to one in favor of prohibition. This showing gave courage to some of the other provinces. In Prince Edward Island a similar plebiscite was taken in December, 1893, showing ten thousand six hundred and sixteen votes for, and three thousand three hundred and ninety against prohibition, a proportion of a little over three to one in its favor. In this case there were about three hundred who did not take the trouble to vote on either side.

As Ontario has the largest population of any province in the Dominion, containing within its borders over twenty-two per cent of the inhabitants of Canada, its course concerning this question is most significant. During the session of 1893, when Mr. Marter brought before the Ontario legislature his bill to put a stop to the issuing of retail licenses, it was, as usual, urged that the people of Ontario were not ready for such action and that the province could not legally prohibit the sale of liquor. However, the premier, Sir Oliver Mowat, promised that he would take steps to ascertain the extent of provincial jurisdiction, and, in the meantime a bill was passed authorizing the taking of a plebiscite and thus defined: "An act to enable the electors of the province to pronounce upon the desirability of prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale, as a beverage, of intoxicating liquors. This act provided that, on the day fixed by law for holding polls for the annual election of members of municipal councils, in the month of January, 1894, this question should also be submitted to the voters: "Are you in favor of the immediate prohibition by law, of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage?"

The persons eligible as voters were to be those whose names at the date selected were "found entered on the last voter's list for the municipality, certified by the county judge," also unmarried women and widows whose names appeared on the voter's list as qualified to vote at the election of municipal councillors. The ballots for men were yellow and for women blue in color, the clerk of each municipality being obliged to report the following items: The number of votes given "yes" or "no," respectively, by male voters; the number of votes given "yes" or "no" respectively by female voters; the number of men entitled to vote on said question; the number of women entitled to vote, and the number of spoiled or rejected ballots.

Thus it will be seen that it was very ingeniously contrived to show not only the total number of votes cast and the majority on the winning side, but also just what proportion of the men of Ontario (who alone are entitled to vote in electing member of Parliament) cared enough about prohibition to vote for or against it, and also the proportion of women voters who avail themselves of the privileges of franchise and in doing so, favored prohibition.

The first complete official returns were published the sixth of February, although a slight alteration in the method of classification may yet be made. As now given the total vote for prohibition is 192,487, against 110,757, giving a majority of 81,730 (or about nineteen to eleven) in its favor. Only fifty-eight per cent of the possible vote was polled. These figures include the votes of both sexes. The women's vote, taken alone, showed 8,728 for, and 1,281 against, or a proportion of six to one for prohibition. Only thirty-five per cent of the possible female vote was cast.

The failure of so many women to declare themselves on this question has caused considerable comment. Ontario white-ribboners tell us that the voters' lists were not thoroughly revised and that some of the younger women had married and therefore were ineligible, although their names had not been taken from the lists. Of the older women many were too old and feeble to go to the polls. They claim that if only bachelors and widowers had been allowed to vote there would have been a much smaller percentage of male voters at the polls.

It is objected by the liquor party that as only fifty-eight per cent of the possible votes were polled, even a vote of nineteen to eleven does not make a majority of the voting power of the province. This is true enough, but it is noticeable that no such objection is raised to the carrying of other measures or the election of members of Parliament by such a large majority vote when the proportion of actual to possible voters is even less than in this case. It is certainly no more fair to claim that all non-voters are "opposed to the measure" in the one case than in the other.

Although the three provincial plebiscites have shown grand majorities on the right side, they are but expressions of opinion. It now remains for the Prohibitionists of each province to secure their "crystallization into law." In Manitoba a demand was made upon the government for a prohibitory law for that province, but the old question was raised as to the inability of a province to prohibit the manufacture and importation of liquor. A grand prohibition convention was held in Toronto the 6th of February. There were over one thousand delegates from all parts of Ontario, and representing churches, temperance societies, and various religious organizations. After a careful survey of the situation a large and representative deputation of delegates of both sexes was sent to call upon the premier, requesting the Ontario government "to declare in favor of the total prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating liquors to the full extent of the power vested in the legislature." In reply, the premier spoke at some length, ending with this promise: "If the decision of the privy council is that the province has the jurisdiction to pass a prohibitory liquor law as to sale, I will introduce such a bill in the following session if I am then at the head of the government. If the decision of the privy council is that the province has jurisdiction to pass only a partial prohibitory liquor law I will introduce such a prohibitory bill as the decision will warrant."

This pledge is considered very satisfactory, and as explicit as it could be while the "test case" is waiting for decision. Sir John Thompson, the premier of the Dominion, and Sir Oliver Mowat, premier of Ontario, in pursuance of the latter's promise last year, have been coöperating in taking steps to bring before the supreme court at Ottawa seven questions covering the legal points raised as to the respective rights of Dominion and Provincial legislatures to enact prohibitory laws. When the decision of the supreme court is received it is to be submitted to the final court of appeal—the privy council in England. It is a relief to know that this long-mooted question as to constitutional rights is likely to be settled within a year or more. The able queen's counsel of Toronto, who has been retained by the Ontario government to argue the constitutional question before the supreme court, is said to hold the opinion that any province has the right to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, but cannot prevent their importation.

The Prohibitionists of Nova Scotia have been petitioning the Provincial government for permission to take a plebiscite there, and on February 7, Premier Fielding introduced the desired bill in the House of Assembly. If passed, a plebiscite on the question of prohibition will be taken simultaneously with polling for the local general elections in a short time from now. New Brunswick is likely to fall into line, but Quebec is still hesitating, fearing that the differences of race and religion will prevent the united work needful to secure a majority on the right side.

It is announced that the Royal Commission will probably be able to present its report during the next session of the Dominion Parliament, which is now called for March 15. When this expectation is realized and the supreme court and privy council have rendered their decisions as to constitutional rights, the temperance people of Canada will, at least, know what they have a right to demand from the Dominion and Provincial governments, respectively. While waiting for this, the plain duty is before them of educating public sentiment and of continually agitating the questions involved, so that, as soon as the way opens, wise and prompt action may be taken.

Montreal, Canada.

For this is Love's nobility,—
Not to scatter bread and gold,
Goods and raiment bought and sold,
But to hold fast his simple sense
And speak the speech of innocence,
. . . . . .
For he that feeds men serveth few;
He serves all who dares be true.

—Emerson.

WILLARD HALL NOON MEETINGS.

BY MRS. JANE E. ZIMMERMAN,

Superintendent Willard Hall Noon Meetings.

This noon meeting in the Temple ought to be the very heart of the love and prayer of our white-ribboners the whole world over. Coming at our long established noontide hour of prayer, in the Temple, whence their eyes are turned in the heart of the great city, where so many sons of mothers have been, are, yea and shall be, swallowed up, let us make it the storm centre of the gospel temperance movement.

Through the courtesy of the editors of THE UNION SIGNAL we shall report, from week to week, some of the Lord's doing, marvelous in our eyes, which crowd close upon each other from day to day in this meeting. We shall not be able to tell you a hundredth part of the experiences, the victories, the seed sown. We can but give you glimpses of the conflicts with sin, the faith and aspiration which mark the daily work done in this consecrated place. We are assured that the prayers of our sisters, wherever THE UNION SIGNAL goes, will ascend for our guidance in this blessed work.

This winter of 1893–4 has been a memorable one for Chicago, not only on account of the general financial depression, which has swelled the ranks of the unemployed into the hundreds of thousands, but, also by reason of the many left stranded in this great city at the close of the Fair. Our noon meeting has had its full quota of these stranded, despairing men, and our workers have had their hands full. At the close of our regular meeting from twelve to one we hold an inquiry meeting, to which we invite all who are able to remain. More than two-thirds of the audience remain, and we have from two to five seekers each day. As those of the audience who cannot stay longer than one o'clock go out, our workers gather at the front, or pass around at the back of the hall, speaking to each stranger, and talking with each unconverted person they find. Nearly every inquirer coming forward for prayer is converted, and, so far, nearly every one making a profession of conversion during the last two months is standing firm, and laboring for the salvation of others.

One young man, a Norwegian, was asked by one of our workers if he were a Christian. "Yes, I am; but you wouldn't consider me one," he answered rather testily, Two days later he came to her and said that he had been a salesman for a wholesale liquor firm, but that her words, and the testimonies in this meeting had shown him that he could not be a Christian and continue in the whisky business. He had given up his position, thus literally leaving all to follow Christ. He has become an ardent Christian worker, happy in the service of the Master, although without business in these hardest of times.

One mother sent to us from a neighboring state, asking us to look up her boy who had written to her that he had resolved not to drink any more. He has been visited and invited to come to the meeting and we will continue to do what we can for him as long as he can be found.

We are also going out into the saloons within reach of Willard Hall, two and two together, giving personal invitations to the meeting. The bartenders and others found in these places receive us and our printed cards of invitation, which we leave in every place, very kindly and we are hoping and praying for great results.

The daughter of one of our saloon visitors said to her, "I should think you would be afraid to go into the saloons, mother. It seems so dreadful to do that." The mother replied, "If our dear boy were going to ruin in some distant city, wouldn't we wish some good Christian woman to look after him and help him to a better life?" That settled the question. There could be no doubt as to what any of us would wish done in regard to our boy. "The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost." We cannot improve upon this plan.

We preserve carefully the names of all who seek Christ in these meetings. These and the Christian workers who gather about them in their hour of repentance to instruct and pray for them, we have organized, at the suggestion of Mrs. Carse, into a Temple band of Christian fellowship. Soon these "little ones" must pass out from our loving care, scattered almost to the ends of the earth, and we desire to follow them with our prayers and an occasional letter of loving counsel and sympathy.

The notes of this work, we feel confident, will be read with the deepest interest wherever in the whole world THE UNION SIGNAL goes. We are pledged to strive after the rescue of all mothers' sons and daughters in Chicago as far as possible. We ask that those having sons or daughters in Chicago will write to us giving the name and address of such, that we may look them up and throw around them the good influence of Christian love and sympathy. Thus shall we earn and deserve membership in the Order of Organized Motherhood, whose members have belted the world with work and prayer for the deliverance of our children from the enemy of souls.

The Temple, Chicago.

PROHIBITION SYMPOSIUM ECHOES.

PROHIBITION, THE UNLOADING OF PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY.

1. Prohibition means financial and industrial reform. We spend directly a thousand millions for drink. Indirect losses probably exceed even this vast sum. Prohibition means more money for honest trade, better prices for the products of toil, advanced wages, more comforts, increased prosperity.

2. Prohibition means greater moral safety, the overthrow of the church's strongest foe and the home's most dreadful destroyer.

3. Prohibition will promote political purity. The saloon controls both old parties. They dare not offend its organized power. With possibly, but not certainly, two exceptions, there is no state in the Union where either the Democratic or Republican party can carry an election without the friendship, consent, assistance of the saloon. Because of this, decency is at a discount and corruption commands a premium in the political market. High character often handicaps the aspirant, while a questionable record too frequently commends a man as an available candidate having a "pull with the boys." Prohibition means emancipation from this degrading and disgraceful tyranny.

4. Prohibition, even the honest effort to secure it, voting for it at every opportunity, means the unloading of personal responsibility and the washing of the voters' hands from the sin of making legal a traffic abhorred by the good, and accursed of God. SAMUEL DICKIE,

Chairman National Prohibition Committee.

Albion, Mich.

AN ILLUSTRIOUS FRIEND'S TRIBUTE.

As usual, I am a little late, but will try to be in season for his one hundredth birthday, if I should live so long, as I have no doubt that the General himself will.

I have read about him ever since I have about John the Baptist, and have personally known him for thirty-two years nearly. I was with him in the battle when he was wounded, May 27, 1863, at Port Hudson, so that I feel a sort of vested interest in this grand old veteran of a thousand battles for God and man.

His wonderful pluck and ability and the elevated aims which have characterized his whole life will make his memory honored and beloved until the end of time. I speak as though his life could be considered as completed, but although we well know that he will not change, unless for the better, yet there is no knowing who will live to write his obituary, so wonderful is his vitality. I hope not until this old world has made many a Sabbath day's journey onward and upward will his shadow grow less.

We read that there is a time coming when the devil shall be let loose for a season—I believe for about a thousand years. They will need just such a man as Neal Dow to look after business then, and I wouldn't wonder if he might be the one who is being preserved for it. He is the best match for the devil that I know of, and, give him time he will come out ahead. He is old and young and middle-aged all at once. Long may he survive, and may the great cause of which he has been the champion for sixty years triumph soon and mightily. HENRY W. BLAIR,

Washington, D. C. Member of Congress.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

GENERAL DOW HONORED IN ENGLAND.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—It may be justly said concerning Gen. Neal Dow, "Not to know him argues one's self unknown," and to this I must plead guilty so far as my relation to the temperance movement is concerned until the year 1885, in which I signed the total abstinence pledge. You will hardly believe that I had no knowledge of the temperance movement, my mental condition being analogous to that of a certain English princess, who on being invited to preside at the great Band of Hope demonstration in the Crystal Palace, turned to her secretary and said, "What is the 'Band of Hope,' and what does 'the temperance movement' mean?" I am perfectly aware that it was my misfortune, and glad that it was not my fault, to have remained in ignorance of the great reform and its leaders until so recently, but I may fairly plead that since I came into their circle I have done my best to make up for lost time.

General Neal Dow was already a leader in every good word and work when I was but a child, indeed, I may as well admit that I was born in the same year that witnessed the passage of the Maine Law. He has given all his hours, while some of us entered the white harvest field only at the eleventh hour. I do not recall another example equally salient of a life lacking but ten years of a century long, in which, without illness or deterioration physical or mental, a noble manhood has been given in its totality for the building up of the kingdom of heaven on the face of this earth. We who know General Dow as the Grand Old Man of the temperance movement, must not forget that when he was sixty years of age he wrought for the freedom of the slave, and without previous military achievement, reached the high rank of General in the citizen army of the republic.

His services to England have not been fully understood, and I rejoice in the anniversary meetings that are to be held throughout our country in his honor, and for the promotion of the cause to which he has given his noble life.

Our "United Kingdom Temperance Alliance" is the outcrop of that granite stratification of law as traced in the sturdy state of Maine; but for Neal Dow we should not have had at a date so early an organized movement for the purpose of outlawing the public house, but as Mr. J. H. Raper, our veteran pioneer, has written a detailed account of General Dow's work in England, I need do no more than make this grateful reference to that important chapter of temperance history.

I hope my comrades in America will think of us in Exeter Hall on March 20, only you must remember that we shall be at least five hours ahead of you in celebrating the birthday of your prohibition chief. Sir Wilfrid Lawson has promised to speak on that occasion, Canon Wilberforce would do so did his health permit, Mrs. Ormiston Chant will be with us, and we expect that your own leader, Miss Willard, will be present on the platform whether she speaks or not. I may tell you that it is a great satisfaction to her that her suggestion of this celebration by the temperance forces in all countries has been so warmly taken up. This action of our temperance friends "doeth good like a medicine" to one who hopes ere long to be once more in the thick of the fight.

You will be glad to know that the aspect of the temperance movement was never more encouraging in Great Britain than at present.

Yours, with a lively faith in the success of our most righteous cause,

Isabel Somerset

The Cottage, Reigate, February 6, 1894.

MILITARY INSTRUCTION.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I wish to render to you my thanks, as one of the people, for the stand you have taken for the defeat of the military scheme of the politicians, which has been honestly, but unthinkingly indorsed by the Grand Army of the Republic. Many good and honest men are easily led to believe that the people's rights and liberties are made safe in proportion to their military knowledge and training. They are told that the people of this country, being so sadly deficient in military knowledge, would fall an easy prey, possibly to a greatly inferior nation, were we compelled to appeal to arms to settle a dispute. They are told that much valuable time would be lost in drilling and educating an army, as they claim was the case in the late civil war—arguments that are very plausible but yet all false.

All that this country needs is defenders, and the best defenders have never been military experts; they have been men who have, at a moment's notice, dropped the hammer, left the plow, the forge, the shop, laid aside the pen and taken up the sword and musket in defense of home and native land against injustice and oppression, and never know the meaning of defeat.

The principle and policy of the United States is known the world over to be non-aggressive, but always defensive, and so long as this attitude is strictly maintained, there will never be occasion for a powerful standing army or militia educated in military tactics. Our citizens, so long as they mind their own business and behave themselves properly, can travel in any civilized country without fear of harm or insult, simply because no country looks upon them as possible spies or enemies seeking information to be used in aggressive warfare, our unarmed condition being thus a greater safeguard than a powerful armament would be.

Of course the promoters of this scheme do not propose it as a pastime or diversion for the school children, but as an entering wedge for the upbuilding of a powerful militia, if not a standing army. If military instruction were to be given only while the children were attending school, it would not only be a waste of the time of the instructors and of the people's money, but would be a sinful waste of some of the best years of the pupil's life, and if it was continued after school life long enough to make disciplined soldiers, it would build up a standing menace to our cherished liberties and institutions, and our domestic peace. Were there a strong and disciplined militia at present, the clamors of a starving people would be silenced, not by charity, but by powder and bayonets, and every little disturbance would be made an excuse to declare martial law. The astute politician sees the time fast approaching when he must have an armed force to rely upon to enforce unjust laws if he is to continue to put them upon the statute books for the benefit of corporate trusts, the liquor traffic, the party bosses; and he is well aware that a militia under military discipline from childhood has no personality or will but that of its leaders, even if in obeying it should destroy the rights and liberties of its own members.

God grant that your word of warning may arouse many others to this danger threatening the very foundations of our nation. Give woman the chance to exercise her undoubted right to the elective franchise, and let our children grow up unpolluted by military education and its attendant vices, and our Republic will have some chance for perpetuation; but carry this scheme of ex-President Harrison and others to perfection, and we bid good-by to liberty and justice forever. H. J. O. REED.

Minneapolis, Minn.

OUR REMONSTRANCE PRESENTED TO CONGRESS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—It is due the general officers of the state unions who signed the remonstrance against an increased tax on whisky sent out by Mrs. Woodbridge, to know that it was presented to Congress on February 14, by Senator Frye, of Maine, and received with the utmost respect.

The occasion for the remonstrance, it will be remembered, was a report by the associated press that W. C. T. Unions were "pouring petitions into Congress for an increase of the whisky tax," and that a large number had reached the files of the ways and means committee. Such petitions seemed to Mrs. Woodbridge ill-advised, and she prepared a counter protest or remonstrance which was signed by the general officers of the state unions. This document, handsomely engrossed, was sent to Mrs. M. E. Griffith, president of the W. C. T. U. of the District of Columbia to be presented to Congress. I went with her to the capitol and we asked Senator Colquitt to present our document to the senate. (The bill had passed the house before it reached us.) Senator Colquitt assured us that he should be most happy to do so if he were able. But he is not. Paralysis has crippled that once strong and graceful frame and he is wheeled in an invalid chair from place to place. His heart still beats for temperance and he advised us to go to Senator Frye, of Maine. This we did. He frankly accepted the trust and the next morning (St. Valentine's Day) our document was presented to the senate amid a respectful and attentive silence gratifying to those who looked down from the galleries upon the scene.

"These excellent women," said Mr. Frye, "do not believe that the United States ought to enter into co-partnership in either the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors."

ALICE M. SMITH,

Supt. Legislation and Petition W. C. T. U. District of Columbia.

NATIONAL WOMAN SUFFRAGE CONVENTION.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—This is the twenty-sixth year that the National Woman's Suffrage Association has held its convention at the capital city, Thursday, February 15, being a red-letter day, indeed, for its members. After the prestige awarded to women by the government's recognition of them on the Board of Managers for the World's Columbian Exposition, the World's Congress of Representative Women—their participation in the series of the World's Congresses, the gaining of woman's suffrage in Colorado, also the pending of this great question in Kansas and New York, all inspire the members with more hope this year than they have ever felt before.

Eminently significant was the scene presented at Metzerott Music Hall, with the large painting in panels of the fair and historic city of Washington, with the capitol dome and the monument, beyond which the Potomac lies; over this hung the "suffrage flag," with the bright particular star, Wyoming, to which was added another, Colorado, with Kansas and New York in outline. There were also flags of Turkey, Australia, Spain, Italy and England, as women from all these countries were in attendance upon the convention. There were touches of woman's taste in the groups of giant palms and vases of cut flowers on the speaker's stand.

The attendance of friends of the cause was flatteringly large the first day, considering the condition of the streets, which were covered with the melting sleet. A round of applause greeted Miss Anthony, who stepped to the front of the platform with a step as light and firm as it has ever been, notwithstanding it was her seventy-fourth birthday, a fact which she cheerfully acknowledged; a cluster of carnations, one for each year, had been sent her by friends.

During the making up of the committees some one in recommending Mrs. Davis called her Mrs. John Davis.

"Hasn't she any other name?" asked Miss Anthony.

Her name, Martha, was then given.

"Well, call her by her own name," said Miss Anthony, "our suffrage women are afraid they'll not seem loyal enough to John and James if they are not called by their names."

Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake spoke with enthusiasm of the hopeful situation in New York. A constitutional convention will be held in Albany, in May, and it was the intention of the women to have the word "male" struck from the clause which gives the rights to voters. Work is being done all over the state of New York to arouse interest in the cause of woman suffrage. The question had come up for discussion by men and had been talked down as often by them. "You know how men can talk," said Mrs. Blake, "they accuse women of being talkers just to excuse their own fondness for conversation. They are talking now in Congress and in all the state capitols, and yet they will not give woman a chance to speak for herself. In New York one woman was nominated (the able president of the state association), by her senatorial district, but she was not elected, and the convention will be composed of one hundred and seventy-five men and not one woman. If we carry New York we will carry the whole country. If the great Empire state is gained, the others will be as rows of bricks." Mrs. Blake's remarks opened the floodgates of Miss Anthony's eloquence, and before she knew it she was making a speech, in which she set forth the advisability of getting the names of men as a wise political move, and recommended the insertion of a plank in both party platforms. Turning to the reporters of the city papers who were present, with whom she kept up a little byplay of humor she said: "I'm not out of order, young men, I've given the chair to Miss Shaw."

Mrs. Laura M. Johns spoke for "Bleeding Kansas. Shall it be success or defeat?" Kansas has made more progress proportionately than New York, having already tried the experiment of municipal suffrage for seven years. Kansas, Mrs. Johns thinks, is the place to focus all the efforts of organization. In Kansas both the dominant parties, the Republican and the People's party, are in favor of it. Not alone in the cities are the people demanding it. The farmers, their wives and daughters, even their hired help, are longing for it. The ministers preach it and pray for it in their pulpits.

Mrs. Diggs, of Kansas, who followed Mrs. Johns, gave it as her opinion that it is just as much use to try to get suffrage in New York as to try to fly to the moon. There are more people in New York she admits and more money, but the liquor power is greater in New York, and the liquor power will never permit women to have the ballot. Kansas has quelled the liquor power and there is hope for her. The ballot in the hands of women means the good of all humanity.

Mrs. Carrie Lane Chapman, who, Mrs. Blake says, "has been the inspiration of all the work in Brooklyn," next told of the needs of that city, which is money and more thorough organization. Five suffrage leagues have been established there in the past year.

Mr. Vrooman, of Baltimore, secretary of the union for practical progress and reform, explained that the union had been established by the clergy of Baltimore for the purpose of presenting the claims of all existing reforms in a systematic and scientific manner to the public. They had enlisted the coöperation of all the leading magazines, the colleges and the press, as far as possible, to secure the consideration of a special subject each month; they will hold a convention in Washington upon the 7th of March next. Mr. Vrooman said the press only shadowed the opinions of the people, that they conceived them first and the press, while it claimed to lead, only followed.

With this expression Miss Anthony took issue and uttered an eloquent tribute to the press of this and every country, which she considered a factor second to none in the aid of all reforms.

Mrs. Colby explained that all their suffrage bills had been introduced by representatives of Colorado—Senator Wolcott, and Members Bell and Pence. The statement was received with applause after which the session adjourned. Mrs. Colby is publishing a daily issue of the Woman's Tribune which gives a magnificent report of the proceedings, and is eagerly sought for at the door in passing out. This able and energetic woman is seen at the reporter's desk, and frequently rises to her feet to speak among the promoters of the cause.

There was a large audience present at the first evening session—composed of the cultured and intelligent friends of the cause. The address of welcome by Hon. J. W. Ross, president of the board of commissioners of the District of Columbia, was a compliment never before accorded to the association, and Miss Anthony called attention to this fact as an indication that the tide was at last setting in the right direction for us. She also added that Commissioner Ross was "a disfranchised citizen and no better than a woman."

Commissioner Ross's welcome was an eloquent one. Speaking of Washington as a city of conventions, he thought it eminently right that here in the center of intellect and culture, as well as government, these earnest, intelligent women should assemble, coming before Congress for more than a quarter of a century, to correct unjust and antiquated laws. The question of woman suffrage he deems of the utmost importance in the light of the progress they have made in all branches of industry, losing thereby none of the respect of right-minded people. The commissioners of the District have decided to have women on the school board.

Miss Anthony told the audience that for the past six months all her friends had been importuning her to write a speech for this important convention. "I never have written a speech in my life, and to-day when these flowers (holding up the carnations) represent more years than perhaps any of you would like to own up to, don't you think it would be foolish to begin?"

Mrs. Carrie Lane Chapman reviewed the situation and the milestones passed, dwelling on the victory in Colorado that seems to presage the end. During her address, which was powerful and eloquent, Mrs. Chapman took a flag, which was sent by the enfranchised women of Wyoming and Colorado, and presented it to Miss Anthony. Miss Anthony received the flag, saying she was going to carry it to the topmost ramparts (prolonged applause).

Senator Teller followed, saying he would not attempt to speak on suffrage; he thought the ladies could do that better than he. He has always been in favor of woman suffrage, as most well informed citizens were in his state. Wyoming had furnished them an object lesson of the beneficent results of it for so many years; he cast his vote for it in 1877. "Intelligent suffrage," he said, "was the safeguard of the republic."

Henry B. Blackwell told of the early days in Colorado, when he with his wife of sainted memory helped on the cause, how it had always been the dream of her life to see Switzerland, but her allegiance to the cause had never permitted it; this dream, however, was almost realized in the beautiful scenery of Colorado. His remarks supplemented what had been said by Senator Teller, who had been a coworker in the same cause. Henry M. Teller had planted the seed for this movement of growth and civilization.

Anna H. Shaw made some telling remarks upon the history of the movement which she traced back to the first strife for liberty in America one hundred and seventeen years ago. Colorado, she said, would be known in future as the flower of all the states.

Senator Cary, of Wyoming, took a great deal of pleasure in adding his own congratulations to those that had preceded, summing up with this paragraph:

"Each of the two states of Colorado and Wyoming is as large as all New England, containing together about two hundred thousand square miles of territory. Each has limitless resources with room for millions of people. A good and great beginning has been made. Do not esteem your victories lightly. Two of the forty-four states are yours. These have accepted the doctrine of equality and political rights of both sexes, without reservation. They have incorporated it in their organic law because it is just to women and best for men—a principle so true that the time is near at hand when no man will have the courage to deny it."

Mrs. Laura M. Johns next spoke for Kansas. The municipal ballot is in the hands of a large number of women in this state; they have had school suffrage for thirty years, and the experiment has had time to show for itself. "Mrs. Mary Barnes," said Mrs. Johns, "was elected mayor of Geuda Springs at the regular election of 1893. Mrs. Barnes' aldermen are all women. This women administration is strongly supported, and warmly advocated by the solid business men of the town who declare themselves entirely satisfied with it and say they never had a better city government. Mrs. Barnes gave the position of city clerk to her husband, because, as she said, she had worked so long with him on his paper she felt more comfortable with him than without."

Mrs. French, of Rhode Island, stated that since last July married women in her state have been able to make legal contracts. Each city must have a police matron, to be appointed by the mayor, on request of twenty women. One woman has been so successful in this office that her salary has been raised, and every one is pleased.

Mrs. Bolles, of Providence, added that a married woman can now make a will and manage her own estate in Rhode Island.

Mrs. Henry, of Kentucky, told of the passage of a married woman's property rights bill by their state legislature. This bill gives a married woman the control of her property, and equalizes the rights of courtesy and dower.

Miss Shaw congratulated the married women,—thought the time was coming when it would be almost as good to be married as to remain single.

Miss Clay made her plea for Kentucky and the pecuniary needs of the Southwest, to which Mrs. Ricker, of New Hampshire, responded, saying although she differed polit-

(Continued on page 17.)

THREE DOORS.

Three doors there are in the temple
  Where men go up to pray,
And they that wait at the outer gate
  May enter by either way.

There are some that pray by asking;
  They lie on the Master's breast,
And, shunning the strife of the lower life,
  They utter their cry for rest.

There are some that pray by seeking;
  They doubt where their reason fails,
But their mind's despair is the ancient prayer
  To touch the print of the nails.

There are some that pray by knocking;
  They put their strength to the wheel,
For they have not time for thoughts sublime—
  They can only act what they feel.

Father, give each his answer—
  Each in his kindred way;
Adapt Thy light to his form of night,
  And grant him his needed day.

Give to the yearning spirits,
  That only Thy rest desire,
The power to bask in the peace they ask,
  And feel the warmth of Thy fire.

Give to the soul that seeketh,
  'Mid cloud and doubt and storm,
The glad surprise of the straining eyes
  To see on the waves Thy form.

Give to the heart that knocketh
  At the doors of earthly care,
The strength to tread in the pathway spread
  By the flowers Thou hast planted there.

Then in the common temple
  There shall worship hand in hand
The lives that man's heart would hold apart
  As unfit to dwell in one land.

For the middle wall shall be broken,
  And the light expand its ray
When the burdened of brain and the soother of pain
  Shall be ranked with the men that pray.

—Dr. George Matheson.

Edinburgh, Scotland.

MOTHERS' CLUBS.

I.

BY MARY WOOD ALLEN, M. D.

Mrs. Ellis had put on her white apron and was about to sit down to her afternoon sewing when she saw Mrs. Norwood, the president of the union, coming up the path, and went to admit her with a joyful welcome. A moment later Mrs. Ames came running in from next door with a shawl over her head, saying, as she tapped at the half-open door:

"May I come in? I saw Mrs. Norwood come, and at once thought there was to be a W. C. T. U. conference, and I really did not see how you could get along without the treasurer."

"Come in, come in," said Mrs. Ellis heartily. "We shall certainly need you, if there's any work to be done."

"Yes, indeed," said Mrs. Norwood. "I meant to send in for you, for I want to talk over the advisability of taking up the work of the purity department. You know we have never done anything in that line."

"I don't see what we can do," said Mrs. Ellis. "We have no saloons and no disreputable houses in our little village. We can't start midnight missions, and have no need of police matrons."

"It has always seemed to me," said Mrs. Ames, "that that was a work we could do very little in, and I have been glad that we did not need to worry much about it."

"I think you are both wrong," said the president. "It is true we have no saloons, and no houses of ill-fame, but we can find impurity in other places. What are the stories told around the stoves in the stores, groceries, and offices of even our little village? And, I blush to say it, but you know there is cause, you know that the conversation of our women is not always above reproach."

"Yes," said Mrs. Ellis, "I have often thought how angry men are if some one tells a vulgar story in the presence of ladies, and yet those same men will listen to such tales told in a company of men, and then they will go home and tell their wives, and the women retail them to each other, and so the whole current of society is polluted."

"I see," said Mrs. Norwood, "that you are really aware of the need of work right here in our town."

"But," said Mrs. Ames, "you will find that all the women will not take up the idea readily. Some of them think they ought to let the men talk evil, and even tell them foul tales. I heard a real good woman say once that she thought a wife ought to let her husband have some liberty at home; and that men would resent having their liberty of speech interfered with, for they feel that home is a place where a man can do and talk as he pleases."

"Still another argument," said Mrs. Norwood, "in favor of our taking up purity work and at once."

"But what can you do?" asked Mrs. Ellis. "If you begin to try to influence this matter you will only bring criticism upon yourself. The men will say that we women are in nice business meddling with such things."

"Oh," said Mrs. Norwood, "we must be wise and not arouse antagonism. We need not try to convert the present generation so much as to affect future generations through the mothers. We know there is much of evil thought, speech and deed even among little children. Mothers need to be instructed how to train their children aright."

"And there," asserted Mrs. Ames, "you would at once run against a snag. Every mother thinks her children perfect, and is sure they know no evil, and in all probability each one would be angry if you were to intimate that her offspring could do wrong."

"Well, we need not begin with that intimation. We need only to advance the thought that mothers should study their children, and we could have it understood that our purpose was to study the best educational methods in our mothers' meetings."

"It seems as if I were trying to throw cold water on every idea advanced by you, Mrs. Norwood," said Mrs. Ames. "But that is not so; I am as anxious as you are to have the work done, but I don't want to begin only to fail. If you try to have mothers' meetings who will come?"

"I can tell you," said Mrs. Ellis,—"Mrs. Gray, who is seventy-four, and whose children are all grown up and married."

"And so she has grandchildren," said Mrs. Norwood.

"And," continued Mrs. Ellis, "you'd have Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Nellis, Mrs. Day, and a lot of other old, gray-headed women, and Miss Steel, and Miss Waite, and Miss Green, old maids,—"

"Who teach in the public schools," interrupted Mrs. Norwood, "and so deal with everybody's children."

Mrs. Ellis smiled and went on with her catalogue. "And Mrs. Miller, and Mrs. French, and several others who never have had children, and probably—"

"But," interpolated Mrs. Norwood, "who have many friends who have children in whom they are greatly interested."

"And," still continued Mrs. Ellis, nothing daunted, "you wouldn't have three young mothers who really could put into practice the ideas acquired at your mothers' meetings."

"And," said Mrs. Ames, "they would feel indignant at the thought that these grandmothers, spinsters and childless wives were meeting together to criticise them and their methods of home training, and gossip about their faults and failings."

"Oh!" exclaimed Mrs. Norwood, "gossip should never be allowed to have a moment's place in these meetings. They should be for the study of principles, philosophy and methods, not for retailing of faults, or even repetition of personalities."

"It seems to me," said Mrs. Ames, thoughtfully, "that if we could get some of our influential women interested we might make it popular. Now, if Mrs. Stacy were to give it her support its success would be assured, but she won't go into anything which would compel her to sign the pledge."

"I have thought of that," said Mrs. Norwood, "and have thought it would be a wise plan to conduct these meetings in a way to interest all women, and therefore it might be excusable if we did not emphasize them as W. C. T. U. work, but simply call them 'Mothers' Meetings.' We want all mothers, all women, to attend whether they are white ribbon women or not."

"If we could get some other name than Mothers' Meetings I think it would attract more," said Mrs. Ellis.

"How would Mothers' Normal Class do?" asked Mrs. Norwood.

Mrs. Ellis smiled as she replied, "I don't want to seem unduly critical, but I'm afraid we'd have to send out an explanation each time as to what a normal class means. Can't you think of some other name?"

After a moment's thought Mrs. Ames looked up brightly, "Why not call it a Mothers' Club? You know the club idea is the fad of the day. In all cities women are organizing clubs of every conceivable kind. We have no club of any sort. Let us have a Mothers' Club."

"The idea strikes me favorably. How does it strike you, Mrs. Ellis?"

"Yes, I quite like it, and I have another thought. If we do not advertise it as W. C. T. U. but simply as a mothers' club, I think I can get Mrs. Stacy interested and maybe she will open her parlors for the first meeting."

"Oh, that would be delightful, and will you see her?"

"I will see her this evening and report to you to-morrow. But I shall need to have a definite idea as to the formation and conducting of such a club. How will you have it organized, and would you ask Mrs. Stacy to be president?"

"Then I suppose we should need a constitution and by-laws and a membership fee, and who would be willing to take the offices? You know how much trouble we have to get the offices filled in the W. C. T. U."

"How would it do to have it without officers, fees or fines; without constitution or by-laws," asked Mrs. Norwood.

"I really don't see how we could do that," said Mrs. Ellis.

"I once helped to start and carry on a club after that fashion," said Mrs. Norwood, "and it was a great success."

After further discussion of this idea the three ladies separated, having matured a plan of action.

Toledo, O.

(To be continued.)

TYPICAL LESSONS FOR LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION TEACHERS.

X.

The Rain.

BY MARY E. RUDD.

Opening exercises, 25 minutes:—New song, "Dewdrops," first song in Marching Songs, No. 2. "Exercise Song" used as prayer, followed perhaps by short, spoken prayer. Choose from temperance songs, also finger plays. Sing "Our Wonderful House," adding fourth verse. Repeat text "Whatsoever," as connecting with the sentiment, "The keepers must work for God." Explain about the harp and teach one of the Bible verses about praise. Sing, "Raise your Hands." Make comments. Breathing exercises.

Rhythmical exercises, 10 minutes, lesson, 30 minutes:—Tell how one of the twins went out one morning and found the grass all wet and he thought it must have been raining. But he ran down to the brook and found there was no water there. It was all just as dry as it was the day before and he didn't know what had happened. Then he went and asked his mamma, and what do you think she told him? (Let the children guess. See if they can find out for themselves that it was dew.) Go back to the thought of the water drops playing with the fairies and explain how in the night Mr. Cold came along and touched each one of the fairies. They shivered so hard they forgot to keep hold of the water drop's hands and so in the morning there they were on each little leaf or blade of grass, and shining so beautifully in the bright sunshine.

Practice two verses of the new song, and explain what is meant by the last phrase of the second verse—the rain. Tell how much Dot and Trot missed the little brook. How dry and dusty everything was getting. How they drew water from the well every day to water their garden but they could not carry it over to the field, nor to the woods where the trees were looking so sad and discouraged, nor to the dusty road where it was not pleasant to walk any more. Everybody wished so much that it would rain. Make a story about the cloud that appeared and grew larger and darker. Then came the lightning and thunder, and last of all the rain came pattering down. Make it as happy as possible. Let the children feel the spirit of the rain, the joy and gladness that come when the long drought is broken.

Make the motions with the hands to represent the falling of the rain and if possible sing the little song, "This is the way the rain comes down." Teach the text, Job 5: 10. If you wish, teach some of the scientific facts concerning rain, but to-day it is the joy and gladness that the rain brings that interests us more than anything else, and we must not lose sight of it nor of the fact that God sent it.

Games:—Of course, the brook exists again now that there has been a heavy rain, so to-day we may be the little stream. We may be birds sipping water from the pools, or we may be flowers enjoying the rain which is represented by the motion of the hands of the children.

Occupation:—Two inch sticks laid vertically to represent flowers; one inch sticks laid slanting to represent rain.

Closing:—One verse of new song with good-by said quietly.

Chicago, Ill.

WHY MARCH STANDS FIRST.

The months were talking together one day,
When blustering March was heard to say:
"Of all you months, none can equal me!"
"Why not?" wept April, "I don't see
What the year would do if I stepped out.
Then you hear the children's merry shout,
For I let them run in the air and sun;
They play outdoor games and have lots of fun!"

"If only you would not cry so much!
As soon as the warm earth feels my touch,
She calls to the May-flowers, rosy and whit
To lift their cups to the beautiful light."
It was sweet little May who was speaking now,
And gallant March made a courteous bow.
"What is the matter with me?" blushed June;
"With me, wedding bells are always in tune.
I bring enough roses for all to enjoy,
Whether old or young, whether girl or boy."
Then July and August exclaimed together:
"Where would the crops be but for our weather?"

September, October, November laughed out;
In fact, they gave such a rollicking shout,
That one might have thought they had strayed too near
The cider-mill, or the wine-press clear.
"How would the world get on without us?
We think there would be some kind of a fuss,
If never a harvest was gathered in,
While barrel stood empty, and box and bin."

December's eyes twinkled; he chuckled with glee:
"I am sure all the children would vote for me;
For should the world lose all its Xmas cheer,
The boys and girls would shed many a tear!"
The other two winter months shivered some,
But stoutly asserted, had they not come,
To freeze out disease-germs and make things hum,
There would be no one left to greet the spring.

Then all joined hands and formed a ring
Round this brave young March, who dared to sing
That he was, of all twelve months, the king.
"But how do you make that out?" they cry,
"I'll tell you," he said, "the reason why.
It was during my reign there came to dwell,
On this earth a man, whom you all know well;
He has spent his life in fighting sin,
Trying with heart and soul to win
The people to realize that only one way
Is safe—all others lead astray.
His name? 'tis none other than General Neal Dow,
So to him let us make our prettiest bow."

—Isabel Shirley.

A SWEET HOME.

Like the magic city of old,
'Twas built in a single night;
For the builder was busy and bold
And worked with all her might.
She worked as fast as she ever could,
But she used not brick, nor stone, nor wood,
From the base to the topmost dome;
She used not wood, nor stone, nor brick,
But the floor was warm and the walls were thick:
Oh, what a queer little home.

She entered my own estate
With no regard for the laws;
She made herself a gate:
Her teeth were the knives and saws,
Right in my way her dwelling stood;
It was not built upon clay nor mud,
Nor on rock, nor sand, nor loam;
It was not built on earth at all,
But she made it within a crystal wall—
A quaint and curious home.

In the light of the morning sun
The work of the night I see;
For now the building is done;
But the builder, where is she?
I found her not, but I know her name—
'Tis Mistress Mouse, that meddlesome dame,
Into my pantry she gnawed a hole,
And built her house in my sugar bowl;
Oh, what a sweet, sweet home! —Selected.

INDOOR FUN AND FROLIC.

(Concluded).

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Such a good time we had several weeks ago with the games in our Cozy Corner—our big circle, which reaches from the state of Washington to Florida, to Canada, and across the seas. Here are a few more especially excellent games, some of which may be known to you, which I commend to Cozy Cornerers and bright children everywhere.

SCOUT

is a game which will never grow old, and needs sharp wits and quick thoughts. For this we will form two circles in different portions of the room, or in separate rooms. One person is chosen from each circle. These two step aside, where they will not be heard, and agree upon some object. They then exchange places, No. 2 returning to circle No. 1. The players in the circles have then the right to ask in rotation, three questions at a time being allowed to each, about the object selected. After the first question, "Is it animal, vegetable or mineral?" the only answers the scout gives are "Yes," "No," or "I don't know." The circle which first guesses the correct object announces that fact by clapping hands, thus adding both scouts to that circle. Two others are then chosen, and the game proceeds until one circle is entirely captured by the other, or until a certain number is gained by either side.

GUESS.

For this game form in a circle and blindfold one of the players for the center. Provide him with a cane. The circle then moves around while the center player counts ten, letting go hands and stopping still when the count is finished. The one in the circle toward whom the center player points must take hold of the end of the cane. He is then commanded to make a noise like some well-known animal, a pig, cow, horse or mule, etc., and if the center player fails to guess the person from the sound the circle moves round and the player points again. When a player is guessed correctly he changes places with the one in the center.

QUAKER

is another old-fashioned game, which begins by one player in the circle shaking his right hand up and down, and turning to his neighbor with the remark: "Neighbor, neighbor, how art thee?" The other replies: "I am well as thou dost see." The first asks, "How's the neighbor next to thee?" and the second answers, "I don't know but I'll go and see!" before turning to the third player with the first question, and commencing to shake his own hand up and down. Thus the game continues, the hands never ceasing to shake. At the second round, both hands are put in motion, at the third, the right foot, at the fourth, the left foot, and last of all, the head, at which point the players have had sufficient exercise and are generally ready to change for a more restful game.

SPOONS

is another good memory game. A circle is formed, and two persons are blindfolded and sent into it. They are given two large wooden spoons apiece, then the circle remains stationary while the two players inside move around and, selecting a member of the circle, proceed to measure him with the spoons, passing them over his clothing, but not touching him upon the head or face. The object is to tell who the person is by feeling the height, breadth, style of clothing, and so on. The guess is made and if correct, the blindfolded person changes positions with the one who has been discovered. If the guess is incorrect, the party with the spoons moves on to another. This game is very amusing, and it is well for the circle to move one way or the other a few steps every now and then in order to confuse the spoonholders.

Another

SPOON GAME

is played in this way: Blindfold one member of the company and place him in a chair in the center of the room. Then let each guest feed him in turn with a spoonful of water until he guesses who is doing it. The one discovered then takes the place of the victim.

There are two

GEOGRAPHY GAMES

which are instructive as well as amusing. In one, two leaders are chosen, who, in their turn, choose an equal number of players, thus dividing the company into two sides. The first leader calls out the name of a country or town, beginning with the letter A, and then rapidly counts ten. The second leader must immediately reply with another, beginning with A and also count ten, and so on, until one fails. The leader on the gaining side then chooses a person from the losing side to join his party. They then begin with the letter B, and so on. The leaders are prompted by their respective parties.

In the other geography game, the players form themselves into a circle, or into sides, as before. One of them throws a handkerchief, calling out the name of a country or town, such as "Switzerland." The one challenged must reply, before ten is counted, with a name beginning with the last letter of the place mentioned, such as Detroit. If he fails, the winning side may choose one from the losing side.

CLOTHES-PINS

is a game you will all like, I know. In this the players sit or stand, in two rows facing each other. At the head of each row is a pile of clothes-pins. At the word "Go," the head one of each line takes up a clothes-pin and passes it to his next neighbor who in turn passes it to the next and so on. No person can be skipped. On reaching the end of the line the clothes-pins are deposited in separate piles, and as soon as all have reached that point the player at the foot immediately begins to return them in the same way in which they were passed down the line. The side which returns its pins to the starting point first is declared winner. If a clothes-pin drops, it must be picked up before another is passed on. Bean bags, corncobs, wooden blocks or croquet balls can be substituted for clothes-pins.

Yours for pleasure and profit,

Aunt Jane

NEPHEWS AND NIECES.

I happened to wonder one time if you were a "sir," and I asked mamma about it, and she said THE UNION SIGNAL did not employ any men. NORMA A. EVANS.
Sandusky, O.

Yes, nearly all the work on THE UNION SIGNAL, the editing, typesetting and proofreading, is done by women. Sometimes men write articles for it, and the big press which prints the paper and folds it is run by men. With these exceptions, THE UNION SIGNAL does not employ any men as your mamma said.

I am a Canadian girl, and live on the banks of the St. Francis, which is a beautiful river. I enjoy your Cozy Corner, and would like to join it. My brother Carleton and I have cracked your Soft-Shelled Nuts.
Melbourne, Can. RUBY M. CROSS.

A warm welcome to our Canadian cousins. Salute them, children!

I always turn to the Cozy Corner when THE UNION SIGNAL comes, and ask mamma to read it to me. I liked the story about buying gospel water, and had it read twice to me. Temperance people laid out this town, and there are no saloons here, but the town is small, and there are two just over the line. We have gospel water here, too.
Parksley, Va. RUTH VAN DEMAN.

Gospel water everywhere would soon drown out the saloon.

I was twelve years old my last birthday, which was in leap year, February 29. Can some of the Cozy Corner cousins tell me when my next birthday will be and how old I will be? MAY HUSSONG.
Alhambra, Ill.

Here's a puzzle for you, boys and girls.

This is a game that we play: Several players go out of the room, and the others select a word, and also one that rhymes with it. For instance, if the chosen word is "cry," they would inform those that went out that the hidden word rhymes with "by." These then act by pantomime some word that rhymes, until the right one is guessed.
Shutesbury, Mass. JOSEPH B. READ.

I know this is a jolly game, for I have tried it.

There is no L. T. L. here, but I wish there was. There are ten saloons here. I wish there was a Crusade here.
Roslyn, Wash. JENNIE E. LOWE.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

273.

SYNCOPATIONS.

[EXPLANATION:—To syncopate is to remove a middle letter. Seven, seen.]

1. Syncopate pertaining to punishment, and leave a continuous sound.
2. Syncopate inexpensive, and leave to crack.
3. Syncopate low wagons used for burdens, and leave free from moisture.
4. Syncopate pertaining to the sun, and leave to fly aloft.
5. Syncopate a coin used as an award of merit, and leave a repast.
6. Syncopate a stone to pitch at a mark, and leave to stop.
7. Syncopate young deer, and leave things very desirable in hot weather.

The syncopated letters in their order form the name of a notable temperance apostle. J. A. S.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED FEBRUARY 8.

268. Snow, now, (oh.) Blow, low, (oh). Freeze (reas), (ease). Sleet, leet, (eat).

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF—FRANCES E. WILLARD.
MANAGING EDITOR—MARGARET A. SUDDUTH.
OFFICE EDITOR—MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR—JENNIE A. STEWART.
CONTRIBUTING EDITORS { LADY HENRY SOMERSET. MRS. KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. CAROLINE F. GROW, Business Manager.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Secretary.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.
President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Treasurer.—MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, "Satisfied." By Elizabeth Hatton ... 2
Mrs. Chippinfield's "Call." By Elizabeth Cumings ... 2
The Plebiscite in Canada. By Ella F. M. Williams ... 3
Willard Hall Noon Meetings. By Mrs. Jane E. Zimmerman ... 4
Prohibition Symposium Echoes ... 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Editorial Correspondence ... 4
Military Instruction ... 4
Our Remonstrance Presented to Congress ... 5
National Woman Suffrage Convention ... 5
THE HOUSEHOLD:
Poem, Three Doors ... 6
Mothers' Clubs. I. By Mary Wood Allen, M. D. ... 6
Typical Lessons for Loyal Temperance Legion Teachers. X. By Mary E. Rudd ... 6
OUR CHILDREN:
Poems, Why March Stands First—A Sweet Home ... 7
AUNT JANE'S COZY CORNER:
Indoor Fun and Frolic ... 7
Soft-Shelled Nuts ... 7
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Our Weapons; the Coming Victory ... 8
"A Great Mother" ... 8
A New Temperance Organization ... 8
SPECIAL DIFFICULTIES ... 9
THE WATCH TOWER ... 9
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
North Dakota—Wisconsin—West Virginia—Eastern Washington—Ohio—Texas—Minnesota—Nebraska—Oregon ... 10-13
News in a Nutshell ... 13
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Press Work—Physical Culture—Sunday-School Department—Sabbath Observance—Manuals Free ... 14, 15
National Temperance Hospital ... 15
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S NOTES ... 15
TREASURER'S CORNER ... 15
ORGANIZERS' CORNER ... 15
OUR LIBRARY TABLE ... 16
CORRESPONDENCE CONTINUED ... 17
TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS ... 17
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT ... 18-20
SIGNAL NOTES ... 20

PLEDGE.—"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquor, as a beverage, including Wine, Beer and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same."

For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds.—II Cor. 10:4.

OUR WEAPONS; THE COMING VICTORY.

In one of the noon-day prayer meetings in Willard Hall last summer, John G. Woolley dwelt forcibly upon the thought that it is the business of the Christian in this world to overcome evil and that his weapon must be "good." "Evil cannot be overcome with evil. You cannot destroy the saloon by blowing it up with dynamite. I sometimes wish you could. Further, the good does not mean merely being good. It must be active, aggressive good."

Every one can appreciate Mr. Woolley's feelings when he says that he sometimes wishes the saloon could be destroyed with dynamite. There is no place in which the difference between God's ways and man's ways manifests itself so strikingly as in the respective modes which God and man employ in dealing with evil. We can understand the flood which swept evil-doers from the face of the earth; but can learn only after many lessons and much bitter experience to imitate in some small degree the patience which for centuries bore with and trained a perverse and stiff-necked people and reached its climax in the death upon the cross for those who rejected and hated Him to the last.

When God would destroy evil, He sends His Holy Spirit to human hearts and waits patiently for "the little leaven" to leaven "the whole lump." Man marshals armies and seeks to slay it on bloody battle fields. But when the contest is over he finds that at the most he has only prepared the way for the contest of ideas on which depends the ultimate decision. God conquers heresy with "the truth." Man stretches the heretic on the rack or burns him at the stake. But the heresy lives on. Bullets, dynamite and fire will indeed destroy men but they are impotent against evil. That is a subtle power which utterly eludes these material weapons. Slowly the world is coming to realize that God's way is the only way, that nothing but good can overcome evil.

We are still slower to grasp the positive side of the truth and are surprised when we find in actual fact that "the weapons of our warfare are mighty before God to the casting down of strongholds." Yet it is a truth which those who have arrayed themselves against the evil of the world have need to hold firmly. Temperance reformers have every reason to take courage from the signs that their weapons, though not "of the flesh," are proving more than a match for those which the enemy can bring against them. While we have had no heavy battering rams to train against the massive walls of legislation behind which the liquor traffic lies entrenched, there are signs that the little seeds of truth which we have dropped into the crevices have taken root and are growing into the mighty oaks which shall inexorably wrench asunder those seemingly impregnable ramparts.

The little leaven hid away in public opinion is rapidly leavening the whole lump, liquor men themselves being the judges. As early as 1889 a leading liquor journal said that in spite of recent victories against prohibition, "the fact is still apparent, that the sentiment against our business is constantly gaining friends among the most substantial element in our population. The question is a grave one, and the sooner we appreciate fully the hold it is securing on the public mind and conscience the better. It is to most of its followers what the slavery question was to its adherents—a great moral question." Such utterances have been multiplied within the last few years in various convocations of liquor dealers, to which we have already called the attention of our readers.

That the liquor dealers are right in their judgment that antipathy to them and to their business is growing, there can be no doubt. They are equally correct in the view that this adverse public opinion is the most insidious, most irresistible foe they have to dread, and that unless something can be done to counteract it, the whole business will, as the Ohio liquor men expressed it, "go to the dogs." For in our land public opinion is omnipotent; once let the fire of its wrath be kindled against the liquor traffic, that thing of evil must shrivel and die. And public opinion is something against which the whisky trade has no weapons. It can meet dynamite with dynamite, fire with fire, murder with murder. These things are just in its line, but when the searchlight of public opinion is turned upon it, it cowers and flees, "because its deeds are evil." Once the public conscience is aroused upon any question, and that question will never down until it is settled right. The cause is doomed, whose only recourse is to shut out the light; and on the testimony of liquor men themselves this is their sole reliance.

Their advice to supposed friends as to the best manner of conducting an anti-prohibition campaign, or statements as to how such campaigns have been won, prove how helpless they are in the face of an aroused and enlightened public sentiment. A fair example is to be found in the statements of Mr. Crowell, the chief manager of the anti-prohibition campaign in Pennsylvania in 1889. An enormous sum of money was raised long in advance (two hundred thousand dollars from Philadelphia alone) by the far-seeing liquor dealers who knew the contest was bound to come. This was expended in buying up the newspapers and politicians (as much as five hundred dollars apiece being paid some of the leaders), and in literature and for public speakers. Mr. Crowell said, however, that the public speakers were "no good;" it was "money thrown away," as those who went to hear them were already on their side. The support of the newspapers was bought outright for a stipulated sum, or, where this could not be done, matter was inserted and paid for at advertising rates, which may be called a distinction without a difference. "The most effectual matter we could get up," said Mr. Crowell, "in the influencing of votes was that prohibition did not prohibit, and the increased revenue, and how prohibition would hurt the farmers. We would have these articles printed in different papers, and then buy thousands of copies of the paper and send them to the farmers. . . . . We talked high license all the time Never try to defend the saloon; if so, you lose the influence of church members and ministers; but talk about the revenue, cider, taxation, and especially prohibition don't prohibit, and clamor for high license."

Another whisky man who was experienced in conducting such contests says: "Don't have any joint discussions; don't have any speeches," but urges that the press be bought and anonymous letters from persons in prohibition states be published telling of the failure of prohibition and that circulars be sent over the land. In other words, the policy of the liquor traffic is to circulate its statements and give its opponents no opportunity to reply. It dare not come to the light for the old, old reason that its "deeds are evil."

Such are the methods by which prohibition was defeated in Pennsylvania; such are the methods by which its defeat has been secured wherever the liquor traffic has triumphed. But the resort to them only proves the fatal weakness of the cause which depends upon them. The cause which is obliged to repudiate full and free discussion, which dares not defend itself but must turn the attention of the public to another issue, which depends upon buying up the press and politicians and deceiving the people may have brilliant victories but they will be short-lived. In this day and land, you cannot permanently shut out the sunlight. The temperance host has not had unlimited money with which to get quickly the truth before the people and scatter the lies of the whisky power, but surely, though slowly, it has been letting in the light, and the darkness is dispersing, of itself. Quietly during the years the W. C. T. U. and other branches of the temperance army have been at work, educating the children and by every means disseminating knowledge. The effects are beginning to appear. Liquor dealers see the handwriting on the wall and prove their uneasiness as one of their associations after another declares that something must be done to stay the steady march of public opinion against their trade.

We have no need to be discouraged by croakers who mourn the "decrease in temperance enthusiasm" nor even by actual defeats. Our cause is marching steadily on. Temperance instruction in all the public schools of the nation, with the bare exception of four states, has honeycombed the ramparts of the drink traffic; our temperance literature and temperance conventions have undermined them and their rotten timbers are shaking at the ever-increasing tread of little feet as our Loyal Temperance Legions march on bearing their motto, "Tremble, King Alcohol, we shall grow up." The battle is not won, it is no time to relax our efforts, but it is a time for us to "thank God and take courage." There is no power on earth that can prevent our letting in the light and that means sure destruction to the liquor traffic. This modern Goliath comes to us "with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield." We go out to him in the name of the Lord of Hosts, and in His name we shall conquer.

"A GREAT MOTHER."

By far the most notable event in white-ribbon circles for the coming months will be the publication of Madam Willard's biography, under the title of "A Great Mother." It was Miss Willard's intention to bring out the book in the fall following her mother's death, but her own ill health prevented, and the work has been delayed until the present time. It is at last in the hands of the printer, and may be confidently expected for the spring trade.

We are sure a cordial welcome is awaiting it from our great constituency. Those who knew Madam Willard personally cannot know too much of her strong, well-poised, inspiring life. Those who know her daughter will be glad to look back to the life-springs of her marvelous power, and ask what has made her what she is. In the life of the mother the wonder of the daughter's life is clearly explained. Given a Mary T. Hill Willard moving in the orbit of a home, and a Frances E. Willard becomes possible in the larger orbit of the world.

The title of the book is its own raison d' être. Madam Willard was "a great mother," and because she was a great mother, the world, which seeks eagerly to know the details in the lives of its great ones—whether poet, artist, statesman, general, ruler, or what—should know the details of her life. Those who most oppose the admission of woman into the realm of affairs are eager to tell us that motherhood is her profession, but who among them raises it in thought to the height of a profession, or honors those who have achieved its grandest successes?

Madam Willard recognized motherhood as a profession. She gave to its duties all the powers of her superb mind. Not blindly, nor dotingly, but with the fullest conception that she could not do her duty by her children until she did her duty by herself, until she had made the utmost of all her individual possibilities. It is true she said, "I am willing to disappear that I may reappear in my children." But how did she disappear? Into a life of mental indolence; a self-abnegation that meant the suicide of her own powers of mind? Let her "reappearance" testify.

When, at the age of seventy, she became known to the women of two continents, it was not alone as a woman of great natural gifts, but as a woman of large acquirements, and fullest development of innate powers. All her life she had used her mind, storing it with the best of literary treasures, developing it by plunging deep into the sea of thought, and she lives in her daughter to-day because she lived herself, and that in the intensest possible way, to the highest and best.

The biography is written by Miss Willard and by Madam

Willard's niece, Mrs. Minerva Brace Norton, who is, herself, well known as the author of several charming books. The introduction will be by Lady Henry Somerset.

It will contain, in addition to Madam Willard's biography, her ideas upon the training of children; chapters upon her literary favorites; the impression made by her character upon others while the characters of her husband, son and daughter—the Mary of "Nineteen Beautiful Years," will each have a chapter devoted to their unfoldment.

The art of "growing old gracefully" will be shown by the wonderful object lesson of Madam Willard's own experience, while "A Great Sunset," the chapter describing her entrance into the beyond, is more truly "A Great Sunrise," since it is the dawning of a great soul upon an eternal day.

The book will be brought out by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, will be handsomely illustrated and attractively bound, and we predict for it a wide field in the training of the motherhood of to-day.

More and more as we gain a concept of the Divine nature as shown in that marvelous passage, "As one whom His mother comforteth so will I comfort you," shall we come to know that to be a great mother is to be like God Himself, both an end to attain and an inspiration for its attainment.

In companionship with the great our own hearts and lives may take on something of their greatness. We earnestly hope Madam Willard may become known in many hearts and homes through this little book, which goes forth laden with love and prayers. Wherever it is read we are sure the name of Mary T. Hill Willard will be associated in the mind of the reader with the name of Catherine Booth, each a typical "Great Mother."

A NEW TEMPERANCE ORGANIZATION.

The Christian Advocate, New York, one of the leading organs of the Methodist Episcopal church, contains in its issue of February 14, an article by Charles Roads stating the purposes and principles of a most important organization. It is called "The Men's Christian Prohibition Union," and was organized in New York, September 20, 1893. We called attention to it at the time, but wish to emphasize its existence and importance. The union proposes to crystallize into effective action the resolutions of the general conference of the M. E. church and those of similar legislative bodies of other churches. As Mr. Roads well says, the platform of principles enunciated by the last general conference "will require no new plank nor material improvement however the conflict may thicken." The resolutions referred to declare "total abstinence from intoxicating beverages to be the duty of every individual," and "relentless hostility the only proper attitude for Christians" toward the liquor traffic. "We hold that no member of the M. E. church can consistently contribute by voice, vote or influence to the perpetuation and protection of that traffic." After declaring in the most unequivocal language that liquor men and their supporters should not receive the commercial patronage or the suffrages of Christian men and denouncing license as "wrong in principle and impotent for good," it concludes with a paragraph on political action of which the following is the final statement: "We do not presume to dictate the political conduct of our people, but we do record our deliberate judgment that no political party has a right to expect, nor ought it to receive, the support of Christian men so long as it stands committed to the license policy, or refuses to put itself on record in an attitude of open hostility to the saloon."

Surely if these resolutions could be carried out in action by the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church alone there would soon be no liquor traffic to fight. Commenting upon them Mr. Roads says: "The new union holds as fundamental to any effective work the unconditional adoption of Christian ethics in voting." . . . . "We do not want the church to indorse any particular political party, and our new union does not require a pledge to any party. That it requires certain ethical tests to be met by the political party asking for the Christian's vote is also what the general conference demands. . . . . Liquor interests are a solid and uncompromising vote. They make demands which are granted, however reluctantly, because all men know that the liquor men will not vote for any issue now until their issue is secure. Christian voters also make demands for prohibition which are refused, because all men have come to believe that as a rule they will vote the ticket anyhow. Politicians regard them as among the easiest elements to keep in line." . . . . "We must find the real present battle field. Non-partisan or petitioning methods are now effectually blocked by the liquor traffic in most of the states. In several states the liquor power is rapidly overthrowing what non-partisan methods have laboriously and imperfectly constructed. This formidable power declares its purpose to restore license even in Kansas and Maine by brow-beating the political parties." . . . . "While Christian men regularly vote their party ticket, triumph is impossible by any method. To adopt an organization which excuses or sanctions this kind of voting is to surrender before you have fired the first shot. The liquor power has certain defeat or compliance with its inexorable demands to offer to either party so long as Christian men are certain to vote with it on any ground." . . .

"We know there are Christian voters enough to send the prohibition issue at once to the front, and, after a campaign such as Christian heroes can wage, to make it triumphant. There is therefore, nothing now properly in order in this line of effort but to call these Christian voters to their duty."

To all of which the W. C. T. U. responds, amen and amen. This is what we have long been waiting for. This action taken years ago would have doubtless kept us out of politics. The statements made by Mr. Roads in his article are nothing new to us. We can, in this case, prove conclusively the remark (agreed on all hands to be peculiarly "womanly"), "I told you so." But we rejoice beyond measure at this evidence that our brothers who hold the ballot are beginning to see with us. We believe, too, that the movement is along the right line. We care nothing for parties, what we want is prohibition. If Christian men would simply do precisely what saloon men do, make all men understand that they "will not vote for any issue now until their issue is secure," Prohibitionists would have no more need of a third party than have the saloon men. The political parties would have to choose between the votes of Christian men and the votes of saloonkeepers, and the matter would resolve itself into the question which of the two opposing forces could marshal the greater number of votes.

The issue would thus be sharply drawn, and men forced to declare themselves unequivocally for the liquor traffic or against it. The anomaly of reasonable beings hurling their resolutions against the liquor traffic, besieging heaven for its destruction, and then going forth to cast their ballots for parties and men pledged to license it, could no longer be. Even those who deliberately sacrifice principle for personal ambition would perceive that self-interest demanded that they choose for their constituency the moral element of society. It is the deliberate association of Christian men with it that makes the liquor party respectable. The great duty of Christian voters in the present emergency is to hear and heed the call, "Come out from among them and be ye separate." This is what the new union is striving to bring to pass, and we bid it God-speed. It should have the warm support of every Prohibitionist.

Q.—What are the laws of the different states concerning the qualifications of alien voters?

A.—There were sixteen states that permitted aliens to vote within one year from the time of their coming to the United States, by filing their intention in the state to become a citizen of it. These states were Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Wisconsin and Wyoming. Three others, New York, Massachusetts and West Virginia, do not demand that they shall be citizens of the United States, but say simply, "citizen of the state." New York for ten days; Massachusetts, that they shall be able to read the Constitution in English, write, and have paid tax within two years. West Virginia simply requires that they shall be a "citizen of the state." So that there were eighteen states, including New York and Massachusetts, where aliens could vote within one year after coming to the United States. These conditions have been changed in two of the states within the last two years. Michigan now requires a residence in the state of two and one-half years, and Wyoming came into the Union requiring all voters, male and female, to be citizens of the United States (which all states ought to require). This reduces the number of states giving aliens the power to vote within one year, to sixteen; and it reduces the number who now permit them to vote in six months (by filing their intention to become citizens) to four instead of six as formerly. Our women must keep posted on these questions as we are often contradicted on these points. If any one wishes to have the figures for these, they can do so by sending to the New York World for "The World's Almanac," costing twenty-five cents. The qualifications of voters in each state of the Union is there given, "communicated and corrected to date by the Attorneys-General of the respective states." The information I have given above is from the list as furnished for 1894.

SOPHIA F. GRUBB.

A Hindu was asked once if there was any one thing upon which all the sects of the Hindus agreed. He replied: "Yes! we all believe in the sanctity of the cow and the depravity of woman." In the light of this reply can any one fail to realize what Christianity has done for woman?

***

A letter dated S. S. Rasmara, January 11, 1894, on the way to Maulmain, Burmah, has just been received from Mrs. Elizabeth Andrew and Dr. Kate Bushnell. These ladies remained in India but a few days, during which they spoke before the Methodist conference, by invitation of good Bishop Thoburn, and had an interview with Pundita Ramabai, whose school for high caste Hindu widows at Poona is now housed in excellent buildings and doing well. Mrs. Thoburn is president of a thriving W. C. T. U. in Calcutta, a meeting of which was called during the visit of our white-ribbon missionaries. Mrs. Hauser, of Lucknow, president of the India W. C. T. U., has succeeded in establishing twenty local auxiliaries, and spreading through the press and private correspondence much information about the society.

***

A recent letter to the Watch Tower contains some information of the town in which the writer lives, which is very suggestive. It says: "Her people are industrious and prosperous. There is no saloon here, as the church forbids the use of all kinds of intoxicants or tobacco." The temperance forces cannot work up to the maximum of their powers until the Christian church as a whole swings into line and utters a stern prohibition against any compromise between the cup and the weed and her members. The soul is the citadel of the man, and the leaders of the spiritual affairs of the nation must conspire to cast out the unclean spirits—the devils of uncleanness and inebriety.

***

A Scotch clergyman, just as he had told the bridegroom to love and honor his wife, was surprised to hear the man interject the words, "and obey." The clergyman was going on with the service, when the groom again interposed, with emphasis, "ay, and obey, sir—love, honor and obey, ye ken!" A few years afterward the clergyman met the man. "D'ye mind, sir, yon day, when ye married me, and when I wad insist upon vowing to obey my wife? Well, ye may now see that I was in the right. Whether ye wad or no, I have obeyed her; and behold, I am the only man that has a two-story house in the hale toun!" The Scotchman went even farther than Franklin, who said, "The man who would thrive must ask his wife."

***

On Duty, who is ever watchful for the "brothers of girls" and women, wishes to pay her tribute to the brotherly character of the recently promoted George W. Childs. He was always interested in promoting woman's cause, particularly in the direction of wage earning, and his usual stipulation in advancing money to start a new industry was that "women and girls be employed wherever possible." He was a total abstainer, and ever partial to our white-ribbon work. Reports of W. C. T. U. and prohibition meetings were always given more space in his paper, The Ledger, than in any other Philadelphia publication, and it could be depended upon to advocate every good work. What though it has been characterized as "placid" and "conservative," it was always a safe sheet to place on the family reading table, for it never encouraged the sensational style that often opens a new road to crime. May the Ledger never depart from its founder's ideal for a domestic newspaper. An incident of his thoughtful and generous attention to a body of white-ribboners is told by a Philadelphia correspondent as follows: "When I was sent a delegate to the Boston National Convention, Mr. Childs was on the train, going over to New York for a day's business. He soon discovered the errand I and the twenty-two white-ribboners aboard were on, and when we landed in New York he insisted upon leading the way and showing us the right elevated road to take. Imagine us following two by two like a boarding school. Up the steps our gallant leader climbed, and he had numbered and paid for the party long before the last couple reached the top. Again he insisted upon going across the length of that city, and placing us in the horse-car in waiting to convey passengers to the Grand Central depot. He stood on the platform in the rain paying the conductor for us all before he would allow him to enter the car. Mr. Childs saw us to the depot, where he wished us God-speed, and said he would like to go all the way to Boston and attend the Convention."

ON DUTY.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

NORTH DAKOTA.

NEWS FROM A PROHIBITION STATE.

Your correspondent is just selfish enough to believe that nowhere can be found more active, energetic, self-sacrificing and persistent workers than in North Dakota, where, during the past few weeks mercury has registered as low some days as forty-six degrees below zero. The winter set in early and much of the time has been severe; but notwithstanding the severity of the weather and the unprecedented hard times, our women are thoroughly alive to the work, and never at this season of the year have we had greater reason to be encouraged and gratified over reports received from unions in different parts of the state.

Our president, Miss Preston, has most of the time been "on the wing," visiting Pembina, Walsh, Cass, Trail, Grand Forks, Barnes and Griggs counties, and the work being done in these counties is most gratifying to her. Her visits have been a help and inspiration to the unions, and recruits are reported in almost every instance. At Cooperstown, where she recently spoke on the Sabbath, both morning and evening, the churches united in the services, and twenty new members were added to the W's and Y's. Also at Larimore a large and enthusiastic meeting is reported, with ten new members as the result.

Crusade day was quite generally observed throughout the state, and in each instance good results are reported.

The executive committee have, since our state convention, created a new department known as mercy and help, with Mrs. S. C. Curtis, of Fargo, as superintendent. The superintendent of the Crittenton Home work in the local unions is to act as superintendent of this work also, with a committee to assist. Much good work is being done in this department and we confidently expect much suffering will thereby be lessened wherever we have workers.

At Wahpeton the collection taken on Thanksgiving day was placed in the hands of the union of that place to be used for relief purposes.

Mrs. Vail, Sargeant county's intrepid president, is doing active work in her county visiting the unions, and by her words of wisdom, love and encouragement, is putting new life and energy into the workers.

Mrs. Wiley, president of Pembina county, with the care of an invalid mother, finds time to look after the welfare and interest of her county, and good work is reported from the different unions.

At Hamilton, in Pembina county, the union has been instrumental in bringing to justice certain violators of our prohibitory law, and not long since a disastrous fire, supposed to be the work of incendiaries, rendered a number of her citizens homeless. This union has since raised funds and built a small house, the use of which they give to two old ladies, who were left homeless by this fire, free of rent, and they are thus able to support themselves.

Ardock, in Walsh county, also with their band of determined workers, are doing aggressive work against the violators of our prohibitory law.

Cando reports work done in this line, and caused the prosecution of a certain druggist.

Grafton for several summers has had a water tank on one of their principal streets, which we all believe has done much good. They also helped to furnish means to pay expenses of one of their citizens who took the drink treatment and who has since his return been clothed and in his right mind, and expresses much gratitude for the help given him; he said he found while there he was not the only one whom the women were helping.

Forest River also has done work in this line, and has been greatly blessed in so doing.

Edgeley has been holding parlor meetings, which have been helpful and interesting.

Cavalier, Lisbon, Cando, Moselle and others report successful gospel temperance meetings held regularly every month.

At Lisbon the ladies sometimes conduct the entire program. Their regular meetings are held every two weeks, alternating with a business and a literary program.

Casselton conducts her meetings in a similar manner. The meetings are well attended and are interesting and are doing good work in the mercy and help department.

Fairmount has taken the study of the women of the Bible and finds it profitable and entertaining. Bewesmont keeps a box in a store and one in a hotel supplied with purity leaflets and temperance literature. At this place the honoraries gave an oyster supper to the actives, and one young man was heard to remark, that you were not "in it" unless you wore the white ribbon. If the same spirit would take possession of our young men elsewhere there would be less cause for bitter tears and sad, aching hearts.

LaMune has purchased bound sets of all the leaflets and some of the more expensive books recommended by our lecturer on purity, Miss Bates, and are holding mothers' meetings regularly every two weeks with good attendance from outsiders.

Moselle, a small country union, the members living several miles apart out upon the prairies, hold their gospel temperance meetings at the school house and their regular meetings at the homes of the members in the forenoon and serving dinner, thus bringing in outsiders, illustrating the fact that even here in Dakota disinterested parties will attend a W. C. T. U. meeting if there is to be "something to eat." They have also used the readings recommended by Miss Bates, and thus the good work goes on.

At Cooperstown they have been holding a series of debates, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., one upon our prohibitory law and another upon equal suffrage, both of which resulted in a decision from three impartial judges in favor of the affirmative. These were participated in by the leading business men and women of the place, and have been the means of creating sentiment in favor of our grand law and for equal suffrage.

Tower City, our oldest union, has a flourishing L. T. L., and has recently had one of their interesting entertainments, which always pay for the time and labor expended.

Our Y's are also doing good work. Reports from Cooperstown, Lisbon, Drayton and Wahpeton told of gratifying results. At Wahpeton the evening previous to the opening of the state teachers' association, Miss Bates delivered one of her fine addresses on purity to a large and appreciative audience. This meeting was under the auspices of the Y's.

Large and flourishing L. T. L's are reported from different parts of the state, all proving the oft-proven fact that where there is a good leader the results are always gratifying, for the children will always do their part.

Our Florence Crittenton home has at present fifteen inmates. Three have gone into homes, making in all eighteen who have been kindly sheltered and cared for since our state convention in September. With the generous and timely gift of Mr. Crittenton, a comfortable and cozy house was built. We are also pleased to acknowledge a generous gift of one hundred dollars from Mr. L. Grandin, of Mayville, and smaller sums, no less acceptable, from citizens of Fargo. The unions are interested in this branch of our work, and contribute toward its support as they best can. Interesting letters are received from one of the former inmates of the home who was happily converted while there, and who now lives in the afflicted city of Grand Forks, telling of the good she is able to do among the poor and the sick. We congratulate ourselves that our home is under a competent board of managers, and we are most fortunate in its location, for here we have three good active unions and some of the grandest and most generous-hearted people in North Dakota. We hope much for this haven of rest and for the future of our cause in North Dakota.

MRS. D. W. SHINN,
State Reporter, Casselton.

WISCONSIN.

HERE AND THERE.

The sixth annual convention of the Ninth district was held in the Baptist church, Antigo, Delegates were present from Ashland, Amherst, Antigo, Marshfield, Merrill, New London, Nerrie, Shawano, Stevens Point and Waupaca. Superintendents of the following departments reported: Scientific temperance instruction; Demorest medal contests; Loyal Temperance Legion; parlor meetings; franchise; soldiers and sailors; and Sabbath observance.

Our state president was present during the entire session and lectured the last evening on "No Sex in Crime." Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman of Missouri, not only gave one of her convincing lectures, but conducted the question box to the enlightenment of the delegates. Fourteen departments of work were taken up.

Among the resolutions was one "protesting against any form of gambling, whether in the parlor or in haunts of vice," and another expressing gratification that a satisfactory understanding has been reached, by the full and complete explanation of the financial condition of the Temple which was made at the National W. C. T. U. Convention.

The Seventh district held its fifth annual meeting in the Baptist church, Mauston. The president, Mrs. L. E. Trestrail, not being present, the state president, Mrs. Vie H. Campbell, who was in attendance, was elected presiding officer. Four of the seven counties reported. Monroe county gained sixty members during the year. Papers on "White Ribbon Evangelism" and "Kindergarten Work" were followed by a discussion as to methods of work along these lines. These, with Bible readings, question box and a lecture on social purity furnished a very enjoyable program.

The Sixth district convention was held in the M. E. church, Appleton. The reports from county presidents and superintendents showed that good work had been done in part of the district and seven new unions organized during the year. Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman lectured on the topic, "What hinders the victory in the temperance cause?" Several interesting papers were read and superintendents were appointed for L. T. L. work and scientific temperance instruction. The district tax was increased from five to ten cents per member. One of the plans of work was that we coöperate with woman suffrage societies in securing speakers to educate public sentiment along that line.

THE COUNTY CONVENTIONS

have been fully as interesting and profitable as the district, but space will not allow much detail. Nine unions of Monroe county were represented at Angelo; Mrs. Ada W. DeLong presided, and the reports were all encouraging.

Clark county W. C. T. U. met in M. E. church, Loyal, Mrs. Bertha E. Buland, president. The time was occupied by debates, parliamentary drill, papers and a lecture in the evening by the state president on "Our Christian Duty."

Dunn county held its eighth annual meeting in Menominee. Three out of the five unions in the county reported. The president of the Menominee coffee-house association reported that during the ten months the house had been open to the public the receipts for meals were $1,500. Stock to the amount of $285 had been sold, of which $265 had been expended in furnishing.

The members of Juneau county have organized and chosen Mrs. M. B. Balch, Mauston, president.

But few unions have reported concerning Crusade day, but it is hoped many observed it. Galesville union not only had services Saturday but Sunday morning also. Twenty new members added to their ranks. Eureka observed the day by a public meeting in the church. This union has free use of the G. A. R. hall and holds gospel temperance meetings once a month on Sunday evenings in the M. E. church. Spirit Land union invited their pastor to preach a sermon on the subject.

Coloma union, organized last September, held a pleasant and profitable Crusade evening service in the M. E. church, and received four new members, the pastor being one. The contribution was divided, part sent to the National treasurer, part used for L. T. L. supplies.

Eau Claire, Spring Brook and Black River Falls also report the observance of the day.

The Green Bay Y realized thirty dollars from a "sale," twenty-five of which was used toward sending a man to the drink cure. The pastor of a church in Black River Falls invited the Y of that place to hold a Sunday evening gospel temperance service.

Mrs. Maud R. Barkey, state secretary of the Y Branch, has received a cordial invitation to speak at the state convention of the Epworth League held in La Crosse.

Delavan union netted one hundred and fifty dollars from a chrysanthemum fair.

Ft. Atkinson held a union temperance meeting in the M. E. church, following the program given in THE UNION SIGNAL for mass-meetings. Fourteen members were added.

NOTES.

Our state president presented a resolution to the state horticultural convention, "That hereafter hotels with bars will not be selected as headquarters for this association." The resolution was voted down.

The Madison Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church were overtaken by a wave of active temperance work, and, through a committee, called for delegates from the various societies in the city. Delegates were elected from the Epworth League, Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist and Congregational Y. P. S. C. E., German Evangelical, German Methodist, Norwegian Lutheran, City and College Y. M. C. A., College Y. W. C. A., W. C. T. U., Good Templars, Y. W. C. T. U. and United Lutheran. It was decided to agitate the subject of no-license so effectually that it will receive a majority vote at the spring election.

Madison union held a successful mothers' meeting at the house of Mrs. F. B. Raymer, and one of the Y's has begun weekly gospel meetings in a portion of the city some distance from the churches.

Looking over the field, therefore, there is much reason for encouragement and the hope "that each to-morrow find us farther than to-day."

MARIA F. HANCHETT,
State Reporter, Madison.

WEST VIRGINIA.

BOUND TO GROW.

Your items from Southern California stated that both the W's and the Y's had received National banners and it might be considered additional proof of the wonderful influence of that climate upon growth. West Virginia cannot boast good climate, but we certainly did receive a National banner at the last convention, and not being satisfied with that one year's growth we are doubling our efforts in that direction, and hope to be surprised again.

There is nothing new in our plans of work—only a steady going on—each district working and organizing. The first district mourns the loss of their beloved president, Mrs. Anna Battelle, whose unexpected death has cast a gloom over the district and local union at Wheeling, where she was treasurer and connected with all the benevolent works. Her time and best thoughts were devoted to the temperance cause, and at the last convention she was appointed state superintendent of Sabbath observance.

The second district holds the banner for organization. Its president, Mrs. G. C. Gordon, evidently intends to permanently hold it, for five new unions have lately been organized with good membership. Their convention will be held at an early date.

Our state president, Jennie P. Sisson, has visited the districts holding conventions and organizing new unions. Mrs. M. M. Love, who is always at work, organized a good working union at Newport with a large membership.

The Wheeling union is branching out in several ways. This union, under the leadership of Dr. Harriet B. Jones, will entertain the next state convention early in June. Preparations are being made to have this the best convention ever held in West Virginia. Dr. Jones has a large class of White Cross and Shield, the only one in the state. Permanent headquarters have been secured, which will be comfortably furnished and a formal opening given early in April.

Mrs. Jennie Sisson organized an L. T. L. on the island. A permanent hall was obtained, and last week an evening's entertainment given, which was a financial success. Miss Margaret Oldham, state superintendent of physical culture, took a leading part. Besides drilling a class of twelve girls, she gave some of the finest exhibitions of posing ever seen in Wheeling.

MRS. MARY CARTWRIGHT,
State Reporter, Wheeling.

EASTERN WASHINGTON.

MOSAICS.

Although the hindrances are many, the Crusade spirit abides in the hearts of our noble women. And they are praying the Heavenly Father for means and for wisdom to enable them to push forward more aggressively.

The Helper, our state paper, is proving all that its name declares. The issue for this month calls for the setting apart of February 23 as a day of fasting and prayer for God's blessing and guidance.

Theon union numbers only eight paying members, but know there are a few more who are true to the cause and would pay if they could. They are twenty-six miles from the railroad and have waited long for some one to visit them.

Dayton union reports membership quite large but attendance small and hard to collect dues at this time. Health and heredity, evangelistic, narcotics, flower mission, literature and Sunday-school work have been taken up. They expect to revive gospel meetings and keep wall pockets filled.

Good and lasting work was accomplished by the Sunset union before it disbanded, because of removals from the place. The distance between neighbors is so great that the union at Mondovi could not be maintained.

Asotin union has a membership of twenty-nine, though but few attend the meetings regularly. Some are discouraged a bit because they seem to accomplish so little, but with the few "regulars" and God in the midst, they expect to do more this new year; perhaps not so much in aggressive ways, but in steady growth in the knowledge of our work, and the better training for service. They greatly need an experienced worker, a good parliamentarian to go to them. A committee has been appointed to secure new members. They have taken up mothers' meetings, parlor meetings and flower mission. The L. T. L. is inactive just now, for lack of a suitable superintendent. "If we could get every member to subscribe for, and read THE UNION SIGNAL then pass it on to her neighbor outside the union, victory would soon be ours. Next to my Bible comes THE UNION SIGNAL," writes Mrs. Warren.

Mrs. Emma Miles, corresponding secretary of Waitsburg union, writes that their union, though not large, meets regularly. They have taken up flower mission and literature, keep pockets supplied at the depot and solicit subscriptions for THE UNION SIGNAL, which they deem a most important work, as so few realize what the W. C. T. U. are doing, because they judge the whole by the little local unions.

Rosalia union prepared an excellent program for Crusade day, but weather prevented the meeting. They voted to send ten cents each to the National. A silver medal contest was given by the union recently and another will be held soon for the benefit of the state treasury. The L. T. L. is flourishing. The bad weather does not prevent the children coming, and several will receive prizes for regular attendance. THE UNION SIGNAL is considered invaluable for reading in the union.

Medical Lake union, Mrs. Middaugh, president, has nine paying members. They have had much sickness among their members, but are planning for active work.

The Walla Walla union arranged a delightful public reception for the state president on her return from Chicago. She gave them "Echoes from the Conventions," to which the audience listened with thoughtful attention. At the close a number of names were added to the union.

Some one has said that the humblest house of worship, though built of unhewn logs, speaks of consecration, sacrifice, labor and faith on the part of some one. So do our unions, however small, dotted here and there in this sparsely settled country, speak to the people of loyalty and faithfulness to the white-ribbon movement and its legend, "For God and Home and Native Land."

I read between the lines of many letters that come to me in these trying times, a consecration and courage on the part of some, "of whom the world is not worthy, who having obtained a good report through faith, have not received the promise;—God having provided that without them the generations to come should not be made perfect."

JULIA B. COLE,
State Reporter, Walla Walla.

OHIO.

AKRON ITEMS.

Akron held a fine Crusade anniversary meeting, report of which has been sent direct to THE UNION SIGNAL. The report of their year's work, the introduction, a cordial invitation to join the union was printed in an attractive little booklet, and five hundred copies were carefully distributed. They also ordered for distribution fifty copies of THE UNION SIGNAL containing Miss Willard's letter in which she did that little bit of etching. They expect these to bear fruit which they shall gather. The report of this union is most interesting. Their union numbers one hundred and eight and seven honoraries. They have held, within the year, forty-eight regular meetings, an anniversary meeting (beside the Crusade anniversary) and a donation party. They have had lectures by Colonel Bain, Dr. Mary Wood Allen and by Mrs. Bertha Morris Smith. Two gospel meetings have been conducted by Jennie Smith, the railroad evangelist. Their headquarters have been kept open daily except in August, affording a noon rest for girls, where 11,168 lunches have been eaten. Ninety-eight copies of "Monthly Advices" on scientific temperance instruction were sent for ten months of the year, to the city teachers. Their L. T. L. numbers fifty girls and thirty-three boys, all of whom have signed the triple pledge. The L. T. L. meets every Sunday afternoon and has a gifted leader. Each room in their city schools is supplied with text-books, charts, and other appliances for the successful presentation of scientific temperance. Services are held in the jail each week, in charge of a gifted evangelist, Miss Florence Savage, and services in the infirmary are held every other Sabbath.

NOTES FROM STEUBENVILLE.

A delightful parlor meeting was held this winter by the Steubenville union. Our state president, Mrs. Monroe, was in attendance. Rev. Dr. Reid presided in his happy manner. A fine program was well carried out; instrumental solos, duets, songs used in the kitchen-garden; "Mosaics of the World's Fair;" our state president gave an able talk on scientific temperance instruction. Mrs. Ledyard had issued, through the papers, an invitation to all members of unions to call on the state president, her guest, and quite a number did so. The quarterly meeting was held in the church, and was out of the ordinary altogether. Reports were given by the officers and twelve superintendents. The state president gave an address that was highly appreciated. This union numbers seventy members, who are of the best people of the city.

The Ohio Messenger has introduced a new feature that will give pleasure to all its readers and we hope will bring it many new subscribers. It is to give in each number the picture and a sketch of the life of some one of our leading Ohio workers. The first one has appeared and gives us the strong, noble face of our honored Mother Stewart. The sketch of her life is as interesting as any romance. In February we shall have that of our beloved Mother Thompson, and another treat will be enjoyed.

COUNTY CONVENTIONS.

Of Lorain's we can only state that the convention was one of much interest, the best feature of which was one of the finest addresses of Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap.

Belmont county union met at St. Clairsville. Reports from locals showed a small gain in the membership. A new colored union was reported organized at St. Clairsville. The convention was good and well attended, although the death of one of the leading women of the St. Clairsville union threw a shadow upon many hearts.

The president's address was multum in parvo. In the evening the evangelistic and jail and prison reports were read and Mrs. Mary Trueman Springer gave an interesting address on "The Wimmen Folks."

THE WORKERS.

Mrs. J. M. Graham, our state superintendent of flower mission, gave an interesting lecture recently in New York, which she has been invited to repeat at an early date.

Miss Florence Savage, of Akron, has been on a little temperance tour. She spent a week at Beloit, in a gospel temperance meeting, also a week at Colerain, where four years ago she organized a union of six members. They now have more than thirty; have built a little temperance temple where they can hold their meetings, also have preaching and a Christian Endeavor. From Colerain she went to Barton, where she held several meetings and organized a union. This is a mining community. A month or more ago a revival meeting was held in their school house, which reached out and saved drinking men and gamblers. Everything was ripe for temperance work. The union was formed of seven active and six honorary members, four of the latter of whom have been hard drinkers. Miss Savage writes: "I never worked among so grateful a people, and if the union lives, as I believe it will, it will be a great power for good."

Mrs. R. J. Trego, our state and National evangelist, has been in Colorado for some weeks past, holding revival meetings. In a meeting at Greeley over one hundred people have bowed at the altar, seeking Christ. Seventy persons have united with the M. E. church, and more will follow, while a number have united with other churches. Many hearts are praising God for the great victory. Mrs. Trego goes from Greeley to Fort Collins.

The union of Bloomdale, Wood county, is one of the most faithful in our state. They are making a quilt for Bethesda Mission. They recently had a fine address on social purity given by their county president, Mrs. B. P. Sears, of Bowling Green.

Mrs. Sadie J. Paden, president of the eighth district, and her husband, who is an honored professor in Muskingum College, New Concord, drove sixty miles to organize a new union in her district and revive a discouraged one.

Mrs. M. A. Davis, of Delaware, an ardent admirer of Mrs. Carse, and a warm friend of the Temple, is piecing an afghan to be presented to Mrs. Carse when it shall be completed, as a memorial from her friends. Mrs. Davis requests all who are interested in the Temple and in Mrs. Carse as its promoter, to send her a piece of silk or velvet five inches square. She hopes to have the silk lining of the quilt covered with the names of these contributing friends. These will be hand-painted for one dollar, embroidered for fifty cents and written for ten cents. All money thus obtained will be sent to the Temple fund.

ANTOINETTE H. CLEVENGER,
State Reporter, Wilmington.

TEXAS.

NO-LICENSE MOVEMENTS.

Wills Point W. C. T. U. has given a series of successful entertainments during the winter. As there are but two towns in Van Zandt county where they have not local option, the union has decided to do all in its power to make Wills Point a "dry" town.

Whitt union has given a successful supper, and started the New Year with renewed vigor and zeal.

Corsicana W. C. T. U. held its ninth anniversary recently. The city hall was beautifully adorned with banners, flowers and pictures. Mrs. Lena Clark, president, gave a report of her work, and Mrs. Molloy of the nine years' work of the union. The flower mission report was illustrated by lovely bouquets tied with white ribbon and Scripture verses attached. They were distributed in the audience to be given to any who were sick. Miss Belle Yates encircled a globe with white ribbon as she recited, "The White Ribbon that Encircles the World." Her solo was "Some Glad Day."

Lampasas has been honored by a visit from the state president. Six meetings were held. The audience was very responsive. Temple was also visited by Mrs. Stoddard and one meeting held.

McGregor, the home of Mrs. Harrison, president of the central division, was the next stopping place. Only her indomitable will power keeps Mrs. Harrison at work.

Hillsboro has been thoroughly aroused on the subject of local option. Sam Small and ex-Senator Homans, of Dallas, held public debates with one, Grubbs. Mrs. Stoddard was called to assist in the contest. Large audiences greeted her on Sabbath and full houses of ladies on week days. She addressed the students of Pattersen Institute, met the school board and talked to them about scientific temperance instruction.

The day of the election an all day prayer-meeting was held in the Cumberland church from the time the polls opened at eight in the morning till six in the afternoon. Many women with new light in their faces exclaimed, "This is the grandest day of my life!" News came about two p. m. that the lives of some of the Prohibitionists were in danger, had been threatened because of their watchfulness and the challenging of votes. Such prayers as ascended to God to protect them! The antis used every device known only to them. But the victory is ours. By a large majority Hill county is "dry."

Ennis gave Mrs. Stoddard large audiences. Much interest and enthusiasm is being awakened. The subject of prohibition is very dear to the hearts of the people and means the saloon must go.

San Marcos was so greatly benefited by being a dry town for two years that at the election just held, instead of a majority of two, gave one of 207. Many Roman Catholic Mexicans voted the "dry" ticket. Two years ago only the Protestant Mexicans voted with the Prohibitionists. All of Hays county is "dry."

Many of the unions of the state are on the qui vive for Mrs. Hoffman's brilliant lectures which are to be delivered in February.

TWENTIETH CRUSADE ANNIVERSARIES.

Dallas union celebrated Crusade day. A good number were present, and all were interested. Miss Armstrong gave an account of the work for the past eleven years. Mrs. Sweeney read extracts from Mother Thompson's sketches of the Crusade, which was news to many of those present. Mrs. Flower, of Indiana, recited an original poem on the Crusade, which was well received. This was followed by reminiscences by original Crusaders. There were three present—Mrs. Flower, Mrs. Patty and Mrs. W. D. Knowles. The services closed with an earnest appeal for new members, to which several responded.

At night we had an able lecture by Chas. Baker, of London, on "The American Republic; its Development, Dangers and Future Greatness." With a union of forty-six members we feel encouraged to go on in the good work.

Fort Worth Central observed Crusade day. The most interesting part of the program was "Memories of the Crusade," by Dr. Ellen M. Kellar, an original Crusader. A couple of pictures of the women of Hillsboro, standing and kneeling before the saloon door, were handled by the women present, and gazed upon as something sacred. Memorials of Mary Allen West and Jennie Casseday were read by Mrs. Calhoun and Mrs. Funk.

Mrs. Stoddard opportunely walked in during the progress of the meeting. She was hailed with the Chautauqua salute and requested to speak, which she did to the entertainment and pleasure of all.

Brooklyn Heights temperance society is flourishing under the presidency of Mrs. Funk.

One more church has quietly wheeled into line on the pure grape juice question, First M. E. church, South Fort Worth.

Galveston W. C. T. U. kept Crusade day

Driving the Brain

at the expense of the Body. While we drive the brain we must build up the body. Exercise, pure air—foods that make healthy flesh—refreshing sleep—such are methods. When loss of flesh, strength and nerve become apparent your physician will doubtless tell you that the quickest builder of all three is of Cod Liver Oil, which not only creates flesh of and in itself, but stimulates the appetite for other foods.

Scott's Emulsion

Prepared by Scott & Bowne, N Y. All druggists.

A GOOD BROTH IS HALF A DINNER

EVERY ONE can afford to use Clam Bouillon for Lunch, Dinner and Tea at 20 cents a quart. Enough for a whole family. Prepared in five minutes from a bottle of

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON

Quality improved, price reduced, larger bottles. All Grocers sell it.

E. S. BURNHAM CO.,
120 Gansevoort St., N.Y.

Sample bottle, 10 cents; makes a pint.

Pimples, blotches and eruptions completely vanish before a steady use of

Beecham's Pills

(Worth a Guinea a Box.) (Tasteless)

and health again glows in the pure skin and clear complexion.

25 cents a box. 8

No local dealer can compete with us

WALL PAPER

in variety or price. Our new designs and colorings are handsomer this year than ever before.

Our "Guide How to Paper and Economy in Home Decoration," mailed free with samples

Beautiful Gold Paper, 5c. per Roll.

We carry the largest stock in the country, and can save you 50 per cent. on every roll of paper you buy. No matter where you live, if you have any use for wall paper, send 10c. to nearest address to pay postage on a large package of samples. One good agent or paper hanger wanted in each town to sell from sample books, price $1.00.

ALFRED PEATS,

80-82 W. 18th St., NEW YORK. 136-138 W. Madison St., CHICAGO.

GLOBE SAVINGS BANK

Corner Dearborn and Jackson Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

UNDER STATE CONTROL.

INDIVIDUAL AND SAVINGS ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.

SAFETY ▲ DEPOSIT ▲ VAULTS.

SENSIBLE MOTHERS } BUY { GOOD SENSE

CORSET WAISTS for themselves and daughters

in the parlors of Mrs. C. A. Dinsmore. Extracts from Hillsboro Crusade sketches were read. Afterward each member rose and told of some work done by her for the cause of temperance since becoming a member of the W. C. T. U.

A delightful repast was tendered the members by their hostess which was greatly enjoyed.

Corpus Christi union had interesting papers read. "Remembrance of the Crusade," by Mrs. Holdridge, and "Jesus, the Friend of Reform," by Mrs. Mary Carter.

San Antonio central union met in its new headquarters. The morning service was a prayer-meeting. The afternoon service consisted of selections from the program prepared by the National evangelist. The dime collection requested by Miss Willard was taken up, An appeal for the "white ribbon" was made. At night the Y's had a social and a large number attended. A social has since been given in headquarters to all the L. T. L's of the city.

The West End L. T. L. recently elected new officers, all high school girls. They have gone to work to get up an entertainment.

CORNELIA KEITH CARTER,
State Reporter, San Antonio.

MINNESOTA.

HERE AND THERE.

Our unions are quietly holding their own and making such progress as they may. Convention time will soon be here, and with the return of warmer weather no doubt there will be an awakening all along the line. Meantime we report the "quiet times" doings as best we can.

Districts number fifteen and sixteen have been consolidated, making a vast territory, much of it unbroken soil so far as W. C. T. U. matters go. But over it presides Mrs. Emily Merritt, whose cheery spirit can't be discouraged, and who is heartily at work trying to put new life into unions threatened with the dreadful malady known as "decline." Success to her.

District number ten has for its president Mrs. L. W. Irvine, with abundant energy and kindliness of heart. She has been at work in Ramsey county visiting the unions, accompanied by the county president, Mrs. C. S. Soulé, and finding everywhere something to encourage her heart. For Ramsey county contains many "elect ladies" who, having put their hand to the (temperance) plow will never look back.

Among the local unions we find Cannon Falls, revived when almost dying, by sending two delegates to the state convention who came back so much alive that they put new energy into the union, which now is doing excellent work.

Viola union mourns the death of Mrs. Susie Calvert, and Elmore union sustained great loss in the death of Mrs. Eliza J. Taylor. But the example of these beloved workers still remains to cheer their comrades.

Red Wood Falls union not long since, held a mothers' meeting, addressed by Mrs. Pier, of Excelsior College, who gave many helpful thoughts on the training of children. The child must be trained, not forced, to obey. Corporal punishment, when resorted to, should always be in private. The L. T. L. of this town recently enjoyed a sleighride, passing and repassing the saloons repeatedly and singing as only boys and girls can sing, "Saloons must go."

Crusade day was very generally observed, and pleasant and profitable meetings are reported from many points. And now preparations are already beginning for the celebration of the Neal Dow commemoration day.

MRS. AMY A. GREEN,
State Reporter, Minn.

NEBRASKA.

THIS, THAT AND THE OTHER.

The general officers of the state union held their quarterly meeting in Lincoln, January 24 and 25. In discussing the prompt replies to the ten cent thankoffering to the National, as suggested by Miss Willard, it was thought that our Nebraska women would prove as loyal to their state organization as to the National. In pursuance of this idea, February 28 was set apart as state W. C. T. U. day to be observed throughout Nebraska with suitable programs presenting the work of the W. C. T. U. in our state, and asking for a ten cent offering from all friends of the union. It is hoped that much needed funds for the prosecution of state work may in this way be obtained. The call for the observance of this day was printed in the Union Worker and a marked copy sent to every union in the state.

Quite an impetus has been given in our state, as no doubt in others, to the suffrage work. The superintendent of franchise, Mrs. Z. A. Wilson, of Lincoln, made a full and most interesting presentation of her department in our state paper. The articles were very complete and instructive and are appreciated outside of our own state. Preliminary work is begun and it is the intention of our women to ask the next legislature for full suffrage. Suffrage contests are urged, among the young people, and every department is asked to help in the "campaign of education."

Several workers from abroad are giving their assistance to the unions in our state. Mrs. Anna M. Palmer began work in southeastern Nebraska, at Plattsmouth, February 7, and will give several weeks' work. Maj. Scott and wife, and Mrs. C. E. Howe, of Missouri, are doing good work in other parts of the state, while Mrs. Hitchcock, our president, and Mrs. Woodward are in the field almost constantly. The latter gave four lectures at Hazard recently and organized a union of twenty-five members.

The Fremont union had a most jubilant evening not long since, to celebrate the fact that their handsome temple is freed of debt. The occasion was made a reception to friends of the union and contributors to the temple, several hundred of these being present. The auditorium of the temple was beautifully decorated, the stage being ornamented with flags and bunting, where amid the starry folds the face of Miss Willard appeared. The seats for guests were arranged in a circle around the room, with another circle in the center where sat our state president, Mrs. Hitchcock, whose home is in Fremont, and Mrs. W. H. Clemmons, president of the local union. Overhead were festoons of cards radiating from the center of the ceiling in every direction like the spokes of a wheel. These were the cards sent out by members of the union to their friends at the time the silver "quarter" collection was made. Each had returned with the quarter it had gained and been given its place in the decorations. It was remarked that these festoons constituted the silver lining to the cloud of debt which had rested upon them so long.

Mrs. Clemmons gave an historical sketch of the organization of the union and its subsequent growth and work. Mrs. Hitchcock told something of the sacrifices and prayers which had been instrumental in rearing their beautiful temple. Five minute speeches were made by Revs. H. W. Tate, N. Chestnut and George M. Brown, and Messrs. T. L. Matthews and Ross L. Hammond. Music was furnished by Misses Stewart and Hulfish and Mr. Preston. All this was pleasant and interesting, but the best was yet to come. Representatives of the Traveling Men's Association had sent word to the ladies that they desired a few minutes' time on the program, without giving any intimation of their intentions. At the close of the exercises Mr. Frank L. Esmay made a short and entirely surprising address, closing with these words: "Last fall our association disbanded, since which time we have still had the piano you see on the stage. On behalf of the Traveling Men's Association it is my pleasure to present that instrument to you." Of course, the applause was overwhelming. Mrs. Clemmons expressed the surprise and thanks of the union. It had been their intention to buy the piano, and they had planned entertainments and a lecture to raise money for it. A rising vote of thanks and the Chautauqua salute were given. Refreshments were then served. With this ten thousand dollar property free from debt, the Fremont union, the largest in the state, may claim to be the richest also. They are surely now in a position to accomplish great good.

Crusade day was appropriately observed by this working union, with a good program and several new members were secured.

Plattsmouth union, assisted by the Y's, held a very profitable Sunday evening service in memory of the Crusade. Two of the ministers assisted, and the district president, Mrs. S. K. Dailey, of University Place, was present and gave an address. A number of new members were obtained.

The W. C. T. U. women, of Liberty, have been doing a good work for their town. No-license is the law in Liberty this year, but it was very evident that a great deal of liquor was sold. A committee of investigation was appointed in the union, and as their work was necessarily secret, the whole union pledged themselves to stand by the committee without knowing what was being done. Several gentlemen also promised to see them through to the end financially. For four months this committee was at work collecting evidence, and making sure of proof at every point. Complaints were entered against a druggist and restaurant keeper. When the cases came to trial there were many witnesses among the young men and minors of the town. The druggist pleaded guilty, and was fined a hundred dollars. The other man was bound over to appear before the district court, and, in default of bail has been in the county jail. At the present term of court his case was brought up. He pleaded guilty, and was fined two hundred and fifty dollars, which sentence, as he has nothing to pay, will be served out in jail. The W. C. T. U. women of Beatrice, where the trial was held, appeared each day in the court-room with their Liberty sisters. Their influence was no doubt felt, as one lawyer, after nearly two days work, gave up the case, saying, "Those W. C. T. U. women are stickers; there's no use fighting them." Some of the Beatrice union who attended the trial were among those who went to the jail to conduct services on Sunday a week or two after. Their kind, earnest words of welfare in his soul's salvation affected the man to tears. Yet his wife is continuing the illegal sale of liquor at Liberty, and the druggist is known to have again transgressed. The women do not rest on their laurels, but are vigilant and undaunted, and "the end is not yet."

Lincoln union is just now full of work and plans for caring for its expelled fallen women. By the official letter of its mayor, all houses of ill-fame must be closed on the 1st of March, and all inmates must leave the city. Exception is made only in the case of any who may wish to leave their life of shame and become honest and self-supporting. These the W. C. T. U. have promised to provide for, and it is taxing all their ingenuity and resources to keep to their promise. The ministers were asked to present the subject to their churches, as it was felt that the work ought to be done by the churches. But very little encouragement is received from this plan, and last week Mrs. Major French of the Salvation Army was appealed to and kindly spoke twice in one day to audiences gathered in the Y. M. C. A. building, detailing her experience among this class in other cities and giving advice and suggestions as to the work in Lincoln. Just what line of procedure will be adopted is not now known, but when the Lincoln union attempts anything they generally do it. Financial aid is greatly needed. The outcome of Mayor Weir's brave stand is watched with intense interest all over the state. It may be interesting to know that the present situation was brought about by a very practical sermon upon "Lincoln as a City of Sin," by Rev. C. M. Shepherd of Grace M. E. church, in which the mayor was arraigned for permitting such resorts to exist.

On Saturday, two weeks ago, the unions at Bennett and Zion's church, sent into Lincoln cooked provisions for distribution among the city's poor. Elder Howe, the city missionary, assisted the women of the union and fourteen families were supplied with their Sunday dinner. There were sixty-two loaves of bread, home-made, baked chickens, ducks and beef, cake, cookies, jelly, butter and lard, with many friendly messages tacked to them, all of which gave the W. C. T. U. a warm place in many hearts.

Red Cloud union enjoyed a treat the other day in the shape of a visit to the Inavale union. They went in the morning, took dinner with the union at the home of one of its members, held a meeting in the afternoon, and then had a social hour before returning home. Meetings like this do much to strengthen the "tie that binds," and make us indeed a union.

At our last state convention, Mrs. O. H. Jones, editor of the Union Worker, feeling the need of assistance, Miss Emma Berryman, of Hastings, was made associate editor. A few weeks ago a second "associate" appeared upon the scene. She is very "live" and earnest, and is no doubt a great assistance to her mother in writing editorials, etc. "We" haven't decided whether she shall be called Frances Willard or Mary Hitchcock, but she certainly "belongs."

DORA V. WHEELOCK,
State Reporter, Beatrice.

OREGON.

COUNTY CONVENTIONS.

I will begin by correcting an error in my last report. The winner of the Demorest gold medal was Charlie Bowmer, now of Walla Walla, and formerly of Weston. There was honorable mention of Ethel Garfield, of Pendleton.

I was ahead of time in saying there was no report of the Multnomah convention. When our Oregon White Ribbon was published a little later, the convention was so well reported that I feel inclined to make clippings, as what I gave was so very meager. In consequence of Mrs. Mead, our evangelist, being detained at home by illness, Mrs. Romick, pastor of the Friends' Church, took charge of the consecration service. Among many gems of thought this may be recalled: "True consecration changes the 'I can't do it' to 'I can do all things through Christ Jesus.'" Mrs. Additon, as chairman, opened the department symposiums: First division: Organization, including juveniles, Y's and work among foreigners and colored people.

The second division: Prevention, embracing health and heredity, in which Dr. Cady spoke in a stirring way on the many sins in dress, as against woman's health.

Can't Let Go
the De Long Hook & Eye
Richardson & De Long Bros. Philadelphia.
See that hump?
Trade-Mark Reg., April 19-92.

Sankey Model.

STYLE 431.
Used by MR. IRA D. SANKEY.
One Hundred Different Styles of Organs and Pianos ranging in price from $27 to $2,200. Inspection Invited.
Catalogues Free.
Mason & Hamlin
ORGAN AND PIANO CO.
BOSTON, NEW YORK, KANSAS CITY, CHICAGO.

SENSIBLE EGG WHIP AND CAKE MIXER.

This article gives perfect satisfaction. As an Egg Whip it surpasses all others, while as a Cake Mixer it is equally serviceable. NEAT, NOVEL AND DURABLE.
A SUPERIOR VEGETABLE SKIMMER.
Good for skimming out doughnuts, eggs, etc., from the hot liquid in which cooked. Mailed, postpaid, 25c.
WOODS, SHERWOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass

Alaska Stove Lifter

Always Cold. Will not get hot even if left in the lid.
Heavily Nickel Plated. Sold by all Stove, Hardware, and House Furnishers, or sent by mail, postpaid, for 30 cents.
—Also the—
ALASKA POKER.
TROY NICKEL WORKS, Troy, N.Y.

STUDY LAW AT HOME.
Take a Course in the SPRAGUE Correspondence School of Law. (Incorporated.) Send 10c. stamps for particulars to
J. COTNER, JR., SEC'Y, DETROIT, MICH. No. 22 TELEPHONE BDG.

JENNESS MILLER
Specialties. Corset substitutes, Empire Waists' Bust Supports, Divided Skirts, Union Suits, etc. Send stamp for illustrated pamphlet, "Dress." Mrs. S. W. PIKE, 34 Central Music Hall, CHICAGO.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS,
But save you money on everything you eat, wear or use. Send 8 cts. for full catalogue.
H. R. EAGLE & Co., 68 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BAKER'S COCOA
ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used

Literature was a topic made much of by Miss Culy, of Mount Scott, and Miss Lyman reported her usual good and faithful work in the press. Mrs. Kern, state superintendent for narcotic department, read an able paper thereon, and Mrs. Additon's own (Relation of Temperance to Labor) was not suffered to be forgotten by her. The questions following Mrs. Additon's paper on "Non-Alcoholic Medication," were ably answered by Dr. Cady. At the evening mass-meeting (which I mentioned) good speeches were made by Dr. Whitaker, of Hall street M. E. church, Mr. Iodon, of the I. O. G. T. and by Mr. Mc Kercher, secretary of the Prohibition club.

On the second day the third division, social, was taken up wisely and well. The fourth division, evangelistic, included the beautiful work of the flower mission, and much useful advice was given to press superintendents and to the presiding officers of local meetings. In Mrs. Riggs' absence a talk was given on social purity, by Mrs. S. E. Foster, followed by Mrs. Rankin's experiences in relation to the Refuge Home.

The other convention that I have to report is that of Umatilla county, under Mrs. E. G. Bond, of Pendleton. It took place in Weston, which enjoys the enviable distinction of being without a saloon. The public meetings in the evening were well attended. The first was addressed by Mrs. Dr. Stiles, of Weston, Mrs. Selleck, of Pendleton, and the president. On the second evening an able address was made by Professor Royal, of the Weston Normal school. The day sessions were filled by interesting reports of local presidents and county superintendents, together with a good paper by the principal of the public schools. It was at this convention that the gold medal contest was such a prominent feature.

We have had one of our National leaders here, Mrs. Leavitt, but Salem only was blessed by her presence. Her after address to ladies could but make all present feel grateful that she had her birth under the "stars and stripes." In the evening the largest audience that ever greeted a temperance speaker, was hers.

Mrs. Harford, state organizer, has, with her husband, visited Middleton, where a union with twelve members was organized, with Mrs. L. A. P. White as president. Their plan is to hold public meetings on Sunday.

Several unions report faithful work. Silverton, in the line of petition work to close business houses on the Sabbath. Moro, (which by some mistake was unreported at our state convention) has had lectures, gospel temperance meeting, sermons on Sabbath observance, a chalk talk, a little short of one hundred dollars raised for local work, beside a most regular attendance on the usual meetings. Comas Valley, organized in August with eleven members, consists now of sixteen, who hold open meetings every two weeks.

Union must be lauded as the banner county financially, being the only one which has paid up in full all claims against it.

The "hard times" of the past year lays its heavy hand on Oregon as on other places, perhaps even more heavily. It is felt in our W. C. T. U. and we have been bound to economize in various ways, consequently less work has been attempted. One economy has been to publish our state organ but once a month.

A line that I have left out at its proper place in the report is from Gardiner, to which our state president has given the name of the "Faithful." Mrs. Harford gave two addresses there with great acceptance, and would have spent several days but for a call from home. L. A. NASH,

State Reporter, Corvallis.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

SHIRLAND, Ill., W. C. T. U. had a very enjoyable Crusade meeting recently, every member telling the spiritual good the union had been to them. The memorial service was a beautiful one.

THE circuit court of Multnomah county, Ore., has just reversed the decision of the common council of Portland, which had declared the new refuge home a "nuisance," or offensive, being five hundred feet from a public school.

MRS. BELLE K. ABBOTT, a beloved worker of the Atlanta, Ga., W. C. T. U., and ardent Prohibitionist, was removed recently by death. At its meeting shortly after, the union passed resolutions of deep respect and appreciation in loving memory of their devoted co-worker.

THE Pesotum, Ill., W. C. T. U. have just enjoyed a rare treat in the visit of Miss Parrish, National Y organizer, and their district president, Mrs. W. P. Kuhl. This union has kept active for three years, always having their allotted number of delegates at every convention, and begin 1894 with renewed effort.

UNDER the auspices of the W. C. T. U., of Maitland, Mo., Mrs. Emma Cranmer delivered one of her characteristic temperance lectures, February 4. She had a large audience, the church being crowded, and all were highly pleased.

ROCKFALL, Conn., union held a Crusade anniversary evening, January 26. Hillsboro Sketches and Mrs. Mary Lathrap's Bugle Notes were read, and the old, familiar hymns sung in memory of the fire which started in 1873 and is burning brightly in 1894.

DIME socials are not yet out of fashion among W. C. T. U. workers, Morrellville, Pa., Y's having held one recently, at which fifty members were present and highly entertained by the "experiences" of how each earned her dime. These plucky Y's are engaged in their annual warfare against applicants for saloon license, having kept their borough free from "the nuisance" for several years, and are hopeful of another victory.

DURING the recent "Mills meetings" at Rahway, N. J., Mr. John Woolley's services were secured by the local W. C. T. U. for a grand union temperance meeting, in which the pastors participated. A wonderful impression was made and the cause greatly promoted. At the close of his address before the Christian Endeavor young people, Mrs. Frances Barnes was presented, and made an earnest little speech, charming all. The next afternoon a Y union was organized.

AT a Demorest contest recently held at New Douglas, Ill., the entire class of speakers, composed of young men with ages ranging from about seventeen to twenty, wore the white ribbon; thus showing on which side they may henceforth be counted. At the close of the meeting, another young man came forward and placed his name on the W. C. T. U. tablet; thus making seven honorary members who are young men, besides some who are older.

MORE attention than usual has been given to the department of evangelistic work this winter by the Westmoreland county, Pa. W. C. T. U. Major George A. Hilton, the evangelist, has been conducting services at New Alexandria, West Newton and Greensburg. At the last place forty-five new names were added to the union. The union at Scotdale has been made the almoner of the bounty of the National Foundry and Pipe works at that place, having been given a check for one hundred dollars to be distributed among the worthy poor.

THE association of Congregational ministers and delegates convened in Tampa, Fla., not long ago, heartily applauded the forcible paper on woman's work in the temperance reform read by Mrs. Lillian Wells, telling of the efforts made by the W. C. T. Unions of Florida to prevent the passage of the infamous bill introduced in the last Florida legislature to license brothels and create a revenue from woman's shame and degradation. So strong was the pressure brought to bear that the bill never reached a second reading. Through the influence of the state president, Mrs. E. A. Hill, strong resolutions, taking decided and advanced steps in temperance reform were heartily adopted during the closing session of the association.

Official Communications.

PRESS WORK.

DEAR PRESS COMRADES:—All the time I could devote to the press department since the National Convention, has been so fully occupied with other work for the advancement of its interests, that I have not hitherto found an opportunity to send you through THE UNION SIGNAL the greetings which my pen has sent to many personally, and my heart to you all many times.

I cannot conceive of a W. C. T. U. woman who is not fully persuaded in her mind of the importance of press work, so I shall not use my privilege of space in any attempt to demonstrate anything so axiomatic. I trust, however, that there may be in the inactive such a persuasion of the will-to-work as may make it a year of notable progress in our efforts to win this greatest sentiment-making power of the country to an advocacy of the reforms for which the white-ribbon army contends. The reports of last year, though incomplete, gave a total of 2,036 press workers, supplying W. C. T. U. columns regularly to 408 papers, and scattered items to 2,060 others, the amount of space filled approximating 27,340 columns. That was gratifying last year, but would be disappointing this year. Can we not at least double the numbers?

Neither can I ask space enough in these columns to lay before you a plan of work, but rather wish to call your attention to some of the helps in the department work, and direct where you may obtain information as to plans.

1. For state superintendents, several of whom have written that they cannot get a directory of the newspapers published in their states, and are not able to purchase a copy of the General Newspaper Directory, which is an expensive volume, I have prepared state directories by dividing the large volume and re-binding in pamphlet form, and can furnish them to state superintendents at twenty-five cents each.

2. "Points for Press Workers," a manual into which I have tried to gather all the best hints and helps of my predecessors and coworkers, is now ready. It is a thirty-six page-pamphlet, price five cents, single copy, or to state superintendents ordering in large numbers, three dollars per hundred.

3. The "National W. C. T. U. Bulletin," which we hope soon to issue weekly instead of semi-monthly, will be found a help in the collection of general items. The subscription price is twenty-five cents. The "Bulletin" and "Points for Press Workers" are published at 66½ N. Penn St., Indianapolis.

4. We have made a beginning toward the much-needed leaflet literature for the department. Miss Margaret A. Sudduth has kindly contributed for this purpose an article on "The Religious Press and its Relation to the W. C. T. U.," and Miss Irene Fockler has furnished one on "The Associated Press." We are promised one soon from the pen of Mrs. Esther T. Housh, a former National superintendent, and hope for one from our chief advocate of press work, Miss Willard. Watch the W. T. P. A. Bulletins and the columns of THE UNION SIGNAL for further information of these and other leaflets to follow. In connection with these allow me again to call your attention to the press Responsive Reading for June, 1893, published by the W. T. P. A., The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

If we would win the press to coöperation with us, we must acquaint editors with our work. There is no means for doing so equal to our National paper, and I urgently recommend as "the nexte thynge," having your unions subscribe for THE UNION SIGNAL for each of your editors.

Let prayer precede and underlie and follow every effort, and that our work may have the help of united prayer, I ask every superintendent to devote the hour of eight o'clock each morning to prayer for the department work and for the press of our country, that its power may be altogether on the side of righteousness and temperance.

Yours to help bring about an end so greatly to be desired. LODIE E. REED,

Nat. Supt. Press Dept.

Indianapolis, Ind.

ELLIS ISLAND NEEDS.

Miss Lindahl, our W. C. T. U. missionary at Ellis Island, begs that I will ask the unions to send her packages of second hand clothing, especially for women and children. Many of the immigrants are so poorly provided with warm clothing that they suffer greatly when coming into our colder climate. She finds that by doing them kindnesses in helping them to a more comfortable existence, she gains their love and confidence and thus doubles the respect for the work she does among them, in giving them out leaflets on temperance and good citizenship. She desires to do it also for humanity's sake. Please address Miss Anna Lindahl, 27 State street, New York.

SOPHIA F. GRUBB,

Nat. Supt. Foreign Work.

Kirkwood, Mo.

OSTRICH PLUMES.

I am receiving so many inquiries on the ostrich feather question that I think it would help to throw light on the matter if I say that I have learned that, while these feathers can be obtained without cruelty it appears that cruelty is practiced in some places. The following taken from the London Truth will show the cruel side. It seems to me that we who are set for advancement and reform should endeavor to show how tasteful we can make our headgear and other parts of our dress without adopting any form of decoration which may involve cruelty:

"I should like to hear from the Society for the Protection of Birds, which I commended the other day to the notice of my lady readers, why the only bird's feathers, the wearing of which they countenance, are the plumes of the ostrich. A lady tells me that she has declined an invitation to join the society because it does not protect the ostrich, and in justification of her decision she gives the following account of the plucking of ostriches on a feather farm. If the facts are accurate, I think that they fully prove her case: The good ladies who belong to this society, and who condemn as cruel the simple mercy of death, should go to the ostrich farm near Cairo—I believe the largest there is—and hear from those in are unhesitatingly pronounced by every one who has seen them to be the most attractive wheels ever offered to the public. Beautiful new designs, graceful, light, and strong to the last degree, and dressed with the incomparable Columbia finish, they are bound to "take."

The 1894 Columbias

We predict for the 1894 Columbias an instant and wonderful success. Get a catalogue and give your order early if you want one at the beginning of the season.

STANDARD PRICE, $125.

POPE MFG. CO.,

Boston, New York, Chicago, Hartford.

Catalogue free at our agencies, or mailed for two two-cent stamps.

The Par Excellence of LUNG GYMNASTICS is found in the use of our IMPROVED BREATHING TUBE.

Unequalled for developing Throat and Lungs, thus preventing and Curing Consumption, Asthma and Throat Diseases. Also invaluable for Preventing Colds. Send for Circulars to HYGIENIC SUPPLY CO., P. O. Box, 1951 N, Boston.

CHOICE 50c. TRIAL SETS.

Set B—16 pkts. Vegetable Seeds, - 50c
" E—20 pkts. Flower Seeds, - - 50c
" F—10 Lovely Carnation Pinks, 50c
" G—10 Prize Chrysanthemums, 50c
" H—4 Superb French Cannas, 50c
" J—10 Elegant Roses, - - - - 50c
" M—24 Fine Gladioli Bulbs, - - 50c
" P—6 Hardy Ornamental Shrubs, 50c
" R—6 Choice Grape Vines, - - 50c
½ each of any two sets, - - 50c

No two plants alike in these sets.

Any 3 Sets, $1,25; 5 for $2.

By mail, postpaid. Safe arrival and satisfaction guaranteed. Order by the letters from this advt. NOW as these are introductory sets not in catalogue, an elegant annual of 168 pages, free. Everything of the best for Orchard, Vineyard, Lawn and Garden. 40th year, 1,000 acres, 28 greenhouses.

STORRS & HARRISON CO.,

PAINESVILLE, OHIO, Box 246.

FERRY'S SEEDS

Are just what every sower needs. The merits of Ferry's Seeds form the foundation upon which has been built the largest seed business in the world. Ferry's Seed Annual for 1894 contains the sum and substance of the latest farming knowledge. Free for the asking.

D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Mich.

SEEDS GIVEN AWAY

FOR TRIAL. I have found that the best way to advertise good Seeds is to give away a sample for trial. If you will send me a 2-cent stamp to pay postage, I will mail free one package, your selection, of either Cabbage, Carrot, Celery, Cucumber, Lettuce, Musk or Water Melon, Onion, Parsnip, Pepper, Pumpkin, Radish, Spinach, Squash, Tomato, Turnip, or of Flower Seeds—Aster, Balsam, Celosia, Carnation, Mignonette, Pansy, Phlox, Poppy, Sweet Peas, Zinnia, or Verbena, and one of my 1894 Catalogues. Under any circumstances do not buy your Seeds until you see it, for I can save you money. Over 200,000 people say my seeds are the cheapest and best. I have earliest vegetables on record. Discount and large prizes to agents. 50c. worth of Seeds free with $1.00 order. Write to-day. F. B. MILLS, Box 50 Rose Hill, N.Y.

AGENTS COIN

Money selling Beveridge's Automatic Cooker. Latest and best cooking utensil ever invented. Sells at sight. One Agent sold over 1700 in one town. One sample Cooker free to good agents. Advertising matter furnished. For full particulars address W. E. BEVERIDGE, BALTIMORE, Md.

World's Fair Highest Awards

Medal and Diploma on our INCUBATOR and BROODER Combined.

"Old Reliable" Leads them all.

45 yards High Class Fowls.

If you are interested in Poultry, it will pay you to send 4 cents in stamps for our 72 page catalogue, giving valuable points on Poultry Culture. Address

Reliable Incubator and Brooder Co. Quincy, Ill.

EVERY LADY WANTS OUR STOVE-POLISHING MITTEN.

Will polish a stove better than anything on earth, and keep your hands clean at the same time. Ladies buy it at sight. They all want it. Big Profits to Agents. Sample Mitten and Dauber by mail, 30 cts.

BOSTON NOVELTY CO., BOX 1540, BOSTON, MASS.

